"I dare say it was right and proper and in good order. The book was afterward published, and I think it sold well. I hardly know whether I ought to say that the editor should have shown me more courtesy. But the sequel is worth telling. That editor became my personal friend. He is dead, and he was a good and able man. Of course he remerbered poisoned one hour of our interviews by telling him how, when I was young, and a word of cheer would have buoyed me up, he made me drink the waters of Marah.

And three times since that day the publishing firm I speak of has come to me with the request that I would write a book for them. I have never been able to do so, but I have outgrown my bitterness, and, of course, I show no malice. Indeed, I have now the best reasons for wishing the great enterprise well. But if literary confessions are worth anything, this one may perhaps be a seed that will somewhere and gratefull soil. Keep a good heart, even if you have to knock in vain on many doors and kick about the back stairs of the house of letters. There is room enough inside.

William H. Abbott, of North avenue, was the defendant in a suit in the District court this morning brought by Dr. Marcus L. Clawson, who sought to recover for professional services rendered. Harry C. Runyon represented the complainant and V. W. Nash, Jr., the defendant. Judgment for $107.31, which includes interest, was given Dr. Clawson. No defense was offered.

Besides Dr. Clawson, who testified in his own behalf, other witnesses for the complainant were Mrs. Laura Hangliter and Mrs. Harriett Tabor, nurses.

WIFE DESERTED HIM, HUBBY GETS DIVORCE

Vice-Chancellor Fteredic Stevens, in the Court of Chancery at Newark Friday, signed an interlocutory decree, divorcing John J. LaMaire, of West Second street, from Grace LaMaire, who now resides at Graceland, Near Westfield. The husband, through his counsel, Vincent W. Nash, Jr., applied for a divorce on grounds of desertion, stating that Mrs. LaMaire left him on August 28, 1906, taking with her their two children, Blanche LaMaire, aged 8, and John J. LaMaire, Jr., aged 4. The plaintiff also alleged that Mrs. LaMaire has refused to return to him, but is residing at the home of her mother. The couple were married by Rev. G. W. Gardner, pastor of Grace M. E. church, January 1, 1900, and lived for several years on a farm on Somerset street, near Watchung Lake.

Through her counsel, Addison P. Rosenerans, of Paterson, Mrs. LaMaire alleged that she did not desert her husband, but went to her mother's home to take care of her aged parents. Because it was impossible for her to return to her Plainfield home immediately, she declares that her husband sold the furniture and sent her clothing and personal property to her mother's. By so doing, he himself was responsible for desertion.

Several witnesses were called by both parties, and when the case was presented to the Vice Chancellor, it was decided that Mr. LaMaire had proved that his wife had deserted him, who had done everything in his power to have her return to her Plainfield home. The court then granted the divorce decree, and directed that the husband be given the custody of the two children, as petitioned in his complaint.

THE LOVER.

All the love that was mine to know
I gave you over and over;
I was no man's friend or his foe—
nothing at all but your lover.
Shall this thing cease when the body of me waits for the earth to cover?
Shall the strength of the year that went to make this love complete
Die like a frail thing spent, with a weakling heart's last beat,
Shall I only serve at the last to make a greener earth for your feet?
Shall the love that was like a sword break when the sheath must rust?
Shall it fall of its great award, shall it fail of its ancient trust
When the empty, useless hulk of a man goes down to the dark and the dust?
Beloved, life is a little thing, but the love that it holds is great
Truer than joy or suffering, stronger than time or fate.
Shall only the love of the Crucified endure while the ages wait?
Nay, then if this be sure, though I pass from your sound and sight,
Love shall increase and endure, aye,
even in death's despite
It shall be a hand on your hand all day, a torch for your feet at

BOROUGH FATHERS' WORK

The Borough Council authorized Mayor Townsend to appoint three more special marshals at its meeting Friday and rejected a resolution, offered by Councilman Waldron, authorizing the purchase of 4,500 cubic yards of dirt for improving West End avenue at its northern extremity. However, an amendment offered by Councilman Wooliston was adopted by which approximately one half of the quantity of dirt is to be bought and the present road widened to forty feet.

A resolution introduced by Councilman Nichols was passed, authorizing the Mayor to issue vending badges for the three days of the Charter Day celebration for which no charge is to be made.

A permit was authorized to be issued for R. A. Boyce, to build three frame houses on Somerset street between Union and Dupont streets.

The police report showed that during the month of June, forty-seven arrests were made in the borough and fines amounting to $27.35 collected. Councilman Smalley gave it as his opinion that the relation between the number of arrests and the amount of money collected were entirely out of proportion and suggested looking into the matter.

A petition from nine residents of Maple avenue, asking for a sidewalk on a 300 feet of Greenbrook road was opposed in behalf of the property owners, by Edmund Rushmore, who said the added cost of this work would be a burden to them and just now the improvement is not wanted. The mater was laid over.

The fire and police departments were authorized to buy the winter supply of coal now. The matter of the failure of a printer to deliver the printed copies of the borough laws brought out a few caustic remarks from Mayor Townsend, who declared that the delay was unwarranted and should not be further tolerated. Councilman Van Arsdale thereupon offered a resolution calling for the delivery of the books "not later than July 20, and after that date they may be refused if in the opinion of the Council, such a course be desirable." This resolution was adopted unanimously.

On a resolution presented by Councilman Van Arsdale the following special marshals were appointed: C. R. Gudnee, Theodore Smith and G. B. Stewart.

The report of the Fire Committee showed that during June the expenses amounted to $550.09, and for the half year ending June 30 to the total expended was $2,069.17, being very near the amount appropriated for the period.

QUESTIONS FOR THE MARTIANS.

When Professor Pickering gets that flashophone of his working, thereby putting us in communication with Mars, we should be ready with our questions. It would be absurd to establish the communication at an expense of millions of dollars and then not have anything to say. Hence it is that we take the liberty of presenting a few inquiries which should be put before the 'phone gets out of order:

1. Is it hot enough for you?

2. What do you think of William Jennings Bryan?

3. Have your scientists yet been able to discover exactly where Moses was when the light went out?

4. Have you any authoritive knowledge as to the age of Anne?

5. Who struck Billie Patterson; how much did he strike him for; who is Billy Patterson, anyhow, and where did he come from?

6. Have you seen the man higher up lurking around any of your towpaths?

7. What are your impressions of America?

8. Should women smoke, and if so, what?

9. From where you are does the earth look like a pinhole in a rubber blanket, or a microbe floating through space?

10. Have you planted your early spring beets yet?

11. What will you give us for Emma Goldman, Carrie Nation and Abdul the Dimmed, f. o. b. or C. O. D.?

12. How are the shad running this year?

13. Are your canals locked or on the level?

14. From where you are sitting can you see an English joke with the naked eye?

15. Whom do you consider the greatest living American?

16. Do you hold that if the opener of a jack-pot is obliged always to put his discard under the chips in the pool, whether he is going to split or not, this discard cannot be touched even if it is necessary to gather up the deadwood to complete the deal for the draw?—Harper's Weekly.

An Instalment Library.

"And do you expect to read all those books in your library?"

"Read all of them? I should hope not. I shall be perfectly satisfied if I ever get all of them paid for."

Even if he does attract;
You cannot tell what's in the shell

A SERIOUS CASE

"John," she said, "do you love me?"

"Why, sure," said John in a tone of some uncertainty. "Why, sure I love you."

But nevertheless he sat a little further away and in a subtle way he showed the usual unmistakable signs that the conversation had taken a turn which he, for one, did not approve and that if she were wise she would drop the subject and content herself by chirping at him in a loving manner every time he chirped at her.

"John," she said, "are you sure?"

"Sure," said John in a facetious manner and in a moment of inspiration he took "E Pluribus Unum" for the motto of his house and facetiously added, "Who could help it?"

And so that we may better comprehend the comprehensibilities let us turn from that cipher of fate embodied in the facetious John and gravely fix our attention upon the place and the girl.

The place was a parlor where the gas had been gently led by its nose down a green silk tube into a ruby table lamp, from which it beamed in soft, inspiring radiance.

On the piano were two objects of art; the first was a portfolio of music opened at that sentimental endeavor, "I Cannot Sing the Old Songs," and the second was a cabinet photograph of John taken by some bold cabinetmaker who may have been a gentle and a soft-spoken man, but who had most namistakably scuttled the ship of John's beauty in an attempt to make him look as though he had a message to the world.

For the rest of it the blinds were drawn, the portieres were drawn, a busy little clock ticked merrily away among the shadows on the mantel piece and the room was snug and warm and cozy.

She was in accord with the room in that she, too, was a snug and cozy little lady, embellished by art and artful by nature. As she looked at John and asked him if he were sure, she drew a shawl around her shoulders and coughed once, twice and again.

"Sure!" said John, in a facetious manner, and in a moment of inspiration he took "E Pluribus Unum" for the motto of his house and facetiously added, "Who could help it?"

"John," she said, "I'm not joking."

"No?" said John.

She coughed again and turning to a little table at her side she measured a teaspoonful of something out of a bottle, raised her eyes, sighed and took her medicine.

"John," she said, taking his hand, "we may never see each other again."

"Why not?" said John, raising his brows. "Are you going away?"

"Perhaps, John," she said. "Perhaps although I don't like to alarm you."

She took another spoonful of medicine and smiled wanly at him.

"It's a long journey, John," she said.

"Geraldine!" he said. "Hush!"

"Poor John!" she sighed. "Poor John, how he will miss me! John," she said, "I—I wish you'd help me over to the tete-a-tete. I—I don't think I can sit up any longer. And now a cushion for my head. There. And if you'll bring my medicine—"

"And are you honestly and truly sick, Geraldine?" he asked.

Whereupon she almost turned and hit him.

"And yet," she said, "I wish I could have lived till the spring. The spring is so beautiful; isn't it, John? The flowers and everything!"

"O, you'll be here in the spring all right," said John. "Don't you worry!"

"John," she said, "the doctors think otherwise. For your sake I wish I could live, John. Say you feel, say, yes, I wish I could have lived till the spring." And in a low, dreamy voice she added: "We might have been married then." And seeing that John was about to speak in hurried numbers she whispered faintly, "John, dear! My medicine!"

"Dear John! I always knew you loved me. Always! From the first. Ah, yes, I wish I could have lived till the spring, so that we might have been married then. The flowers and the birds and everything. Wouldn't it be nice?"

And throwing her arms suddenly around his neck she whispered:

"John, whatever happens you must always remember that we were everything to each other. You'll remember that, won't you?"

"Yes," said John, solemnly. "I'll remember that."

"And you'll remember—when the spring comes—how we would have been married—if— You'll remember; won't you, John?"

"Yes, yes," said John. "Sure."

"Dear John," she said, "I must try to get better for his sake. If you'll open that window a little, John—"

Adding:

"Thanks, dear. I feel better already."

And adding still further:

"I suppose you may as well measure me for the ring, John. Now that I have something to live for— . . I feel that somehow . . . and strong- er than ever. Oh, John, you are a ducky!"

And as he thought it over on the way home, John said to himself more in sorrow than in anger:

"That's what!"

FOOLED THEM BOTH.

Mr. Nuwed, returning from his day's work, found his bride in tears.

"O-oh, hubby!" she sobbed, "I'm so discouraged. I don't think I'll ever learn to cook well enough to keep your love for always!"

"Why, what's happened now, darling? Did you salt the coffee, or put red pepper in the cinnamon sauce again, or did you try to make omelet out of eggplant this time?"

"No-o; but do you remember those biscuits I made this morning?"

"Oh, yes; I remember them all right!"

"And you said they would be just fine if they were only cooked a little browner and were not so pale and sickly. Well, I gave those that were left to the old speckled hen."

"Dear me! Did the hen eat any of them?"

"Oh, well, what can you expect of a stupid hen!"

"But—but that isn't all. Mrs. Nesdoor looked over the fence and said: 'Funny how that old creature will sit on door-knobs and things!' And I'm afraid she wasn't even meaning to be sarcastic!"—Charlton Lawrence Edholm, in Judge.

A Sameness.

"Yes," says the lady after an acquaintance of ten or fifteen years before has been renewed, "I remember you perfectly."

"Indeed?" murmurs the gratified man. "I am glad to know that."

"Yes, at one time I thought of marrying you."

"O," he replied, dejectedly, "I thought for the moment that there might have been something that made me different from all the other men you ever knew."—Life.

A Public Confession.

The pastor of a country church, a middle-aged widower, was credited with having courted every eligible woman in his flock. One Sunday morning the hard pressed, having occasion to admonish specially the feminine membership, was amazed at the very audible titter that ran through the congregation when, with an inclusive wave of his arm, he exclaimed: "Sisters, I have addressed you in public and in private!"—Judge.

When a voice roused me which fiercely yelled:

BURGLAR SHOT BY COP

Vanderweg's Prisoner Tried to Escape But is in the Hospital.

Knocked down by a heavy blow in the stomach dealt by a burglar he had just captured, Patrolman Vanderweg fired at the fleeing man as he ran along West Front street from Clinton avenue early Sunday morning and brought down his man, shot in the left heel. The burglar is Oscar Schmidt, who says he has no home. He is at Muhlenberg Hospital. His condition is not serious.

Vanderweg heard a noise in the cellar of Elmer R. Mills' store, 1217 West Front street, at about 4 o'clock Sunday morning, and as he went to investigate, Schmidt came up from the cellar with a bundle of eatables and drinkables under his arm. He had several bottles of soda, some jelly and some canned goods, but put up no resistance when arrested. The officer led his prisoner to the patrol box and summoned the patrol wagon. As the two stood there, Schmidt suddenly struck the officer a heavy blow in the stomach and started to run west on Front street. Vanderweg shouted to him to stop, firing a shot in the air. Seeing that the man was getting away, he lowered the revolver and shot him in the foot. Schmidt tumbled in a heap and the officer, who had recovered his breath by that time, was upon him in an instant. He was taken to the office of City Physician C. B. Lufburrow and later removed to Muhlenberg Hospital.

While his wound was being dressed, Schmidt said that he had taken the food because he was almost frustrated by hunger. He was walking along the railroad, he said, and seeing the cellar door open, went in, looking for something to eat. He found some canned tomatoes and ate half a can of them, taking with him soda, jelly and more tomatoes. He says he is a sailor on furlough.

FIRECRACKERS CAUSE BLAZE IN WEST END

Exploding firecrackers and shooting fireworks in the store of Hyman Semer, of 942 West Third street, gave the volunteer firemen one of the most difficult fires to fight Tuesday morning, that they have had in years.

The firemen responded to an alarm from box 47, sent in by Semer as soon as the fire started from some unknown cause. When they got there the inside of the store was a chaos of shooting rockets and roman candles, while the explosion of giant crackers made it doubly dangerous for them to enter it. They did this, however, and after some effective work with extinguishers and small hose got the flames under control.

Shortly after the firemen arrived a cry was raised: "Women and children are upstairs." The fire ladies quickly placed ladders against the walls and got in the upper story. They were protected to some extent, by wet handkerchiefs held over their nostrils and by the customary smoke protectors. A careful search showed, however, that none of the women and children were in the building.

Most of the firemen sustained slight cuts from flying glass and all were more or less bruised; but Patrick Neylon sustained such severe cuts on both of his hands that he had to be sent to a physician.

The total damage is $350. The building is covered by insurance, but as Semer had no license from the insurance company to carry fireworks in stock, he will probably have to stand the loss. He asserts that he will fight the company on this point.

One View and Another.

"My word!" exclaimed the British society woman, "here's an announcement of the marriage of another member of our nobility to an American concert hall singer. Fancy! Isn't it terrible?"

"Oh, I don't know," replied the New York girl, "the average soubrette doesn't deserve much sympathy."—Catholic Standard.

Once Only.

A middle-aged farmer accosted a serious-faced youth outside the Grand Central Station in New York the other day.

"Young man," he said plucking his sleeve, "I want to go to Central Park."

The youth seemed lost in consideration for a moment.

"Well," he said finally, "you may just this once. But I don't want you ever to ask me again."—Everybody's Magazine.

"What Measure Ye Mete"

By PAXTON HIBBEN.

(Copyright, by Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

He stood irresolute, in the doorway of the Turkish room, peering into its dark corners. The apartment seemed deserted. Suddenly he caught sight of a woman sitting in the embrasure of one of the windows, staring out at passers-by.

"I am awfully sorry I have kept you waiting," he began, as he advanced toward her, "but I've ordered the dinner and everything is quite ready." She turned, slowly, at the sound of his voice; her face was in the shadow. He continued, while drawing off his gloves, his hat held under one arm. "A lot of beastly business at the last—I say, you know, you've not—I beg your pardon, I've made some stupid mistake."

He appeared so utterly confounded at his error that she smiled, looking up at him.

"Not at all," she said; then: "You've dropped your glove."

"Why, so I have!" he exclaimed, glad of an opportunity to relieve the awkwardness of the situation. He stooped to pick it up, and when he arose she smiled at him again with frank sympathy. He thanked her, inwardly, and cautiously ventured an explanation. "I thought you were some one else," he began, "some one I know—"

"I am not nearly so stupid as I look," she interrupted.

"I beg your pardon! Of course—a woman must be quite serious." Once more he was all confusion; but this time, he floundered on of himself. "I wonder where she could be? I was to meet her here, you know—"

"If your are as late as you seemed to think you were, she has probably gone. I quite know how she must have felt,' she added.

"Oh! You're waiting for some one." It was half a question left uncompleted.

"You're not nearly so stupid as—"

"As I look? I hope not!"

"No, no—as you might be." There was a pause. "But your dinner," she suggested.

"Ah, yes; the dinner! I had forgotten." He looked about him. "But there is no one to help me eat the dinner! I can't dine alone," he added, plaintively. "'Pon my word, it's too bad! It is a good dinner—I ordered it myself."

Finally, he looked up unexpectedly, as if he had reached a solution of the difficulty. "Won't you join me?"

Her eyes appeared to be drawn to the blank houses across the way; she said nothing. At last she laughed gayly.

"You say it is a good dinner?" she asked.

"A very good dinner," he replied, solemnly.

"I am quite hungry—" she wavered. "That settles it!" He gathered together his hat and gloves and stood up, bowing. For a moment she hesitated, then she, too, arose.

"The die is cast!" she declared, with mock gravity, as she preceded him into the dining-room.

A waiter hastened to right two chairs which had been tilted against a table near one of the windows. She threw back her wrap and revealed an elaborate evening gown, against which were pinned some orchids. One of them had broken; she lifted it from the others and placed it on the table. When she drew off her long gloves, he glanced curiously at her fingers. There were no rings.

The two finished their oysters in silence—the conventional atmosphere of the dining-room threw the proceedings into somewhat less favorable light. He felt the embarrassment of the situation, and his hospitable instinct deplored it.

"I say, you know," he began, "it really is no funeral, save for the oysters; we must talk, and I talk I've got to call you something."

The humor of the affair came home to her again, and she laughed without reserve.

"Very well," she said at last, "call me 'Gay'—it seems to be appropriate. And you?"

"Since the name must fit, you might call me 'Tristram,'" he said. "I fear I am a sad companion, at best."

"Are you sure the name is not a mistake for Trismegistus?"

He raised his eyebrows.

"Where did my lady learn that?" he asked.

"I'm not nearly so—" she began.

"That has been said," he interfered, peremptorily.

"If I am not to say what has been said," she replied, "I had best keep silence at once. There is nothing new under the sun, you know."

"We are not under the sun," he retorted. "It's night; I'd have you understand."

"Quibbles!" They laughed. The waiter removed the soup plates and deposited a rustling bucket, napkin-covered, by Tristram's chair. This time it was his companion's turn to raise her eyebrows. But she made no remark. When the glasses were filled, Tristram lifted his and peered over its edge at his vis-a-vis.

"Do you know Tom Moore?" he asked.

"The time I've lost in wooing—," she chanted. "Don't quote that; it's uncomplimentary."

"But he knew how to be flattering, too, I assure you:

'There's to the one who long
Hath waked the poet's sigh—
The girl who gave to song
What gold could never buy.'

I drink." And he did.

"How can I drink till I know who 'the one' is?" she inquired, still holding her glass before her.

"Gay," he mused, tentatively, as if to try the sound of the word.

"Thank you," she smiled; "but I can't drink, if the toast is to me." And sat down her wine, untouched.

"Oh! but that is too bad! You must make me a toast, now—cap my quatrain, if you can."

"I wonder," she said. "Let me see." She put her hands to her cheeks and stared at the volatile bubbles that made an irridescent cloud in the yellow liquid. Finally she raised her eyes. "It's the best I can do—and quite appropriate; Tristram says it, you know:

'Each to him who worships each
Sole Queen of Beauty and of love, behold
This day my Queen of Beauty is not here.'

"Good!" he cried. "And your toast is—"

"To the absent—whose place I fill but indifferently."

"I drink the toast, but veto the postamble."

"Now, now! Out of the kindness of your heart, you are trying to see me as I see myself. Don't; Bobby Burns was wise. I wonder how we should seem to others, if they knew the circumstances of our being here, together?"

"Feminine query! Now, I should be rather tempted to ask how we must ultimately seem to each other—afterward. Mine is a question more apt to be answered, at any rate. Yet, there was a formula for all that sort of thing laid down long ago—you may recognize it: 'Judge not that ye be not judged.' For with what judgement ye judge, ye shall be judged.' A little redundant in style, but right in spirit, don't you think?"

"Yes. Right in spirit and right in practice—but are you quite sure you believe in it yourself?" She was unaccountably serious. He reated his el bows on the table at either side his plate and regarded her, wonderingly.

"Yes," he said, slowly; "quite sure."

"I think I believe that to be the best rule of conduct in the world," she mused. "It would obviate so much scandal!"

He laughed.

She continued. "But it has nothing to do with us, has it? We are both eminently sensible people, who understand each other's motives all of this is." She waved her hand to include him, herself and the dinner.

"If I were unkind, I should say that I understand perfectly well how meaningless that is," he rejoined, quickly

"You are unkind."

"I am speaking the truth—It is often the same thing. Sensible people, indeed! I scorn your characterization. But suppose we are not sensible peo ple," he objected to her look of surprised incredulity.

"Then we've no business to be doing this sort of thing." She shook her finger at him, with an air of pretended severity.

He selected a cigarette from a silver case and puffed it in the flame at a candle held by the waiter. He stared at the candle flame in silence, then flicked the ash into a tray at his elbow.

She shivered. Something has chilled me, I fear. Would you mind throwing my wrap about me?"

He hastened to comply, unreasonably thankful for the diversion. As his fingers touched her shoulders, she shivered again.

"Thank you," she said. "Perhaps when I drink my coffee—"

"Won't you have a liqueur?" he urged, solicitously. "Stupid of me! That is the thing! But I cannot presume to select a liqueur for you; one's spouse and one's liqueur, I suppose, one chooses for oneself."

"Yes," she replied, smiling at his conceit, "but you have done remarkably well with the dinner, I am sure. It was a good dinner—as advertised —and I thank you. I prefer Chartreuse—yellow." She set down her coffee cup and pushed back her chair.

Tristram called the waiter and gave the order. He watched him anxiously, playing with the orchid on the corner of the table. She arose, smiling.

"Will you excuse me?" she asked.

"Yes," he said, returning her smile. She threaded her way, gracefully, among the tables. He watched her go, puzzled, pleased. Her coat flared out at either side as she walked, and her gown trailed sinuously behind her, along the carpet. As she disappeared through one of the doorways he sighed. She was remarkably beautiful, he thought; clever, charming. He lit another cigarette and speculated sentimentally upon her character, and the future.

The waiter brought the tiny glasses of Chartreuse, at last, and Tristram started from his reverie. She had not returned; he noticed with a certain disquiet that there remained of the table only the broken flower; she had carried her gloves. He looked about the room, but she was not in sight. A poignant misgiving seized him. He hurried to the doorway through which she had gone. She was nowhere in the corridor. He crossed to the Turkish room and peered in. The apartment was deserted.

"Gay! Gay!" he cried. He ran through the room and stared out into the lobby. "Gay!" A bell-boy turned to gaze at him curiously. He stepped back, confused, disturbed, suddenly questioning anew the significance of the last hour. "Gay!" he called again, this time softly, as if to himself. There was no answer.

MAJOR EDWARDS DEAD

Veteran Theatrical Man Succumbs After a Long Illness.

Major Mace Edwards, whose death occurred at Muhlenberg Hospital, Sunday night, was a familiar figure in this city since 1897, when he removed here from Elizabeth, where he had been manager of the Mace Edwards.

Star theatre. For several years he was identified with the management of Stillman Music Hall, which is now Proctor's theatre. Later he assumed the management of what was known as the Casino, now the Hartridge School auditorium, and until his health failed him he was a private secretary for Mayor C. J. Fisk in this city. This was his last position.

Major Edwards, as he was called by his intimate friends, was a native of London, Eng., and he came to this country when a boy, locating with his parents in Boston. Later he removed to Sacramento, Cal., where he got his financial start and became identified with the theatrical business. During that time he was on the staff of the then Governor of California. He afterwards went to New York, where for a time he was connected with Major Pond's Bureau and various theatrical enterprises, always with success. He continued this business in Chicago, from which city he removed to Elizabeth.

It was while in Chicago that the Major was married a second time. After a successful management of the Star theatre, Elizabeth, Mr. Edwards came to Plainfield in the spring of 1897 and continued to reside here up to the time of his death. He made a host of friends here and was beloved by all.

Two summers ago while staying at Block Island, Mr. Edwards was thrown out of a carriage in which he was riding and severely injured. Several bones were broken. Mrs. Edwards, who accompanied him, was also thrown out, but she recovered more quickly from her injuries. The Major was finally removed to his home here, where for months he was under care of a trained nurse and a physician. Finally he recovered sufficiently to get about with the aid of crutches, but he was always a great sufferer.

Several weeks ago he was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital, where everything possible was done for him. During his management of Stillman Music Hall success attended his efforts. He was a member of Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. & A. M., Jerusalem Chapter, No. 24, R. A. M.; Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., and the local lodge of Elks, the members of which have extended every courtesy and consideration to him during his illness.

Major Edwards is survived by a wife, two sons, Roland Edwards and Robert Edwards, the former an actor; a daughter, Miss Edith Edwards, an actress; also three brothers, Col. William Edwards, of San Francisco, Cal.; Samuel Edwards, an actor, of Chicago; Rev. Dr. David J. Edwards, who is now in Block Island, and one sister, who lives on Wolverhampton, Eng.

The funeral services will be held from the home of Frank Rowley on Grove street, Thursday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock, and the burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

Hacquer Goes to Phila.

Archibald Hacquer, who has been on the staff of the Courier-News for the past eight years, left Sunday to assume a new position with the Philadelphia Press. His place on the Courier-News news staff will be taken by John Nicol, who has been in the circulation department of the same paper for several years.

St. Mary's Team Victorious.

The St, Mary Baseball Club defeated New Market at the latter place, Saturday by a score of 6 to 2, and yesterday deefated North Plainfield by a score of 8 to 3. Both contests were well played. "Tish" Conover pitched a fine game for St. Mary's team, holding the opposing nine safe all the way, while in the afternoon Squires held North Plainfield down to a few hits.

Pastors to Exchange.

Rev. John Y. Brock, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, and Rev. Garrett Conover, formerly of Rocky Hill, but now pastor of the Grand Avenue Reformed church, Asbury Park, of which church Mr. Brook was pastor before coming to Plainfield, will exchange pulpits Sunday morning.

ON THE POLICE BLOTTER

Mayor Fisk Passes Judgement on the Disorderly Ones.

A big batch of "fire-water" and fireworks celebrators ended the Glorious Fourth in police court cells, and were given a hearing before Mayor C. J. Fisk at the city court Tuesday morning.

William Backer, who is the village cut-up of Gladstone, and runs an automobile for a Gladstone man when not engaged in playing jokes on the town folks, played a "joke" on a cane vendor in the West End last night, when he grabbed his stock of trade and disappeared in the crowd. The vendor's cries of "Stop thief" brought about his arrest by Patrolman McCarthy, and at his hearing Monday Mayor Fisk gave him thirty days in the county jail to think over some new jokes.

John Canary refused to keep away from a West Front street saloon when ejected by the bar-tender last Monday, and was arrested. He was given his choice of $10 or 20 days today, and took the days.

Sentence was suspended in the case of Alexander Frame, who loaded up with liquor, and developed an objectionable linger-longer-langor that brought about his arrest.

James Caulfield, Thomas Caulfield and Charles Sprague were arrested after a mix-up at an East Second street saloon Monday afternoon, when lots of blows and cuss-words were exchanged. The combatants were rounded up in the patrol wagon, but as the witnesses were not at court today, Mayor Fisk adjourned the case until Thursday morning.

When Dominick McVerra, a P. S. C. employe, tried to set off three tenfoot canon crackers in a bunch on North avenue late Monday, Patrolman Nolan interfered "pro bono publico." Dominick got all ruffled up and started some profane air waves, referring directly to the officer. Mayor Fisk made it $5 or 10 days at court this morning and the Italian paid.

John Schwartz, who lives in Brooklyn, was picked up yesterday for peddling without a license. He sold souvenir programs with tin whistles as trading stamps, and said he knew he ought to have a license, but "took a chance." The Mayor made him pay the price of a three-day license, and he left town $6 poorer.

George Johnson and James Smiley, two colored Fillmore avenue residents, with their two wives, who are sisters, were arrested at Johnson's home late Monday, when there was a lively scrap over the two wives. James, according to the other three, came over to George's home and shouted about everything breakable. Testimony showed that there was jealousy over the women, and James was in bad with George on that account. "Is Mrs. Johnson your affinity?" asked Mayor Fisk of James. "I seems so; they're all ramping against me," said the housewrecker. So the Mayor made it $5 or 10 days for each man. Johnson paid, but Smiley went back to the cell.

William Switka, who is seventeen years old, was arrested in the West End Monday afternoon for peddling with a veteran's license. He said his employer, a New Brunswick man, gave it to him. He was fined $10.

HOLD FIRST SERVICE AT EAST END CHURCH

The first session of the Sunday-school and the first preaching service were held at the Netherwood Reformed church Sunday morning. There were about thirty-five in attendance at the Sunday-school session and about fifty attended the preaching service. All expressed their pleasure over the new edifice and the fact that an opportunity has been offered to give the people of that section of the East End a house of worship. The new church building, while not entirely completed, permitted the holding of the services without any inconvenience.

Rev. Royal Stout, the pastor, was in charge of the Sunday-school and afterward preached an interesting sermon on the topic, "Our Church." All in attendance joined heartily in the services and afterward remained to become better acquainted and assure Mr. Stout of their pleasure to do all in their power toward making the new church a success. The new edifice will be dedicated Thursday night with appropriate services.

Mrs. Edward Long, of Bound Brook, has been visiting relatives here for several days.

Isaac Elliott, of West Front street, who recently underwent an operation, is able to be out again.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dow, of Elizabeth, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Amos Gray, of West Front street.

Leonard Atlee, of New York, has returned after visiting his parents, Rev. and Mrs. C. W. F. Atlee, of West End avenue.

THREE CHURCHES UNITE

Union Services of Three Congregations at the First M. E. Church.

The First M. E. church was filled Sunday evening at the union services in which the First Baptist, First Presbyterian and Trinity Reformed congregations joined the Methodists. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss and Rev. A. C. Anderson joined the speaker, Rev. John Y. Brock, on the platform. Dr. Chambliss offered the prayer and pronounced the benediction.

Rev. Mr. Brock delivered a patriotic address on "Our Fourth of July Celebration, and Our Own City," taking for his text Proverbs 14:34; "Righteousness exalteth a Nation," and said in part: "While we are to discuss some subject of interest to our country let us plan something of importance for the future.

"If our ancestors were here they would rejoice in our country as it is today; they would rejoice in the the respect that is shown our flag by the great nations of the world; they would rejoice that our government is getting better every day, and they would rejoice in the way we are to celebrate the Fourth of July."

Mr. Brock then read the following abstract from a letter by John Adams addressed to Mrs. Adams: "The second of July, (1776), will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America. I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty. It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports and illuminations from one end of this country to the other, from this time forward forever. You will think me transported with enthusiasm, but I am not. I am well aware of the toil and blood and treasure it will cost to maintain it. Declaration and these States, yet through all this gloom I can see the rays of ravishing light and glory."

"What would John Adams say if he could behold our nation today? The two events we are to celebrate here, our national independence and the granting of a charter to our city lead me to think it very appropriate to speak of our nation and our city. From the thirteen stars representing the colonies our flag is now emblazoned by forty-seven stars; there is no East, no South, no West. We are all united in one grand land of liberty."

Mr. Brock then referred to our enormous production, wide area and growth as a nation during the past 132 years, to our mother tongue, our army, our wealth, our education nor our laws had made our nation great, but that "Righteousness exalteth a nation," and the lesson to be learned from Independence Day is that as a nation the lives of righteousness. "Our forefathers," he said, were not canonized saints, but they left us a glorious legacy. God's hand was in the throwing off of England's yoke in the coming of Lafayette and in the demolition of slavery."

The cardinal danger to the country is in the lax observance of the Sabbath. France has become decadent and is rapidly losing her place as a nation of the first rank, because she is losing sight of the Sabbath. It would be a grand thing if we could stop all secular work on that day."

Referring to the city, Mr. Brock said that all the foregoing may be applied to it and the city must advance along the same lines as the nation.

"We ought to thank God," he said, "that we live in Plainfield. It is constantly progressing; it is clean, decent and inviting and with all its business progress the natural beauty of the city has been preserved. We have the best public schools in people, and not afraid of the old-fashioned religion. Every person in the city ought to thank God that he lives in the truly garden spot of New Jersey. Our city must advance along the lines of righteousness, for God will honor the city which honors Him, as He will honor the nation which honors Him."

The next union service will be held next Sunday evening in Trinity Reformed church and Rev. Dr. Chambliss will be the speaker.

Mr. Tallamy sang "Abide with Me," as an offertory solo.

CONKLING IS GIVEN ONE YEAR SENTENCE

John T. Conkling, the former assistant mailing clerk at the local postoffice, who was arrested and indicted on a charge of stealing money from the mail, Monday, arraigned at Trenton and sentenced to one year in the Essex county penitentiary at Caldwell, where former Letter-carrier Daniel McNamara is now serving nine months for opening and destroying mail.

Conkling confessed, after his arrest, to having taken and opening special delivery letters, although it is not known just how much he got. He was caught on two special "test" letters dropped at the Plainfield postoffice. He admitted having been engaged in the practise for several months. The fact that Conkling took money practically made it impossible for him to get less than one year.

MR. RANDOLPH'S SPEECH

Former Mayor's Reminiscences at the Open Air Meeting.

AN ENTERTAINING DISCOURSE.

Following is the speech delivered by former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph, formerly president of the Consolidated Stock Exchange of New York, at the Charter Day open-air meeting at City Park yesterday afternoon:

The excuse for inviting me to deliver this Charter Day address appears to rest chiefly on the two facts that I am one of the oldest citizens of Plainfield, and am the oldest of those now living who have here filled the office of Mayor. And yet in a recent review and explanation of current conditions, His Honor, the Mayor, has indulged in interesting reminiscences, seeming to be almost personal to himself, and reaching back to the year 1735, and to the one house then here in evidence. It might be immodest and inaccurate for me to claim that I am that house; but I might truthfully assert that in the loins of my ancestors I was then, and even earlier, "here or hereabouts." If being an older Jerseyman enables one to perceive more clearly the true ground for Jersey is the case, the scope of actual current civic requirements, then I might in such respects claim precedence over His Honor—though in some respects he is doubtless an older man than I. It is indeed with me not quite a question of the date of the venerable colored body-servant of George Washington, who, having claimed to know the Father of his Country from his childhood up, was catechised as to the truth of the story that George Washington once took a hack at a cherry tree. The ancient body-servant promptly answered: "Yis, sir, dat story was true. I know it, for I drav de hack." But it may justly be claimed that what the Fitz-Randolphs and the Mannings, and the Laings did not know about the days of central New Jersey was not worth knowing. However, I am willing to admit that my own recollection is better concerning the events of the last sixty-five years than it is of any earlier period.

About sixty-five years ago I began to attend school in Plainfield. I was a long, lean lad, studious but willful; "pretty sure to grow up" (as my dear old nurse would have it) "to be something either very good or very bad." Just here, if I may, I will correct a statement, in what my good wife terms "an obituary notice," recently published here, in which it was mentioned that I obtained my education in the public schools of Plainfield. That would meant statement would be strictly true but for the fact that when I was a school boy in this town, it had no public schools, but it had a boys' school or academy—the Maurice School—the match for which was surely never known outside of Eton or Rugby. All honor to its chief! Peace to his ashes, and eternal veneration to his memory. In those early Plainfield days I joined the church, being baptized one winter day in Green brook, almost behind the church which my ancestors had helped to organize. I think I was much nearer being good in those years than I have ever been since; but there is no telling what degree of sainship I might have attained if I had not been transplanted for a season to Newark, whose soil I found unfavorable to the growth of holiness. Somehow, in such matters, since my return to Plainfield, I have never been able to "catch up."

But I may as well must listen to reminiscences, it is to you more interesting to hear about the Plainfield of the last sixty years, and particularly of the last forty years since Plainfield became a city, than to learn of your humble servant's childish days.

My earlier recollection of this settlement goes back to the time when its population scarcely exceeded a single thousand. Plainfield had one long street, namely, Main street—or Front street—which was the old highway of Revolutionary days, and was the stage road between New York and Philadelphia, before railways came into use. It had also a few bits of streets—cross roads and streets parallel—but these were not important, and a few shops, located chiefly between Cherry street (now Park avenue) and Laing's hotel, then standing on the place now occupied by the Babcock building. I remember well the day that "Fashion" made the run against time from Elizabethtown to Bound Brook, 23 miles in a hour, and rested a moment at Laing's hotel.

North Plainfield did not then exist as such, but Uncle Benny Stelle's farm house was there (as it still is) and back of it just one occupant attractive to Plainfield's ambitious and hopeful boys. A very few fine colonial mansions were then or a little later built further east—one by Dr. Craig on the north side of the brook, and one by Cornelius Boice next to the First Presbyterian church.

The social element was largely religious. It was mainly Baptist, Seventh Day Baptist, and (as the Baptist brethren called their Presbyterian neighbors) "Pedo-Baptist." There were some nice, kind, drab-hued old Quakers, or Friends, who were regarded as paragons of truth and honesty. Methodists were beginning to work in the neighborhood. Catholics and Episcopalians had been seen as segregated individuals, but were as "sheep without a shepherd." Israelites had been read of somewhere in the Bible. Social functions were largely receptions, "giving visits," "quarterly meetings" days, and the half hour in the church porch after Sunday morning worship.

My grandfather had bought for our family the house now occupied by our excellent builder, Mr. John Abbott, at the corner of Front and New streets, and Plainfield's most able architect was good Dominie Hill, whose honored and distinguished son is now United States Ambassador to the Court of His Majesty, the Emperor of Germany. Sometimes I heard Dominie Hill preach, and everybody who knew him well loved him. Not less respected was Rev. Simeon J. Drake, long time our minister at the old First Baptist church. I reverenced the man and his character. I reverenced his work and his salary. He received $700 a year, and worthily earned it, and entertained hospitably. I remember well that such an income seemed to me stupendous. Money was then worth at least 7 per cent. interest on bond and mortgage, and to my young, ambitious mind, it seemed that, if I could amass $10,000, and put it out at interest, and receive annually the large sum which then constituted our minister's salary, I should be everlastingly beyond want or anxiety.

Before I had attained my tenth birthday, the Elizabethtown and Somerville Railway was running two trains a day each way. The railways in those days were laid on the strap rail—"snake head"—having no unpleasant prediction for sudden protrusion through the cars of a moving train. When the big station bell rang, the few people of leisure, and those who lived near the station, turned out "to see the cars come in."

We had a happy rural life of it—and no automobiles. Indeed, in those early days slow oxen seemed almost as much valued as horses in the way of service-beasts. Well do I remember one giant, lanky mogul-steer which, in the days of central New Jersey was not worth knowing. However, I am willing to admit that my own recollection is better concerning the events of the last sixty-five years than it is of any earlier period.

A very few fine colonial mansions were then or a little later built further east—one by Dr. Craig on the north side of the brook, and one by Cornelius Boice next to the First Presbyterian church.

The social element was largely practically wiped out, or altered over, by cunning general legislation, obtained by fanatical representatives of the people at Trenton, where no body was looking. All sorts of extra taxes have been authorized, and public officials (under some of this brilliant legislation) can practically hold their offices eternally, unless convicted of theft, treason, conspiracy and murder, or their equivalents.

But there are at least two dear, sacred relics unremoved from our original charter—the liquor license power of Council, and the limitation of the Mayor's salary!

An inquisitive man on a railway train had, by persistent questioning extracted from his modest lady seat-mate, the information that she was a widow, that her husband had been a sea captain, drowned at sea, that she had been a religious maid, and that his wordly effects had been gathered out of the wreck. After a brief pause in his series of tormenting questions, the inquisitor turned anew to his victim, and asked: "Don't you think, madam, that you'd orter be very thankful that your husband was a pious man, and saved his chist?"

So, as to our precious charter, something has been saved—something worth having and worth celebrating, and we have, as a city, undoubtedly gone on and prospered. During the dozen years which had preceded the period of my own mayoralty, our population had well night doubled; and in the quarter of a century or so, which has elapsed since I stepped out, we have about doubled in numbers. Our rate of progress in population has been pretty constantly, about three or four hundred a year for the last forty years. Meantime, various industries have invaded the earlier *Arcadian quiet of our town. One in*dustry produces all sorts of tools—except political tools. Another produces searchlights to illuminate our tax problems; and a third sort constructs printing presses, whose leaves "are for the healing of the nations." But largely, still, our citizens are men who make money elsewhere and spend it here. They are home-builders and home-lovers.

We may let us rejoice and creak not; and this suggests that we should be sorry to see at any time in our midst a "Croker" of any sort, little or big, fat or lean, "Richard" or "John." The last time I saw Richard Croker it was in Egypt. The last I heard of him at close range he was disputing a doctor's bill on a Nile boat. The merits of the case I never knew, and I was not invited to his judicial dinner in New York. He has only keen rid of all sorts of "Crokers" and Hammanites, small and great, we shall be all the happier and richer.

During all these chartered years we have been neighbored by an elder sister—one Elizabeth. I do not say that she is to us a frightful warning. That might be unneighborly. But, "to draw it mild," we might find reflection on her errors profitable, however, she may have been drawn into them. Perhaps it was a case of natural perversity.

I reverence my ancestors, but I am obliged to admit that two of them (and also two ancestors of my wife) were in the band of eighty original settlers of Elizabethtown, and I am willing to pass it that Elizabeth has been more or less unsettled ever since. She is the home of various corporations, and of our permanent Congressman, and all of the mosquitoes of Union county, and of other great Singers; and is the temporary residence of a good many of the disorderly folk disciplined by our own excellent Cadi. Dear old Elizabeth, how we love her! And when we wish to "court" her—why, there's the Court House!

In these days when divorces are fashionable, did it ever occur to the fathers of Plainfield that we might worry along without Elizabeth? How would it operate to have a court house of our own? The Westfield Hill is a sort of natural barrier. The Valley of Green brook is a valley happier and more beautiful than that of Dr. Johnson's Rasselas. From the foot of the Westfield Hill to the foot of Washington Rock, and from the southeastern slope of Netherwood to the Watchung Hills, is an ideal spot for a county capital, and the center of county interests; and to this Plainfield will slowly and surely grow, if we can keep from blundering. Debt and taxes may kill us, or indefinitely retard us. Let us hope they wont.

And now one serious word in closing. One source of prosperity and greater Plainfield should be built and kept along the lines of our wise and happy and rural forefathers. Let us have a city of trees, and not of dry bricks only; a city of homes, rather than a pandemonium of hamlets; a city of lawns and gardens rather than one of arid spaces and curb stones; a city of peace and pure air and pure water, rather than a festering place of riot and disease. Many of use have come to Plainfield from the metropolis to give our families a chance to live. We hate crowding. We don't want to be a metropolis. We shouldn't ape the airs nor the institutions, nor the expenses of a metropolis. We have a good natural drainage; a good, open country air; many good people, good schools and churches, good old trees, and good old customs. Value these! Enjoy them and be blest! We can be very comfortable without the luxuries of a Newark or Paterson, and without the incubus of a metropolitan administration. The longer we can keep Plainfield simple, pure, fresh, green and homelike, the better men we shall be, and the nearer do Heaven will be our daily family life.

MISS VIOLA TINSMAN BECOMES MRS. H. H. PEINS.

Miss Viola M. Tinsman, of Dunellen, and Henry H. Peins, of Menlo Park, were married Sunday afternoon at o'clock at the Presbyterian church parsonage, Dunellen, by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Knox. The couple was attended by Miss Ethel Tinsman, sister of the bride, and Richard Behnke, of Garwood. After the ceremony the couple drove to Menlo Park, where a reception was tendered to them. There were about eighty guests, and the bride was presented with a large number of gifts. The couple is now enjoying a two weeks' honeymoon.

The bride was formerly employed as an operator at the local exchange of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, and is very popular. The groom is employed as an engineer at the works of the Garwood Electrical Company, having been promoted rapidly. Mr. and Mrs. Peins will reside at Garwood.

TWO UNUSUAL FIRES.

Flaming Balloon Falls on Slate Roof —Telegraph Pole Ignited by Locomotive Spark.

Two unusual fires, called out the fire department twice Monday.

A burning telegraph pole near the Watchung avenue bridge, caused by sparks from a locomotive, attracted the attention of a boy. Union Union of the disorderly folk disciplined by our own excellent Cadi. Dear old Elizabeth, how we love her! And when we wish to "court" her—why, there's the Court House!

A flaming balloon landing on a slate roof of an outhouse back of the Roth building on Front street alarmed the occupants of a flat nearby who sent in an alarm from box 12 at 11:40 Monday night. The department responded and the flames were extinguished with a few pails of water.

Cigar Butt Causes $150 Fire.

A mysterious fire in an upper front room of the Iroquoise hotel destroyed a lounge and burned the carpet to the total value of $150, Saturday night. Smoke issuing from the room attracted the attention of one of the hotel employes who sent in an alarm from box 12. The fire department responded and eight extinguishers were used. The occupant of the room said that he had not been in it since 2 o'clock in the afternoon; but the fire is believed to have been started by a smouldering cigar butt. The damage is covered by insurance.

Made Monsignor.

Announcement was made last night by the Rt. Rev. John J. O'Connor, bishop of the Newark Roman Catholic diocese, of Newark, that the Rev. Isaac P. Whelan, rector of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Newark, had been made a monsignor. Bishop O'Connor made the announcement following the receipt of the official "brief" or "Pontifical document" from Pope Pius X, conferring the honor. The new monsignor is a brother of William J. Whelan, of this city.

Always the Same Result.

A. S. Giles, of Park avenue, lost a bunch of keys. They were found by Bert Hall, of 525 East Sixth street, who seeing the advertisement in The Daily Press, of which he is a reader, promptly returned the lost property to the owner.

THE FOURTH'S ACCIDENTS

Many Suffer Injuries While Celebrating Independence Day.

Charles Brighton, colored, employed as a coachman by Dr. Norman H. Probasco, blew three fingers off his right hand late last night by not dropping a lighted giant cracker in time. The hand was horribly mangled and was given first aid treatment at the emergency hospital at police headquarters. He was later removed to Muhlenberg Hospital for the amputation of the hand, but refused to undergo the operation. He was then sent to his home on West Third street, where a physician is in attendance.

Charles Holding, of New York city, was severely burned by the falling sparks from fireworks at the West End exhibition Monday. The man was removed to the home of his cousin, Fred Cramer, and his burns were treated by Dr. Dundon.

Augustus Mason, of Scotch Plains, had three fingers of his right hand horribly lacerated by the premature explosion of a cannon cracker. He was treated at Muhlenberg and it is believed that the hand may be saved.

John Dawe, of Somerset street, was shot in the left hand while experimenting with a blank cartridge revolver at his home yesterday. He was taken to the emergency hospital, where his injuries were treated. Wadding and powder grains were taken from the hand, and there is danger of testanus.

Patrick Doyle, the nine-year-old son of Michael Doyle, of West Front street, lies at Muhlenberg Hospital threatened with tetanic poisoning as the result of wads and powder grains in the palm of his left hand. The boy shot himself with a blank cartridge revolver Sunday afternoon.

By the premature explosion of a giant fire cracker, Louis Malango, 15, of West Third street, blew off two fingers of his left hand Monday afternoon. He was operated upon at Muhlenberg Hospital, where he is still a patient.

Frank Berry, 19, of Scotch Plains, was brought to Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday afternoon with his left hand lacerated as the result of an accident while setting off fireworks at his home. The first finger was fractured, but the young man's condition is not serious.

Ormond Van Ness, the eleven-year old son of G. B. Van Ness, of Mariners place, was knocked down at his home corner and run over by an automobile, as he got off a main line trolley car at 8:45 o'clock last night, witnessing the fireworks exhibition last night. The machine, which was owned and driven by L. R. H. Labaw, of Neshanic, was going at a fast clip, and the accident happened as Mr. Labaw, who was accompanied by another man and two women, was attempting to pass the trolley car. Young Van Ness was heavily thrown and the front wheel passed over his thigh.

The injured boy was removed to the emergency hospital at police headquarters in the automobile, where an examination by City Physician C. B. Lufburrow showed that there were no broken bones. Young Van Ness was taken home after first aid treatment, and is suffering from the shock. It is believed that he is internally injured. Mr. Labaw was released on his own recognizance to appear at court next Tuesday morning.

Because he held a giant cracker too long after lighting the fuse, William Breem, of East Second street, had his right hand badly lacerated when it exploded in his hand late Monday. At the emergency hospital, five stitches were taken in the hand by City Physician C. B. Lufburrow, and he was later taken home. Mr. Breem is said to be

DOG CATCHER BITTEN BY PREACHER'S HOUND

Dog Catcher William Bryant, colored, was severely bitten by a brown hound Friday morning, and carried his bleeding right arm in bandages as the result of the encounter with the canine's teeth. The animal rushed at him on West Fourth street, near Plainfield avenue, while he was "off the job," but "got away" Bryant, who was badly scared, hastened to Dr. Boone's office, where the wound was cauterized, and later came to police headquarters, vowing vengeance on the biting dog. Its owner will be called to task by the police.

According to Bryant's story, he was on his way to a store, when the dog, which he describes as a "long, brown hound dog," dashed at him, and jumping up, bit him twice in the right fore-arm. Bryant shook the animal loose and it ran away, being taken into the house. At police headquarters today, the Dog Catcher bemoaned the fact that as he was not "on the job," he didn't have his revolver with him.

Bryant says that the dog belongs to the "Poor Washers," and that they declare it shall never have a dog license. He says that sometimes it stays at the preacher's house, and sometimes at the houses of various "sisters" of the church.

FASHIONS FOR WOMEN.

There are some features in the thin wool and worsted summer suits of which no hint was given in the first models shown, say in April, but which now give every appearance of being not so hopelessly out of fashion for the next few months. That is saying much, when, in fact, every day things fashionable seem more and more to be matters of only a momentary caprice. But the cylindrical skirt, for summer, has been passed as to the coat length of such suits. All are either half or three quarter length. In the matter of skirts, these have somewhat widened, not materially so, but a little the width being gained by means of small fan-pleat groups let in at intervals around the skirt. The pleats may extend from the knee down or from the waist according to fancy, but fashion arbitrarily demands that they be pressed flat, or stitched so that the loose Moyen-Age effect remains.

There is, too, a distinct putting away of soutache braid in favor of a rather heavy twisted "rat-tail" cord, with outlining large mediaeval ornaments. Disks, medallions and vermicelli braidings are to be passed by, which for a season have been regarded as necessary trimmings. The new forms are lace or embroidery squares, usually of a cutwork character, and of inlet or inset torpedo forms of silk or tapestry effects.—Harper's Bazar.

MADAM EAMES' FAREWELL.

Before I go, I wish to say goodby and thank you to the public that has loved and encouraged me so long, and which has made my career possible. From the moment when, on the occasion of my debut at the Grand Opera House in Paris, the public frantically applauded me, until today, I have always been obliged to drive myself onto the stage. As I went on a sad fuller for the first time I did so filled with illusion and forgetting even my own personality. When the public burst into applause I was filled with horror that it was I they were applauding; instead of elating, it terrified me. I fought my way out of that, of course, even on the first occasion; but for years to sing in concert was not only a torture but an impossibility. I could only face the public in some one else's personality. I say that the American public has made my career a possibility by sending me the wave of affectionate encouragement and pride in my achievements without which I should have been paralized.

My great loves in life are nature in all her moods, animals, and beauty, and above all to lead a normal life. Ther is nothing of the gypsy in me, and my life has been nomadic in the extreme. The result of all this driving has been frequent physical and nervous breakdowns, which I conscientiously overcame in silence. And yet until now I could not give up my active work. Although in the future I may sing an occasional operatic performance, I shall never again imprison myself in bricks and mortar for a season of opera, or for months of work at a time.

I have been kindly reproached for not having announced my intention of leaving opera sooner, instead of waiting until my last operatic performance before doing so. My public has only to consult the files of the papers at the very beginning of the season, to see that I spoke of my intention then without my statement being believed. On that last evening I felt that the public did not realize it was my farewell, and before I knew it I was speaking—no one more surprised that I should be doing so than I. I could ask for no greater "testimonial" than the wave of feeling that came to me from my public after I had done.—Putnam's Magazine for June.

TO REBUILD BRIDGES THROUGHOUT COUNTY

A $10,000 increase in the county appropriation for brides and culverts was made by the Board of Freeholders at its meeting at Elizabeth Thursday on account of the recently discovered necessity for building four new bridges in the county. The appropriation is now $48,300, instead of 038,300. At the time that the original budget for bridges was made extreme economy was observed.

It has been found that the bridges over the Rahway river at North avenue, Cranford, and over the Passaic, at Summit, will have to be rebuilt at a probable cost of $18,000. The Elm street and Henry street bridges in Cranford will also have to be rebuilt. Besides these facts, nearly $25,000 has been spent out of the appropriation of $28,300.

The bridge committee reported that it recommended building a new bridge at Cranford, and bids for the work will be received at the next meeting of the board. It was found that the present bridge was too light and inefficient, having been built in 1877. The years of use have made the bridge so weak that it sways under heavy traffic, and it is beyond repair. The abutments, however, are sound, and will not be removed, but will be extended. The new bridge will be either truss or plate girder of heavy design, and have the same span as the old, and a width of sixty feet.

The Hetfield road bridge in Linden was reported to be unsafe for travel, one of the abutments having fallen away. The committee advised the building of an iron beam bridge to replace the old one at a cost not to exceed $1,500.

The two long bridges over West Brook at Henry and at Elm streets, Linden, are too unsafe for present use. Steel beam deck bridges of spans of 22 to 24 feet and widths of 55 feet should be erected.

A committee was appointed to confer with the Morris county Board of Freeholders upon the bridge at the Morris turpike over the Passaic. It is said to be unsafe.

New sidewalks and a new railing over the Cedar brook, in this city, will be put in at a cost not to exceed $100.

A request from Alfred C. Banta, of Roselle, for a new bridge or culvert on St. George's avenue, between the Wheatsheaf Hotel and Wood avenue, was referred to committee.

The board decided that hereafter it would advertise for bids for any public work whose cost was to be as low as $300. It was the opinion of the board that in this matter lower rates could be secured. Part of the advertising will be done near the place where the work is to be done and part in Elizabeth. Advertisements will be placed in two newspapers.

After two* witnesses were sworn and testified, W. G. DeMeza, of counsel for the defendant, asked for an acquital. Justice Toucey then charged the jury to acquit the defendant on the grounds of insufficient testimony. Paul Q. Oliver, of Westfield, represented the town.

USE FOR TAG DAY FUND

King's Daughters to Pay Off Mortgage on the Day Nursery.

WILL IMPROVE BABY CAMP.

At a meeting of the City Union of the King's Daughters Thursday, the treasurer reported that the receipts from "Tag Day" amounted to something over $1,300. It was decided to use $1,000 of this fund to pay off a mortgage outstanding on the Day Nursery building, which has unexpectedly come due this summer.

Most of the remaining $300 will be used for much needed improvements to the Baby Camp on the mountain. A separate Kitchen sixteen feet square will be erected back of the main building, and a cool range will be installed in this. Heretofore the matron has had to get along as best she could with two or three oil stoves set up in a shed connected with the main building.

The Camp will be opened on June 25, a week earlier than usual, in order to care for a sick baby which the doctors said would certainly die if it was not taken away from the heat of the city. When it reached the camp on Saturday it was almost unconscious, and it is now so much better that it raises its head and smiles and takes its food regularly. If any other doctors know of sick children which they would like to send to the Camp, the institution is now open to receive them, and they will be taken there at any time. Anyone having hammocks or swings or Victor phonograph records which they are willing to give to the Camp, may be sure they will be appreciated there. Any contributions of this sort may be left at the store of Messrs. Powlison and Jones, who will arrange to have them taken to the Camp.

WHITE STORE EMPLOYES SURPRISE THE MANAGER

The employes in "The White Store," of which A. E. Force is the proprietor, gave their manager, J. Varley Varley, a pleasant surprise at their home in Orchard place, Thursday. Early in the evening Mr. Force called at the Varley home and invited the family to take an automobile ride. Upon their return about 8:30 o'clock, he and Mrs. Varley were surprised to find their house illuminated and a large company gathered there to greet them.

It happened to be the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Varley and the last made the affair all the more enjoyable. The evening was given up to music, sociability, dancing and refreshments. There were violin selections by Charles Cregar and Irving Bininger; piano selections by Miss Flossie Bradley and Lawrence O'Neil, and parlor games added to the enjoyment of the occasion. Later refreshments were served and dancing enjoyed.

The committee of arrangements comprised Miss Elizabeth O'Keefe, Miss Gaines, Miss May Hughes, Miss E. Flanagan and Miss Wilhelmina Hossenger. Those present were the following:

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Force, Mr. and Mrs. J. Farley, the Misses K. Dinneen, Thomas, H. O'Keefe, A. Mahoney, L. VanWinkle, E. Flanagan, E. O'Keefe, May Hughes, Wilhelmina Hossenger, B. Aller V. Burner, K. Neylon, M. Bray, E. Guinee, F. Buckley, J. Fuller, J. Willever, Mrs. Thomas Burke, D. J. Wren, Irving Bininger, L. O'Neil, Charles Cregar, G. Varley and A. E. Force, Jr.

THE LATE JOHN McCLAREN

A NATIVE OF THIS CITY.

John McClaren, whose death occurred at Kellerton, Riggold county, Iowa, on Friday, June 11, was a native of this city, having been born where the safe works' building stands on Clinton avenue, October 20, 1838. He was a brother of Mrs. Sarah A. Milliken, of West Front street, the only surviving member of a family of ten children. Mr. McClaren was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew McClaren, and the place where he was born was known for many years as the McClaren Farm.

Mr. McClaren was sixteen years old when he went to Mason City, Ill. He followed different occupations in the west and at the time of his death was engaged in farming. He married Adelia Sutley, of Kellerton, and four daughters and one son survive. Mr. McClaren visited Plainfield last fall, according to his custom every four or five years. Mrs. Milliken had everything in readiness to go to Kellerton to visit her brother, when she was suddenly taken ill and had to postpone the trip. Soon afterward she received word of her brother's death.

OAK TREE SCHOOL PUPILS AT REUNION

A reunion of the Oak Tree School pupils was held at Boynton Wednesday with over 100 classmates and guests present. The majority of the former pupils were over seventy years of age at their gathering, some reaching eighty-seven and eighty-eight years, but all were boys and girls again Wednesday.

Noah Laing, a partial cripple, because of a gunshot wound received forty-six years ago at the battle of Chancellorsville, was accompanied by his two sisters, Mrs. Caldwell Tice and Susan Barnett, who were still in their teens when last the group was together. Luncheon was served under the trees. An address was made by Rev. W. Z. Mundy, of Syracuse, who had been a pupil with the others. Mr. Mundy reviewed Tice and Susan Barnett caused much laughter by recalling to those present some of the escapades that had occurred during their school career. He paid touching tribute to the former pupils who have died, and expressed the hope that those assembled for would live to see several more reunions of a similar nature.

STEALS SILVER SPOONS FROM AN APARTMENT

Entering the apartments of John I. Brokaw, of 186 East Front street, with a pass key sometime Thursday, a sneak thief ransacked the place. Among his booty was twenty-five valuable silver spoons. Mr. Brokaw did not discover his loss until about 10:45 o'clock last night, when he returned home. The matter was reported to the police.

The silverware was in a bureau, two drawers of which had been wrenched open by the thief in his search for valuables. A dozen of the spoons had heavily carved handles, and were engraved with the initials "J. I. B." Twelve more spoons had twisted handles, and the twenty-fifth spoon was a valuable piece, treasured as an heir-loom.

Mr. Brokaw, who was in the hall-way of his apartments at about 4 o'clock, says that he believed that the burglary was committed previous to that time. A copy of The Daily Press, delivered by a newsboy about 3:30 had been thrown in the hall-way, so that it rested against the door, and the position of the paper was unchanged when Mr. Brokaw returned to enter his apartments late in the evening. This shows that the entrance was effected previous to the time the paper was delivered. The door bore no marks of violence, and Mr. Brokaw declares that entrance was gained by a pass-key.

MARRIAGE AS A BUSINESS PROPOSITION.

A unique plan for putting married life on a business basis is out-lined in the Woman's Home Companion for June. Says this magazine:

"The first matter to consider is the amount of assets available. This, of course, amounts to exactly what the husband is worth, deducting services of the producing partner to be worth. This income must be divided to meet the various expenses of the business under a general classification as follows:

"First: General Operating Expense—This is the most important department of all, and includes food, servants, fuel, light, rent (or interest and taxes).

"Second: Sinking Fund—This is also a most important account, and should not for any reason be overlooked. Upon it depends absolutely the prosperity of the firm through periods of financial depression. It includes savings-bank deposits and life-insurance premiums.

"Third: Repairs and Deprecation—This is often considered a part of the operating expense, but it is better kept separate. It includes depreciation of the plant, and on equipment, such as dishes, cooking utensils, furniture, bed and table linen.

"Fifth: Emergency Fund—this includes doctor, druggist and dentist.

"In order to transact business on a sound basis, all of these funds must be considered. What remains of the capital may be divided between the partners as a salary. From their salaries the partners must pay their personal expenses of clothing and incidentals. The size of the salaries, therefore, depends entirely upon the economical management of the affairs of the firm. It is unwise to raise salaries at the expense of the sinking fund, though this is often a temptation! In case the partners feel that their salaries are not large enough, it is better to appoint an investigating committee to examine petty graft and extravagance. They should continue carefully the operating expense. It is sometimes economical for a domestic firm to build its own plant, instead of hiring one, and it is often possible, by engaging in outside industry, such as kitchen gardening or poultry raising, to reduce the food expense, and save money in the emergency fund."

MISS N. F. WILDEY WEDS

Daughter of C. F. Wildey Marries Hart Scudder Farlee.

REV. DR. ZELIE OFFICIATES.

Miss Natalie Frances Wildey, of Central avenue, and Hart Scudder Farlee, of New York, were married June 30 at the home of the bride's father, Charles Frederick Wildey, on Central avenue, in the presence of about seventy-five guests from New York, Brooklyn and this city. Rev. Dr. John S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony.

The bride was gowned in white satin. She wore a tulle veil and carried a bouquet of bride roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Edna Wildey, as maid-of-honor, who was also gowned in white satin and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley. Charles Frederick Wildey, Jr., a brother of the bride, was the best man.

An orchestra furnished the music for the occasion, rendering the wedding march and also playing during the reception which followed the ceremony. The spacious veranda and lawn were attractive places during the reception and the supper was served out-of-doors. Later in the evening the bride and groom left *for a month's sojourn in the moun*tains and upon their return will reside on Watchung avenue, this city.

The bride is a favorite in the younger set, and is well-known throughout the country as an expert tennis player. She generally plays in the women's doubles with her sister, Miss Edna Wildey, and has *valuable prizes in numerous big tour*naments. She was the recipient of a large collection of gifts of great value, including a two-seated automobile, of the racing type, from her husband.

Mr. Farlee, who is a relative of Mayor and Mrs. Charles J. Fisk, is also well known here in social circles and is popular in a large circle of friends and acquaintances. He is engaged in business in New York as a stock broker.

COUNTY FUNDS FOR UNION'S HOSPITALS

The regular annual appropria*tions of the county for the support* of the hospitals were made by the Board of Freeholders at its meeting at Elizabeth Thursday afternoon. The total is $22,000 for the four institutions, and it will be paid next January. The items are as follows: Elizabeth General, $8,000; St. Elizabeth, $5,750; Alexian, $3,000; Plainfield, Muhlenberg, $3,250; Summit, $2,000.

The board adopted a resolution authorizing County Collector N. R. Leavitt to borrow the sum of $150,000 on a note or notes of the county to defray current expenses until December. This proceeding, which is done annually, will probably be dis*pensed with after this year*, under the provisions of a new law giving the Freeholders the right to reserve any balance which may be in the treasury after all the bills have been paid. The collector will hereafter keep this money and use it instead of borrowing from outside sources.

The Surrogate's reports were found to be $861.02, according to a report of the committee on surrogate's accounts.

STATE VICE-COUNCILOR AT FRANKLIN COUNCIL

State Vice-Councilor Everett Gray, of Jersey City, paid a fraternal visit to Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., Thursday night. There was a large attendance of Juniors from all the local Councils as well as from Plains, Dunellen and New Market.

After Mr. Gray installed the officers-elect of Franklin Council, and presented an emblem to the past councilor, he made a stirring address on the principles of the order. He brought the very latest news to the Council regarding the progress of the order in the State, showing that during the past year there has been a large increase in membership and interest and the financial condition of the Councils were reported to be good. After the address, refreshments were served by the good and welfare committee of Franklin Council and a social time was enjoyed.

Annual Outing of Employes.

The annual outing of the employes of "The White Store" will be held at Chimney Rock on Monday, August 2, at which time the store will be closed all day. The trip will be made in a stage and there will be the usual festivities.

CLOSING EXERCISES OF TRINITY'S JUNIOR C. E.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church held its closing exercises for the season in the lecture room of the church Wednesday afternoon. In addition to the forty-three juniors present, there were also many visitors, who thoroughly enjoyed the fine program, which was in charge of Mrs. R. V. Kinney, the superintendent.

The exercises opened with a song, followed with prayer by Rev. John Y. Brook, the pastor of the church. The first number on the program was a flag drill, in which these chil*dren took part:*

Albert Baker, George Rockafellow, Warren Kellogg, Howard Allegar, Ronald Schenck, Edward Addis, Malcolm Sheppard, Harold Bach, Donald Willett, Arthur Seader, Howard Willett, Harold Woolley, Russell Sears, Alfred Willett. In this exercise Miss Helen Leithenseer was the goddess of liberty.

This was followed with "The Peeke Sisters," the leader of which was Mrs. H. A. Humbert. The following took part: Marion Woolley, Adelaide Cole, Alice Autén, Beatrice Tier, Elsie Tier, Jennie Sears, Elizabeth Chickering, Helen Leithenseer, Maude McAfee. In this exercise Mrs. Lafayette Rosenstiehl was the accompanist at the piano.

Other features were a pantomime and a reading by Mrs. H. A. Humbert and a recitation by Alfred Willet. After the entertainment there was a social time. Mrs. R. V. Kinney, superintendent, was in charge, assisted by Lawrence French, assis*tant superintendent; Mrs. Lafayette* Rosenstiehl, superintendent of the beginners' department, assisted by Miss Helen Leithenseer. During the exercises, Rev. Mr. Brook gave a short, and informal talk on the American flag, which delighted the children and held their close attention.

Mrs. Kinney presented to about twenty-five children Junior C. E. badges for regular attendance during the past year. There are sixty children on the roll with an average atendance of forty. During the past year, from April to April, the society raised $56.17 and since April 1 last, there has been raised $38.32, the announcement of which was a source of encouragement to all. The society will not meet again until fall.

RETAIL PRICE OF ICE 45 CENTS PER HUNDRED

The Crystal Ice and Coal Company, the new concern composed of local business men, began to manufacture ice Thursday at the new plant on Madison avenue, and is now doing business. The plant is running day and night, the total output of ice being sixty tons every twenty-four hours. Four local men thus far are engaged in the retail business. They are Harry B. MacDonald, Fred Ivamy, S. A. Sabbacher and J. E. Watson & Co. They purchase ice at the plant and will sell retail throughout the city and borough, the territory being divided up so one will not conflict with the other.

The new plant is probably one of the finest and best equipped in the country, and is capable of doing all that is claimed for it. The equipment was installed for manufacturing sixty tons a day and that quantity is guaranteed. The water used is pumped from artesian wells on the grounds, thoroughly distilled and boiled before frozen into cakes. The scheme is known as the "can system," and comprises the very latest patents. Owing to the great care used in the making, physicians have recommended the ice for household purposes. The retail price delivered is 45 cents a hundred pounds.

COUNTY'S CHARITY NOT IMPOSED UPON

The Board of Freeholders, at its meeting at Elizabeth Thursday, heard read a letter from George R. White, head of the State Department of Charities and Corrections, which recommended that this and all other counties in the State conduct investigations to learn whether there are not persons being supported in State or county institutions who have relatives legally liablel for their support.

Mr. White stated that the charge was made that the public was supporting persons that ought to be supported by private individuals, and that he did not know how much truth there was in it.

No action was taken by the board on the letter, because, according to Director King, Union County had such an investigation five years ago, whereby it had saved four or five thousand dollars. Another investigation is not deemed necessary at this time.

FIGHTING FOR FORTUNE

Mrs. Zerega's Children May Get Part of a Million Dollar Estate.

THE WILL IS PROBATED.

Twelve Heirs to Share Great Fund in Surrogate's Court in New York.

Contest of the will of Augustus Zerega, a millionaire shipping merchant, prominent in New York city in the early eighties, may result in a big slice of the estate, estimated at more than a million dollars, come to Mrs. Virginia Zerega, of Park avenue. Action has been begun in the Surrogates' Court, New York in the matter of the distribution of the estate, which has been held in trust since the death of Mr. Zerega, in 1883. The Plainfield woman is the wife of Albert Zerega, an adopted son, and has been a resident of this city for about fifteen years. Her children are Miss Bertha Zerega and John Zerega, a pupil at the city high school.

The estate is valued at $1,168,474, and the contest for its division, begun by the two sons and a grand*child of Augustus Zerega*, will request its division among about a dozen heirs, among them Mrs. Virginia Zerega. By his will, Mr. Zerega bequeathed all his real and personal estate to the executors and trustees, the income and rentals to be paid to his widow, Eliza M. Zerega, during her life, and then divided among the heirs. Mrs. Zerega died on March 26 last, at the age of 100, and her will was admitted to probate yesterday. The petitioners allege that their income from the estate has been entirely cut off since Mrs. Zerega's death.

A provision of the will is to the effect that none of the beneficiaries shall receive a share of the estate unless he or she be solvent, and if solvent, the bequest is to be formed into a trust and the income paid to the beneficiary until such time as he or she shall become solvent. It is probable that the will will complicate the adjustment of the estate, which, it is believed, will only be settled among the heirs after lengthy court proceedings.

The American party will leave New York over the Pennsylvania Railroad Monday noon, July 19, and the following will be visited in Washington. After a sight-seeing tour there the party will be proced to Pittsburg, Chicago, Kansas City, Emporia, Hutchinson, Dodge City, Kan., LaJunta, Col., Colorado Springs, Denver, Las Vegas, Albuquerque, Gallup, Flagstaff, Williams and Grand Canyon, Arizona, Los Angles, and other ihportant points in California, Portland, Ore., Seattle Wash., with a visit to the Alaska-Yonkon Pacific Exposition, and returning will tour Yellowstone Park, stopping at Monroe's Hot Springs, Wyo., and will touch St. Paul, Minn., and Chicago and then to Niagara Falls and home over the New York Central.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning July 11, 1909.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

It would be impossible in such limited space to discuss in any detail the many important questions that have arisen concerning the gospel of John. That John wrote the gospel cannot be successfully denied. It is true that his name is not directly attached to it, but the author in modesty speaks of himself as "that disciple whom Jesus loved." This expression can be applied to John alone. It is true also that the style of writing is different from that of John's epistles and the Revelation, which he also wrote. But there is no argument here against John's authority of the gospel, for no author of ability would use the same style of composition in three books so vastly different as John's gospel, his letters and his ecstatic vision, which he received on the Island of Patmos. History requires one style of composition, letters another and a vision dealing with sublime symbols and imagery still a third. It is true also that John's gospel differs in form from those of Matthew, Mark and Luke. But this lies simply in the different purpose John had in view. They told the story of Christ's earthly life, recorded his sayings and deeds, but John's distinctive purpose, as declared by himself, was to set forth the divinity of Christ. "These are written (the words of his evangel) that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that, believing, ye might have life through His name." Eusebius, the historian, quotes Clement of Alexandria as saying that "John, the last of the apostles, perceiving that the bodily things (of Jesus) had been made known in the gospels and being of the same time urged by his friends and at the same time being borne along by the Spirit, wrote a spiritual gospel."

This was John's purpose, and hence his gospel differs in character from the other gospels, but he is none the less the author and what he says none the less true. Men who deny the divinity of Christ have fiercely attacked the gospel of John, simply because to accept it would be to acknowledge the deity of Christ. It regardless of all assaults it has gone on in its career of revealing the divine side of the nature of Christ, with its records of his highest spiritual addresses, strengthening the weak, comforting the sorrowing and leading men into eternal life through "Jesus the Christ, the Son of God." Human attacks fall helpless when they are aimed at that which is divine.

The gospel of John alone records Christ's attendance at four Passovers in His public ministry, which makes this period of His life three years long. See John ii, 13; v, 1; vi, 4; xii, 1. The gospel may upon this basis be naturally divided as follows:

1. Introduction: The deity of Christ (chapter i, 1-14).

2. The Introduction to Christ's Public Ministry.—Preaching of John the Baptist, calling disciples, wedding at Cana of Galilee (chapter i, 15; ii, 12).

3. First Year of Public Ministry.—Covering Labors in Judea, Samaria and Galilee.—Cleanses the temple, Nicodemus, woman of Samaria, heals nobleman's son (ii, 13; iv, 54).

4. Second Year of Public Ministry.—Healing of lame man at port of Bethesda and discourses (v, 1; vi, 4).

5. Third Year of Public Ministry.—Feeding of 5,000, various incidents, blind man healed, Christ as shepherd, raising of Lazarus, last week of Christ on earth, crucifixion, resurrection (vi, 5; xxi, 25).

The gospel of John contains one of the most comforting addresses delivered by Christ. It begins with the fourteenth chapter and closes with the seventeenth, which contains His intercessary prayer. The address opens with the familiar words, "Let not your heart be troubled." He was about to leave them and comforts them. Christ gives the comforts in faith—faith in God, faith in Christ, faith in a future life, when they shall be reunited. "I go to prepare a place for you, that when I am there ye may be also." To faith He adds the coming of the Holy Spirit to represent Him and do the inspired work which He has to do. Faith should be the ground of all comfort. He who believes unto salvation need fear no evil. "Let not your heart be troubled."

One—With God.

Australian Endeavorers are also engaged in floating Christian Endeavor work. Five societies have been started on vessels in Sydney. These floating Endeavorers keep in touch with their consecration elsewhere. They have often great opposition to meet and sometimes persecution. One of them writes: "I am having a hard fight. Fourteen men are against me, but Christ is for me. I am in the majority." And later: "Twelve are now against me. Two surrendered to Christ." Still later: "Nine men against me. Three more down with the Christian Endeavor fever. Bless the Lord! Pray for me."

French C. E. Badge.

France has a modest little pin for a Christian Endeavor badge. The letters are A. C., and stand for Activite Chretienne, or Christian Activity. Paris has now a number of earnest Christian Endeavor societies whose members are doing a noble work for their Master.

ELISE'S CALLER

"I am glad," said Mrs. Clurger, "really glad that Lon is not home this evening! He has such decided views. Besides, he has always said that when his daughter was old enough to have callers he intended to take his newspaper and a day or two off in the room to chaperon her. I can't seem to make him see how unnatural and awkward he would make the poor child by doing so.

Elise.

"Of course," she admitted, "Elise is only 14 and it is absurd to say that Roy is a real caller, but it's the first time a boy has ever come formally to see Elise. She asked him to her class dance and his sister phoned today that he was going to do the proper thing and call to-night. Why, I'm as nervous as I can be, mother! After Roy gets here I'm going upstairs so that Elise won't feel embarrassed. If Lon were here he'd embarrass the children to death. That meeting downtown was providential."

When the bell rang Mrs. Clurger and her mother rose precipitately and the former welcomed the flushed and painfully dressed-up boy of 16 who was ushered in. At Elise's haughty entrance, slightly marred by her short skirts and a stumble over the rug, her mother hastily and mirthfully withdrew, gasping into her own mother's ear broken remarks about how funny it was.

"It brings back memories of my own," said the elder woman, with cheerful malice.

"He'll be gone by nine o'clock," murmured Mrs. Clurger, as she proceeded to write some letters.

At a quarter past nine she looked up with a start.

"Mercy!" she said. "What can they find to talk about? Lon'll be home any time now—and he loves so to tease! I wouldn't hurt Roy's feelings for the world! I think—yes, I'll drop my shoes over their heads!"

Two heavy thumps resulted in an cessation of the chatter in the library below. Mrs. Cluger began walking up and down.

"I never thought to tell Elise that he mustn't stay late," she murmured. "I thought she'd know that!"

"Such a case is unlike like circumstances," put in her mother, who was enjoying herself very much, "that you couldn't very well tell the boys to go home and that you were helpless in the situation. I fancy that Elise is helped along."

"If it wasn't for Lon!" worried Mrs. Clurger, discreetly passing by the reminiscences of her early life. "I can understand that Elise doesn't know what to do or how to get rid of Roy—but Roy doesn't know how to make his escape—but you know how a man is! Why, Lon would just roar with laughter if he came in at ten and found his 14-year-old daughter sitting up entertaining a caller!"

She went out on the stair landing. "Roy," she called, sweetly, "when you go home—when you go home, I say, would you mind telling your sister that I wish she'd call me up on the phone to-morrow, as I want to speak to her?"

The conversation in the library was resumed.

"I had no idea that Elise had enough things to talk about to fill up 15 minutes," said Mrs. Clurger, plaintively. "I have another idea— Gracious! Was that Lon on the front porch?"

She flew to her desk telephone and, calling up the telephone exchange, asked the operator to ring the bell of the downstairs telephone. It was always Elise's task to answer that bell. For five minutes the downstairs telephone bell sizzed and rang spasmodically, but to deaf ears. In the library Elise was playing the perfect lady to whom telephones were things to be attended to by housemaids or small children.

Mrs. Clurger was nearly in tears. "What shall I do, mother?" she wailed.

"Excuse me for laughing," said her mother. "I have done what you are doing so many times in my life. I never really saw the comedy in it. I never believe I really can't sympathize with you as I should."

It was 20 minutes of 11 when Elise's caller departed. When she came upstairs her mother grabbed her.

"Is your father's latchkey," she almost hissed. "Hurry into your room and don't dare make a light to go to bed by! If he knew—"

Elise flew from her mother's hands like the wind. Mrs. Clurger drew her first long breath of relief as her husband came upstairs at a leisurely pace.

It was over the telephone next day that Mrs. Clurger got the rest of the story.

"I asked Roy," gurgled Roy's sister, "what under creation he could scrape up to talk about for three mortal hours and he said—he said he didn't have to talk—that Elise did all that!"

"The idea!" exclaimed Elise's mother. Then her thoughts went back to the days when she herself was a girl! "Well, maybe she did!" admitted Elise's mother.—Chicago Daily News.

NOTHING LIKE THIS IN LIFE.

Things Don't Come So Easy for the American Father.

The American father of the heiress greeted the count who was a suitor for her hand with dignified frigidity.

"Sare," said the count, "your daughter has done me so beneaire of consenting to be my wife. I am called to complete se negotiations."

"All right," wearily said the father. "How much of a cash settlement do you expect?"

"Nossing, sare."

"What! How much will I have to pay for your poker debts?"

"Nossing, sare; I do not gamble."

"How much will I have to put up to settle breach of promise cases brought by chorus girls?"

"Nossing, sare; I do not flirt."

"How much will I have to pay to rebuild your castle?"

"Nossing, sare; it is in fine repair."

"But there must be some expense for me. Out with it."

"No, sare, nossing. I simply love your daughter and she loves me, and we wish to be married. Is not zat enough? Is it not enough to ask you to give me your daughter wizout your expecting to—"

"Come to my arms!" exclaimed the American father, and tried to fall upon the neck of the delighted count.

But he awoke on the floor, having tumbled from the bed as a finish to his amazing dream.—Judge.

SURVIVED THE LOSS OF BRAIN.

Brooklyn Man Lost Four Ounces as Result of Injury.

With his brain smaller by four ounces than when he fired a bullet into his head on April 3, Jacob Ritz within a few days will be discharged, cured, from St. Mary's hospital in Brooklyn, says the New York Press. His case has drawn the attention of physicians from all parts of the city. The hospital doctors said the recovery was one of the most remarkable on record.

It was thought that even if Ritz survived he would lose sight and taste, as the bullet passed through the part of the brain controlling these senses. Repeated tests, however, have shown his sight has not been impaired and that his taste is as sensitive as ever.

A bullet plowed through Ritz's brain, fracturing the skull on both sides and passing through the frontal lobes. He lay unconscious for several days. A clot formed between the brain and skull and pressed upon the injured lobes. A rubber tube was inserted in the bullet hole in the right temple and the tumor was drained off. Before leaving to recover the physicians removed, through the bullet hole, part of his brain, weighing in all about four ounces.

Psychology and Religion.

We venture to say that the time has come when the church must enter more deeply into the personal lives of people and make a freer use of the means of modern science and the gospel of Christ placed at her disposal if she is to continue ever to hold her own. The teachings of modern psychology and physiology as to the essential unity of human nature and the mutual relations of mind and body have sunk so deep into the popular consciousness that the church can no longer address men as disembodied spirits, and no scheme of salvation causes the heart to beat with hope which does not include the whole man, and which does not begin now. . . . If the nineteenth century was materialistic and critical, the first half of the twentieth century promises to be mystical and spiritual.—Rev. Dr. Elwood Worcester, in "Religion and Medicine."

Men Are More Romantic.

Men are said to be more romantic than women, as what woman ever cares to read poetry aloud? And how many poor women have spent hours of martyrdom listening to some man pour forth his soul in some one else's verse. The majority of sweethearts find it easy enough, but to wives it is generally nothing else than a bore, which should not be the case; at least, the wife should not allow the husband to find it out, and should remarkable her own lack of interest as a fault.

An American Venice.

It is a surprising thing to know that New York city, although not known as the American Venice, contains more islands than any city but Venice, for within its boundaries are 31 separate and distinct islands, about 20 of which, encircled by deep water, will afford unlimited shipping accommodations and discharge the commerce for the future years, to reach undreamed of proportions, judging from past and present growth.—National Magazine.

The Base Ball Spirit.

"The base ball spirit is a wonderful and impressive thing," said a New Haven barber. "New manifestations of it continually crop up.

"Tad Jones, the great Yale catcher, flopped into that red plush chair there the other day.

"'Shave, sir?' said I.

"'No,' said he. 'Throat cut. Yale lost.'"

That Indefinable Air.

"There's no use talkin'," said Farmer Cornstead, as he knocked the ashes out of his corncob and laid it on the mantelpiece, "there's something about a college education that does give a young feller polish."

"Do you think our boy Josh is improved?"

"Yep. He kin smoke a pipe in a way that makes it look real stylish."

A DEADLY OFFENSE.

"Well, sir," remarked the somewhat garrulous landlord of the Pazice tavern. "Throgmorton, the constable, arrested a feller, day before yesterday, for walking down Main street, here, in the middle of the afternoon in his stockin' feet. He's in jail now, and—"

"But—great Scott!" ejaculated the washing-machine agent, "it is not a crime, is it, for a person to walk in his stocking feet. Why, my dear sir, personal liberty—"

"Aw, personal liberty is proper enough as long as it don't interfere with the rights of other people. Anything that tends to add to the silence of our promisin' little city is an offense against the general weal. We're public-spirited here, even if we ain't exactly metropolitan."—Puck.

A Protest.

"Early to bed and early to rise"
Has made me very healthy,
But, very much to my surprise,
It's never made me wealthy.

—Judge.

TWO REASONS.

Mrs. Acker—You really ought to let me get enough of that spring material to make me a new dress.

Mr. Acker—Why?

Mrs. Acker—Well, it's reduced to only 89 cents.

Mr. Acker—And so is my bank account.

Back to the Hod.

A young darky quit hustling mortar, And engaged as a Pullman car porter. He was sort of a shirk, So he threw up the work, Because they would give him no quarter. —Judge.

Rivalry.

Second Her—Which is ahead?

First Her—They're both somewhat backward. The solicitor asks merely hypothetical questions, and the doctor only seems to hold her hand to take her pulse.

An Exception.

Foreman (pointing to a large placard, "No Smoking, as it Interferes with Insurance")—Hey, Mulligan! Don't you see the sign?

Mulligan (between puffs)—Rest easy, sor! Oi'm too ould to be examined for loife inshurance, inyway.—Judge.

Another Dreamer.

"Yes, sir, I once lost over $800,000 in less than two weeks."

"Whew! That was going some. How did you do it?"

"By not buying about 10,000 shares of a certain stock that went up eight dollars a share without a single setback."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Man's Opinion.

"If we had women for judges," said the lady with the square jaw, "few divorces would be granted."

"Yes," replied the horrid man. "They'd be so eager to hear the scandalous details that it would never be possible to get all the evidence in."

Combination.

Complaining Customer—Say, this fly-paper is full of holes.

The Dealer—Certainly, madam; I know it is. It is the new "combination" fly-paper, and is made with the holes so that it can be used for porous plasters after the fly season is over.

Cheerless Outlok.

The daughter—What objection have you to my marrying him, mamma?

The Mother—Because, dear, I think he is deprived.

"But can't I always do better?"—Life.

Lots Else.

Yeast—Did your wife get time on that new hat she's just bought?

Crimsonbeak—No; but it looks as if she'd got about everything else on it!—Yonkers Statesman.

Common Case.

"You need a man to show you how to make money."

"I've got one. My boss shows me how it's done, but he won't let me do it."—Cleveland Leader.

Muzzle It.

Food Parent—The child is full of music.

Sarcastic Visitor—Yes. What a pity it is allowed to escape.

No Use.

Mrs. Jawback—Why have men's clothes so many pockets in them?

Mr. Jawback—I'll be darned if I know!—Cleveland Leader.

SOME GOOD SALADS

SUBSTITUTES FOR THE MORE HEAVY DISHES.

Little Bundle of Recipes Housekeepers Will Find It Convenient to Have in Memory for All Occasions.

Supper Salad.—Mix one and one-half cupfuls of cold cooked chicken cut in cubes, one cucumber pared and cut in cubes, one cupful of chopped English walnut meats, one-half cupful of French peas and cupful of celery cut in small pieces thoroughly chilled in ice water. Moisten with mayonnaise dressing and garnish with strips of canned red pepper arranged ribbon fashion and celery tips.

Cabbage Salad.—One small head of cabbage, one stalk of celery, four apples. Cut all up fine and over them pour a cream mayonnaise dressing. Serve on a lettuce leaf and on top of each lay a choice piece of celery and two radishes.

Lenten Salad.—One can kidney beans, one cup celery, chopped; six pickles, six olives, and one onion. Chop all but the beans, mix well, and pour salad dressing over all. Serve on lettuce leaves.

Banana Salad.—One banana cut lengthwise in half, set on lettuce leaf, and cover top of banana with rolled peanuts, and two teaspoonfuls of canning salad dressing, one banana served to each guest. This makes delicious as well as a pretty salad.

German Holiday Salad.—Take six milchener herring soaked over night, skin them and remove all bones; add tart medium apples, six onions, three dill pickles, all chopped fine, one-half cup vinegar, one-half teaspoon of pepper, or more if you like. Be sure and use the milch in the herring.

Olive Salad.—Take one dozen onions and a pint of olives, two green peppers and one red one; chop fine. Into this stir one tablespoon mustard seed, one small bottle horseradish and one cup vinegar; mix mixed mustard, one teaspoon salt, and one tablespoon brown sugar, one cup vinegar; mix all together and let stand one week. It is fine with cold meats.

Meat and Rice Balls.

Put three-fourths pounds each, pork steak and round steak, through a grinder, salt and pepper to taste. Add one raw egg and one-half cup rice that has been soaked over night in water enough to cover it. If water is not all absorbed set on back of stove until absorbed. Make into small round balls. Put one tablespoon of lard in kettle, season with salt and pepper. Cut two green peppers in half, remove seeds and rinse in cold water, add to tomatoes and put in meat balls. Boil slowly three-quarters of an hour. Thicken with one heaping tablespoon of flour. Do not thicken gravy. Cayenne pepper or chili sauce may be used when peppers cannot be obtained.

Fruit Cake.

Two and a half pounds flour, one pound butter, one and a half pounds sugar, ten eggs, three pounds raisins, three pounds currants, one and a half pounds citron, one and a half pounds candied lemon peel, one cup sirup, one cup brandy, one cup wine or coffee, one pound blanched almonds, one teaspoon cloves, three teaspoons cinnamon, one grated nutmeg, one tablespoon vanilla, one teaspoon soda. Bake four or five hours.

Ginger Cake.—One cup molasses, two cups sugar, one cup butter, one cup sour or butter milk, four eggs, two teaspoons soda, four cups flour. Spice to taste with fruit or ginger.

Cheese-Relish.

If you want to serve something absolutely unique for the cheese course try the simple preparation of Roquefort cheese and apples. To make it take a slice of Roquefort cheese and a piece of butter the size of a walnut. Mix them together into a paste and thin this down by the addition of three or four tablespoonfuls of cognac. When of a good spreading consistency spread it on slices of tart apples, and you will have a novelty that will create both surprise and delight among your guests.

Ironing-Day Hint.

To prevent the iron from sticking to a collar or shirt front when ironing it, a capital plan is that of using white wax, while at the same time a good gloss is given to the surface of the linen. Instead of investing in special wax for the purpose, any odds and ends of candles may be used, and these should be sewn into a square of cotton or linen and the iron passed once on twice over it before beginning to use it.

Apricot Ice Cream.

For a quart of cream allow a quarter cupful of sugar, a pint of can apricots pressed through a sieve, the juice of one orange and one lemon. Make a sirup of the sugar, allowing one-half cupful of water, cook, add the fruit juice cook, pour in the cream and pack in the freezer. When half frozen stir in the apricot, puree and freeze hard.

Dumplings for Stew.

Mix together a pint of flour, a half teaspoonful of salt and a teaspoonful of baking powder. Add enough sweet milk to make a stiff batter, turn on a board, roll out and cut in small circles or squares. Drop into the stew, cover and keep at a slow, steady boil, without uncovering, for 20 minutes.

Bone Lamb Roast.

In ordering a leg of lamb ask to have it boned. You will find the carving much easier, the slices more dainty, and more economical.

Household Diplomacy

"She's Never Home."

The young married woman gave her elaborately done-up hair an extra pat as she passed before the mantel. Then she glanced at her husband, who was reading his paper in the placid comfort of a man who has dined well and thankfully realizes that he is not going to be dragged out to a party that night.

"I think Mary is improving on her desserts, don't you?" asked the young married woman, pausing beside him.

"That pudding was fine," said her husband. "Nothing like a home dinner that is well cooked. I'm sorry for the fellows still living at the club."

"Are you, really, Jack?" said the young married woman, seating herself on his chair. "It's so nice of you to appreciate the fact that I take an interest in my home. I want it to be just as you want it—a place where you take solid comfort. I can't understand some women at all. Gertrude Reamy, for instance. Why, all she thinks of is going somewhere and having a good time! She's never home. Perhaps, though, Dick Reamy is so proud of her being popular that he doesn't care if his home is always topsy-turvy."

"You're just about as popular as Gertrude Reamy!" declared the young married woman's husband. "And you manage to keep house, too!"

"Oh, my, no, Jack!" said the young married woman, shaking her head. "She goes out lots more than I do! And clothes! Well, all I have to say is I don't see how Dick stands it! I should think she would bankrupt him! And she doesn't seem to care how worried he is. I hope I think more of my husband than that!"

"You've a very different disposition," said her husband. "It's funny the kind of girls some men pick out to marry! Gertude may be pretty, but—well, between you and me, Dick threw himself away!"

"My!" shivered the young married woman. "I hope nobody says that about you! It would make me feel perfectly dreadful! I never look at Gertrude's to-day. All she thinks about is clothes. She had them all out showing me. I said: 'How on earth do you ever wear them out?' She just laughed and said she didn't; that when she was tired of a dress she gave it away. You hardly ever see her in the same dress more than five or six times. She has simply heaps of suits of clothes a year. Goodness—when I get a tailor suit I make it do two seasons!"

"And look exactly as well as Gertrude!" said her husband.

"Oh, I don't know," said the young married woman. "Of course, one can't look always well groomed when one wears a suit to death. But I'm just as happy. I wish you could see the array of evening dresses that girl showed me. It looked like dozens. And such pretty ones! Why, I thought she was doing well to have two this winter."

"I like the pink one on you," said her husband.

"Do you, dear?" asked the young married woman. "It's getting pretty shabby to wear anywhere that counts. I have to mend it whenever I take it out. But nobody would notice. And the green chiffon certainly does look draggled. The Reamys are going to Fredericks' ball, too. Next week, you know. You must have your dress suit pressed—don't forget it. I want my husband to look as handsome as any one there. Yes, you are, too—you know it!

"With all the evening gowns she already has Gertrude told me she is having a new one made for this dance! Think of it! Such extravagance makes me shiver! It's to be the most gorgeous thing of satin and gold lace and she has a wreath of gold roses for her hair. And gold slippers! Nobody else will be seen at the dance but Gertrude when she gets on that array. Well, it doesn't matter to me if I'm not a belle—I'm just as happy so long as you think I'm all right!"

"Gertrude Reamy isn't in it a minute with you!" declared the young married woman's husband. "There'll be no outshining you! Say, why don't you get a new gown for the Fredericks' dance yourself?"

"Why, Jack!" cried the young married woman, "I don't need it! Really! Nobody'll know my pink one is mended! I couldn't think of spending the money when you are so cramped—"

"Nonsense!" insisted the young man firmly. "I'm not quite broke yet! You go down to-morrow and buy you a dress that'll knock the spots off Gertrude's! I mean it!"

"Why, Jack!" cried the young married woman. "How perfectly lovely! I never dreamed of such a thing!"—Chicago Daily News.

The Freedom of the Mind.

It is of consequence that the notion of freedom be within us. It does make a difference. How many pass through life oppressed by the idea that we are slaves, dominated by environment and influences that are fixed, and are no different from the inanimate things about us. It makes a difference if we believe ourselves not slaves to circumstances, not with characters inevitably fixed, and can look into the possibilities of the future and draw strength from them. We may then be masters of life's field.—Prof. George H. Palmer.

MUSINGS ON MORALS.

The world moves faster than we think.

The spots on the sun no longer constitute an eclipse.

It has always moved in the right direction when it did move.

And all because humanity is learning to define itself and find itself.

Persecution, injustice and crime are no longer world-wise—or even national.

And it is developing acceleration and momentum in the right direction faster than ever.

This it is, that is more and more influencing legislation, creed revision and human conduct.

And because we are learning to classify the actions of life with reference to their effect on each other.

By the same processes of reasoning by which some people and schools of thought have determined that "whatever is, is right," others have determined that "whatever is, is wrong."

We are learning, and learning it fast, to determine the morality or immorality of human action on the broad ground of adaptability to the needs and requirements of a race or human beings.

We are getting well into the really divine philosophy, and finding out by leaps and bounds, that whatever fits this world best for the realization of its noblest aspirations and highest attainments, is best.—New York Telegraph.

IF YOU WOULD KEEP YOUNG.

It is every woman's duty to keep young looking as long as possible, but unfortunately she does not always know the best way to live up to that duty.

Avoid worry, hurry and getting flustered.

Learn self-control. Anger is a rapid wrinkle-bringer.

Be temperate. Moderation does not only refer to the stomach. Overdoing in any way makes for permature age.

Keep mentally alert. An intellectual back number adds years to her seeming age. Nothing makes for youth like a young mind, save perhaps a young heart.

Don't let yourself get sluggish and indifferent. Here is where the benefit of massage, physical culture and a vital interest in life comes in.

Don't let your face reflect every perplexity. The woman who keeps young need not wear a mask, but she should guard against the so-called "speaking countenance," if she does not want a fine crop of wrinkles.

PHILOSOPHIZINGS.

The average woman is apt to tell all she knows, and then some.

Even the charity that begins at home is sometimes wasted.

After all, it may be better to be a spendthrift than a lendthrift.

Pay compliments, and you won't be forced to eat your own words.

It is hard for a man to practice economy and still be popular.

As a rule marriage either forms a man's character or reforms it.

Don't judge by appearances. A man may wear a dismond pin and still be real wealthy.

It is human nature to feel sorry for the people who are so perverse as not to like us.

A man is sometimes away off when he claims that distance lends enchantment to the view.

Some men are always anxious to do other people good, and some will do them any old way.

HER BROTHER SAYS:

That Even went with Adam out of the Garden to rub it in on what a paradise any place would be—alone.

That preachers have the curiosity of Eve's daughters to thank for the feminine part of their congregations.

That when women get the suffrage every mother's son ought to stump down and pray, "God, save the state!"

That Cupid would have cried for quarter long ago if he weren't afraid of the girls who have confiscated his arrows.

That a girl will sell her conscience for a compliment—a man's only topples in a tobacconess country before a cigar.

That a girl makes a man think he's perfection before she gets him, then she develops a grouch against even his pipe.—New York Telegram.

THE LAST MOMENT

By J. OLIVIER CURWOOD.

(Copyright, by Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

Connoly, head and shoulders out of the cabin, was in time to see Svenson, the Swede, burst like a maniac from the group of men fighting like shadows in the mist of the forward pump. He caught faintly his yell of defiance as Flick, the second officer, ran out from among the shadows and intercepted him with a blow from a knotted fist that sent him reeling into the drowning wash of the sea. He shouted as the little gray man followed up Svenson's huge bulk, like a terrier, and other figures staggered out of the blinding spume, naked armed, bare chested, with Svenson's panic gleaming in their eyes. Flick saw him as he came across the deck and planted his back against the port davit, where the tops of the seas swept over him in smothering rushes.

A ton of water breaking over the rail sent him reeling out among the men. He picked himself up and staggered to Connoly, his thin, gray-bearded face questioning him eagerly.

"She's a little better, boys!" shouted the captain. "But we can't take her out into that!"

He pointed out into the grayness of the sea, broken only by the foaming tops that swept the rail-high the ship.

"My God, men, no boat would live—"

The voice of a seaman rose almost in a shriek.

"We're full! We're full to a foot of the hatches, I tell y'!" She's got to go now or never!"

There was sullen assent in a dozen water-blistered eyes. From early morning until noon these men had clung to a sinking ship because each cherished in him a memory of the woman. Because of her they had fought until their hands bled and their breath came in gasps. They had watched the schooner settle inch by inch and foot by foot, struggling stubbornly for the precious minutes which would give life to her, until arms hung limp and effortless and men fell exhausted upon the deck when others took their turns at the pumps. And now them all Svenson had worked and urged and cursed those whose nerve began to fail them until, when the last minute seemed gliding on each white-crested rush of the sea, only a stroke within him, and he turned in his despair to the boats. It was Svenson now who rushed to the falls. In an instant Connoly was among the panic-stricken men.

"You can't live in that sea!" he shouted. "Fight it out another hour, men—one more hour!"

The schooner rode more easily now She had settled until the resistance she gave to the sea was as solid as that of the land. And the wind the coming of her sides only sent jarring throbs through her timbers, as though a thousand-ton weight touched her gently each time she was struck. A few minutes more, a sudden sweep of water over the rail, and Connoly knew that she would go down, quietly and without sensation, but with merciful quickness. He turned toward the cabin, and at the threshold of the door that led to where the woman lay he paused for an instant and fought for the strength that he knew he would need. Then he opened it and entered. At the end of the room a woman lay upon a cot, her stranger's white face turned expectantly toward the door. As Connoly came through she smiled, and her beautiful eyes brightened with a glad light.

"It has seemed so long, Jim," she said, her voice rising barely above a whisper. "I was afraid the storm was. But it's quieter now, isn't it?"

"Yes, dear!"

The man took off his dripping hat and coat and sat down beside her. The woman, as he did so, drew down the coverlet a few inches so that he might see the little pink face lying against her bosom. He leaned over, more to hide his own whiteness than to caress, and stroke the baby's cheek with a big forefinger. The woman's long, thin hand had already pressed it happily. She spoke no word, but when the man raised himself to look into her face he saw the great dawn of the new life shining adoringly in her eyes. After a time the woman said:

"Jim!"

"Yes, dear."

"Are you—very glad!"

The man pressed her face to him with passionate tenderness. He did not answer in words, but the woman was satisfied. Then he gently drew himself away, the young wife's eyes following him inquiringly.

"You're not going back—now?" she asked, frightened.

"Yes—Flick is in charge," he said quickly. "But I must see—that everything's all right—" Between his words he hesitated, listening to a sound under his feet that thrilled him. It was like the beating of a floating cargo against the deck. The water was rising faster than he supposed, but he showed no sign of the fear that was in him.

"You will be back soon?"

"Right away, Jen!"

He came back to kiss her, the sickening throbbing at his heart almost suffocating him as he looked down into the woman's confident eyes, luminous with a touch of the old fever. He was glad that she did not know. It would make the end easier for him—and for her, if the end had to come. And he knew there was only one chance in ten thousand against it. As he passed out of the cabin he saw the life belts strung along the ceiling. For an instant it flashed into his mind that he might use them. As quickly as the thought passed from him. They would only prolong their misery a little longer, and the woman—he shuddered as he pictured what those few minutes of life battling in the sea would mean for her. The end would come sooner in the cabin. In the last minute she would understand, and would love him for it. So he passed out, closing the door carefully behind him, and scanned the deck for Flick.

For a few moments he listened for the sound under his feet. But he heard and felt only the jarring of the ship which came of the seas pounding against her. With his eyes on Flick he went to the midship hatch and thrust an arm through the hole that had been cut for a pump. He did not expect to touch water. The fact that he did brought him to his feet as though something had bitten him. Flick had seen him, and stood huddled just out of the sheets of spray that shot over the bow, watching as if the sight of the sea rising from his knees was curious and interesting. Connoly beckoned to him.

A great shudder ran through the schooner. If she had possessed a tight hold Connoly would have thought that she had struck a rock. The leeward drift that had won these last hours of existence for her against the rushes of the sea seemed suddenly stopped, as if she had steadied herself for the final engulfment. Connoly turned and ran toward the cabin. He heard Flick's cry behind him and caught a glimpse of the little man as he staggered out of the mess forward. But it was too late to stop, even to give a last word to Flick. Over his shoulder he saw the starboard rail hidden in a mass of seething water, and as he reached the door it swished about him ankle deep and followed him in a torrent into the cabin. Again he heard that cry of Flick's, but he shut the door, as he had planned, and bolted it to give himself a few last moments of life with the woman.

When he turned to her with the tragedy that had overtaken them written in his face, his outstretched arms dropped slowly to his side. Only her name fell from his lips. The words that he had meant to say were left unspoken. The woman was asleep. Her face was toward him, and in the dim, misty glow he saw deepening in her cheeks the flush of returning fever. One white hand had fallen over the side of the cot, and on it gleamed their wedding ring. Like an animal Connoly fell upon his knees. The water rattled about his fingers as he crept to her. At the bedside he stretched an arm over her, so gently that she did not awaken. Then he turned his face to the door, grim with terror of this last moment, but filled with the splendid sanity of his resolve. The sea would not get the best of him. He would have the woman, at the last—and so firmly that the hell of a thousand seas could not separate them. But it was not until the water had reached the very last. Then she would awaken only to know that he was there, and would die before the misery and the terror of it all came to her. The man fancied that he heard the beating of water against the panels; his staring eyes saw it pouring faster under the door—he heard it straining against the cabin walls. The floor seemed lifting him up. Bow first, the schooner was rising to her doom. His arm grew heavier over the woman. His other slipped under her head. Then came another shock, longer than the one that had preceded it, and after that there was absolute quiet, save for the trickling of water under the door and the tremendous beating of his own heart.

Still the woman slept.

There came a knock from outside, again and again, and then a sudden pressure against the door, and Flick stood there, babbling words that seemed to have no meaning. He went as suddenly as he came, and Connoly could hear his sobbing voice dying away on deck. He drew his arms from the woman and followed. At the door he paused for a moment, then slipped out.

The woman's fever-stricken face moved a little. Her eyelids trembled, and after a moment she opened them.

"Jim," she said, weakly.

A gust of wind slammed the door.

"Jim, where are you?"

She drew herself up on an elbow, frightened, and saw the water running black and ugly on the floor.

"Jim—Jim—Jim!"

A man sprang through the door. It was Connoly. He wrapped her close to his wet breast, and the laugh that fell from his lips was filled with an insane joy. Over his shoulder, standing in the doorway, the woman saw Flick.

"Had quite a time of it, but it's all over now, sweetheart!" whispered Connoly. "Where do you think the old tub is? Couldn't guess, eh? Well, it's anybody's guess, sounding the Book of Ages somewhere on the Thunder bay shore! Tried to fight her off, but we couldn't do it. Now all we've got to do is to eat and sleep until somebody comes to pull us off. Eh, Flick?"

Flick had gone. Out on deck, with his face turned to the indistinct outline of the shore, and the gleams of sunlight bursting through the ragged clouds, he bowed his gray head and softly whispered what little he could remember of the Lord's Prayer.

TRANSMITTED, NOT OVERHEARD.

Two women were talking in a boudoir. The door was locked. There was no one in the hall outside. There were no reporters hanging on the eaves. In short, there wasn't the remotest possibility of any one hearing them. And yet this is what they said:

"Does my rat show?"

"Not a bit. Wait. It needs just a touch. There!"

"Thanks ever so much. Maybe I don't hate to get into this."

"So do I—positively suffer."

"Binds one so."

"Hideous, too."

"Awful. When will the style change? Do you mind drawing that a little tighter? Thanks."

"And mine? Thanks. Oh, I can't breathe."

"Never mind. You'll get used to it in a few moments. I feel better already. Do you have any trouble in walking?"

"Do I? I feel as if I were on a tight-rope. These corsets are simply abominable. And I paid $20 for them."

"Why don't you try my place? Really, they do very well."

"I shall. Anything for relief! Your strap will fall off."

"No, it won't. I have learned to keep hitching it up mechanically—second nature now. Your powder shows."

"It will wear off by the time I get there. I always like to start with plenty. Are you ready?"—Life.

Proved.

"Whiskins is a real genius," says the admiring friend.

"But he does not wear long hair, always has on clean linen, always has money in his pocket, and seems to live well," differs the other.

"That's true. And don't you see, he must be a genius to be able to do all that and still be a genius?"—Life.

MR. SWACKHAMER'S TALK

Speech Delivered by Former Assemblyman at Opening Ceremonies.

HE EULOGIZES THE BOROUGH.

Silver-Tongued Orator's Speech at the Open-Air Meeting Monday Afternoon.

"I shall not attempt to add a single touch to the glowing picture just drawn of the City of Plainfield, the municipal belle of Union county. We can only say that the portrait does not flatter the original, and then stand back and admire.

"Turn now to the crown jewel of Somerset county. The borough of North Plainfield may well exult in her virtual exemption from debt, her bonded obligations falling below the sum of sixty-nine thousand dollars She may well exult in a wise and conservative administration of her municipal affairs and in the personnel of her public officials. She may well exult in her pleasant cite, her well shaded streets and avenues, her fine public buildings, her commercial advantages, her business enterprise and the wealth of her natural resources.

"She may well exult in the cunning of her craftsmen, in the opulence of her merchants, in the mournful music, the languor and irresolution of her sad eyed mosquitoes and in the poverty and despair of her lawyers and doctors, these latter putting their bills, sucking the blood and subsisting on the quarrels and diseases of the people. She may well exult in the piety and eloquence of her pulpit, in the fame and learning of her schools, in the loveliness of her women crowned with the mountain glory, in the comfort and elegance of her homes, in the industry and integrity of her sons, in the virtue, wit and beauty of her daughters.

Eulogizes Borough.

"Her future is rich in pleasant memories and her future is red with promise; but I am not here to speak her eulogy. This is a national as well as a local jubilee.

"It has been well said that not only, where men are assembled, as we are here, will this Sabbath of the nation be kept and honored. The lonely and remote will have their parts in its commemoration.

"Where the boatman follows the winding stream or the woodsman explores the forest shades; where the miner lays down his eager drill beside rocks which guard the precious veins, or where the herdsman, along the Sierras looks forth on the seas which now reflect the rising day, which at noon shall be but gleaming like gold in the setting sun; there will this day be regarded as a day of memorial. And yet beyond on the boulevards of Paris, in the streets of Berlin, and along the leveled bastions of Vienna, at Marseilles, and at Florence, upon the silent liquid ways of stately Venice, in the passes of the Alps, under the shadow of church and obelisk, palace and ruin, which still prolong the majesty of Rome; yet farther east, on the Bosphorus and in Syria, in Egypt, along the heights behind Bombay, in the foreign thrones of Canton, in the Islands of the Morning, which found the dawn of their new age in the startling light of an American Squadron entering their bays—everywhere will be those who have thought of this day and who join with us to greet its coming.

A Benediction.

* * * * * * * *

"For the inestimable blessings of Civil and Religious Liberty which we enjoy, our Fathers pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor, and they proved worthy. A rich a heritage, it is incumbent upon us to transmit it untarnished to the generations that are to follow. It is incumbent upon us to cherish and maintain the principles of justice and equality. It is incumbent upon us to uphold the Constitution and the laws. It is incumbent upon us to insure the due discharge of public duty by the cultivation of private virtue. It is incumbent upon us to be worthy of the priceless privileges of American citizenship.

"New occasions teach new duties. Time makes ancient good uncouth. They must upward still and onward Who would keep agreast of truth. Lo, before us gleam her camp fires, We ourselves are pilgrims be, Launch our Mayflower and steer boldly,

"May the spirit of the fathers animate the sons, and may America, the vestal priestess, hold the crystal cup of liberty to the burning lips of bondage till every chain is broken and every fetter falls.

"And now with the holy memories of the past crowding upon us; with the glories of the future opening before us; with the flag of the free floating o'er us, let us consecrate ourselves anew to our country and our God.

PROGRESS OF THE DAY ALL OVER THE WORLD.

What is probably the most remarkable train crew in the United States is that of the Chicago express over the Philadelphia and Reading and Lehigh Valley railroads, which leaves the Philadelphia terminal at 4:30 in the afternoon daily. The conductor of the train is H. M. Saltman, and both the engineer and fireman are his brothers.

Students of the school of mines at the University of Pittsburg will have practical experience in coal mining right in the school yard, where a shaft will be sunk to a thick vein of coal. The Pittsburg Coal Company will sink the shaft and will otherwise aid the students and faculty in carrying out the plan.

One result of the conference of judges, lawyers, police and prison officials and college professors held at Northwestern University, in connection with the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the law school, was the organization of the American Institute of Criminal Law. Annual conferences will be held and needed changes in the administration law will be the subject of some of the papers and reports.

THE BUSINESS OF SUMMER AMUSEMENT.

Forty million dollars is invested in the business of making Americans think they are having a good time in summer, says Robert Sloss in the July Van Norden Magazine. The means only summer amusements, such as are to be found in Coney Island, Venice, California, the various White Cities and subburban resorts throughout the country. It is no longer a haphazard, happy-go-lucky vocation with mushroom characteristics, but a permanent, solid industry, with enterprise and initiative as its watchword. It has its own association for mutual benefit and protection, although in no sense a trust; it has its own trade papers, every issue of which records a score of patents for new devices. Most of these are offered for sale to the successful managers, and most of them are turned down, either because the idea is not new or is to elaborate that it would cost more to carry out than could possibly be earned by it.

SEWING HINTS.

When making buttonholes in material always choose a thread twenty numbers coarser than that which you would naturally use in that material. For instance, if you are sewing a piece of material with No. 60 cotton you can work the buttonholes with No. 60.

To prevent the thread from knotting when doing hand sewing always make a knot in the end last broken from the spool. This done, stretch the thread by taking both ends and giving several quick pulls.

A little tin ruler is much easier to use than the tape measure for the measuring of little things, such as bands, hems and tucks.

If you sew a matchbone up the back of a tape measure for the first ten inches you will have a means at hand to rapidly measure skirt lengths and lines for trimming.

A few paper clips are invaluable in the sewing basket, for they may hold together scraps, pieces of patterns and bits of lace.

Some thumb tacks, such as artists and draughtsmen use, will be found an invaluable help in the sewing room. You will need them to fasten long pieces of slippery silk to your lapboard or cutting table.

He Appreciated the Combination.

"Of course," said the half regretful wooer, "if your family doesn't think I'm good enough, why, I don't want to intrude where I'm not wanted."

"I'll look out for that," said the businesslike young woman. "I think you are good enough, and my brother is a lawyer. Do you appreciate the combination?"

He did and remained in.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Congressman Fowler to Step Down.

Congressman Charles N. Fowler, of New Jersey, chairman of the House committee on banking and currency, is to be deposed both from his chairmanship and as a member of the committee. Mr. Fowler has been an erratic and, in the judgment of many financial experts, an unsafe committee chairman. He has had his own ideas of a national financial system, and he obstinately adhered to them, but it cannot be said with any degree of consistency. He introduced several bills of his own in the House and they all differed essentially. He antagonized his party two years ago when the Vreeland emergency currency bill was passed, and it was necessary to sit down upon him as chairman of an important committee. Mr. Fowler had his own pet bill to pass at that session, but it was too intricate to be studied in the short time given to Congress. Mr. Fowler's committee refused to report the Vreeland bill and the House was compelled to order the committee to report it. After that had happened Mr. Fowler attempted to defeat the emergency bill, and after the session has made some offensive speeches on the subject. The banking and currency committee of the next House at the next regular session will be the most important committee of all. The report of the National Monetary Commission will be submitted to Congress and referred to this committee and a bill will be prepared for a new currency system in accordance with the recommendations to be made. It is necessary to have on the committee men of cool judgment and expert knowledge, as it will draft the legislation to be enacted.—Newark Star.

THE SILENT PARTNER.

A novel kitchen shower for a bride-to-be is contained in Woman's Home Companion for June: "The invitations were obliged to be verbal, as there suggested contributions for the necessary articles required for the Silent Partner, whose needs must be definitely considered. The result proves no end of fun

"The skeleton of the Silent Partner was found to be a new broom. The head, made of paper, was fixed to the top of the handle with a natural looking face drawn upon it with pen and ink. Below the head, in the place where shoulders are expected to appear, a piece of lath about one and one-half feet long had been nailed to the broom handle

"Then, with newspapers and twine, a fairly well shaped body was made. To each shoulder was fastened a pancake shovel and fire shovel, tin spoons for arms, and these were covered with towels pinned over and in the form of bell sleeves. The Silent Partner wore a long gingham apron made with a bib, and upon her head was a sweeping cap. A cheesecloth duster covered her shoulders as a fichu and fastened in front with a cooky cutter for a pin.

"Tea and coffee strainers were hung from each side of the head for earrings. The dusting bag hung from one arm, while in the pocket of the apron was a bar of soap and a dishcloth. The apron strings were brought around in front and tied, while on the ends were fastened an eggbeater, paring knife and nutmeg grater.

"Above her head and pinned to the wall was a card bearing her name. No article for kitchen use was forgotten, all those not in sight being cunningly bestowed on the person of the Silent Partner."

THE HEROIC MILITARY SPY.

For more than a year past William Gilmore Beymer has been at work for Harper's Magazine, searching the Civil War records and interviewing survivors for facts about the military spies, sometimes erroneously called "spies." Mr. Beymer's first story, "Rowand," opens the June number of Harper's, and tells of a heroic tale of daring deeds, in which Rowand and his companions play the leading part. Archibald H. Rowand, 2d, is still living, and his feats—of which he speaks with the usual soldierly modesty—are matters of record. In one of General Sheridan's reports of expeditions he especially thanks the scouts for their valuable help. Of the "thirty or more" whom he there thanked, ten had been found hanging by their ow nhalter straps, several were never heard of again, and the rest were killed "like trapped animals, fighting desperately, at bay." These are the sort of men of whom Mr. Beymer writes.

THE MAID.

Thunder of riotous hoofs over the quaking sod;
Clash the reeking squadrons, steel-capped, iron-shod;
The White Maid and the white horse and the flapping banner of God.

Black hearts riding for money; red hearts riding for fame;
The Maid who rides for France, and the King who rides for shame;
Gentlemen, fools and a saint riding in Christ's high name!

"Dust to dust!" it is written. Wind-scattered are lance and bow.
Dust the Cross of Saint George; dust the banner of snow.
The bones of the King are crumbled, and rotted the shafts of the foe.

Forgotten the young knight's valor; forgotten the captain's skill;
Forgotten the fear and the hate and the blood-lust hands raised to kill;
Forgotten the shields that clashed and the arrows that cried so shrill.

Like a story from some old book that battle of long ago;
Shadows of poor French king and the might of his English foe;
Shadows the charging nobles and the archers kneeling a-row—
But a flame in my heart and my eyes, the Maid with her banner of snow!

—Theodore Roberts in the Pall Mall Magazine.

THE SEPARATE WAIST OF THE SEASON.

The separate waist of the moment is not a thing which can be made up in quantities, for it is less a separate than it is an detachable garment, and one which is to-day at least, and probably in material, must harmonize with the skirt and coat with which it is to be worn. In other words, it must seem to belong to these. Except in the case of the practical shirt waist, which is a part of the morning, office or outing dress, and which custo mand fashion both decree must be fresh and white contrasts are not permissible. Those authorities decree that the separate waist must match in some fabric the dress of which it temporarily forms a part.—Harper's Bazar.

WRECK ENDS "JOY RIDE"

Local Chauffeurs Pinned Under Touring Car, Over-Turned Near Metuchen.

MIRACULOUSLY ESCAPE DEATH.

Hugh McIver, Geo. M. Macintyre, Walter Kettering and George Mitchell, the Speeders.

Are Held.

Judge Runyon presided at a preliminary hearing given the "joy riders" at police court this afternoon. Assistant Commissioner Shinn, representing State Motor Cycle Commissioner J. B. R. Smith, pointed out to the court the seriousness of the offense and urged that a goodly amount of bail be fixed. The defendants were in no shape for a hearing and requested that it be postponed for one week. Their request was granted, Judge Runyon fixing the bail for each at $500, which was furnished.

Pinned under a big Mitchell touring car which turned turtle in a vacant lot near Metuchen early today, three local chauffeurs miraculously escaped death as the culmination of a wild "joy ride" to Perth Amboy, when their lives were saved by the driver of the machine, who was thrown clear of the automobile when it overturned and who prevented the wreck from taking fire by extinguishing the lamps. The "joy riders" were Hugh McIver and George M. Macintyre, employed at F. L. C. Martin's garage; Walter Kettering, chauffeur for E. D. Middlekauff, of Central avenue, and George Mitchell. The four men, who escaped with slight injuries, are held as prisoners at police headquarters, pending an investigation of the case by J. B. R. Smith, of Trenton, State Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, in whose hands the matter has been placed by F. L. C. Martin, owner of the car.

The party, which left Perth Amboy at midnight to return to Martin's garage, from which the car had been secured, was upset about three-quarters of a mile from Metuchen, when McIver, who was at the wheel, steered the big car off the county road to the left, drove it through a thick clump of bushes, and jumped over, uninjured, when the machine struck rough ground in the field and turned turtle, pinning the other three men beneath its wreckage. Extinguishing the lamps to prevent fire, McIver ran along the trolley tracks toward Perth Amboy and haled the crew of a trolley car for assistance. Motorman and conductor helped him turn over the wrecked automobile and extricate the other members of the party, who were taken to Perth Amboy on the trolley. An examination by Dr. Meinzer, of Perth Amboy, at a Perth Amboy hotel, showed that in some miraculous way the members of the party had sustained no broken bones or serious injuries, although all were badly bruised and scratched. City Physician C. B. Lufburrow, who examined the men at their arrival at police headquarters with Chief of Police Kiely, Mayor Fisk and F. L. C. Martin this afternoon, said that it is a marvel that they escaped with such slight injuries. Macintyre was taken from the wreckage unconscious, Kettering sustained an ugly cut on the forehead, Mitchell's back is strained, and McIver walks with a limp, but none of the injuries are serious.

The trip was a "joy ride" in every sense of the word, for the party stopped frequently at saloons and were hilariously drunk when they left Perth Amboy for the return trip.

F. L. C. Martin, who heard of the accident at about 2 o'clock this morning, went to the scene of the spill this morning in an automobile with Chief of Police Kiely and Mayor Fisk and brought the four "joy riders" to police headquarters, where they are held on a technical charge of speeding. He has been in telephonic communication with Commissioner Smith and says that he will see that the case is pushed to the extreme limit of prosecution. The party is guilty of a violation of the State automobile law adopted July 4, which provides that no person shall drive an automobile without having secured permission from the owner, and that no person shall drive an automobile while under the influence of liquor.

McIver this afternoon confessed that he had lied to Thomas Van Zandt, night manager at the garage, in order to secure the car. The automobile, which has been rented for the summer months by a Seabright party, was sent to the local garage Monday to be fitted with a cover. The job having been finished, McIver, who was in charge of the car, was told to drive the machine back to Seabright this morning. He went to Mr. Van Zandt at the garage at about 6 o'clock last night, with Mac-

GIRL'S NARROW ESCAPE FROM WATERY GRAVE

Catherine Bartels, the eleven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Bartels, of Watchung, had a narrow escape from drowning in the Watchung Lake, yesterday afternoon.

The girl in company with several companions were playing on a spring-board at one end of the lake, when she slipped off and fell into the water at one of its deepest points.

The other girls were greatly frightened and their screams attracted the attention of John Haberle, who was doing some work nearby, for Freeholder William Demler. He ran to the lake and reached there just as the Bartels girl was going down for the second time. Without further thought he jumped into the water with his clothes on, and at considerable risk rescued the child. She was carried to the bank in an unconscious condition, but after giving the proper treatment she was soon revived. Today she was reported as doing well, although she will be detained at home a few days.

RELIGIOUS ARGUMENT ENDS IN POLICE COURT

Crazy drunk, infuriated by a big cargo of red-eye whiskey taken on a two days' debauch in New York, Roman Loiszyk, a Polish tailor, writhed and cursed in a city police court cell yesterday afternoon, handcuffed to the bars by the police to prevent him from killing himself. The man, who was arrested at about noon on Madison avenue by Patrolman Nolan, paid a fine of $8 after his hearing before City Judge William N. Runyon today.

Loiszyk is employed by Isaac Shrager, a Madison avenue tailor, and three "boss" and fellow workmen into a high state of terror by coming into the shop yesterday noon and starting a demonstrative religious argument. One of the men raced out to get the patrolman, who arrived at the time to see the everybody within safely ensconced in a hiding place, and the Pole denouncing them one and all. On the way to police headquarters in the patrol wagon, Loiszyk roared out maligna-tion at the top of his voice, and when locked in a threadbare cell he threw himself by butting into his cell walls, broke his blunk, and finally had to be handcuffed to the bars. The whole tailoring establishment was at court this morning to see the "wild man," but he came from his cell looking as blank and said it was all due to "bad whiskey."

HORATIO SEYMOUR BELL, AGED TWENTY-FOUR, DEAD.

Horatio Seymour, formerly of New York city, son of the late William J. Bell and Henrietta Bell, of New York, died at the home of his uncle, Rowland A. Smith, 1266 Park avenue, yesterday morning of tuberculosis.

Mr. Bell was in his 24th year. He had a hemorrhage last Friday and did not rally after the attack. He was a member of the Sunday-school and of the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church.

The funeral will be held tomorrow morning at 10:30 from his late home, the services being conducted by Rev. J. A. Vaughan, of New York city, assisted by Rev. John Brock, of Trinity Reformed church. The interment will be in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn.

Fished for a Sewer Key.

Fishing in a sewer for a lost sewer key was the novel experience of William Nitschwitz, of Fairview avenue, a local civil engineer, today. Mr. Nitschwitz put one of his men at work with an improvised bent wire in an endeavor to fish it out. After many unsuccessful trials the job was finally given up.

Plainfielders at Atlantic City.

Eighteen Plainfielders were among the large number of people who went to Atlantic City today on the special excursion conducted by the New Jersey Central. This is the first mid-week excursion that the company has arranged for Atlantic City this season, and if a success others will probably be planned during the season. The Sunday excursions to Atlantic City have always been well patronized.

MR. SAUNDERS DEFERS HIS TRIP TO PANAMA

Owing to the fact that it is impossible for the two other delegates to accompany him, former Mayor William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, has postponed his Panama trip in the interests of the New York Chamber of Commerce until the fall. It is expected that the committee of three appointed by the chamber to investigate and report upon the preference between a sea level and a lock canal at Panama, will perform their duties in September.

Mr. Saunders, who is president of the Ingersoll-Rand Company, which supplied all the drills and many other parts of the equipment for the Government's work there, is known as an advocate of the lock canal, while the two other members of the chamber's committee are said to favor the sea level plan. The Plainfielder has already made several trips to Panama in the course of his own private investigations, and it is said that he is more convinced than ever that the lock canal would be the more desirable.

HUSBAND ASSESSED FOR PUMMELING PIKE

Joseph W. Pike, of East Front street, has secured a verdict for $200 against Joseph Serf, proprietor of the Guarantee Clothing Co., of Cookman avenue, Asbury Park, in a damage suit arising from alleged insults to Serf's wife at the Asbury Park railroad station last summer. Through his counsel, Charles H. Cook, of Asbury Park, Serf has filed a writ of error and will have the case taken to the Supreme Court.

Testimony in the case, heard before Judge Foster at the Monmouth county court, was given by eye-witnesses of the fight between Pike and Serf at the railroad station, and the defendant's witnesses sought to show that Serf had struck Pike with his cane in self-defense. Serf took the stand and testified that he went up to Pike at the station for the purpose of demanding an apology for an alleged insult to his wife, and he said that Pike not only refused to apologize but raised his cane and struck him. The defendant told how he warded off the blow and knocked Pike down.

Serf claimed that he had sufficient justification for striking the plaintiff, but Judge Foster charged that verbal insults do not form sufficient justification for an assault. The judge overruled counsel's Cook's order to prove communications to the defendant of insults to Mrs. Cook by third persons. The defendant's counsel cited the Thaw trial to show that such communications should go in, and there was a long argument about the point in the court-room. The jury was out two hours and a half.

PUNISH COCK-FIGHTERS

Thirty-Three "Sports" All Escape by Paying a Nominal Fine.

PENALTY IS TEN DOLLARS.

Mild Sentences Are a Surprise.

William Watts, of this city, together with seventeen other men who were indicted on a charge of being implicated in a cock-fight at Scotch Plains several months ago, and convicted, were arraigned for sentence before Judge Atwater in the Union County Court, this morning. The defendants were represented by William G. DeMeza and Walter L. Hetfield, Sr., of this city, and Edward Nugent, of Elizabeth. All made strong pleas in behalf of their clients.

Mr. DeMeza openly accused a member of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, under whose direction the raid was conducted, with being a promoter of the fight and taking tickets at the door of the barn, where it was held.

Judge Atwater said that he believed the men had been sufficiently punished through disgrace and in other ways, and he would be merciful. He then imposed a fine of $10 on each one.

In connection with the affair, Mr. DeMeza yesterday caused the arrest of Special Officer Sickles, of Newark, who assisted in the raid on the cock-fighters, on a charge of cruelty to animals. He charges that on the night of the raid Sickles shot a horse belonging to a man of the name of Perrino of Westfield and left the animal to suffer. County Detective Galatian arrested Sickles and he was arraigned before Justice Toucey at Westfield, and held in $200 bail for the action of the Grand Jury.

NEWCORN TRUSTEE FOR SACHAR AND SACHAR

The first meeting for the creditors of Kussell Sachar and Kaspar Sachar, trading as Sachar & Sachar, furniture dealers on East Front street, petitioners in bankruptcy, was held before Edward DeCoster, referee, at Newark, this morning. The petitioners were adjudicated bankrupts on June 21. Judge William Newcorn was appointed trustee, and was required to furnish bonds in the sum of $5,000.

Isaac P. Runyon represented the creditors and after the hearing, Francis J. Blatz, representing the bankrupts, made a proposition of compromise to settle the claims for 25 cents on the dollar. Referee DeCoster announced that he would issue the notice to the creditors and awaiting their consent or dissent, the case will be continued. The firm's liabilities are $13,000 and the assets about $4,000.

PLAN FOUR MORE COUNTY ROADS FOR SOMERSET

Four important thoroughfares in Somerset county are soon to be made county roads. At the meeting of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders yesterday, word was received that State Road Commissioner Gillyson had ordered a survey of the roads recommended as county thoroughfares. This means that the roads will be macadamized by the county with the aid of the State.

One road extends from Watchung to Smalleytown, to a point near the Passaic river bridge, another from Bedminster through Lamington roads, a distance of two miles and a third road from Millstone to Groendyke's corner, connecting with the county road to Somerville. This covers a distance of about four miles and will give the residents of that part of the county their first improved road to the county seat. The fourth one is the road extending from Liberty Corner to Far Hills, a distance of four miles.

The contract for building the extension of the Watchung road, which was improved last year, to Warrenville, will be given out at Somerville on Monday, when bids will be received. This is a small stretch about three-quarters of a mile and will complete a fine road from Watchung to Warrenville and points beyond.

COLORED MAN AND HIS AFFINITY FINED

With blood oozing from under a bandage which swathed his head, Thomas Henderson, colored, who will tell you today that Patrolman Messler's right arm and his night-stick are a bad combination, faced City Judge Runyon at the session of court this morning, standing by the side of Mrs. Mildred Hills, his landlady and his affinity. "A scuttle of suds," freely passed between the two, caused the hilarious behavior of the pair which resulted in their arrest by Roundsman Higgins and Patrolman Messler at the West Second street boarding house at about midnight last night, when the entire neighborhood turned out, attracted by the squabbling, and watched the police get their prisoners. Each one is blame, Judge Runyon's opinion, and the sentence was $10 or twenty days apiece. Both are held, pending payment of the fine.

According to the patrolman's story, Henderson, who has served a prison term for the part he took in the razor fight between the North Plainfield police and a gang of local colored gentry three years ago Christmas eve, was ugly when he arrested him, and fought all the way out to the wagon. He was caught on the back stoop, and on his way around the house made a grab for a fence picket to strike the officer. It was then that Messler's night-stick fell, leaving an ugly cut as it bounced from the black man's skull. Even the blow didn't calm Henderson, for he mixed it up again out by the front gate and the roundsman then assisted in the pacifying.

It was about midnight when Patrolman Messler saw Mrs. Hill's 12-year-old son, who is a cripple, hurrying toward him on West Second street. The boy sobbed that a man was killing his mother, and guided by him, the officer went to the house. When he sought to enter, however, Mrs. Hill met him and told him to "go from here." Seeing the need of reinforcements, the patrolman got Roundsman Higgins and together they entered the house. The woman was coupling good lung power with a vile vocabulary, while Henderson was sitting on the back stoop. Higgins grabbed Mrs. Hill, and Messler fought his way to the wagon with Henderson.

At court today, the "affinity" story came out. The little cripple broke down completely when he heard sentence passed on his mother, and she was allowed to take him home, returning to her cell later.

Dixon's Leg Amputated.

FORMER PLAINFIELDER DIES AT OCEAN GROVE

Peter C. Saums, who formerly resided in North Plainfield, and was at one time bookkeeper for E. H. Carpin, the Somerset street grocer, died at his late residence in Ocean Grove, yesterday from a complication of diseases. From North Plainfield, where Mr. Saums lived a number of years, he was removed to Somerville, where he took a position as bookkeeper for Smith & Schoonmaker Company, lumber dealers. He held that position until last fall when his health failed and was forced to resign.

Upon the advice of his physician, Mr. Saums went to Hot Springs, Va., in the hope of regaining his health, but found little relief. He then went to Ocean Grove, but this change did not prove beneficial. Mr. Saums was well-known here and had a host of friends.

He was a member of Court Watchung, No. 3871, Independent Order of Foresters and Noah Dove Encampment, No. 28, I. O. O. F., of this city; also the Somerville Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., and I. O. O. F., of Somerville. He is survived by a wife and two children. Notice of funeral will be announced later.

RECORD-BREAKING CROWD AT SALVATION ARMY MEETING.

The Salvation Army tent on Watchung avenue was crowded to the limit last night, with a large overflow crowd outside, when Adjutant Downey, Captain Weir and the brass band from Newark Corps No. 1, took charge of the service. Owing to the fact that the band missed the train and had to come here by trolley, caused a little delay in starting the service.

The special features were the playing by the band and two duets by Adjutant Downey and Captain Weir; also a solo by Bandmaster Badenhoff. Adjutant Downey delivered a stirring gospel address, taking for her text, "Sanctify the Lord God in your hearts and be able at all times to give a reason for the hope within you." The Rev. J. W. Musson and the workers from the Temple Baptist church will have charge of the service tomorrow night.

TETANUS CAUSES DEATH

Small Son of Retired Navy Surgeon an Independance Day Victim.

A BLANK CARTRIDGE WOUND.

A victim of tetanus resulting from a wound inflicted by a blank cartridge on the fifth of July, Master Joseph A. Guthrie, 9-year-old son of Dr. Joseph Guthrie, a retired United States Navy surgeon, died yesterday at Roosevelt Hospital, New York, under peculiarly sad circumstances.

When the boy was injured first aid was given here after which he was removed to Roosevelt Hospital in New York for further treatment. He was discharged from this institution Saturday, his father being assured that all danger was passed. After a short interval of play with his companions near his home, 934 West Front street, he complained of feeling ill, and symptoms of lockjaw appearing the boy was sent back to the hospital where he died in great agony yesterday.

The boy was Dr. Guthrie's only son, his other two children being girls. The parents are prostrated with grief at the untimely death of their boy.

The funeral will be held from the home of relatives of the family in New York tomorrow and the body will be taken to Virginia, the family home, for interment.

NEW BRIDGE PROBABLE FOR WASHINGTON AVE.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders at the July meeting at Somerville, yesterday, discussed the question of building a new bridge on Washington avenue, this city, to take the place of the present county line structure which is practically worn out. No decision was reached, but it is understood that the freeholders favor the improvement. The matter will probably be decided tomorrow, when the board meets at Blawenburg to inspect a bridge there needing repairs.

Some of the members are of the opinion that if the Washington avenue structure can be secured at a right figure, it might be advantageous to replace the bridge at Blawenburg with the county man a saving of a considerable sum. The members will also inspect the old bridge at Bedminster this week and it is possible that the Plainfield bridge can be used there, if not suited to Blawenburg.

According to the plans and estimates of Engineer F. J. Hubbard, of this city, a new bridge on Washington avenue would cost about $8,000, it being proposed to put up an attractive structure, one in keeping with the character of the neighborhood. It has not been decided whether to build an iron girder or concrete bridge. The Union county board sometime ago voted in favor of the proposition and is now waiting on the Somerset county board.

Officers Installed.

The installation team from Unity Lodge, K. of P., installed officers at Bound Brook Monday night and will perform the same ceremonies at Flemington tonight and at Neshanic on Friday night. FIREMEN'S DEMONSTRATION CHARTER DAYS' CROWNING FEATURE

Handsome Cups and Other Trophies and the Plaudits of a Record-Breaking Crowd are Won by the Fire Fighters Along the Line of March.

Plainfield and North Plainfield witnessed July 7 what was pronounced to be the finest demonstration of firemen and fire apparatus that ever appeared in line on their streets. Besides the twenty-five fire companies there were seven bands of musicians, eight fife and drum corps and the Scotch band of pipers with drums. A creditable showing for any city and a credit to the cities and towns represented.

The line of march was a long one, probably covering five miles, but, we not found as irksome as some others, owing to the fact that the marchers were shaded by the trees along the route. The perfect weather inspired the men to do their prettiest and they earned unstinted applause all along the line. What more else is to be said here but to state here that Plainfield's beautiful streets were the admiration of every man in the line, to say nothing of those who as visitors saw the city for the first time.

Another feature that was pleasing and worthy of note was the entire absence of anything to mar the occasion. No man dropped from the line, nor were any incapacitated from any cause, and the alignment was kept almost perfect throughout the procession. Among the men was not a man who fought fires forty years ago, and who seemed to have renewed their youth. They marched with a firm elastic step characteristic of the trained soldier and enjoyed the applause given them.

Unfortunately, owing to the critical condition of Alfred Donnelly, who is ill with typhoid fever at Truell Inn, the music was stopped before the reviewing stand was reached, so that the marching at that point lacked the finish which music adds to any pageant. However, despite this disadvantage, the men (and boys) did splendidly. The stand was filled with an enthusiastic company of women, together with the visiting chiefs and judges, who were kept busy applauding the valiant marchers as they passed.

A conservative estimate of the number of visitors in town made the number 30,000, and much to the joy of the merchants the majority came prepared to spend money, and it flew lavishly wherever there was anything to buy. Whatever anxiety anyone might have had was quickly dispelled when he saw the preparations which the kindly thought of interested committeemen had arranged.

The parade itself was a thing of joy, and will, for many a day, furnish a topic for unlimited conversation and discussion. Headed by Chief of Police Kiely and his mounted squad, leading Grand Marshal Hand and his aides, they swung into the street leading to the reviewing stand in perfect order. As the head of the procession approached Arlington avenue the word was passed that the tube quiet must be maintained while passing the Inn. And the order was so promptly obeyed that not a tap of the drums or a note from the brass bands was heard as the men passed in review.

Following was the order of the organizations: Union Engine Company, of Lambertville, with team; Junction Hook and Ladder Company with forty men; Boontoon Hook and Ladder Company with a band and forty men; Union Hose Company No. 1, of Summit, with twenty-five men; Liberty Hook and Ladder, Ridgewood, with thirty men; Dunellen Fire Department with hose; Bernardsville Chemical and forty men; Roosevelt Hook and Ladder, with team and thirty men; Fire Engine Company, No. 5, of Paterson, with Mercer Company, of Princeton, with the Caledonian bag-pipers; The Warren Company, of Paterson, with twenty men; Protection Hook and Ladder Company, of Dover, with bands; Vigilant Fire Company, Passaic; Washington Hose Company, South Amboy, with fifty men; Central Hook and Ladder Company, of Somerville; Mendham Company and band; The L. H. Taylor Company, High Bridge with twenty men; Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company, Scotch Plains, with thirty men; Millburn Hose Company with a company of boys who bore a legend reading: "When our daddies are exempts we'll be on the job." There were forty men in the company; New Market Volunteers with a decorated hose carriage and twenty men; Dunellen Hose Co. with ten men; Westfield Hook and Ladder Company with twenty men; Plainfield exempts, who were cheered to the echo, hauling their famous silver carriage; Plainfield paid department; North Plainfield exempts and North Plainfield paid department.

James .E Martine, the famous and beloved friend of the firemen, marched the entire route with the exempts and when he passed the stand was given a rousing cheer. Following were the awards: For the best appearing company, Dover Hook and Ladder Co., first, winning the cup offered by the Plainfield Fire Department; second, Keyport Hose Co., American flag; third Bernardsville Hose Co., silver pitcher; fourth, Millburn Co., a pennant. For the best uniformed company, L. H. Taylor Company, of High Bridge, first, silver cup; second, Central Hook and Ladder Co., of Somerville, silver cup; third, Mendham Co., Mendham, umbrella; fourth, Roosevelt, pennant. For the company coming the greatest distance: First, Lambertville, silver trumpet; second, Ridgewood Hook and Ladder Co., silver cup; third, Mercer Co., of Princeton, pennant; fourth, Vigilant Co., of Passaic, pennant.

Much surprise was manifested that first prize was not awarded to the Mercer Co., of Princeton, for being the finest appearing company in the line. This company performed some high class evolutions just before entraining last night and were loudly cheered. Perhaps this consoled them for the loss of the silver cup.

The magnificent illumination of principal streets was one of the notable features of the three days' Charter celebration. Front street from Watchung avenue to Grove street, Somerset street from Front to Chatham were ablaze with lights. Thousands of electric bulbs could make them. The display was admired and praised by the visiting thousands as well as residents of the city and borough. The illumination was furnished by the Public Service Corporation free of charge for the Charter Day festivities for which the company has received the thanks of the entire community. The P. S. C. building on Park avenue was also beautifully illuminated. Strung along the facade of the building were forty-two lamps of 100 watt power each. These lights brightened the street to the extent of making the reading of a newspaper easy anywhere between Second street and North avenue.

SURPRISE PARTY MARKS WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

In celebration of the thirty-first anniversary of their wedding, Mr. and Mrs. B. Y. Moore were tendered a pleasant surprise at their home on North avenue Thursday night. About twenty-five of their friends called upon them unexpectedly, bringing handsome presents. The evening passed quickly with reminiscences and there were piano selections by Mrs. Stewart and her son and songs by Miss Viola Stewart and George Rittenhouse.

Among the presents were several pieces of cut glass, a handsome rocking chair and a gold-piece sent by Mrs. Moore's father. The couple were married by Rev. Lewis Bond, in this city. Out-of-town guests came from Newark and Somerville.

FIREMEN ARE ENTERTAINED

Visiting Chiefs and Other Invited Guests Attended Dinner.

THE COMPLIMENTS PROFUSE.

Former Chief Purroy, of Newark, and Countless Others Among the Merry Ones.

The dinner tendered to the visiting chiefs, July 7, was attended by about 20 heads of the various departments and a number of other guests and it was pronounced a fine spread. Former Chief Purroy, of the New York City department was one of the guests, and entertained some of his near neighbors with anecdotes of his experiences in the greatest fire department in the world.

One of the most disastrous fires in point of loss of life was the burning of the old Potter building at the corner of Beekman and Nassau streets in 1883, when Mr. Purroy was in charge of the department. In this holocaust twenty people lost their lives, many through jumping from the upper floors. The New York World was then housed in the building and was enjoying a circulation of about 30,000, and it was in the plant of that paper the fire originated.

Many other interesting reminiscences were called to mind by the narration of the first story and the fire fighters swapped stories to their hearts' content. Incidentally the local department came in for a special eulogy on their up-to-date equipment and evident efficiency. The magnificent pair of grey horses which won the blue ribbon at the recent horse show were the subjects of much favorable comment. It was said that they would win a blue ribbon anywhere. Not much of the equipment of Plainfield's men escaped the notice of the visitors, who were not slow to voice their opinions.

Compliments flew thick and fast once the conversation became general and the hearty laughter denoted keen enjoyment. Those who got near enough to the talkative men were just in time to miss the point of some good joke, and no amount of persuasion would induce the teller to repeat. Chiefs Arnett, of Lambertville, and Davis, of Roselle, said they had the time of their lives.

The Chiefs present at the banquet were: Arnett, Lambertville, Neighbor, High Bridge; Whitehead, Boonton; Shapter, of Summit; Stoney, of Keyport; Schreier, of Roosevelt; O'Neill, of Ridgewood; Higgins, of Princeton; Hathaway, of Dover; Mead, of Perth Amboy; Wise, of Somerville; Wyhuskey, of Dunellen; Thornton, of New Market, Decker, of Westfield; Allen, of Trenton; Kierstine and Stone, of Newark; ex-chief Purroy, of New York city; Brampton, of Bound Brook; Bowers, of Cranford; Gerstung, of Elizabeth; Hann, of Flemington; Pfeister, of Phillipsburg; Peck, of New Providence; Greenwald; of New Brunswick; Chamberlain, of Raritan; Davis, of Roselle; Mount, of Red Bank; Cunningham, of Passaic, and assistant Chief Walter S. Gibson, of Passaic.

The visiting firemen were entertained at dinner at the Morris Garage where, they said, the repast was both bountiful and good. Mayor Fisk and Mayor Townsend and other officials of the city and borough governments were the guests of the chiefs, and thoroughly enjoyed the feast.

A remarkable feature of the day's celebration was the uniform sobriety. No event in the history of the city ever passed off with so little friction and so few arrests. Many of the visiting throngs of people visited the Galaschanen after the fireworks display, whole companies stopping there on their way to their home towns. A conservative estimate places the number of visitors in town last night at 30,000.

The judges who awarded the various trophies were: Chief Mount, of Red Bank; Deputy Chief Stone, of Newark; Chief Allen, of Trenton, and Chief Kiersted, of Newark.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Soup should always be served in dishes of some sort, as otherwise it is apt to damage the table linen.

Small pieces of bread broken from the slice and spread judiciously with butter may be eaten from the hand, and are much liked by most persons.

Raisins are preferable to currants in all cakes and puddings made during the summer and early fall, as near-sighted persons are not so apt to mistake them for flies.

Speaking of flies reminds me that fipaper is always more effective when placed on tables or window sills with th sticky side up and exposed to the air.—From Judge.

GIFT FOR A BABY.

A charming gift for a baby, and one that is seldom given, is a cover to slip over the baby carriage, or crib, while the infant sleeps on the porch.

This should be made of wash net, of a coarse mesh, bound all around with three-inch white satin ribbon.

Use the full width of the double net and cut either square or oblong, as it adapts itself to the size of the crib or coach. The cover will be found invaluable this summer in protecting the baby from flies or mosquitoes during his morning naps on the porch.

MISS NASH'S MARRIAGE

Daughter of Charles Irvington Nash Becomes Mrs. Charles Edgar Pettit.

REV. MR. CULP OFFICIATES.

Mrs. George Brown Whitfield Matron of Honor—Harry Wells Nash Best Man.

Miss Beatrice Oliver Nash, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Irvington Nash, of Delaney avenue, was the bride of Charles Edgar Pettit, of Bound Brook, July 7, when the wedding ceremony was performed at her parents' home by Rev. C. J. Culp, pastor of the Presbyterian church, Bound Brook. The ceremony was performed in the library of the home, where the couple stood in a bower of palms and white roses. The house was lavishly decorated, the general color scheme being green and white. There were about fifty guests, comprising the relatives and most intimate friends of the couple.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white directoire satin gown, trimmed with Duchess lace. She wore a bridal veil, and carried a shower bouquet of white gardenia and lillies of the valley. She was attended by Mrs. George Brown Whitfield, of Brooklyn, as matron of honor. Mrs. Whitfield wore a white embroidered robe, made over pink silk, and carried a shower bouquet of pink roses. Harry Wells Nash, brother of the bride, was best man. Mendelssohn's wedding march was played as the bridal party etnered the room, Sophus Lassen being at the piano.

Following the ceremony, an elaborate collation was served by De-Molli, covers being laid for fifty guests. Mr. and Mrs. Pettit will spend their honeymoon in the Catskills, and will their home in Chicago. Mr. Pettit is in the jewelry business. Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. William W. Middlebrook, of Yonkers, N. Y., and Mr. and Mrs. E. Hohn, Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Paddock, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Plumtree, Mrs. M. McDermott, John Wells and Frank P. Share, all of Brooklyn.

GEORGE J. WHALEN AS SELF-MADE MILLIONAIRE

"Trust Methods for Retailers," an article in the current issue of the Saturday Evening Post, written by Isaac F. Marcosson, deals with the business system built up by George J. Whalen, president of the United Cigar Stores Company, who lives on East Front street. "Behind his methods," says the writer, " is a less than six hundred separate known man who sells goods over a counter."

Mr. Whalen, who is a self-made millionaire, is the one man who has created the business system of the United Cigar Stores, says the article. "Scarcely fifteen years ago," the writer says, he owned a small cigar stand in a Syracuse hotel, where he had a regular trade among the guests. He finally made up his mind that his business should not depend upon others, and he started a store of his own. Today he has stores, and is one of our comparatively unknown, self-made millionaires.

The article, which is based on an interview with Mr. Whalen, is full of timely advice for retailers, and covers every branch of the retail business.

DANGER OF FRENCH MONEY.

The fight of the financiers of the world to obtain for their enterprises a portion of the stupendous wealth of France has a side to it that may not be so alluring, according to A. H. Parnall, writing of the "World's Finance" in the Van Norden Magazine. Mr. Parnall, after showing that France can buy nearly a billion dollars of foreign securities a year, makes a point that it must be actively borne in mind that the average French investor is completely swayed by his banker, and the latter is cautious to a degree not imaginable in our country. One word from the banking power of France—and French bankers co-operate on vital issues—could start wholesale liquidation of American stocks, and this, in turn, would involve a serious outpouring of gold reserves from this country. If the United States Steel Corporation's attempt to have its securities listed on the Paris Bourse is followed by a large number of other great industrials it will add another element of danger to the many now besetting the business world.

BEING ECONOMICAL

"VE got to give it up," sighed Loretta. "I simply can't economize and there's no use trying."

"What's the matter now?" asked her brother. "I roke again?"

"Yes, but that isn't it. It's the way things count up, no matter how hard you try to keep them down."

"I've heard that complaint before. What is your particular trial?"

"Well, I started out to save on everything—"

"That's always a bad beginning."

"So I bought only two summer gowns this year in addition to my light-weigth suit. I had to get a lot of new waists because they don't wear short sleeves any more, but my summer dresses were going to be cheap enough to make up for that. I don't have time to sew, so I took my dresses to the dressmaker."

"And probably forgot to ask how much she'd charge to make them?"

"Indeed, I didn't. They were to be $4.50 each without the findings."

"The what?"

"The hooks and eyes and thread and things. They added quite a lot to the cost. Then there were the trimmings. The dressmaker wanted 12 yards of embroidery for the pink dress and she showed me a sample. I went cheerfully down to buy that and found it would cost $13.20."

"Whew!"

"That particular dress cost $3, so $13.20 for trimmings seemed a trifle large. I hunted around till I found some for 50 cents a yard that looked almost as good. The saleswoman didn't think it would wear very well, but I said it would have to do."

"Was that all?"

"Then I had to get the trimmings for the blue dress. They cost me $5 and I came home feeling crushed in soul and pocket book."

"Cheer up! Other people have their troubles."

"Wait!" cried Loretta. "That is only the beginning. When it came to hats this spring I bought a walking hat and took my last summer's best hat to be made over. Though the milliner laughed when she saw it, she made it look all right for a small price, and I thought I was fixed. But neither of those hats could be worn with these light gowns."

"Some young women are too particular."

"So I went to the milliner's again and was obliged to invest in a $10 straw."

"That's economy for you!"

"It wasn't much for the hat. It's Milan straw and can be used next year—though the milliners always say that and hats never can be used next year. Besides, I always expect to have more money next year. The roses are lovely. Still, the milliner wouldn't guarantee that they would not fade. She said I positively must have a parasol for sunny days."

"You never see one."

"I know it. I perfectly hate them!" said Loretta, fiercely. "But I went meekly and bought one. That made $6 more."

"I can see you swelling around at a sunny resort."

"But you know I'm going camping this season. These crepe dresses were for just wearing around home. That wasn't all, either."

"Go on."

"The dressmaker sent word at the last minute that she would need three yards of embroidery and four more of lace or the dresses would be ruined. So of course I obediently sent the material to her! I bought the original trimming at sales and when I got the extra amount I had to pay almost double what I paid at first. Three different days the dressmaker forgot to telephone me that she was not ready for me and besides I had three true fittings; so, as it takes two car fares to get to her house, that added $1.20."

"Anything else?"

"She sent the dresses home Thursday of last week and her girl got no answer when she rang our bell, so she took them back again. Then I had to pay a boy to go and get them for me. They have just come with the bill and I've been counting up how much those two cheap gowns have cost me."

"Well, nevermind, they'll look fine."

"That's the worst of it!" groaned Loretta. "They are so provokingly simple-looking that everybody'll think I made them myself or bought them ready-made. I saw one downtown not a bit less pretty for $6, yet my two outfits cost me $47.80. The next time I economize I'll know it. I might as well have the fun of being extravagant from the beginning."

"Yes, mum," responded Sandy Pikes, with a low bow, "to show my antipathy for dem I have formed a boycott."

"Yes, mum, I have promised meself never to use a Turkish towel or take a Turkish bath."

OCEAN RECORD BROKEN

VESSEL LOPPS OFF 17 MINUTES.

Cunarder Cross in Four Days Sixteen Hours and Thirty-six Minutes—Seventy Knots Average.

The Cunard liner Mauretania has again lowered the westward record—her own—over the long course, 2,891 knots, across the North Atlantic. She arrived off the Sandy Hook Lightship at 9:16 Thursday night, having slipped 17 minutes off her own and the world's record, till then 4 days 16 hours and 53 minutes. She docked early this morning. Among her first-class cabin passengers was Henry W. Hazelton, of Woodland avenue, who was returning from a ten weeks' business trip through Europe.

The new record from Daunt's Rock to the Sandy Hook Lightship is 4 days 16 hours and 36 minutes. The Mauretania's best previous westward record was made on the voyage from May 15 to 20.

The hourly average speed of the Mauretania for the trip just ended is unofficially given as 25.70 knots, as against her best previous average of 25.62.

This voyage of the Mauretania was made under good conditions. There was little bad weather. The great vessel bowled through the water at a rate of speed, which in every way justifies the belief that she will soon be able to make the journey across the Atlantic, and arrive at Sandy Hook early enough to allow her to land her passengers here on Thursday night. Each trip she cuts down the time by a few minutes. Last night she came to the lightship almost in time to allow her to make the landing at the docks at Fishguard, Wales, ipstead of at Queenstown will help. It is expected that this will save six hours.

In a few weeks the vessel will be on the southern or short course, 2,780 knots, but if Capt. Pritchard's ambition to come over the long course, and still land on Thursday night.

Mr. Hazelton said today that in all his experiences in ocean travel during the last sixteen years, he had never seen so many large wagers made among the cabin passengers on the daily runs. The Mauretania, he declared, seemed fairly to fly across the waters and its record was greatly helped by the unusually favorable weather conditions. During his sojourn in London, the Plainfielder took a run over to County Cork, Ireland, where he was entertained at the Hazelton ancestral estate, which has been in the possession of the family for 500 years.

PROGRESS OF THE DAY ALL OVER THE WORLD.

Germany is to have an English theatre.

A Paris blind man has saved four persons from drowning.

Buttons, piano keys and similar objects are now made of milk.

Germany has spent more for aviation than any other government.

Prince Henry, the brother of the German Emperor, is the inventor of a device for use on the glass or transparent wind shield of the automobile by means of which the deposit of rain or mist on the glass is wiped away and the field of vision of the operator left clear.

Italians love statues and occasionally erect them to some singular persons. The little town of Meldola, near Ravenna, Italy, has just been the scene of an imposing ceremony. In the presence of the town grandees the people have unveiled a monument to Feli Orsini, who made the historic attempt on the life of Napoleon III, on March 24, 1858, in Paris, when the casualties numbered 130. The statute represents Orsini on the way to his execution. Meldola is the birthplace of Orsini.

STRAWBERRY OMELET.

"A Japanese cook taught me the other day how to make a strawberry omelet," says Fannie Merritt Farmer in Woman's Home Companion for June. "Wash and pick over one pint of strawberries. Cut in halves, put in an earthen bowl, and add one third of a cupful of powdered sugar, one-half teaspoonful of vanilla, one tablespoonful of water and a few grains of salt. Let stand in a warm place fifteen minutes. Beat eight eggs slightly, and add one-half cupful of cream, two teaspoonfuls of sugar and one-half teaspoonful of salt.

Put two tablespoonfuls of butter in a hot omelet-pan, and when melted pour in the egg mixture. As it cooks, prick and pick up with a fork until the whole is of a creamy consistency. Place on a hotter part of the range, that it may brown quickly underneath. Before folding and turning on a hot platter add one-half the prepared strawberries; sprinkle with two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar, and pour around the remaining strawberries. The strawberries may also be used with your ordinary rFench omelet recipe."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning July 13, 1902.

By [illegible]

Topic.—"Pilgrim's Progress"—series—VII. The Palace Beautiful.—Eph. iv, 7-16; vi, 10-17.

At the top of the Hill Difficulty, Christian soon came to the Beautiful Palace. Walking along as night came on, bewailing the indifference that made him late through his sleeping in the arbor and leaving his roll, for which he had to return, so that it was now necessary to travel in the darkness, "he lift up his eyes and, behold, there was a very stately palace before him, the name of which was Beautiful, and it stood by the wayside." Hitherto Christian had been a solitary pilgrim, but we must next consider him as admitted to the communion of the faithful and joining with them in the most solemn public services. This is represented under the emblem of the House Beautiful and the pilgrim's entertainment in it.

Christian hurried on toward the palace, hoping to secure lodging there. Looking through a narrow passage toward the Porter's Lodge, he saw two lions in the way and was afraid and thought that he would go back, for, though the lions were chained, he did not see the chains. But the porter, named Watchful, encouraged him to come forward, telling him that the lions were chained. Thus encouraged, he proceeded, yet with fear and trembling. The lions roared, but did not harm him, and he greatly rejoiced when he had passed them and reached in safety the gate where the porter stood. Christian was about to make a public confession of his faith, and at such a time opposition and fear and timidity often harass all Christians; hence the lions. But God is simply testing the character of our faith, and if we will but heed the encouraging words of faithful pastors and teachers and follow their directions as Christian did we should go on, and we shall find that the lions are chained and that no harm, but blessings and joy, will come to us.

In the Beautiful Palace Christian began his association with the saints of God. He was first closely examined by the porter, as all should be before entering the church of Christ lest they make an ignorant or false confession of faith. His examination being satisfactory, he was admitted. Here, in conversation with Piety, Charity, Prudence and Discretion, he told the story of his Christian experience. The public rehearsal of our personal experience may not always prove to be beneficial, but there is no doubt that in personal conversation with our Christian friends these should often be the subject of remark. It is but the more natural than for God's children to converse among themselves of their Father's dealings with them and of their personal experiences with Christ along the Christian life!

In the Palace Beautiful Christian's profession was ratified, and his membership in the church was completed. The supper served was emblematic of the Lord's supper, and the atonement was discussed. So the peaceful sleep the peace of God that comes to the new convert is symbolized. The next day he was taken into the armory and "put on the whole armor of God." His was also a fine view of the delectable Mountains and of Immanuel's land as a means of inspiration and of encouragement before he journeyed on to meet new trials and difficulties.

The Accomplished Mrs. Thompson

BY NORVAL RICHARDSON

(Copyright, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

"Dick, it's wonderful! I've found the very woman."

This was Aunt Sarah's greeting to me after my absence of three months, but it was no characteristic of her—this plunging into the middle of a subject without any preliminaries—that I dispensed with the customary questions about health and other minor details and followed her to a quiet corner of the cafe, where she had already procured a table.

"What is her name?" I asked, feeling that I ought to ask some kind of a question.

"Mrs. Thompson."

"A married woman! Any children?"

"No children, and I don't think a husband. Of course I didn't like to inquire too particularly."

"Did you engage her?"

"Yes, and she is waiting now for you to appoint the day for her to come."

I told her of our little journey in England, and how Bettie had decided to remain with some relatives when I was called back to New York on business. She was to join me, however, in a week now, and had written me to be sure and procure a maid-of-all-work and begin housekeeping in the little suburban cottage which we had bought and furnished before leaving on our honeymoon trip. Of course I had done nothing of the sort, and had gone to a hotel until she came.

But as the time approached I felt conscience-stricken in not having the house open for her arrival. In my predicament I had telephoned Aunt Sarah, who was spending the summer at a nearby seashore resort, asking her to come in town for a day and select the maid and anything else that was necessary.

"There is just one thing more that I want you to do for me, Aunt Sarah," I said, when we could keep away from the all-important subject no longer. "I have to leave town in the morning for several days. Will you go out to the cottage with Mrs. Thompson to-morrow, and show her around? You know I expect Bettie to arrive next Thursday, so that will only give her a few days to get the house in running order. I thought I should not move out until Bettie comes, but that will not keep the maid from getting her things out there, and, for that matter, she can remain after to-morrow, if she wishes to."

Aunt Sarah agreed with me about this, so I left her the next morning, feeling that I was a particularly lucky man.

When I returned the next Thursday I found a Marconi message awaiting me at the hotel, saying the steamer was due to arrive at noon that day. This gave me just two hours in which to get down to the dock. There was also a note from Aunt Sarah, saying that she had left everything in beautiful order at the cottage, and had returned to the seashore, adding that she felt sure that we would find Mrs. Thompson a treasure.

My first thought was to telephone Mrs. Thompson that my wife and I should be out in time for dinner, and to have everything in readiness. It was only a few minutes before I received an answer to my call. A low, distinct voice at the other end asked who I was and what I wanted. I asked if it were Mrs. Thompson, and then stated that we should be out that evening.

"I'm delighted! Everything is in readiness," came the low, modulated voice.

We had so much to say—Bettie and I—that housekeeping and the cottage did not enter once into our conversation until we had reached our suburb and were on the trolley car nearing our home.

"Oh, Dick, tell me about the cottage and the maid! You didn't disappoint me and not get one?"

"Oh, no," I answered complacently; "I have one."

"Tell me all about her. Is she satisfactory? I hope that she is fairly decent looking."

"I don't know about her appearance, but she has a charming voice."

"But why don't you know about her appearance?"

"Well, you know, I've never seen her."

Then I gave her a full account of the whole affair.

When we reached our street I gathered up the grips, and we both walked a little excitedly towards the cottage. Bettie was frankly impatient to see the maid, and I must confess that I was somewhat interested myself; for a woman with such a voice could not possibly fail to be interesting, I felt sure.

The hall door was open and the cottage lighted brilliantly—it was half after six in the evening—so that our homecoming was hospitable, to say the least.

When we were on the steps she came out to greet us—a charming apparition in her spotless white gown, elbow sleeves, and white shoes. A jaunty black bow was thrust in her hair, which was quite golden—a shade beyond criticism—and with dark blue eyes, a perfect complexion, and a sweet smile upon her charming countenance—in fact, to be quite frank, she was stunning.

"Do come in, Mrs. Osborne. I know you must be fearfully fagged. And this is Mr. Osborne! I am delighted to see you both."

After this Bettie and I followed her meekly into the hall. I dared not look at Bettie, and, whether purposely or not, she would not meet my eyes either.

"Of course you want to go right up to your room," she continued, closing the front door. "Dinner is all ready when you wish it. I've prepared a corking repast in honor of your return."

At this I took the grips and ran up the stairs, for I knew there was no telling when Bettie might say to this last outburst.

In our bedroom I fell into a chair, breathless, and waited anxiously for Bettie's appearance. She followed in a few moments, entering the room in a most stately manner, a dark flush on her face.

"Well, what do you think of her?" I hazarded.

To this Betty deigned no reply, turning upon me with a withering glance.

"Don't you think you had better hurry into your evening clothes for the corking—good—dinner?"—this still with the cold dignity.

"Of course I'm not going to dress for dinner to-night, Bettie. Let's go down just as we are."

She agreed coldly to my suggestion, and in a few minutes we were seated at the table, as still a couple as I ever hope to see. Oh, that dinner! I hope the man who said we never forget anything was a liar, for if I must go through life with the memory of that dinner with me always, I shall end in an asylum.

After it was over she arose and without a word flew to her room.

When I entered the room I found her lying across the bed and sobbing as if her heart were broken.

"Why, Bettie!" I cried, putting my arms about her. "What in the world is the trouble?"

"Get away from me, you brute!" she cried. "To think that I came all the way back from Europe to a man like you!"

"Bettie, what do you mean?"

"You know what I mean. It's that horrid woman! And you told me you had never even seen her before!"

And then came another outburst of weeping.

"But, Bettie," I said, completely puzzled, "I never saw her before to-night. I don't understand."

"Of course you don't understand. You don't want to understand. Didn't I see her smile at you during dinner in that horrid, confidential ways of hers? Besides, she had on a finer dress than I ever hope to have. It is all hand-embroidered linen. You can't fool me, Dick Osborne."

At this I felt it was my time to become angry.

"I explained to you thoroughly that Aunt Sarah engaged her and made all the arrangements. You made it clear to you that I had nothing to do with it. Besides, I never saw her until this evening. Of course I see that she is too familiar, and that we do not want her, but why you should act so silly is beyond me. It would be very much more sensible for you to stop crying like a baby and help me to decide what is best to be done."

"There is nothing to do but to tell her to leave at once. If she does not go to-morrow, I will."

"That is easily enough arranged. I shall tell her in the morning that we shall not need her after she has served breakfast."

Early the next morning I knocked on Bettie's door.

"Come in," was the faint reply.

"I think you had better go down with me when I tell her that we do not need her any longer. It's a woman's duty, you know."

Bettie was standing at the window with her back to me, and vouchsafed no reply. I had repeated my request before she answered:

"If you will come here and look out of the window you will see that it is unnecessary for either of us to tell her anything."

I went to the window and looked out.

A large red motor car was at the curb in front of our house, and Mrs. Thompson was just climbing in and taking a seat beside the chauffeur as I looked out. In a second the car was gone up the street and had disappeared from our view.

"Well!" I gasped. "What does it mean?"

"I don't know, I'm sure," Bettie said, turning away from the window, and not falling, I thought, to see the astonishment on my face.

"Jove! but I'm glad," I said, with a mighty relief. "I didn't know how to tell her to go."

Downstairs I found this note on the table:

Dear Mr. Osborne:

I find myself in a most embarrassing situation, and it is best to be perfectly frank with you. To that you will not think hard of me. I left my husband two weeks ago, and applied for a position as housekeeper and maid combined. I had no means of support, and knew I was best fitted for this work. Your house was the first position I have held. My husband found me, and as he was just come for me this morning. We have agreed to overlook our little differences of temperament, and so I am going back with him at once. Tell Mrs. Osborne she will find the coffee made and on the gas stove. Excuse me.

Always sincerely,
MRS. THOMPSON.

"Does that restore your confidence in your husband, or do you need still stronger proof?" I said haughtily to Bettie.

But I never showed her a telegram that awaited me at my office. It was this:

You have my deepest sympathy in your conjugal alliance. You are what I should call litigious to against it.

TO PREPARE GOOD CUSTARDS.

Directions for the Making of Various Kinds of Flavoring.

Gelatine custards are boiled custards, chilled and stiffened with gelatine. When delicately flavored and served with rich cream they are delicious and wholesome. For a coffee jelly, prepare a boiled custard with two cups of milk, two egg yolks and two tablespoonfuls of sugar. While it is hot add two tablespoonfuls of gelatine that has been dissolving in a little cold water. Flavor the custard, also two or three teaspoonfuls of coffee extract, or enough to suit the taste. Set the custards away to cool until ready to serve. Just as they are becoming hard, the whipped whites of the eggs may be stirred through them, and well beaten in. They are an improvement, but not essential. To prepare coffee extract pour about a tablespoonful of boiling water over one or two teaspoonfuls of powdered coffee and squeeze it through muslin, repeating, if necessary, two or three times. It should be very strong to make a good dessert.

Flavorings of wine, vanilla, orange, lemon, almond, etc., may be used instead of coffee. Preserved ginger cut in tiny strips and boiled with the custard is sometimes used as a flavoring. Only enough should be used to give a delicate flavor.

The gelatine custards are like blanc mange, the only difference being the egg yolks, which turn them from white to yellow.

Cook dried fruits on top of the fire stace.

When using the oven put all in it it will hold, meats, potatoes, apples, puddings, etc.

Never mix a French dressing until ready for use. The vinegar and oil will separate.

Save the water in which potatoes have been boiled and use it to wash tarnished brass. It will come out as bright as new.

A delicious salad may be made of grape fruit pulp, white grapes and stalks of romaine, dressed with oil and vinegar and sweetened slightly.

To take old stains from marble, mix one gill of soapsuds and one and a half a gill of turpentine, and as much fuller's earth as will make a paste, and rub it on the stains. Leave it on for a few days and then wipe off.

In soiled ribbons or lingerie of any description, look at the backing. If you find a loose cotton weave, you may be sure that it will soon wear out. The backing of good tapestry is smooth and well finished, whereas the cheap variety is poorly backed.

Apple Cream Pie.

Line a deep pie plate with a rich puff paste, biting an extra rim of the paste around the edge. For the filling stew three tart apples cored but not pared, then sift them and add while hot one-fourth cup of butter. Beat the yolks of three eggs with one-half cup of sugar, add the grated rind of one lemon, also juice, then the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs, and stir this mixture thoroughly with the apple. Add more sugar if needed. Pour the mixture into the pie plate lined with the paste and bake about one-half hour. Whip one-half pint cream stiff, sweeten it slightly and pile it on top when ready to serve.

Caramel Ice Cream.

Foundation for ice cream—One quart milk, heated in double boiler. Add two cups of sugar, four eggs, four tablespoons flour. Boil until thick and flavor with vanilla. Strain and cool. Just before freezing add one quart cream. Strain.

Caramel Ice Cream—Use above foundation. To the hot milk add one-half cup sugar, burned (to burn add enough water to make syrup over a very hot fire), then the rest of the sugar and ingredients follow.

After Cooking Onions.

To remove the smell of onions, wash the pan thoroughly in the usual way and wipe dry with a dish cloth. Next sprinkle with salt, set on the stove and allow the salt to brown, shaking the pan well from time to time. Rinse again in clean water to which a lump of washing soda has been added, when all taste and smell of onion will have disappeared.

Meat Balls.

One pound of hamburger steak, one cup bread crumbs, one-half cup grated cheese, two eggs beaten until light, one tablespoon chopped parsley, salt and pepper; mix in balls size of an egg, then drop in soup stock, and boil ten minutes, and then add two beaten eggs, one spoon grated cheese, and stir in, lastly for thickening; serve.

Salad and Cold Duck.

A delicious salad may be prepared from cold duck. Mince the meat fine, adding a small quantity of stuffing to it. Season highly with salt and pepper, stir in a little minced celery, and cover with mayonnaise or some similar dressing. Serve on a bed of lettuce leaves.

Good Sandwich Filling.

French candied fruits minced and moistened slightly with pineapple or orange juices are a favorite sandwich filling.

Washing a Ponges Dress.

In doing up a pongee dress, do not sprinkle it after it is dry, as it will certainly spot.

FADS FOR WOMEN.

What delightful rabats can be fashioned from scraps of linen and lace, and what a pretty finish they are to the popular Dutch collars. A tiny length of linen, about three by four inches, combined with a little val. makes a dainty decoration of this description.

The lace is edged on three sides with the val. insertion and a tiny frill is the finish. An oval-shaped motif or a bow of Irish lace supports the end after gathering the top.

This is only one suggestion, but a close observance of those seen in the stores will provide ideas for the development of the numbers of short lengths of lace always on hand during the summer dressmaking period.

A lovely lingerie hat that a girl could fashion at home if she knows embroidery is made from handkerchief linen, stamped for working (crown and brim) in eyelet over a medium-sized sailor hat shape.

The under brim is covered with ruffles of narrow valenciennes lace, the embroidered piece covering the upper portion.

The embroidery fits the top of the crown exactly, and a broad soft ribbon conceals the sides of the crown, tying in a soft, large bow at the left side.

GUNS AND TENTS IN AFRICA.

In Harper's Weekly the Rev. Dr. W. S. Rainsford describes how the hunter's caravan is made to order in East Africa. It is a safe rule to allow twenty porters to carry your personal belongings, while a carrier's load—100 pounds—not including gun-boys, head man, tent-boys, cook, or syce, can carry for a month just 1,500 pounds more than their food. Of course one is mainly in the hands of the head man. The next ally is the tent-boy, although Dr. Rainsford's exhibited an inexplyicable reluctance to beat a swamp for a lion. The cook, of course, is an important personage. Least on the list is the toto, the apprentice boy, whom you can first see he loiters along, under his heavy burden, in the rear of the column. The toto is not on the strength of the caravan, but is hired by a party of five or six porters to do their jobs around camp, carry water, cook food, etc. Most of the totos are orphans, "rickety, consumptive, half-starved atoms of humanity, who yet face with an African's quite wonderful cheeriness the chances of safri (caravan) life, because it offers them plentiful food and some sort of a home."

FOR CLEANING WALLPAPER.

To clean wall paper use the following recipe: Ten cents' worth of liquid ammonia, 10 cents' worth of oil of sassafras, one teaspoonful (even full) of soda, two teaspoonfuls (even full) of salt and one quart of water. Mix the cold water with the ingredients, then add white flour until it is thick enough to drop from a spoon. Put in a covered pail, set in a kettle of boiling water, and cook until done, stirring often. If it does not stick to the hands when cool, it is done. Remove from the pail and divide into "loaves," working each piece a while in the hand. Take out only what is needed, leaving the rest covered in the pail, to prevent the ammonia from evaporating. Rub the wall with a loaf, working the dirt into the dough. When very dirty, exchange for a clean loaf. This removes dirt and grease magically and leaves old paper as good as new when used carefully.—Woman's Home Companion for June.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

The Civil Service Law.

The question of the constitutionality of the civil service law is in the courts, and it may be decided favorably or unfavorably. But there can be no question that the results of the first nine months' operation of the law in this State have been excellent. It has improved the public service, and it has not prevented the dismissal of men unfit to hold responsible places of great responsibility.

The records of the Civil Service Commission are interesting and instructive, especially those having reference to the weeding out of incompetents, grafters and others who found refuge in different State institutions through political influence or the work of personal friends.

Since October last there have been one hundred and one dismissals from the several State and municipal departments and institutions. Nearly one-fourth the entire number lost their snug berths because of "absence from and neglect of duty." Twenty-two were discharged because of intoxication; fifteen were dismissed for inefficiency and unsatisfactory service and a dozen more were put out of three institutions for abusive treatment of the inmates under their care.

Notice that these dismissals took place: Thirty-two from the Morris Plains Asylum; thirty from the hospital at Trenton; nine from the epileptic village; eight from the Newark City Hospital; three from the Rahway Reformatory, and so on. It may not be unsafe to say that many of those dismissed had hitherto been kept in office because of political influence, but, under the civil service law, all such employes must either stand on their individual merits or give place to others better qualified.

The courts may possibly find that, for technical reasons, the act as it now stands on the statute book is defective, but it is safe to assume that should the decision invalidate the present law another will be enacted as soon as possible. The politicians do not, of course, approve of any law that turns out of office their personal friends and party workers, but the people have had a taste of civil service and will hardly permit a return to the old conditions. What has been accomplished in the past nine months is satisfactory assurance of what civil service will do in the future.—Newark News.

BUSINESS MANNERS.

Why is it that many of the cashiers, bookkeepers, bank tellers, corporation clerks, and people who serve the public through glass windows or across counters, are so pert and unobliging? Why is it necessary to make a customer feel that he is a nuisance? asks O. S. Marden in Success.

Public officials, clerks and attendants in our public buildings and municipal offices are proverbially curt, short and snappy. Though you are paying them through your taxes for their services, they make you feel that you are doing them a great favor by giving you what belongs to you and by doing what you are paying them for doing.

How quickly you notice the atmosphere of a business house—a great department store, for example. There is as much difference between the feeling you have in walking through two great establishments as that you experience in talking with the different heads of these houses. In one, politeness, courteousness, consideration for others, a feeling of good will, permeates the very atmosphere. To uhave a feeling that every employe in the place would be glad to serve you if he could, and is anxious to please, whether you buy or not. You feel instinctively that the employer thinks a great deal of the character as well as the ability of his clerks, and that manners and deportment are never left out of consideration in their selection.

In another establishment a few blocks away, you are ill at ease. Carelessness, indifference and chilliness pervade the place. You do not feel at home. There is a lack of harmony, a sense of antagonism in the atmosphere. The employes make you feel that they are doing you a favor in letting you see the goods, or giving you the opportunity to purchase them with your money.

The man who thinks he is going to make a fortune without considering the welfare of the other end of the bargain is very short-sighted. In the long run the customer's best good is the seller's best good also; and, other thing equal, the man succeeds best who satisfies his customers best and whose customers not only come back, but always bring others with them.

SUMMER DISHES TO TICKLE JADED APPETITES.

A delicious vegetable salad was made of new potatoes, young carrots and celery roots boiled, drained and set aside until cold. They were then cut in thin slices and this slices of cold boiled tongue and tart apples were added. The dressing was made of olive oil and tragon vinegar, blended in the proportions of three tablespoonfuls of oil to one of vinegar. Salt, pepper and a little French mustard were added to season. A salad bowl was lined with crisp, new lettuce leaves, and the salad was turned into the bowl and sprinkled over the top with minced parsley. Toasted crackers and cheese were served with it.

FRESH AIR CAMP SITE.

Now that the Netherwood Fresh Air Home is about to come into possession of a bequest amounting to $100,000, the opportunity is presented for the erection of a substantial camp in a more suitable location. The southern slope of the Watchung mountain, near Cranford, affords a fine site for such an institution. Some years ago, the City Union of King's Daughters wisely built its baby camp on the Johnston drive, realizing that because of the high altitude and picturesque woodland it furnished the most ideal location for its work. The Fresh Air Home Association would do well to follow its example.

MONDAY MORNING IN LOCAL POLICE COURT

Antoni Jargebenski had a tooth pulled Saturday, and his dentist, he says, recommended that he take a couple of drinks of whiskey to ease the pain. The Italian thought it would take more than a couple of drinks to ease the throbbing cavity, and he poured down the fire-water a little too freely. When he no longer felt the pain—he knew much about anything else, as it happens—he got on a trolley car to go home. The liquor went to his head, and he was unable to sit up. When the car reached North and Watchung avenues early in the afternoon, he was arrested as a helpless drunk by Patrolmen Myers and Sweeny. John P. Owens appeared at court this morning to explain the "mitigating circumstances" and sentence was suspended by City Judge Runyon.

Ludlow Frazee was sentenced to serve a sixty day sentence in the county jail at his hearing before City Judge Runyon Monday following his arrest for drunkenness and disorderly conduct on Park avenue Saturday night, when Patrolman Messler found him with a scrappy jag. Frazee was arrested just a week ago, when he and his brother had a fight at the same corner.

Because he started to raise a rumpus on Front street after many many drinks Saturday night, Harry Molleson, Jr., was arrested by Patrolman Vanderweg, and at his hearing before City Judge Runyon Monday was given the "$10 or twenty days" alternative.

"DOC" IS DEAD.

Retired Fire Horse, Aged 25 Years, Is No More.

"Doc," the old fire department horse, one of the first purchased by the city for use in that department, died on Thursday on the farm of Mr. Freeman at Oak Tree, where it had been in the charge for the past five years, at which time it was decided that it was no longer fit for duty. "Doc" was about twenty-five years old and was considered one of the best horses owned by the city. Thursday night he got down in his stall, and owing to advanced age, was unable to get up and it was in this position he died.

"Doc" was first used with another horse to draw the steamer and later was assigned to the hose wagon, Captain Daly driving the animal for many years. It was a comparatively easy matter to train the horse. He was always quick to respond to every alarm of fire and was usually the first to arrive at a conflagration.

AUTOMOBILE COLLIDES WITH BUTCHER ARNOLD'S WAGON.

Walter Arnold, son of Charles Arnold, the Liberty street butcher, accompanied by Patrick Powers, while driving on West Front street, near Grant avenue, Saturday afternoon, delivering orders, collided with a touring car, the number of which was 6264 N. J. The young men were thrown out of the wagon. Arnold sprained his ankle and receiving cuts, while Powers was severely scratched about the arms. The occupants of the car left their number, but would not give their names.

Arnold was driving across Front street, when the auto bore down upon them going east, striking the wagon broadside. The rim of one wheel was taken off and the rig otherwise damaged. The horse escaped uninjured.

Property Changes in East End.

Enoch Berry has sold the residential property at 247 Leland avenue to T. O. Rush, of New York, who has taken possession. Mr. Berry has also purchased four lots adjoining his other property on Leland avenue from the Leland Park Realty Company, and is now erecting two modern houses. This will complete the building up of the east side of Leland avenue from George street to Midway avenue. Rev. W. R. Craig, of Warurck, Orange county, N. Y., has purchased from Mr. Berry, 249 Leland avenue. Mr. Craig's family is now in possession.

WHO MUST PAY THIS WOMAN'S BOARD BILL?

The township of Cranford has a woman boarder, who is at present quartered in the most luxurious hotel in the place at the town's expense. She is Mrs. M. B. Block, a former Plainfield woman, who several weeks ago, had her husband arrested for non-support. At the trial Block was allowed to choose between going to jail, or furnishing bond for his wife's maintenance. He gave the bond, and for a time made the weekly remittances.

Then Mrs. Block was informed that instead of cash she must come to Plainfield to live with her husband's relatives. After a time the woman, it seems, became tired of law relatives and returned to Cranford and insisted upon her rights as a pauper resident. The township authorities not knowing what else to do with her, engaged board for the woman at the leading hostelry.

The township attorney, Berkely C. Austin, began suit against Block's bondsman. The case is now in the hands of Judge Wittemore for his decision. If the decision is in the town's favor, Mrs. Block's board bill will have to be paid by the bondsman; if not, less luxurious quarters will be found for the woman during her maintenance as a public charge in Cranford.

CENTRAL'S TICKET CASE SETTLED OUT OF COURT

The Central Railroad of New Jersey has settled its case against five local young men who were accused of trafficking in the business of commutation tickets, out of court. The defendants will pay the court costs, and the injunction will be granted, by which the young men agree not to use or traffic in commutation tickets again. Lawyers for the defendants were in court Monday and it is said that the total cost to each of the young men will be about one hundred dollars.

William Feiring, Alexander Lusardi, Tony Lisanton, Joseph Cadmus and Samuel Rothberg were apprehended in the traffic of loaning out commutation tickets after some detective work on the part of William Able for the Central Railroad. The warfare against traffickers in these tickets has been going on since the first of the year, and it recently came to court.

CRANFORD'S CARNIVAL A GREAT SUCCESS

The annual water carnival held under the auspices of the Cranford Canoe Club took place on the Rahway river in Cranford Saturday night. It was largely attended and together with the handsomely decorated canoes and illumination along the banks of the river, the event surpassed anything heretofore held. Nearly one hundred decorated canoes took part in the parade which started at 8 o'clock and headed by the commodore's boat, proceeded down the river as far as Sperry's Park, then back to the Eastman street bridge, covering the course twice.

At Speery's Park the Imperial Military Band, with Charles Suhr, of this city, leader, gave a concert and the Seventh Regiment Band, of New York, discoursed music at the clubhouse. Prizes were awarded for the best decorated canoe as well as prizes for novelty designs.

PLAINFIELD ELKS IN A KANSAS CLOUDBURST.

A collision between a freight and a passenger train on the Denver and Rio Grande railroad occurred near Helper, Utah, Saturday. No passengers were reported injured. In consequence thirteen trains, carrying Elks from New Haven, Conn.; Pittsburg and Alleghany, Pa.; Detroit and Marquette, Mich., and other cities were detained at Grand Junction, Col. It is not known whether the Plainfielders were affected by the wreck or not.

The Plainfield party, however, in Thursday last had an experience it will not soon forget. While passing through Queneme, Kansas, a section that was widely affected by the great floods, there was a cloudburst and more than nine inches of rain fell. That whole section was flooded and the train ran over tracks covered with ten inches of water. The Plainfielders witnessed the rescue of many people from the housetops and in letters received here by friends, they gave thrilling descriptions of their experiences.

SECOND UNION SERVICE

First Baptist, First Presbyterian, First M. E. and Trinity Unite.

HEAR SERMON ON PRAYER.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss the Preacher—Rev. Garrett Conover Presides—Service Well Attended.

A large congregation attended the union service in Trinity Reformed church Sunday and listened to a remarkable sermon on "Prayer" and the answers to the petitions of those who are true believers and those who are sceptical. The meeting was presided over by Rev. Garrett Conover, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, Asbury Park, who had exchanged pulpits with Rev. Mr. Brock. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson made the prayer.

Rev. Dr. John A. Chambliss, the speaker of the evening, took for his text part of the fifteenth verse of 1 John, and the fifth chapter. "I will pray with the spirit and will pray with understanding." Dr. Chambliss said in part: "There are two spirits, Man and God, the finite and the infinite. They are in constant communication. The finite is moved by the petitions of the finite. The omnipresent spirit must be conscious of every prayer; even before it is formed God knows it. If God does not hear human prayer he ought to.

"Man prays instinctively. Abraham Lincoln said that he was often driven to his knees in an overwhelming conviction that he had no other place to go. God would not excite expectations that he did not intend to fulfill. But there are obstacles in the way, practical differences which we must not pass by. Many requests of the best Christian people are denied. For instance, your boy asks you for a knife. He wants the sharpest one you can get for him. He importunes you many times a day. A knife is all he asks for. It would be a danger to him and you deny his wish, but you give him something else and make him happy in another way.

"Who have the right to pray? Surely not the purely selfish man nor the man who scoffs at the efficacy of the petition to God, but those who pray as Christ has taught them. He said 'pray to your Heavenly Father, saying, hallowed be Thy name, Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done, give us this day our daily bread.' He did not mean that we should literally repeat the Lord's prayer every time we prayed, but that we use it as an order of our petitions.

"How can God answer the petitions of two persons who are praying for and directly opposite things? During the war of the rebellion the people of the South were praying for the same thing that engaged the prayers of the people of the North. He answered them both and in the way calculated to be best for both of the people has proved.

"In our prayers we overlook the will. The will makes things but does not violate the laws of nature. If the will of man can control law without violating it what may we expect of God? Why should we not pray for good harvests and rain when we need it? If God is unchangeable where is the necessity for prayers? Man's petitions modifies God's attitude toward him. God is not unchangeable in His administration of his laws. 'What is man that thou art mindful of him, and the son of man that thou visitest him?'

"The greatness of God is something more than the vulgar bigness and He teaches us that man is the greatest thing He has made. Pray on then O child of God! In every doubt look for answers and wisdom. In every hour of darkness look to the Father of light. Take everything to Him who would draw you to Himself by his infinite love."

"God Himself alone can know how far our prayers have affected the conditions and determined the results which so intimately concern our lives, and His kingdom on earth. In India, where textures of most exquisite colors are woven by most primitive methods, children sit on the ground close to the looms, winding the rich-hued silken threads upon little spools, which they put in the weaver's hands. The weaver takes the spools, arranges them, and uses them as he needs them. He puts them into his shuttle and weaves the varied colors with the threads of the warp. But as fast as it is woven it is pulled smooth upon the beam and disappears from sight. Not until the whole is completed is it unrolled to reveal the design.

"We are the children, sitting at the Weaver's feet, winding our wishes in prayer. We place the prayers in The Great Weaver's hands. He weaves them; he uses them. Our prayers become the woof that is woven in the warp of his purposes. At last, when the fullness of time is come, His design will appear. The beautiful vesture that has been slowly weaving through the ages will be unfolded to the eyes of the universe, and somewhere, as part of the weft, like threads of purple and gold, will be found your prayers and mine, if we have truly prayed, and have not fainted through unbelief."

LITERARY

Within are short and interesting extracts from articles appearing in the July, 1909, issue of the Technical World Magazine. They are especially prepared for the use of Literary and Exchange Editors. We shall be glad to grant permission to reprint entire articles, provided proper credit is given. We shall thank you for calling this offer to the attention of your Sunday editor. Please send a marked copy of your paper containing anything from the Technical World Magazine to the Managing Editor, Chicago, Ill.

It is only fair to warn people who prefer fiction of the gloomy, risque, or generally horrible kind that they will not be interested in the July Lippincott's. Not that the contents are entirely frivolous—there is, as there should be, a leaven of seriousness; but the general tone is joyous, uplifting, encouraging the reader to cheer for the world "through rose-colored glasses," as did the nave little heroine of the complete novel—"Color of Rose," by Dorothea Deakin. Like all writers, this author's work varies in quality, but none of it has ranked very low, and some of it—including the present story—deserves a very high place indeed.

In "Our Fourth at Rubicon," Woman's Home Companion for July gives the actual Fourth of July experience of a town that has abolished toy cannons and fire-crackers. The substitute works, and works finely, and will work in any other town that really wants to do away with powder-pocked faces and mutilated fingers.

Every one who reads the Atlantic Monthly for July will be struck by the eompact and telling appeal which A British Marine Officer makes to America to build and support a national merchant marine, so that our flag may not utterly disappear from the seas of the world. Other lessons which America may learn from foreigners are exemplified in this number by a suggestive article on "The German Way of Making Better Cities," by Sylvester Baxter, and A. F. Sanborn's significant paper on "Grench Conservatism."

Among the well known writers of fiction who contribute of their latest work to The Red Book Magazine for July are, James Branch Cabell, Leo Crane, Marion Hill, Mabel Nelson Thurston, Edwin Asa Dix, Maude Radford Warren and Mary Mary Imlay Taylor.

All vacationists, and all the stay-at-homes, for that matter, will os immensely pleased with Recreation for July, which is now on sale by all newsdealers. The July number of this magnificently illustrated magazine is chockful of information and entertainment for out door people, and contains a half-dozen or more features any one of which alone is worth the price of the magazine. The article on dry fly fishing which is published in this issue is nothing hort of sensational—but in the best sense. The popular "how to" character of eRcreation is well lived up to in the article on building a log cabin. H. F. Porter's brief biographical sketch should and will be read by every person interested in athletics.

"Lift Men from the Gutter? Or Remove the Gutter? Which?" is the interrogative title of Ray Stannard Baker's article in the July American Magazine. Mr. Baker draws some interesting comparisons between the work of the famous McAuley Mission and that done by Christ Church Mission in New York city. "The Confession of a Rebellious Wife" is a remarkable human document which will interest every married man and woman in this country.

In the July number of "Success Magazine" Henry M. Hyde pays his respects to the new order of American ambassadors in an article, "Shirtsleeves at Foreign Courts." In "Cities that Pay Dividends" Franklin Clarkin shows how a well-managed city can be run without paying taxes. "Jane West and Sweet Marden" is a romance by Robert Haves Schauffler proves the social value of the rural free delivery. Dr. Woods Hutchinson in an article, "The Sweet Tooth and Why It Is So Keen," tells of sugar as a food for infants and adults. Anson Sweet Marden's editorial is an appreciation of "The Precedent Breaker."

Fiction and serious articles are pretty evenly balanced in the July Century, with the second of the anonymous "Thirteen at Table" stories to pique curiosity—anonymous in the sense that the reader may judge whether each story is written by Margaret Deland or Dr. Weir Mitchell or Owen Wister. This second tale—entitled "The Waiting Hand"—is based upo ngrnsom's contract taken from a singular will, actually drawn in Maine in 1874. How the prophecy of the will is fulfilled makes an unusual and startling story. The author has given the story's gay, fashionable, motor-tourist characters a dramatic setting against a generation old New England tragedy.

SHOW SENATOR'S STAMPS

EXHIBITS AMERICAN STAMPS.

Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, who among his other accomplishments is recognized as one of the foremost philatelists of the times, is well represented in the exhibit of the Trenton Philatelic Society, which opened in Trenton Monday. Senator Ackerman's exhibit includes some of the rarest of American stamps among which are the stamps which represents the "Stamp Act," as it was called, which was passed March 22, 1765, and which was to become effective on November 1, 1765 against the remonstrances of the friends of the Colonies both in and out of Parliament. Senator Ackerman is a member of the Royal Philatelic Society of London, England, of which the Prince of Wales is the presiden', and of which King Edward is a member.

The stamp referred to above is the two shillings and sixpence, and is embossed on heavy blue paper attached to parchment by means of small pieces of lead; on the reverse side of the words: "Honi Soit qui Maly Pense," the legend on Britain's coat of arms, and which means "Evil to Him who Evil Thinks."

Among the other rarities of Senator Ackerman's exhibit are the half-penny America 1765; the two-penny America 1765; two plate containing six copies of the two-pence, 1765, and the bottom part of a proof sheet dated May 24, 1765, noted for its historical rarity. Money cannot but this exhibit.

The collection of Norwegian and Swedish stamps in fact those of the entire Scandinavian peninsula, which the Senator has gotten together is one of the finest if not the very finest in the world, and has proved to be the winner of prizes wherever exhibited.

The exhibit now going on its the annual exhibit of the Trenton society and is one of the best ever held by that organization.

ELIZABETH NORTH END DEFEATED PLAINFIELD

The Plainfield A. C. was defeated by the North End A. C. at Elizabeth Saturday after oon by a score of 6 to 1. Slocum pitched a fine game, striking out fifteen men, while Brennan, of the home team, fanned thirteen batsmen. Each pitcher was touched for five hits. $5,000 Fire at Cranford.

Fire destroyed two residences at Cranford Saturday. The blaze started from a defective flue in the home of Benjamin Johnson on Cranford avenue, and an adjoining double house caught, both being destroyed. The fire department was called out, but it is said the poor water pressure made them helpless to cope with the fire. Bucket brigades were formed and adjoining property was saved. The loss will amount to $5,000, partially covered by insurance.

FIRST SUNDAY SERVICE AT FRESH AIR HOME

The first of the summer Sunday afternoon services at the open air auditorium of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home was held Sunday, when Rev. Dr. Charles W. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, delivered the address to the three hundred New York children and mothers now at the camp. The service was largely attended, about 500 people constituting the congregation. As is the custom at the services at the camp, music was a feature, and George Sharp was in charge of the singing, which included several solos and gospel hymns by the children.

Arthur Humble, of the First M. E. church led the meeting, and was assisted by Mr. Dilcraft. Dr. Anderson's talk was on the parable of the Good Sherherd, and he applied the lesson of the ninety and nine to the work Miss Sara Curry is doing among the New York poor. At the conclusion of the service, many of those attended repaired to renew the acquaintances of previous years, and to inspect the Home, where several improvements have been made since last year.

REV. GARRETT CONOVER IN TRINITY'S PULPIT

Rev. Garrett Conover, pastor of the Grand Avenue Reformed church of Asbury Park, exchanged pulpits with Rev. John F. Brock, Monday, and in the morning preached a strong sermon on faith to a large congregation.

Mr. Conover took for his text part of the twenty-second chapter of Genesis, in which the sublime faith of Abraham in not questioning God's motives when told to sacrifice Isaac, his son, and make a sacrifice of him is apparent, and said: "Abraham's greatest love was centered in this son and it would, therefore be the greatest thing he could have offered unto the God he would obey implicitly. So it is with us who are just as human in our loves as was the ancient patriarch.

"But we must remember that the greater the sacrifice, the greater will be God's blessing. Could we but realize the meaning of such a faith as was Abraham's what a magnificent and boundless unity we would become in our relations with our Father. There would be no heights we could not ascend, and the depths of sorrow and trouble in the world would reveal blessings which can only be seen by the eyes of a perfect faith.

FIRST AIRSHIP MADE HERE

Aero-Plane Constructed by Plainfielder Who Built First Automobile in This City.

ENTERED IN HUDSON CARNIVAL

Allen Fulmer, P. H. S. Youth, May Make Initial Trip in the Aero-Plane—To Study Aerial Construction Abroad.

The first airship ever built in Plainfield was shipped Saturday to Otto Barkman, of Newark, to be entered in the Hudson-Fulton carnival this year. The aero-plane was built by Charles Fulmer, of Sycamore street, the likeable lad has the distinction of having built years ago the first automobile in Plainfield. The aero-plane is a unique machine embedying the latest ideas in aerial construction and the first trip in it will probably be made by Allen Fulmer, the 19-year-old son of Charles Fulmer, of this city, along with the inventor.

The airship is of the aero-plane variety and is a combination of the Wright, Graham Bell, and Tetraedral constructions. It was designed by Mr. Barkman, who has made a study of arerial apparatus and designing abroad, and he holds patents on his machine. All of the construction work, all mechanical and motor devices and drives was done by Mr. Fulmer in this city.

The aero-plane is 47 feet wide, from the tip of the planes; 27 feet long, and 17 feet high and is driven by an eight cylinder motor of 60 horse power. As far as aero-planes go, it may be said that the graceful, but inventor is enthusiastic about his machine and hopes to carry off the gold prize in the Hudson-Fulton celebration this year.

Previous to entering the machine in the celebration Mr. Barkman will try-out his machine near Newark. Allen Fulmer, of South avenue, has been invited to make the initial trip in the machine with Mr. Barkman, who was much impressed with the latter's knowledge of machinery and of aerial construction. Mr. Fulmer is 19 years old and built his own motorcycle while a student of the city high school, where he completed his course this year. Later he will study aerial motor construction, and aero-plane construction abroad. He will probably do this in the fall.

The fact that Mr. Fulmer is the first builder of an aero-plane in this city, recalls the fact that when the first designs for horseless carriages came out Mr. Fulmer built the first automobile in this city for Hugo Stummel, who then lived on Fifth street, this city. The automobile was three wheeled like a tricycle, with a smaller wheel in front. The inventor built an engine of his own to run the machine which failed to work, and as a result, the machine failed to live up to the expectations of the inventor when he displared it to a prospective buyer. Stummel sunk all of his fortune in the enterprise, and finally the city suddenly leaving in his wake a trail of dissatisfied creditors. Later he was heard of acting as a mechanic in a small garage along the Jersey coast. His design of automobile construction was quickly given up when automobile manufacture settled down to practibility.

THEY DON'T KNOW HOW LARUE MET HIS DEATH

The body of George W. LaRue, of East Las Vegas, New Mexico, who died Thursday, has been shipped eastward, according to a despatch received by the dead man's brother, James F. LaRue, of Westerveldt avenue, and will arrive in this city on Thursday. It is believed by some that Mr. LaRue, who was an engineer on the Santa Fe railroad, was killed in a wreck of an Elks' special train near Salt Lake City. Details of the fatality are lacking. The funeral arrangements have not been made, but the interment will be in the family plot at South River.

Mr. LaRue is the brother of Ira L. LaRue, of East Second street. Mrs. James LaRue received a postal card from the man on Tuesday, and he wrote that he had been assigned to a special train carrying a delegation of Elks to the convention at Los Angeles. A newspaper dispatch from Salt Lake City, tells of a collision between an Elks' special and freight train on the Denver and Rio Grande railroad, near Helper, Utah, and it is possible that this was the fatal wreck.

Mr. LaRue, who was about fifty years old and unmarried, was born in New Brunswick, and had been a resident of this city up to a few years ago. Aside from the three brothers living in this city, the dead man is survived by a brother living in Ohio, who is now on his way East, and a sister. His mother lies with the sister in Brooklyn.

BOUND BROOK CRUSHED

Fans See Plainfield Slaughter Crack Somerset Nine.

UMPIRE'S DECISIONS POOR.

Nolan, Emery and Washburn Star With the Stick—The Box Score.

The hopes entertained by a majority of the fans, 1,000 of whom attended the ball game at Bound Brook Saturday, is that some other umpire than Mr. Graham will be asked to officiate in future games. This sentiment was expressed by Bound Brook fans as well as Plainfielders.

Umpire Graham robbed Plainfield of at least three runs by rank decisions at third base and home, besides being wobbly on balls and strikes.

Plainfield won hands down notwithstanding the handicap. The features of the game were the sharp fielding and heavy batting of Plainfield, and a triple play in the ninth by Bound Brook.

The run getting started in the second session. Nolan, the first man up smashed a two-bagger to left and was followed by Seery with a neat single through short. Ortleib advanced the runners a base and got on himself with what was intended for a sacrifice. With three on bases and none out Schott lined out a single scoring Nolan. Robertson in trying to catch Seery at third, threw over Power's head and Ortleib followed Seery over the rubber. This ended Plainfield's scoring until the eighth, when Martin started a batting fest that ended after seven hits had been registered, and six runs scored.

In this inning the whole nine faced the Bound Brook slab artist, and Martin got up twice. The bingles rattled all over the lot and with a base on balls and an error, contributed by pitcher Martin, the tallies came thick and fast.

The batting of Nolan, who made four hits in five times up, and Emery and Washburn, with three a piece, were features; while the fielding of the entire nine was, with exception of Ortleib's wild heave to catch Powers at second in the fourth inning, was perfect.

Bound Brook scored one in the fourth, another in the sixth and two in the eighth; the latter being gifts, as Ortleib just lobbed them over. In the sixth with the bases full Ortleib hit a short fly to Flaherty at second, who caught Nolan off first, and by a quick throw Robertson caught Washburn trying to get back to second, thus completing the first triple play of the season, and disposing of the Plainfield's hope for a larger score.

During the early part of the game a fire was started on the roof of Bound Brook's Hook and Ladder house, by a spark from a passing locomotive, and the resulting excitement nearly caused a panic in the grand stands. The fire company extinguished the blaze after half an hour's work. The house will have to be re-roofed.

WESTFIELD TROUNCED BY THE ST. MARYS

St. Mary's nine defeated the fast Westfield team on St. Mary's Oval, Saturday afternoon, by a score of 5 to 2. "Hub" Conover and Dixon were the battery for St. Mary's aggregation and Douglas, Butler and Demicourt worked for Westfield. Conover held Westfield safe at all times, striking out twelve batsmen and allowing but four hits. Douglas had to be relieved in the third inning by Butler, who also pitched good ball. Kiely, of the home team, gave a fine exhibition of sharp fielding by throwing a man out at first after he had made what looked good for a couple of bags. The score by innings:

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN BOYS WON THE CUP

The mile relay race between the First Presbyterian and the First Baptist Sunday schools was run off Saturday afternoon, and was won by the former in 4 minutes, 2 and 2-5 seconds. The winning team was awarded the cup offered by Harry W. Marshall as well as the gold medals offered by the Charter Day committee.

Mr. Marshall said this morning that the matter had not yet been satisfactorily settled as to which team was entitled to the cup, but George L. Listman, the referee of the contests and secretary of the Sunday School Athletic League, said that the race of Saturday was final and that as no protest had been entered within the time limit prescribed by the rules—24 hours—the race would have to stand as run. Acker, Smith, Dunning and Hoagland formed the First Presbyterian team.

NEWARK ALERTS EASY FOR PLAINFIELD Y.M.C.A.

The Newark Alerts, members of the Newark City Baseball League, and said to be one of the fastest semi-professional teams in Newark, received the worst defeat in their career on Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon, when the Y. M. C. A. boys took them into camp by a score of 25 to 4. If the Alerts constitute the best in the Newark League, there is little hope for the other nines.

The locals gathered a total of nineteen hits off of the opposing pitchers, Bambrick and Consat, and they were able to score at will, in fact they got tired running the bases. In every inning but the second, seventh and eighth they tallied more than one run, and in the third six came over the plate. Manager Listman tried out several pitchers, giving "Weary" MacLaughlin, Jack Peacock and Murphy a chance in the box. All were equally effective, the visitors being able to make only eight bingles during the contest. They were also credited with six errors. The score:

SOUTH PLAINFIELD NINE BEATS THE PEERLESS

There was some classy twirling Sunday afternoon at South Plainfield, when Dufford and Slocum, the right and left bower of the Plainfield A. C. team, opposed each other. The South Plainfield boys defeated the Peerless Baseball Club, of this city, by a score of 6 to 5. Slocum, who pitches for South Plainfield on Sunday, won his second game yesterday. Dufford, who opposed him, showed great form. If he had been given good support yesterday, he would doubtless have won his game. However, Slocum pitched a hard game Saturday. The South Plainfield team will play North Plainfield next Sunday. Slocum and Moran will oppose the Perry brothers. In yesterday's game, Tommy Mullin pitched the first three innings for the home team and Slocum finished the contest.

ALL PLEAD "NOT GUILTY"

TRIAL SET FOR SEPTEMBER 20.

"Beer Ark" Drivers, to Be Sentenced July 21, Change Plea to Non Vult.

As the result of Chief Kiely's crusade against the local delivery of liquor by New York department stores, the four drivers arrested in this city in May, were arraigned before Judge E. S. Atwater at the session of the Union county court at Elizabeth Tuesday morning, entered pleas of "not guilty" and were held under $300 bail for trial September 20. Bail was furnished in each case except that of Thomas Sheehan, a driver for the Merchants' Express Company, who was remanded to jail.

The drivers were Louis Wexler, employed by R. H. Macy & Co., Thomas Sheehan, employed by the Merchant's Express Co., Edw. Coleman, employed by the Siegel-Cooper Company, and Alvah Dunham, employed by Acker, Merrall and Condit. Chief Kiely was at court with a dress suit case and a satchel full of bottles of whiskey, exhibits in the various cases, when Detective Charles Rafferty, who was employed by the city to assist the police in running down the alleged violators. Each of the prisoners entered a plea of not guilty. Coleman was represented by McDermott & Enright, of Jersey City, attorneys for the firm which employs him, and Acker, Merrall and Condit were represented by Frank P. Laughran, of New York city, who looked after the interests of Alvah Dunham, a resident of North Plainfield. Sheehan had no counsel.

Some weeks ago, Judge Joseph Cross in Trenton refused to grant a preliminary injunction restraining the State from further prosecution of the charge of illegal selling against Edward Coleman, a driver for Siegel, Cooper & Company. The decision was given on June 22, and was a test decision, inasmuch as it applies to each of the other three cases. The agitation by the local police head was brought about in fairness to the Plainfield liquor dealers, who pay $1,000 a year as a license, and who claimed that a big liquor trade was being carried on by the metropolitan department stores.

Thomas Lyons, a driver for the New Jersey Bottling Company, and August Hendricks, a driver for Henry Haurand, were arraigned on charges of selling liquor in Union county without a license. Each retracted a plea of not guilty, and pleaded non vult, on advice of counsel. The indictment against Henry Haurand was nolle prossed. The reason for this was because Hendricks, his employee, refused to implicate him in the charges. These drivers will be sentenced July 21.

AUTO AND CYCLE COLLIDE, NO ONE IS INJURED

In trying to steer out of the way of William Bird, of this city, who was driving a Mitchell motor car, and Charles Davis, who was on a bicycle, William Westcott, of Newark, his wife and two children sustained slight injuries and the car that he was driving was put out of commission for the day, Saturday afternoon at the corner of Richmond street and South avenue.

Westcott was driving a new Buick car and was using it for the first time. He reached the top of the hill at South avenue and let the car come down the hill under its momentum, though he held it under perfect control. Just as he neared the bottom of the hill, Bird driving along Richmond street in a Mitchell car, suddenly crossed the street. Charles Davis was riding on a bicycle along South avenue, and in order to get out of the way of him, Westcott had to steer his machine into the curb. By doing this, he avoided a collision with Bird who was driving the Mitchell car, but crowded Davis up against the sidewalk so that he sustained slight injuries. Westcott's machine was damaged considerably and the occupants were thrown out, but save for the shock, none were hurt. Westcott sustained slight injuries.

Watchung Woman an Inventor.

A new and improved method for forming tips on shoe laces has been invented by Miss Mary A. Bartels, of Watchung, and will evidently prove a boom to the manufacturers. The shoe lace is made in a very simple and economical manner and with a view to rendering the tip permanent without the use of cutting metallic stiffening and will also allow giving the tip the same color as that of the body of the shoe lace.

Y.M.C.A. SUMMER CAMP IS NOW IN FULL SWING

With land and aquatic contests, long walks and other out-of-door associations, the first section of 100 boys at Lake Wawayanda, the summer camp of the Young Men's Christian Association of New Jersey, recently opened, have been finding a plenty of advantageous recreations. Improvements made at the camp since last year have come in for general commendation. Greater interests in photography has resulted from the introduction of a darkroom and the bathhouse facilities have been increased by separating it from the camp shop. Harold Birchenough, of Paterson, has charge of the latter and is also editor of the "Wawayanda Whirlwind," which is being published this year.

Commodore Longfellow, of New York, general superintendent of the United States Volunteer Life-saving Corps, has been a visitor at the camp. He put the three boat crews through a trial and demonstrated various methods of life-saving, the handling of boats and tricks in the water. Montclair captured the largest number of points in the aquatic contest for the first section. Murray Kitchen and Miles Suarez each having received fifteen points. Silver watch fobs will be awarded them.

Quoit and tennis tournaments are in full swing. Several parties of campers have taken the sixteen-mile "hike" to Warwick and a party left yesterday with Charles R. Scott, director of the camp, for the Trenton tournament. They will also visit the Tri-County camp, conducted on the Delaware river near Frenchtown, and will stop at Easton and Lafayette, returning to Lake Wawayanda tomorrow.

The first section will close Thursday and the boys for the second two weeks will arrive the same day. They will be in charge of Arthur Wilson, of Orange. Those who will comprise the section from here are: S. Delmore Wethberger, C. William Bingeman, leaders; Paul R. Manning, Gerald Linke, Joseph T. Sattels, F. S. Coombs.

BAPTISTS TO PAY ALL INDEBTEDNESS

A movement is about to be inaugurated among the leaders of the Baptist denomination in New Jersey to free all the Baptist churches of their mortgages and floating indebtedness during the coming year. Dr. DeWolf, secretary of the State convention, is writing letters of inquiry to the churches all over the State asking the amount of their indebtedness with a view to ascertaining what amount of money need to be raised.

The churches of the northern convention completed in May a similar effort to raise $1,500,000 to free three great missionary societies—the Missionary Union, the Home Mission and the Publication Society, of their debts, and this was done on the apportionment plan. All churches of the denomination were apportioned an amount to raise to the end proposed. The effort was successful. Now the same plan is proposed in New Jersey to free all the churches of their mortgages and floating obligations.

The State convention meets in the First Baptist church at Asbury Park from Oct. 26 to 28, and at that time the above movement will doubtless be started.

MASONIC HONORS AT A BRAKEMAN'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Wade Davidson, the young Lafayette College instructor, who was killed at the Dunellen Saturday by the train on which he was brakeman, was held Tuesday afternoon at his home in Hampton.

Rev. Ward C. Peabody, pastor of the Musconetcong Valley Presbyterian church, preached the sermon, assisted by Rev. George Vanderbeek, pastor of the Methodist church. Lebanon Lodge, No. 6, F and A. M., of Glen Gardner, of which Mr. Davidson was a member, had charge of the services, and he was buried with Masonic honors in the Musconetcong Valley cemetery. He leaves, besides his mother, one brother, Harry Davidson, of Plainfield, and two sisters, Mrs. Walter Long, of Califon, and Miss Mande Davidson, of this place.

New Church to Have a Bell.

Rev. John Y. Brock, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, received a letter today from Rev. Dr. Vance, pastor of the North Reformed church, New York, informing him that if the new Netherwood Reformed church was in need of a bell, Cornelius H. Vanderhoef, an elder in his church, who is greatly interested in the new house of worship, was willing to assist the work by giving a bell. Mr. Brock immediately answered the letter, expressing his pleasure over such a gift and said that it would be most acceptable.

L. B. VAN NESS WILL NOT PRESS COMPLAINT

L. B. H. Labaw, of Neshanic, the automobile owner who ran over eleven-year-old Ormond Van Ness, of Mariners place, on West Front street Tuesday morning and the case was this morning and the case was brought up for a hearing before City Judge William G. Runyon, E. Van Ness, the injured boy's father, who was with him at the time of the accident, would not press the complaint, and as Mr. Labaw agreed to settle the bills for medical treatment of the boy, the case will be settled out of court.

Young Van Ness, who was with his parents, was struck by the automobile as he got off the trolley car at his home corner after witnessing the fireworks exhibition on West End avenue. He was removed to the emergency hospital at police headquarters in Mr. Labaw's automobile, where his injuries were treated by City Physician C. B. Lufburrow. He was later removed to his home, where a physician has been in regular attendance.

KENILWORTH'S CASE IS DECIDED AGAINST STATE.

Justices Reed, Bergen and Parker, in the Supreme Court at Trenton Monday, heard the argument in the action of the borough of Kenilworth, Union county, against State Comptroller West and the twenty-one county tax boards for a writ of certiorari to review the apportionment of the State school tax among the counties for this year, together with the abstract of ratables upon which the apportionment was made.

The real purpose of the suit is to prevent the assessment on second-class railroad property being included in the ratables upon which the assessment of the school tax is based. Franklin W. Fort, son of Governor Fort, argued the case for Kenilworth. Samuel Swackhamer appeared for Union county. Several other counties were also represented. Decision was reserved.

Mr. Fort showed that nineteen counties in the State included the second-class railroad property in their abstract of ratables, one county excluded it and one county included a part and excluded the remainder.

In the counties like Union and Hudson, which have large valuations in second-class railroad property, to include those assessments in the ratables affects, to a considerable degree, the amount of school tax to be raised, he said.

REV. CHARLES S. KEMBLE SCORED BY BAPTISTS

Mr. Kemble preached on the theme "Sonship," and during the course of his remarks said that the heathen and people living in the slums of our cities were one kind of sons of God, even if they did not know it. That there were different sorts of sons of God and that without faith and repentance there could be admission to the brotherhood of God seemed decidedly repulsive to a number of the Baptist divines.

Rev. Dr. O. G. Spencer, a prominent Baptist preacher of Brooklyn, said that such teaching was the worst kind of foolishness and to say that a man could be some sort of a son of God and yet not a son of God was all tommyrot. From the outset, he said, repentance was a condition precedent to citizenship in the kingdom and that any man would be safe, as far as getting into heaven was concerned, if he went around with his chest out relying on any such teaching as was expounded Sunday night in the auditorium.

There is no such thing as the universal brotherhood of man as far as the teachings of God are concerned, that is, we may all be brothers in the material sense, but not in the spiritual," said the Brooklyn pastor, in conclusion, and all this talk to the contrary is ridiculous."

Automatic Electric Block Signals in Railroad Operation.

The result of a series of tests of operation and efficiency of automatic signals by the operating officials of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, just completed, showing complete observance on the part of engine men so tested in a series of 150 surprise tests, is a gratifying demonstration of the carefulness with which trains are operated on that road. The Lehigh Valley is equipped throughout with automatic electric block signals, and these surprise tests are conducted at frequent intervals to maintain the efficiency of the service, thus minimizing the possibility of accidents.

The dance this year was held in the high school auditorium for the first time, and was the most successful ever held, financially and otherwise. This was due largely to the management of C. Bertram Leggett and Arthur Titsworth.

"Dick" Waring Loses His Horse.

"Ascetic Silver," a horse recently purchased by Richard Waring, of Park avenue, from Harry Bull, of New York, met with an accident at Sheepshead Bay, Saturday and had to be shot. The horse was entered in one of the big races of the day and on the first lap fell, breaking its leg. Mr. Waring was one of the spectators and he deeply regretted the loss. He had owned the animal about a week.

BOOKKEEPING ON THE FARM.

It may be necessary to give up all cherished hopes for our life work as planned and partly entered upon, and betake ourselves to farming to get the outdoor life and activity which is demanded if we expect to remain in good health. We are like boys at school now, and must endeavor to learn how to do everything required in the best possible way. If future conditions demand less detail in any of our methods we shall cast out what is useless; on the other hand, greater elaboration and more care may be found requisite to attain the ends desired in a satisfactory way.

We are determined to learn all we can by experience of our own and from the experience of others. For, whatever we do in the years to come in the line of outdoor work, be it truck gardening, light farming, raising poultry, or breeding live stock, it is our intention to be thoroughly business-like and aggressive to the extent that changed conditions of health demand. Whatever we do shall be well done and according to approved standards—and there is no better guide to profitable activity for the aggressive, ambitious business man than an efficient method of accounting, as simple as circumstances permit.

Many farmers now struggling to pay the interest on their heavily mortgaged properties might be happy and prosperous and owe no man if they could be brought to the point of willingness to learn the significance of the terms "debit" and "credit" and of running themselves up and applying the knowledge to the business in hand.

GOING BACK INTO THE PAST.

Some Men Will Smile, and Some Frown, But Their Recollections Are Much the Same.

They do say that one of the things a fellow remembers is the first time he ever went courting a girl. And it is one of the last things he wants to forget, even if she turned him down later on.

It is not the trial now that it was back in the good old days. In the country districts folks lived in houses of one or two rooms, or three at most, so that when a fellow went sparking he had to face the whole family, and you may depend upon it that the whole family faced him. Sometimes they didn't try to make life pleasant for him. This was specially true of the girl's younger brothers and sisters.

Do you remember how big your feet felt, and the trouble you had to find places for your hands, and how difficult it was to keep up a conversation? But if you had grit enough you would stay or die right there.

But you never forgot it, and you never will. Nor will you ever quite forget the effort necessary to get your courage up to the point of asking her if you might call on her, nor how gladsome you were if she said you might, and how mean you felt if she refused your request. As a frost this beat the June affair of '59.

One Comfort.

Dick was a very clean little boy, and dirt disgusted him. One day he found a poor little starved kitten crouching in a ditch at the roadside and he brought the wet, muddy little waif home with him.

He took it to the hydrant and carefully rinsed off all the mud, but the shock was too great for the sick kitty and the breath of life departed.

Dick brought her to his mother, who exclaimed at the sight of the wet, drooping kitten, "Why, Dick, what have you done?"

"She was all mud and I washed her," Dick replied. "Oh, Dick," his mother said, sorrowfully, "I'm afraid she's dead." Dick looked shocked and grieved for a moment, then his face lighted up with a gleam of comfort as he exclaimed:

"Well, she died clean, anyway."—The Delineator.

Heights to Be Attained.

A crochety old farmer of Massachusetts had trouble with his neighbor, and as a result sought his counsel—ex-Congressman Samuel L. Powers, says Lippincott's.

"I want yeow tor write him a letter an' tell him that he's foolishness has got tor stop," he declared firmly. "I know what I want ter say, but I ain't got the larnin' tor put it just right."

"What do you want to say?" Mr. Powers asked.

"Why, begin by tellin' him that he's the durndest, lyin'est, thievin'est, low-downest skunk on airth—and then work up."

The Printer's Children.

The case of the musical man who named his four daughters after the eight notes of the tonic sol-fa scale is matched by that of the provincial printer who named his children from the type fonts he used—Ruby, Pearl, Diamond. The first two are no uncommon names for girls, only Ruby happened to be a boy. He followed in his father's footsteps and afterward became a printer's manager in London.

NEW EDIFICE DEDICATED

Newark Classis in Charge of Ceremony at Reformed Church in East End.

REV. DR. VANCE PREACHES.

J. B. Voorhees and J. S. Mundy Make Addresses—Rev. Mr. Saure Presides.

The Netherwood Reformed church was dedicated Thursday by the members of the Newark Classis before a gathering which completely filled the edifice. The formal meeting of the classis was held on the lawn at the side of the new church at which the call was read from the New York Avenue Reformed church of Newark was made to Rev. Mr. Davis. The call was ratified and arrangements made for the installation. Rev. Ernest Saure, of the Reformed church at Linden, presided, and Rev. J. I. Vance, of the North church, of Newark, preached the dedicatory sermon. The choir of Trinity Reformed church of Plainfield rendered some special music under the direction of Organist A. L. Titsworth. Rev. Alfred von Schlieder, of Montclair, read the Scriptures and the dedicatory prayer, with responses by the congregation, was read by Rev. John T. Broek, of Trinity Reformed.

The exercises in the new building opened with the singing by the choir of "Be Joyful in the Lord," after which came the invocation by Rev. E. B. Saure, of Linden. The sermon by Rev. J. I. Vance followed. Dr. Vance took for his text the fifth verse of the sixty-second Psalm and said in part: "We have now dedicated this church to Almighty God and although the present structure is apparently small it will become a potent factor in the worship of Him who made its erection possible and will eventually become a more pretentious and enduring structure. We believe that the pure Gospel will be preached here and the hope of the life to come will bring th people into touch with God.

"We come here to plant a church, not to extend our denomination, as we believe that a church in a community is a step onward and a mighty factor in its moral up-building. There is no more important event than the establishing of a church in a community. There is no particularly striking feature about the reformed church as a sect but it offers to the people a broad Christianity, and in this place there are those who will find affiliation with the church just what their spiritual needs require, and we shall look for the hearty co-operation of the people.

"The inception of the church was God's and we come with our hopes centered in Him and His blessing, for without His help out efforts will be vain. We have the wealth, prestige and culture and be numerically strong, but they will all be as nothing unless we have the power of the Holy Ghost. Fidelity, courage and faithfulness, all are necessary in this work."

J. B. Voorhees, secretary of the Board of Domestic Missions, made a short address in which he said that the new church was potent with possibilities and congratulated the people of the community on having the church thrown open to them.

Mrs. John S. Allen, secretary of the Board of Domestic Missions, also spoke, giving the reasons why the woman's board is interested in the new church and said there could be no devlopment in any enterprise unless God's love was in it.

Rev. Royal A. Stout, the pastor of the new church, told in a humorous way what he had expected to have had in the way of church furnishings for the dedication and permanent use, but which unfortunately had been impossible to have ready. However, he was reasonably sure that what was lacking last night would be found wanting in another J. S. Mundy, an elder of Clinton Avenue church, Newark, spoke briefly on "Power," which he illustrated with a humerous incident in his own life.

After a short invitation for the present gathering to contribute something toward the furnishings of the new church, Dr. Vance said that all the churches of Newark had contributed to the building fund of the edifice of the Netherwood church, some of them being churches which were not self-supporting. The collection netted a goodly sum. The choir sang "A Greater Hilleluya" and Rev. S. N. Hutchinson, of the First church, Newark, pronounced the benediction. Following the service, the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church served refreshments of ice cream and cake.

The new church starts with a Sunday school of twenty-five, and a congregation with twice as many.

Among other members of the Classis present on this occasion were the Rev. Dennis Wortman, D. D., the H. D., of East Orange; Rev. Henry M. Mellin, of Christ Reformed church, Newark; Rev. Charles F. Cosdit, of Trinity Reformed church, Newark; Rev. Charles .E Waldron, of Brookdale; Rev. Albertus T. Broek, of Clinton Avenue Reformed church, Newark, who brought a delegation of the consistory with him.

PRIMROSE MINSTRELS COMING HERE JULY 21

George Primrose and his big minstrel company, coming to the New Plainfield Theatre, Wednesday night, July 21, will present minstrelsy in its up-to-date form by the merriest organization ever toured in this country. Mr. Primrose has shown good judgment in surrounding himself with a host of well known comedians and vocalists. The stage settings for the first part are of great magnificence, the costuming throughout is costly and elegant.

In addition to the large number of vocalists and comedians, a complete operatic orchestra of soloists under the direction of Prof. Charles Prokop are carried. Many novelties will be seen this year in the olio, some of the many are: Harvey, Henderson and Lewis, comedy musical act; Happy Jack Gardener, in a new monologue; the Church City quartette; Mosher, Hayes and Mosher, sensational comedy bicycle act, direct from a four year's tour through Europe; the "Guess Who Girls," laughable novelty skit; the Ward brothers, delineators of plantation darkeys and George Primrose, in his new act "Dancers Past and Present," the idea of this act and the charmiag way he does it, is said to be one best bet of the great minstrels long carried. All the famous minstrel men since the days of Billy Emerson to those of the present time are portrayed by either song, dance or story. Fifty people are said to be incorporated in the presentation of this big minstrel carnival.

EIGHT HOUR DAY FOR CONVICTS

Two Hours Lopped Off at Caldwell to Save Health of the Men.

Because the health of the convicts in the Caldwell penitentiary who are engaged in making handkerchiefs has been affected by the severe routine of a ten-hour workday, the hours of labor have been reduced to eight. When the convicts were required to work ten hours a day they had very little time for recreation, and it affected their health.

The convicts were under contract to Jerome M. Schwerin for a term of years. Schwerin was required to pay Essex County $8,000 a year for his right to utilize the convict labor. A new contract has now been made, whereby he is required to pay only $6,400, with a proportionate decrease in the amount of labor to be received.

NEW YORK TO BE MOST BRILLIANT WORLD SPOT.

The Hudson-Fulton Celebration Commission in New York yesterday adopted plans for making New York City the most brilliant spot in the world from September 29 to October 9 next. The display is part of the celebration arrangements and it is proposed to use one million more lamps than are ordinarily used.

The locations where the extra lights will be placed include the four East River bridges, New York City Hall and the various borough halls, Riverside Drive viaduct, the Washington Bridge, the various soldiers' and sailors' monuments of Manhattan and Brooklyn, Grant's Tomb and the line of parade through Manhattan, which takes in Fifth avenue and Eighth avenue to One Hundred and Tenth street.

Award School Contract.

The Board of Education of Scotch Plains met Friday night and awarded the contract for the building of a two-room addition to the public school to John Bornman, of that place. The entire cost for the addition and the furnishing of the two rooms will be about $9,000. The work will be started on Tuesday and efforts will be made to have the same completed when the fall term of school opens.

Clothes Destroyed by Fire.

The careless starting of a bon-fire in the rear of the flats on Watchung avenue, in the rear of the old trolley stand, Friday, resulted in the destruction of one of the tenant's clothes which were hung on the line to dry. The fire was started by some colored people to burn up some rubbish and the flames ascended high enough to ignite one end of the line of clothes. Before anything could be done they were all destroyed. The fire department was not notified as the adjacent property was not in danger.

Simple Simple Summer Draperies

The careful housewife sees that her summer draperies, if she uses any at all, are free from ruffles. Ruffles are the greatest dust catchers imaginable, and curtains with ruffles soon become dirty and unsightly.

In selecting the washbowl and pitcher for the cottage summer home, it is well to get those that are light weight, otherwise, when filled with water, they are often most uncomfortably heavy to handle.

EXPECT BIG CONVENTION

300 SOMERSET CO. DELEGATES

Presence of Rev. Dr. F. E. Clark, Founder of Order, Will Act as a Magnate.

At a recent meeting of the Essex County Christian Endeavor Union it was voted that the Endeavorers of that county arrange for a special train to attend the Friday session of the State Christian Endeavor convention to be held here on October 6-8. President Charles Windham, of the Somerset County Union, is planning to have three hundred delegates from that county present at the final session to hear the address of Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark, the founder and leader of the movement. Mrs. Clark is expected to address the Junior Endeavorers on Friday afternoon.

Two thousand attractive circulars printed in the local Union colors announcing the coming of Dr. Clark, have been issued, and are being sent to all the societies in the State. The secretary of the convention committee has also received communications and inquries from various sections of the State.

So general is the interest that President Sproull has advised the local committee to arrange for overflow meetings. The singing, which will be a feature of the convention, will be in charge of Frank Stewart, chairman of the music committee, and will be conducted by Charles L. Lewis, of this city.

HUCKLEBERRY FARMING.

It may seem incredible to those who have never lived in or traveled much through timber districts where the huckleberry is indigenous," said a native of such a district, according to the New York Sun, "but it is a fact that there is a tribe of shiftless persons in all such regions who systematically and without regard to law, property or life set fire to woods or to cut over land adjacent to woods simply to increase the area of huckleberry bushes.

"There is only one way in which huckleberries can be cultivated, and the huckleberry farmer does not need to own an inch of land. If he has the title to one simple lucifer match he can pet thousands of acres under cultivation in a very short time.

"He has only to light the match and touch it to the dry leaves and branches on the ground, either in early spring or late fall, and his cultivation is soon under way. No matter what grew on the ground before fire swept it bare, huckleberry bushes will never fail to spring up luxuriantly from the ashes and scorched soil. They will be in abundant bearing the next season. The result in loss of life or property does not concern the persons who reap the harvest.

"Many of the fires that devastate our forests every year may be traced to reckless and deliberate patches. I remember one instance particularly where seeing fire to the brush on a huckleberry barren in Northern Pennsylvania resulted in a forest fire that swept over a 10,000 acre timber tract, doing incalculable damage to the standing timber and reducing to ashes 50,000,000 feet of logs and lumber, and 30,000 cords of tanbark, representing a money value of nearly $750,000. Several persons were burned to death and thirty so badly burned that seven of them died from their injuries. The huckleberry crop gathered from this cultivation of that barren perhaps realized $200 to the cultivators."

NEW FRENCH RIDING HAT.

It is for women, of course, and it is the Parisienne's ieda of the proper headgear for riding purposes.

Lustrous black straw of a fine weave is the material, and it is very light in weight, for which madame will surely be thankful.

In shape it is on the lines of the derby, having the round, high crown seen in a man's hat. It is broader, however, and more feminine looking. The brim is different from the usual derby hat, though, because it is a bit wider and is more flat, with just a slight curl on the sides.

A silk ribbon around the crown is the only trimming.

Both the shape and the light weight make it exceedingly comfortable. It has, too, just enough dash and style to delight the woman who rides.

Decoy Fodder.

"Well," said Farmer Corntossel, "I've got to look after my tomatoes and string beans and things."

"You don't expect to feed all your summer borders out of that little garden, do you?" inquired the neighbor.

"Nope, I've put in my order for canned goods, as usual. That vegetable garden is just a decoy."—Washington Star.

WANT DRINKING TROUGHS

But the S. P. C. A.'s Plan is Opposed by Some Veterinarians.

CLAIM THEY TRANSMIT DISEASE

The Board of Health Considering Proposition—Another Idea Is Advanced.

A plan of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals to place drinking troughs for horses in various parts of the city, has been submitted to the Board of Health and is under the consideration of the food and drink committee of that body. The society has asked that five drinking fountains be placed throughout the city, and the committee, of which Dr. T. S. Davis is the chairman, has the matter under consideration.

Local veterinarians and some members of the committee feel that the establishment of such drinking troughs would be a means for the spread of various diseases of the horse, notably glanders, a case of which recently developed in Westfield, and are said to be opposed to the project for this reason. These persons advocate the erection of hydrants at various parts of the city, and would have teamsters carry pails for their own horses.

The danger of transmission of disease by the use of a drinking trough has not been overcome in any of the designs for such troughs known by the members of the Board committee. In a disease like glanders, the infection is from the saliva of the animal, and no design of fountain has been found at which the water is constantly kept pure for its entire depth at all times. While there is a drain at the side of some troughs to carry off floating impurities, it only is effective when the fountain is full, and does not protect from infection a horse which comes to the trough immediately after one has finished drinking. Then again, much impurity and infectious foreign matter come to the bottom of the trough, where the water is never changed, and the thirsty horse, plunging its nose deep in the trough, stirs up this infections matter and swallows it.

Those who advocate the use of pails by the teamsters would have hydrants placed in the streets, instead of troughs. Such hydrants would be about the height of a fire hydrant, with the spigot extending horizontally from near the top. A rubber faucet could be placed at the top, so that when released, it would automatically shut off. The teamster's pail would stand on a concrete platform beneath the spigot, and any surplus water would be carried off by a storm sewer by a drain, in this platform.

The board committee has written to prominent veterinarians in different parts of the State, asking for opinions from experience on the danger from disease in the use of drinking troughs. The Board will meet to decide the matter the first part of the week.

HINTS FOR WOMEN.

To the making of novelties in hatpin holders there surely is no end, for the latest is a large rose to match other toilet accessories. The centre is hollow and the rose is set on the top of a small glass vase about six inches high. The stem of the glass is concealed by green baby ribbon tied into knots, loops, ends, etc., so the effect is of a beautiful rose standing upright on the table.

The hatpin is of course run through the hollow centre of the flower, the points going to the bottom of the vase. Price, $1.25.

Jumpers of white linen reaching the knee, designed to be worn with white and colored duck skirts, are one of the most popular garments of the day. A store catering to a good patronage has brought out a model that is hemmed with navy blue, at the low price of $1.95, and has directly in filling the demands. The full bishop sleeves are finished with band cuffs, and above the latter on the left arm the monogram, in blue mercerized thread that washes, may be worked to order for thirty-five cents, either two or three letters.

With Rare Tact.

Mrs. A. was calling on Mrs. B., whose husband had recently committed suicide by hanging himself in the attic. Remembering her daughter's parting injunction to avoid the unpleasant subject, she steered the conversation into household channels.

"Are you doing your own washing now?" she inquired.

"No," replied Mrs. B, "not now. It is such cold work getting it on the line."

"Yes, it is," said Mrs. A., "but you have such a nice large attic to hang things in."—Success.

Both Were Intense.

"This play in its intensity," said the go-out-between-the-acts young man, "fairly takes my breath away."

"I only wish it would!" gloomily remarked the lady in the next seat.—Tit Bits.

MAZE EDWARDS' FUNERAL

Church and Elks' Services for Departed Veteran Theatre Manager.

BEAUTIFUL FLORAL TRIBUTES.

Rev. E. Vicar Stevenson Reads Episcopal Service and Elks Then Take Charge.

There was a large concourse of friends at the funeral services of Major Maze Edwards held at 2:30 o'clock, Thursday afternoon from the residence of Frank Rowley on Grove street. Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, Benevolent Protective Order Elks, of which Mr. Edwards was a member, had charge of the services, following that of the church. About thirty from that lodge attended in a body.

Rev. E. Vicar Stevenson, rector of Grace church, officiated, and after reading the service of the Episcopal church, the Elks took charge and conducted their form of service, during which "Abide With Me," and "Till We Meet Again," were sung by City Judge William N. Runyon, Elmer E. Runyon and Elmer D. Cutting.

There was a wealth of beautiful floral tributes, including those from the Elks, Mayor Charles Joel Fisk, Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. & A. M., and numerous friends of the "Major" who knew him only to admire him for his many estimable qualities.

Among the mourners were also several relatives, including Rev. Dr. David Edwards, a brother of the Major, who belonged to the Church of England, and who recently has been living at Block Island. Other relatives were too great a distance to reach Plainfield in time for the service.

The burial was in Hillside Cemetery and the pall-bearers were City Judge William N. Runyon, H. C. VanEmburgh, James Dodd, Frank Rowley, William R. Townsend, of the Elks, and William Maxson, of Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. & A. M.

TWO ENGAGEMENTS ANNOUNCED AT PARTY

At a party given for Miss Nora Schenck at her home on Manning avenue, Friday, in honor of the twenty-third anniversary of her birthday, two engagements were announced, that of Miss Schenck and Charles F. Windham, also of the borough, and Miss Nellie Briggs, of Reaville, and William Latourette, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Latourette, of East Fifth street. There were about thirty-five guests from this city, the borough and out-of-town.

The guests were invited to the birthday party of Miss Schenck, being kept in ignorance of the announcement until they arrived. The surprise came when Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, announced the engagements. The couples were then showered with congratulations by those present. The rest of the evening was devoted to sociability, games, music, etc., after which refreshments were served.

Both Miss Schenck and Mr. Windham are active workers in Warren chapel, the former having been a member of the choir there, for a long time and interested in other departments of chapel work. Mr. Windham is prominent as a Christian Endeavorer, being president of the Somerset County Union, also active in local Endeavor circles. Mr. Latourette is a member of Trinity Reformed church and also prominent in the Endeavor Society there, while Miss Briggs is equally active in church work at her home in Reaville. She has been the guest of Miss Schenck, and it was thought to be an opportune time to announce the engagements. No date has been fixed for the wedding, but doubtless both couples will be wedded at the same time.

Utzinger, of Elizabeth, was given a birthday party Friday at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Valentine Utzinger, on Grandview avenue, she being seven years old. Little Miss Utzinger was the recipient of a number of presents from relatives and friends. Games were played, recitations and piano selections enjoyed and refreshments were served. Among those present were Ruth Winkler, Alice Pope, Dorothy Pope, Frederick Ferguson, Robert Winkler, Frank Hersh and Elizabeth Utzinger.

SOMERVILLE'S BIG FIRE

LOSS ESTIMATED AT $125,000.

Hundreds of Men Are Thrown Out of Work—Fire Started in Lumber Heap.

The Somerville Iron Works, owned by Benjamin Lisberger & Co., of 738 East Fourteenth street, New York city, and the Carbon Stove Works, owned by Morris Baum, situated on the line of the Central Railroad, in East Somerville, were totally destroyed by fire Thursday afternoon. The loss is estimated to be $125,000, partly covered by insurance.

Hundreds of iron workers are thrown out of employment and the iron industry of Somerville is ruined as the result of poor water pressure on the mains in a time of emergency.

The fire started in a small lumber heap in the yard of the stove works, and was so insignificant when first discovered that it caused no alarm. A fire hose was brought from the iron works near by to put out the blaze, but when an attempt was made to turn on the water there was no pressure on the mains.

When the entire fire department of the borough hurried to the scene it was equally powerless to check the conflagration, which spread from the stove works to the iron works, and both buildings were roaring furnaces at one time.

After a long delay, the syndicate which supplies the town with water from the Raritan River turned on the pressure, and the dwelling houses near the big fire were saved.

Feeling runs high against the mysterious water syndicate, composed of New York capitalists, whose identity has never been made known to the officials of the town.

THE DISAPPEARING PINE TREE.

A striking photograph in the June Wide World Magazine gives a good idea of the enormous size of the giant fir trees to be found in great profusion in Oregon and Washington in the United States, and in British Columbia, in Canada. Favored by the warm breezes from the adjacent Pacific ocean, these monsters often assume extraordinary dimensions, many reaching 200 feet high and thirty-six feet in circumference. Such a tree would furnish enough timber from which to construct two substantial houses, built entirely of pine. Nevertheless, the wanton waste practised by the "lumbe-men" in the forests of the Northwest is now appalling, when identify the available timber is inexhaustible, is greatly to be deprecated, and it is to be earnestly hoped that preventive measures will be taken in order that this great storehouse of timber shall not be unseemly plundered to the detriment of posterity or even of the next generation.

CRUISER CHARLESTON WINS GUNNERY PRIZE.

The cruiser Charleston, now on the Pacific coast, won the trophy for gunnery in the cruiser class during the last contest. The Tingey stood first among the torpedo vessels, and year the Dahlgren made the cruiser trophy and the Sperry was first among the torpedo boats.

The standing of the other vessels in the cruiser class was: Charleston trophy winner, 44,115; Cleveland, star ship, 35, 679; Yorktown, 35, 1; Denver, 48,643; Albany, 41, 839; Galveston, 36,908; Tacoma, 36,857, and Chattanooga, 28,676. The battleship trophy will not be awarded until the record of the target practice of the Atlantic fleet are gone over.

OWNER REQUEATHS BIG HOTEL TO ITS MANAGER.

The Plaza Hotel and restaurant property, on the ocean front at Asbury Park, has been bequeathed, at the termination of a life trust, to James Kelsey, Jr., and his wife Irene Kelsey. For several years the Kelseys managed the hotel for Col. Henry J. Bly, whose will was offered for probate at Freehold, Friday. Mr. Kelsey gets the good will of the restaurant property at once. He is to lease or manage the hotel for the purpose of carrying out a trust for taking care of Colonel Bly's daughter, Mrs. Nellie E. Brien, during her lifetime. At Mrs. Brien's death the property is to go in fee to Mr. and Mrs. Kelsey.

MRS. WILLIAMSON DEAD

Union Co. Probation Officer Passes Away at Her Home in Elizabeth.

STRICKEN WITH APOPLEXY.

Identified With Many Charitable Organizations—A Familiar Figure in Local Police Court.

Mrs. Emily E. Williamson, the Union county probation officer, died at her home, 646 Pearl street, Elizabeth, Tuesday morning at half past 1 o'clock, stricken with apoplexy. Mrs. Williamson, who is known all over the State because of her years of charitable and philanthropic work and her activity in the suppression of vice and crime among children, was stricken yesterday morning at 1 o'clock, and the second and fatal stroke came early today. Rev. John E. Atkinson, rector of Trinity P. E. church, of Elizabeth, of which Mrs. Williamson was a member, was with her when the end came.

Mrs. Williamson had been county probation officer for the past seven years, having been appointed by Governor Voorhees in 1902. She was president of the State Charities Aid Association, president of the State Board of Children's Guardians, president of the Home for Feeble-Minded Children, at Vineland, and formerly president of the State Federation of Women's clubs. It was through her efforts that the State reformatory was established at Rahway. Mrs. Williamson was the wife of Benjamin Williamson, Jr., who died in 1900, and used a considerable amount of her personal income in the furtherance of charitable work, especially among children. Her husband was the son of State Chancellor Williamson, who was for many years counsel for the Central railroad. Mrs. Williamson's maiden name was Emily Hornblower, an old New England family. Her only surviving blood relation is Miss Emily Williamson Hornblower, a niece, who lives in Elizabeth.

As County probation officer, Mrs. Williamson was a familiar figure in the city police court, with her assistant, Major Irwin. Tactful and conscientious in the discharge of her duties, the woman won the respect of the local authorities, and it was through the influence of Chief P. S. Kiely that she was granted the privileges of the floor at the convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs, held at Buffalo about two weeks ago. Her speech before the police heads of the world was the only address made to the association by a woman in the history of the organization.

G. H. GODDARD RESIGNS FROM HOSPITAL BOARD

George H. Goddard, one of the oldest members in point of service, tendered his resignation as a member of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, at the July meeting of the board Monday. His reluctance was because of a pressure of other business matters demanding his full time. Mr. Goddard expressed sincere regret for the necessity of this action and the feeling of deep loss to the hospital was expressed by the governors in accepting the resignation. Mr. Goddard was then elected an honorary member of the board in recognition of his many years of active and valuable service.

The report of the medical board was as follows: Remaining at date of last report, 42; total number of patients admitted, 50; discharged cured, 37; discharged improved, 4; discharged not improved, 2; died, 4; total number treated, 92; remaining, 45; number of operations, 62; daily visits to dispensary, 152; total number of hospital days, 1,221.

METHODS FOR PRESERVING SUMMER FRUITS.

Ginger pears are a delicious sweet meat. Use hard pears, peel, core and cut them into very thin slices. For eight pounds of fruit, after it has been sliced, use the same quantity of sugar, the juice of four lemons, one pint of water and one-half pound of ginger root, sliced very thin. Cut the lemon rinds into long, thin slices. Put all into a porcelain preserving kettle and boil slowly for an hour.

In making peach preserves use one pound of sugar to one pound of fruit. Peel, stone and halve the peaches. Add enough water to the sugar to make a thick syrup and boil until thick. Put the fruit in the syrup and boil slowly and tender. A few stones added make a delicious flavor. Use firm peaches, as overripe ones lose their form and underripe ones make dark preserves. Seal in airtight glass jars.

FRANK SHEPPARD HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Quick action on the part of fireman George Mehl, of the hook and ladder truck, prevented the heavy piece of apparatus from passing over Frank Sheppard, who fell off at Washington street as the firemen were answering the alarm from box 28 shortly after 11 o'clock Tuesday morning. Seeing the young man fall, Mehl twisted the tiller suddenly, swinging the rear wheels almost into the curb and missing Sheppard's body by but a few inches. Sheppard, who swung on the truck at Church street, was dragged the entire block and badly bruised about the head and shoulders.

The fire was in the kitchen of the residence of Charles L. Stanley, of 1126 South avenue. A line of clothes, which hung over the range to dry, broke and the clothes caught fire. The flames spread to a basket of clothes containing coal, but the blaze was killed with a hand extinguisher. Damage to the clothes is the only loss.

SECRET SESSIONS HELD BY EDUCATION BOARD

When former Principal I. W. Traveli, of the city high school, returns from abroad next month to take up his new duties as superintendent of the Morristown schools, he will have to deal with an education board that has been holding secret sessions to the disgust of the taxpayers.

Since attention has been directed to the annual financial statement of the local Board of Education, in which $62,000 was expended without bids or advertisements, except one instance, it has been asserted by members of the board that the law doesn't require that the financial statement be published.

"It is a perfect palace of peace that he has opened in lovely Touraine," says the Lady's Pictorial. "Here is never a disturbing sound. The silence is broken only by the absolutely monotonous and soothing tick, tock, tick of solid grandfather clocks, and the scarcely perceptible drip of unseen fountains.

"Everything is seen through a cerulean haze, everybody moves in list slippers, the air is fresh but full of faint perfume. Before the eyes of very refractory patients slowly revolve colored balls, not the smallest rose leaf being allowed to crumple in any bed, each being so designed that there is no possibility of the body growing weary. Here, in fact, the wooing of sleep has been made a positive science, and it is said no one can keep awake here, however hard he may try."

Dog's Remarkable Intelligence.

Thomas Jones, who owns a big ranch on San Juan island, lost a collie dog last fall for nearly a month, and for several days searched the woods about his place zealously for the animal, without success. One day he tossed a bone to another collie. Instead of gnawing it, he picked it up and started for the woods. He kept turning his head, apparently to see if he was followed, and Jones concluded to follow him. The dog trotted along for about a mile and stopped at the edge of an abandoned well. He dropped the bone over the edge of the well. Jones got a ladder, climbed down and found the dog that had been lost. There was only about two inches of water in the well, but the animal would have starved to death had it not been for the bone. The lost dog was in good condition, and as it had been missing 24 days the other animal must have kept it supplied with food for nearly a month.

Breaking It Gently.

An army captain, returning from India, brought home with him a pair of laughing jackasses, which he entrusted to one of the sailors, Tom Pinch. Alas! shipboard life did not agree with the creatures, and, in spite of all Tom's care, they pined and died. Tom was in despair.

"I darent' tell the captain!"

"Don't shirk it, mate," said his pal. "Break it to him gently. You'll find it'll be all right."

The advice seemed sound, and Tom sought the gallant captain.

"'Scuse me, sir," he said. "You know them things below—what you call larfin jackasses? Well, sir, they 'aven't got nuffin to larf at this morning."

SECRET COULD NOT BE KEPT

Everybody Seemed to Know That This Couple Were Newly United in Matrimony.

A Boston young man had married a Chicago girl, and they had started on their wedding tour. Despite—or perhaps because of—their studied efforts to appear like "old married folks," their fellow passengers on the railway train had no difficulty in classing them as bride and groom, and manifested their knowledge by winks, nods and grins.

An unfortunate accident to the dining car compelled the conductor to leave it on the sidetrack at a small station, and it was several hours before the train stopped for refreshments at a town where there was a restaurant near the passenger station.

It was by no means a first-class restaurant, but the travelers had a first-class appetite and they swarmed into it. With some difficulty the bride and groom found seats and presently a waitress came to take their order.

"Where's your bill of fare?" asked the young man.

"We haven't any to-day, sir," she answered.

"Nor any other day perhaps?"

"No, sir."

"Well, what have you that you can recommend as being good to eat?"

"We have some nice pork and beans."

"Alfred," whispered the bride, "everybody seems to know that we have just been married, but how do you suppose this girl has found out that I am from Chicago and that you are from Boston?"—Youth's Companion.

SLEEP FOR THE SLEEPLESS.

How a French Specialist Goes to Work to Woo Slumber for His Wide-Awake Patients.

A French specialist has come to the rescue of persons afflicted with insomnia. His method is somewhat vaguely described as "lulling the wideawakes to unconsciousness much as babies are put to slumber."

"It is a perfect palace of peace that he has opened in lovely Touraine," says the Lady's Pictorial. "Here is never a disturbing sound. RECTOR C. W. CAMP DIES AT RICHMOND HILL

Rev. Charles William Camp, who died at his home at 524 Lefferts avenue, Richmond Hill, L. I., Sunday night, aged 64 years, of Bright's disease, was rector of the Church of the Holy Cross about thirty years ago, and is well remembered by some of the older residents of the city. He was rector of the borough church for about a year, succeeding Rev. Charles Ward. He made many many friends here and was much beloved by all. His pastorate was before the church was deeded over to the present congregation.

Mr. Camp went from Plainfield to St. John's church, Kingston, N. Y., and then to Grace church, Lockport, N. Y. His father was rector of the Episcopal church at Saratoga, and his maternal grandfather was the Right Rev. John Henry Hopkins, first bishop of Vermont. He fought in the Civil War in the First New Jersey Cavalry. At one time he was assistant rector of Christ church, New York. He was secretary of the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance Company from 1903 until its dissolution last year. After that he joined the staff of the Protestant City Mission Society, New York. He was at one time chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Free Masons of New York State. He leaves a wife, son and daughter.

intyre, and gave him to understand that he was going to make the trip last night. He said he was going to take Macintyre home before he started. Having thus secured the machine, the two picked up Mitchell and Kettering and started for Perth Amboy. The booze, it is said, flowed freely, and the party picked up three more men at Perth Amboy, who "showed them the town." When the saloons closed, they started for home.

When the news of the accident came to F. L. C. Martin in the morning, he set out at 5:30 o'clock for the scene of the wreck with William Mazzacco, his foreman, and R. D. Martin. The machine was found in the field and was a total wreck, a mere mass of crumpled metal. The men were found at Perth Amboy and were brought back by Chief of Police Kiely, who made a second trip to Perth Amboy with Mayor Fisk and Mr. Martin.

WANT PUBLIC FOUNTAINS

But S. P. C. A. is Waiting Permission from Health Board to Install Them.

SOCIETY OPENS LOCAL OFFICE.

Cruelty Complaints Now Received at T. S. Armstrong's Drug Store and Fanwood Office.

Acts Promptly.

Pending the decision of the Board of Health in regard to the installation of drinking fountains for horses petitioned by the S. P. C. A., the members of the local branch of the society could take no action in reference to the proposed fountains at its meeting held Monday afternoon in Judge W. R. Codington's office. There was, however, an informal discussion of the style of drinking fountain to be adapted in case the Board grants permission. The food and drink committee of the Board, which is headed by Dr. T. S. Davis, has taken the matter in hand and is awaiting replies from veterinarians who have been queried in reference to the danger of transmitting disease among horses by the use of the fountains.

The local society has petitioned the installation of hydrant fountains, where the water will be dispensed to the horses in round bottom galvanized pails by the teamsters. The pails will be furnished by the Society, and will be kept at the hydrants. After use, they are to be emptied and turned upside down. The hydrant is to be fitted with a spring faucet, so that pressure will be necessary to make the water run.

There is a feeling by the Board members that contagious diseases may be transmitted by the practice of diseased horses drinking at the fountains and infecting the pails. In Newark and Elizabeth, where the use of drinking fountains was stopped because of the realization of this danger, they have been again put in commission on the plans proposed for use in this city, because it was found that there was more danger to horses from lack of drinking water in the hot weather than there was danger from disease.

The S. P. C. A. has arranged for a branch office to be conducted at T. S. Armstrong's drug store, and here will be supplied for complaints of cruelty or improper nourishment of horses and other animals. Such complaints will be promptly attended to by the local society, through its officer, Mrs. Van Hoesen, of Fanwood. Should the case require immediate action by the society, Mrs. Van Hoesen can be summoned by telephone from Armstrong's drug store. The society has been doing a quiet and efficient work for the cause of mercy, especially during the three days of the Charter Day celebration. It requests the cooperation of the Plainfield public in order that it may become thoroughly efficient.

CAPTURED MAN ADMITS THEFT OF A BICYCLE.

After an exciting chase of more than a mile, in which pursuers and pursued were on bicycles, Patrolman James Ratchford, of Roselle Park, shortly after 9 o'clock Tuesday night captured James Powers, of Elizabeth. Since his arrest Powers has confessed to stealing at Cranford the wheel he was riding. Ritchford, however, only wanted Powers for riding without a light.

The Cranford police were notified and came for Powers late Sunday afternoon. Before going to Cranford with the officers, the prisoner was arraigned before Judge Woodruff and fined $2.10 for riding the wheel without a light.

While in the lockup in Roselle Park, Powers was looked over by Captain John A. Peters, of the First Precinct, Elizabeth, and Detectives James Ward and Patrick Brogan. Elizabeth, it seems, has been bothered with bicycle thieves, and the officers suspect that Powers may know something about the missing wheels in that city.

The police questioned Powers in an effort to ascertain whether he knew anything about the stealing of a wheel from the residence of Chas. G. Kemp in Clay avenue on Saturday afternoon. He denied all knowledge of that theft.

$25 Weekly Alimony.

Pending a trial of a suit for divorce brought by Mrs. Tillie J. Bolton, a Brooklyn school teacher, against James H. Bolton, an accountant in the Controller's office, New York, and the son of the late Rev. James H. Bolton, of Somerville, alimony at the rate of $25 a week and a counsel fee of $200 was awarded her by Supreme Court Justice Erlanger yesterday in New York. Mrs. Bolton names Mrs. Emma Zellick as co-respondent, but Bolton denies his wife's allegations.

Arrested at Galaschauen.

Edward Lloyd, who disposed of watches at the Galaschauen, caused the arrest of Angelo Carpione, a Newark man, at the carnival grounds Saturday night, declaring that he used profane and indecent language and attacked him. The Italian was given a hearing before Mayor C. J. Fisk, who suspended sentence.

DRINK MILK SLOWLY

BEVERAGE MUST BE GULPED IN QUANTITY.

Majority of People Misunderstand the Principles That Govern This Most Useful of All the Health-Giving Liquids.

The Dairy (London, Eng.) gives the following advice on drinking milk:

There is a right way and a wrong way to drink milk, and the great majority of people drink it in the latter way. That is the real reason why milk disagrees with so many people; at least it is one of the chief reasons. Milk contains all the elements necessary for maintaining the physical health of those who know how to use it properly. Indeed (says a writer in Health), most people would be better off physically if milk and entire wheat bread formed their ordinary diet. Especially is this true of delicate persons whose powers of digestion have become enfeebled. Persons suffering from nervous prostration are not able to digest meat, and will find great benefit from a purely milk diet, but the milk must not be imbibed like draughts of water—it must be sipped slowly, a teaspoonful at a time. There is a scientific reason for drinking milk very slowly, and in very small quantities. It is this: Milk curdles as soon as it comes in contact with the juice of the stomach. If a long draught of milk is taken into the stomach, the result is a large curd through which the gastric juices cannot readily penetrate and act with solvent power.

A small sip of milk makes a tiny curd, so if a tumbler of milk is taken sip by sip, it will readily be seen that the result will be a number of fluffy curds each of which can speedily be acted upon and digested by the gastric juices of the stomach.

Where special nourishment is desirable, as in the case of very weak persons, or convalescents from wasting diseases, beef and wheat peptones may be added, or some one of the infant foods which are known to be absolutely free from starch.

It is unwise to add starch foods like farina or arrowroot or cornstarch to the milk of invalid people or invalids, under the impression that the foods are very delicate and easily digestible, for they are, on the contrary, very difficult of digestion. Milk alone is far better for persons who have weak digestive powers but the one great need which must be impressed on everyone is the need of drinking slowly and in very small sips with intervals between the sips. In nine cases out of ten, milk taken in this manner will agree with people unless there is some fault in the milk.

Water may be taken in long draughts without danger, provided the system is not weak and overheated by running or other exercise, but milk should always be imbibed slowly.

Would Bequeath His Ears.

Harriet Martineau displayed originality in the provisions she made at one time for the disposal of her remains. James Payn relates that, having consulted the late Sir Erasmus Wilson, the distinguished aurist, with regard to her deafness, "she was so pleased with the interest he took in her case that she resolved to leave him, by testamentary bequest, her ears. She announced this intention in the presence of her medical man, Mr. Shepherd, who, to my infinite amazement, observed: "But my dear madam, you can't do that; it will make your other legacy worthless.' The fact was, in the interests of science, Miss Martineau had already left her head to the Phrenological society. I asked the doctor how he came to know that. 'Oh,' he said, 'she told me so herself; she has left me in her codicil to me cutting it off.'" The doctor, however, died before his patient, and the Phrenological society never received the legacy of her head.

The Critic's Duty.

It is sometimes the painful duty of a judge to order a man to be hanged by the neck until he is dead; it is sometimes the painful duty of a critic to tell an author that his English is faulty, his arguments fallacious, and his imagination a minus quantity. But it is never the duty of a judge to mingle with the painful utterance of doom sarcastic remarks about the prisoner's inferior social status; nor is it ever the duty of a critic to mention an author's connection with "gallipots," or to sneer at his poverty, or to insist on the fact that his work was originally printed in a Pentonville pamphlet for the sum of one halfpenny.—Arthur Machen, in T. P.'s Weekly, London.

What He Remembered.

"An' ye fell from a window, Jerry? How far was it ye fell?"

"I'm not sure, Pat."

"Well, well! That was a great fall. And what did you think of on your way down?"

"Begorry, I didn't think of nothin' until I passed th' flr' sthory. Thin I remimbered I left me pipe on the window sill."

Quite Sure of One Thing.

"Henry," said the rich old uncle, "if you think I am likely to die suddenly some day when I least expect it, you may as well rid your mind of that idea. There is nothing whatever the matter with my heart."

"You'll never die of enlargement of it, anyway, uncle," cheerfully acquiesced the spendthrift nephew.

MRS. MALAPROP OF TODAY.

Modern Rival of the Famous Character That Made Richard Sheridan Famous.

In an uptown social circle it is a matter of gossip that a certain charming young woman never lets her mother out of ear shot because the older woman's conversational transports need to be continually checked. She is rich even for New York, but she outdoes all the Mrs. Malaprops in town.

When she returned from Paris last year some one asked her if she had seen the tuileries. "Why, certainly not!" she responded, drawing herself up majestically. "I've too much sense to push in where I'm not wanted, and if the tuileries had wanted us to visit them they would have called first. They didn't, did they, Caryle?" she added, turning to her embarrassed daughter. The latter explained to her mother that the tuileries was a palace of the French kings, and that it was filled with works of art, like the Louvre. "Oh, indeed!" the irate lady rejoined: "Speakin' of works of art, you can break up all the rest if you'll only leave me the belladonna and the dying gladiolus. Did I ever tell you of the artist my daughter met in Rome? He went and cried over the shape of her hand, and nothin' would do but she should make a bust of it."

The daughter had one thing to rejoice over, however, and that was that nobody this side of the Atlantic would be likely to hear of the message that she had heard her mother send to a visitor by a servant in a London hotel.

"Just tell him," she said, gazing languidly through her lorgnon at the card that had been handed her, "that he'll have to excuse me this time, as just at present I am decomposing on the sofa."—New York Press.

WHAT HE DIDN'T UNDERSTAND

Hired Man Realized That Domestic Birds Were Weather Indicators, But Couldn't See Why.

The city man on the honeysuckle-clad porch smoked and listened to the farm hand's talk. "Weather vanes is good indicators," said the farm hand, "but chickens and turkeys by orinus, is wind prophets."

"Come off," said the city man.

"Gospel truth," declared the farm hand. "In a cam, when there ain't goin' to be no wind, birds allus roost on the tree boughs with their heads alternatin' each way—number one faces east, number two west, number three north and so on. That's a sign of cam. But supposin' there's goin' to be a three high wind. Then they all roost, every mother's son on 'em, facin' it. Accordin' as they face, so you can prophesy the wind will blow before mornin'.

"I figger it out," said the farm hand, "that in a cam the bunch faces different ways so as to look out for danger better. But if it's goin' to blow up in the night, then they face the blow so's they can best hang on to their perch. What I can't figure out, though, is how in the mischief they smell that wind five or six hours before it's due."

Was He Right?

An automobile stood at the curb in front of a theater. It was an imposing machine of burnished brass and crimson leather, and as its owner came out of the theater and was getting aboard one of a couple of children asked with the confidence—or maybe impudence—that goes with innocence and bare legs:

"Say, mister, drive us around the square, won't you? We ain't never been in a nautymobile—"

The man paid no attention and whirled away. Of course, children are a nuisance, but it would have been worth while, maybe, to give two small girls a memory to last them a lifetime—

And, maybe, again, got himself arrested for kidnaping.

You never can tell.—Washington Star.

Brought Her Own Potatoes.

A young German girl who has recently come to live with relatives in America, amused them exceedingly by bringing with her a large box filled full of potatoes, because she is particularly partial to them, and was told that in this country we had only the variety known as "sweet," which did not sound to her at all. As her potatoes sprouted on the journey, showing a decided inclination to convert themselves into flourishing vines, she was greatly comforted to find that her relatives could supply the deficiency. She was much astonished that, though we seem to value the potato, we do not, as in the case in her country, erect statues to Sir Walter Raleigh, who introduced the plant into Europe.

When Youth Wanes.

Old age has many definitions, and middle age more. But you may take it that you are not really an old man so long as you take an interest in your personal appearance. There is not a nurse who does not know the sign of convalescence—when the patient wants to be shaved and put a good appearance in this world. And so long as the man of 60 can take an interest in the latest tie—and tie it—he is preserving his youth.

NEW CURATE AT GRACE

Rev. Elory Bowers, Classmate of Rev. G. A. Warner, Now Dr. Stevenson's Aid.

A PERMANENT POSITION HERE.

Assisted A. V. D. Honeyman in Genealogical Research and Was At College With P. H. S. Teacher.

The Rev. Elory G. Bowers, a classmate of the Rev. George A. Warner, of Holy Cross church, at the General Theological Seminary, has been appointed curate of Grace church. He conducted his first service Sunday in place of the Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, who is now abroad. Not since the death of the late Rev. Dr. Erskine M. Rodman has Grace church had a curate, and hence the appointment of the Rev. Mr. Bowers indicates a wholesome activity in that parish. The position is to be permanent.

Mr. Bowers was graduated from Union College in 1897, and was a senior there when Samuel B. Howe, Jr., of the City High School faculty, was a freshman. Later at the General Theological Seminary in New York, he was a classmate of the Rev. George A. Warner. He completed his studies there in 1900, and for two years was curate of Trinity church, Newport, R. I. While there he gathered data for A. V. D. Honeyman, of this city, who was compiling a book containing the genealogy of his family. An ancestor of Mr. Honeyman was the second rector of Trinity church, Newport.

Following this Mr. Bowers was curate at Christ church, Elizabeth, under the then Rev. H. M. Smyth, position previously held by the Rev. William Vincent Dawson, who was rector of St. Stephens church, Netherwood, some years ago.

The Rev. and Mrs. Bowers will move into a house on East Seventh street the first of next month. Temporarily he is living at 137 Crescent avenue. Mr. Bowers is a man of a quiet, pleasing personality and is cordial. He expressed a liking for the beauty and attractiveness of the city, and from his brief experience, is much pleased with his new field of labor here.

HERE AND THERE.

Glenside Park, formerly Feltville, a "deserted village" near Scotch Plains, on the Plainfield-Scotch Plains Road, is once more becoming populous and attractive. The town was founded by David Felt, a New York stationer and manufacturing printer, in 1845. The town was inhabited by workers at the big plant which Felt erected. When the Civil War broke out Felt, who did a big trade in the South, had his markets cut off, and the works were shut down. Samuel P. Townsend then bought Felt and Lane's water rights, and he let the village decay while he tried to develop fruit orchards and a stock farm. With his bankruptcy the entire enterprise was abandoned, and it was then Feltville was truly a "deserted village." In recent years, however, the village has become a retreat for residents of Newark, Montclair, Orange and other New Jersey towns in summer. —New York Tribune.

HORSE DEAL MAY END IN A MURDER.

Middlesex county is likely to have another murder trial as the result of a shooting affray in New Brunswick Saturday afternoon in which Charles McLaughlin, a young horse dealer, was the victim. Robert Allen, of Highland Park, is in the county jail charged with attempting assault with intent to kill, with the possibility of the charge being changed to murder should McLaughlin die.

Allen and McLaughlin had a horse deal some time ago, and ever since Allen has been waiting to get square with him. Saturday afternoon he walked into the driveway of McLaughlin's office at his stables on Neilson street and asked McLaughlin, who sat at his desk with his back to the door: "What are you going to do about that team of horses?"

"Oh, go away and don't bother me," replied McLaughlin. Allen then drew out a revolver and fired at McLaughlin twice, both bullets entering McLaughlin's back and one piercing a lung. Allen attempted to escape, but Henry Richardson, who was standing by, caught him and held him until Sergeant John Clinton arrived and took him to police headquarters in an express wagon.

Allen claims McLaughlin and he had a fight about a year ago, when McLaughlin knocked out one of his teeth. The fight was over a horse deal, and he has been waiting since then to even up matters. He was formerly a coachman at New Brunswick, for the late Mansfield Hillhouse, who had a home on College avenue. It is said by the police that Allen has served time in prison in New York for bigamy, having married a Miss Nugent, of New Brunswick, when he already had a wife living.

—Several Reductions.

The State Board of Assessors has communicated to the Union County Board of Taxation the valuation on second-class railroad property in Union county for the coming year. The total amount apportioned in the county is $2,928,490, which is $22,325 less than last year. The valuations are lower in New Providence, Rahway, Roselle Borough, Roselle Park, Union township, and Cranford.

The valuation in Plainfield is $192,979 as against $192,069 last year. In Westfield it remains the same, $24,522. The valuation also remains the same in Fanwood Borough, $3,751 and in Fanwood Township, $126. In Cranford, the valuation is $64,043 against $66,809 last year. The largest valuation is placed in Elizabeth, it being $2,371,528, against $2,371,628. In Rahway it is $42,949 against $44,999 last year.

The valuations throughout the State generally compare favorably with those of last year and means that the various municipalities will receive a substantial sum. They pertain to second-class railroad property only.

RUNKEL'S FAMILY IN AUTO WRECK AT LAKE HOPATCONG

Herman Runkel of the firm of Runkel Brothers, chocolate manufacturers, at 451 West Thirtieth street, New York, was returning from New York to the Hotel Breslin, in Breslin Park, near Lake Hopatcong, yesterday afternoon in his high horse power car with his family and chauffeur, when some part of the machinery broke and the car, which was going down a hill near the hotel, turned over. All three occupants were thrown out, but they fell clear of the machine.

Mrs. Runkel, striking against trees and rocks, landed in the brook at the bottom of the hill, unconscious, with a dislocated shoulder. Mr. Runkel's bones were cut and bruised in the slide down the hill. The chauffeur was unhurt.

Mr. Runkel and the chauffeur picked up Mrs. Runkel and carried her to the hotel, where she was attended by Dr. Albert J. Hart, a guest there. Though suffering with possible internal injuries, Mrs. Runkel will recover.

OLD PENNSY SPAN AT TRENTON BURNS.

Fire yesterday afternoon destroyed one of the three spans of the old Pennsylvania Railroad bridge across the Delaware River between Trenton and Morrisville, Pa. The origin of the fire is not known, but it had gained considerable headway under the planking before it was discovered.

While the flames were almost at their height a hundred workmen returning from the railroad shops in Morrisville dashed through the flames and reached the Jersey shore, while a half dozen others crossed over the high girders above the bridge before communication between the two States was cut off.

Until a few years ago the bridge was used by trains on the main line of the Pennsylvania between New York and Philadelphia. Since the railroad built a new bridge it has been used only by foot passengers and wagons.

Youngster Slightly Injured.

A small boy viewing postal cards in a show case in front of the St. Stephen's candy store on West Front street this morning, fell down the steps of the sidewalk cellar after stumbling against the side of the door which was up. The door fell down, catching the lad's head between its jam and the other door, which was down. Passersby rushed to extricate the youngster, who was carried into the candy store. Here a glass of cold water revived him. The door of the cellarway happened to be open to give light to plumbers who were working just below the stairs.

Seeking Violators of Dog Ordinance.

The borough police are still actively engaged in waging war on the violators of the dog ordinance. Several violators have been observed by the police. These will be summoned to court in a day or two to explain why they did not comply with the requirement of the ordinance.

GRAND JURY PROBES RAFFERTY MURDER CASE

The Somerset County grand jury, in session at New Brunswick, spent yesterday probing into the murder case at Lincoln several months ago, when John Rafferty was shot and killed by Clifford Brokaw, who has thus far eluded capture by the county authorities. The dead man's mother was in court and was called as a witness. Detective Charles A. Oliver was also on hand, with the constables of Lincoln and the vicinity.

Rafferty was shot in the thigh by Brokaw after a fight which started in a saloon, where blows were exchanged. The shooting took place at the Brokaw home, which adjoins Rafferty's house. The elder man received the mortal wound as he came up the porch steps to Brokaw's front door. Brokaw, who is about 21 years of age, is a crack shot with rifle and revolver. He often wandered away from his home and lived in free toga. After the shotting, he escaped in the woods, and although a posse was organized, he was not captured. Rafferty died the following day at Muhlenberg Hospital.

SOLDIERS PRAISED AFTER LONG 'HIKE'

Inspiring indeed was the entry of the Second regiment into camp at Sea Girt yesterday, after their three days' "hike" from Trenton and New Brunswick. Their fine appearance. The Executive stood upon the porch of the "little white house" as Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan rode by at the head of his men. The men showed up second to none of the four regiments that had preceded them into camp this year, and were heartily greeted by all on the grounds.

Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan stated that the "hike" had been of great benefit to the men, and that the men, each day's march would return "hike." He paid a glowing tribute to the regimental physicians for their excellent care of the men. He also complimented the men for their good behavior and discipline all the way from Trenton *to the sea, and said only words of com*pliment were paid to the citizen soldiery of the State, and that the reputation of the Jersey guard had been materially raised in his estimation of all the people of Middlesex and Monmouth counties, through which the militia passed.

Captain W. A. Morton is captain of the day, Lieutenant E. W. Myatt officer of the guard, and Lieutenant Clarence Morton junior officer of the day. Dress parade was held yesterday afternoon at half-past five o'clock, and there was a big crowd there from the nearby summer resorts.

He Looked Suspicious.

Patrolman McGinley arrested a suspicious-looking negro on West Seventh street at about 11 o'clock last night, and as the man could not give a satisfactory account of himself, he was locked up. Questioned by Chief Kiely this morning, he said that he had recently "done time" in State prison, serving eight years of a fifteen-year sentence for burning a barn in Middlesex county. He told the police that he is on parole and reports weekly to the prison authorities. His story was verified and he was freed. He is employed in a Westfield livery.

Dr. Eaton to Speak.

People who attend the services at Netherwood Fresh Air Camp next Sunday will be well repaid for their trouble. Rev. Dr. Charles A. Every one will be welcome at this service.

The shareholders in the Drake College scholarships met at Knights of Columbus Hall, last night, and awarded the one year scholarship to D. Nugent; six months' scholarship to T. Mack and three months' scholarship to P. Bailey, all of this city.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. ANNA G. RICHEY

The funeral of Mrs. Anna G. Richey, mother of Mrs. C. W. Fisk, took place yesterday in Trenton, from the late home on West State street. The services were conducted by Rev. Francis Palmer, pastor of Prospect Street Presbyterian church, of which Mrs. Richey had been a member since the church was built. Mr. Palmer was assisted by Rev. Walter A. Brooks, D. D., pastor-emeritus of the same church.

After the formal service both ministers spoke briefly of the life and character of Mrs. Richey and of her loyalty to her church and family, as well as the charitable work for which she was noted.

Mrs. Richey died in Spring Lake and her body was brought to her Trenton home for burial. The bearers were her four grandsons: A. R. Fisk, C. J. Fisk, mayor of Plainfield; Harvey Fisk and Lewis E. Waring, husband of her granddaughter. The interment was in Riverview cemetery.

MONUMENT TO P. V. CLARK WORK OF LOCAL FIRM

L. L. Manning & Son, the West Front street monument makers have under construction a pedestal for the monument to Phineas V. Clark, of Newark, which when completed will be one of the best examples of the art ever turned out in this city.

The pedestal will be of red Missouri Granite with a base six feet four inches by five feet four inches, and a die four feet four inches by three feet four inches, and every inch will be polished. The statue is of heroic dimensions, five feet high and made of bronze, and represents Mr. Clark seated in his favorite easy chair.

The casting of the statue is being done by the Hinman Bronze Works, of this city, and will probably be ready for setting about the middle of September. The whole design is by Edward H. Sebring the artist in the employ of the Messrs. Manning, and is creditable piece of work. When finished the monument will have cost $2,500, and will be placed in Fairmount cemetery in Newark.

FREEHOLDERS DECIDE AGAINST NEW BRIDGE

There is much dissatisfaction here because the Somerset County Board of Freeholders has decided not to join Union county in the construction of a new bridge on Washington avenue. The Union county members want to build the structure of concrete, while the Somerset county officials think this will cost too much. The Somerset county board met yesterday, and decided not to make the improvement at present. It is only a question of time when a new bridge will have to be erected in place of the old one and the action of the Somerset Freeholders only delays the improvement.

It was also learned yesterday that owing to the operation of a new State law, the freeholders could do nothing in the matter of building a new road from Neshanic to connect with the Hunterdon county road at Centreville. The new law provides that each property-owner along the road must have his signature attached to a petition, before the application can be considered. This was not done and the matter was laid on the table.

The meeting was largely routine. The bills for the current month were audited and ordered paid and appropriations amounting to $160,000 were made to cover road and bridge work and all county expenses for the year.

Mrs. Sarah E. Beekman.

Mrs. Sarah E. Beekman, widow of S. Bloomfield Beekman, died at her home, 37 Clinton avenue, this morning at 10:30. Nine children survive her: VanDorn Beekman, Mrs. Isaac Randolph, Miss Cornelia Beekman, Miss Carrie Beekman, Miss Ella Beekman, Miss Georgie Beekman, Mrs. Sarah Ann Beekman and Samuel Beekman. Mrs. Beekman and her husband came to Plainfield over twenty years ago from Raritan and lived her ever since. Mr. Beekman died several years ago, after having built the house now occupied by the family.

TROLLEY PASSENGER HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Putting his right arm out of a trolley car nearly cost David Brown, colored, of Plainfield avenue, this city, that member, at eight thirty o'clock this morning. He was standing on the rear platform of a main line trolley car going to Elizabeth, where he is employed. He was partly facing the front of the car and was leaning against the folding iron railing, his arm crooked at the elbow. Just before the car reached the switch near the Park Avenue crossing at Scotch Plains, Brown put out his right arm further out A car coming in the opposite direction at good speed passed within a foot of the other car and struck Brown's arm just below the elbow, severely lacerating it, and tearing the coat and shirt sleeve. Both cars were immediately stopped, and Brown was put on the car coming to this city.

In this city he was met by the police patrol which hurried him to Muhlenberg Hospital, where he is now undergoing treatment. But for the fact that Brown had on a fairly heavy coat and shirt, it is likely that he would have bled to death as the cuts that he did receive were in the vicinity of a large artery. Brown will not lose his arm.

HOUSES DEVASTATED BY BOY VANDALS

Vandalism on the part of four small boys, who were discovered by Chief Kiely in new houses belonging to the Central Park Realty Company on Gresham road may result in their prosecution by the real estate company. One of the boys is eleven-year-old Milton Shoemaker, who was the "pal" of William Hand in stealing the candy vending machine from the Park avenue store more than a week ago, and the others are New York boys who spend the summer at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home. Shoemaker is the son of William A. Shoemaker, of Berkeley avenue, and must appear before the Juvenile Court with Hand in the fall.

Hailed by the Chief, who saw the youngsters at the new houses as he drove past yesterday afternoon, the boys scattered. An examination of the premises showed that much damage had been done in each of the houses. The electric light globes had been broken, two valuable chandeliers wrenched down and devastated, door-knobs broken off and stolen and lime thrown all over the parquet floors and hard-wood mantels.

Chief Kiely went from the houses to the Netherwood Home and notified Miss Curry that the New York children must be kept on the grounds. He has received several complaints about the children from residents of the vicinity. Charles Matt, manager for the real estate firm, has been notified, and action may be started by Ernest Sharp, the president.

FORMER P. H. S. GRADUATE IS NOW A LIFE SAVER.

John Dutcher, a former Plainfielder, who was graduated from the city high school in the class of 1903, is now a member of the volunteer Life Saving Corps at Asbury Park, where the family of the Rev. E. C. Dutcher is spending the summer vacation.

Mr. Dutcher recently figured in some notable rescues when about twenty people were taken from a treacherous hole beyond a sand reef a hundred yards from in front of the Ross pavilion at Asbury Park. He together with the other life savers were into the surf, with a rope tied about his waist. Then the person in danger would be clasped firmly, ghards on shore would be signalled, and the pair would be pulled in shore. This was done with about twenty-five people and was witnessed by several Plainfielders who were on a recent excursion to the park from this city.

RECTOR AND CHURCH CHOIR HAD DELIGHTFUL OUTING

Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, who has been enjoying a seven weeks' vacation, will return to Plainfield this week and will take charge of the services at the church Sunday morning at 10:30 and an hour later will preach at St. Stephen's church for Rev. Morgan Ashley, who left yesterday for his summer outing.

Mr. Warner spent the first part of his vacation at Shelter Island Heights, N. Y., and the following three weeks at Camp Comfort, Hedges Lake in the Berkshire Hills, where he had the choir boys from the church, a party of forty-six in all.

The choir boys and men in camp were George Ball, Ashley Burner, Russell Brakeley, Loren Gildee, Walter Kenyon, Carl Noble, Martin Mantz, Clarence Patrick, Charles Schneegas, Evan Stevens, William Taylor Ericson Van Norden, Charles Wakefield, Edward Waldron, Edwin M. Schorb, Thomas Ball, Grant Boos, Allen Diman, Clarence Higgins, Frederick Noble, Harold Noble, Raymond Mosher, Howard Riley, Paul Skenk, Carroll Taylor, Walter Thomas, Frederic Van Norden, Edmond Wakefield, Charles Kregar, Herbert Stine and Ira Vail, Aaron Higgins, Bert Miller, William Little, James Lindzey, Ed. Williams, Gerald and Philip Thorp, three Maurer boys, of Dunellen, Raymond Kline, Malcom Krewson, George Townley, C. C. Irby and John Greelish.

This is the largest party Mr. Warner has ever taken to camp and the boys say it is the best. After breaking camp two weeks ago, Mr. Warner continued his vacation jaunt by a trip through Lake George thence to Lake Champlain and up the lake to historic Crown Point, his old home, thence by steamer to Port Kent and Asuable Chasm, then up Lake Champlain to Bluff Point and back by rail to New York. He then went to Shelter Island Heights for a two weeks' sojourn.

BOROUGH FRUIT DEALERS COMPLY WITH ORDINANCE

Following the new ordinance of the borough Board of Health that all fruit stands and small groceries must be separated from the living rooms of the proprietors, about a dozen Italian and rGeek fruit venders in the borough are making extensive repairs to their properties.

In most cases, the front room has been enlarged and the back room has been separated simply by means of a door. Some of the small merchants have made plans to build additions in the rear of their property, and are now holding off until building permits have been given as authority.

The ordinance was passed by the Board of Health a little over a week ago after a thorough investigation of conditions. It was found that Italian and Greek fruiterers were living in the rear of their stands, with, in most cases, only a curtain separating the two rooms. The family, sometimes a visitor or two, a few animal pets and other live stock was harbored in the back room, where all of the cooking was done. In addition to this it was used as a general sleeping room. This conditions were so unsanitary that the board took action in the matter. A visit to some of the shops showed that its provisions are being slighted in a number of cases. This, the dealers explain, is but a temporary measure, and all conditions required in the ordinance will be complied with as soon as necessary building permits can be granted, and the necessary repairs made.

A VICTIM OF ASSAULT?

New York Cororner Will Hold Inquest on J. P. Powers' Death.

HIS SKULL CRUSHED BY BLOW.

Mystery surrounds the death of John P. Powers, the former borough druggist, who died in Bellevue Hospital, New York, yesterday, following his arrest Saturday night. Coroner Harburger said today that he will hold an inquest to learn how the fatal injury—a fracture of skull—was sustained. The coroner has heard the story of foul play by a New York policeman, whom Mrs. Powers, the dead man's step-mother, accused in the Jefferson Market court yesterday of having caused the fatal injury by a blow with a night stick. The policeman is said to have stated that force was necessary to get Powers into the cell.

Telephone inquiries at Coroner Harburger's office in New York today brought the statement to a Daily Press reporter that the police and men from the District Attorney's office will begin an investigation of the charge of foul play by a policeman. Dr. Burke, of Bellevue Hospital, where the injured man was taken, states that the fracture was caused by a blow and not by a fall, as the Jefferson Market prison keepers reported. An autopsy was performed on the corpse today by Coroner's Physician O'Hanlon, and the body was brought to this city, where the funeral will be held Friday morning from the home of his aunt, Mrs. Frank Burke, of 726 West Fourth street.

The investigation thus far has resulted in the story that the former Plainfielder was arrested early Sunday morning on a charge of intoxication by a policeman, who found him staggering along the street near his apartments at 5 Charles street. Arraigned before Magistrate Barlow in the Night Court after his arrest, the police say that Powers was so weak that he could hardly stand. He answered coherently and appeared dazed and bewildered. In view of the charge, the magistrate sent him back to a cell in the Jefferson Market prison until he should "sober up." Instead of going to sleep, Powers continued to act queerly and complained of pains in his head. He had several spasms and Monday night was taken to Bellevue Hospital, where the examining physician, Dr. Burke, found his skull to be fractured and stated that the depression, which is at the base of the skull, seemed to have been caused by a blow from a blunt instrument. He died at the hospital at 2 o'clock yesterday morning.

It has also been learned that the druggist died with Police Lieutenant Barry, of the Williamsburg Bridge precinct Saturday night, and was arrested on his way home after leaving him. The police officer states that the man was not drunk. The Lieutenant and Miss Elizabeth Gavin, of Green brook road, called on Powders at the New York hospital Monday evening.

The New York police are inclined to discredit the report that the fracture was caused by a fall. There is some sentiment in this that Powers' dizziness was caused by heat prostration, and that this illness caused him to fall on the street.

Michael Powers, the dead man's father, and his wife, came to this city today, when the body was brought here from Bellevue Hospital. The funeral at the residence of his aunt will be followed by a mass at St. Joseph's church.

Suspended Sentence.

William Flannigan, a brickmaker of Mountain avenue, who drank at every liquor emporium from Dunellen to North Plainfield yesterday afternoon, received a suspended sentence by Mayor Townley in the borough police court this morning. It was Flannigan's first offense in several years, and, as he promised not to repeat it, he was released.

ELECTION OFFICERS IN QUEST OF DOUBLE PAY

Election officers in districts outside cities having more than 30,000 inhabitants are beginning to agitate the question of the pay they will receive for their services Tuesday, September 14, the day of the special election on the proposed constitutional amendments.

In the election districts mentioned that will be a registration day as well as an election day, and the officers claim they will be entitled to pay for both kinds of service. The pay for a registration is $3 per day for each officer, and for an election day it is $5 for each officer. It is likely that the question will be referred to the attorney-general, and it is considered probable that the ruling will be that each officer in the districts in question will be entitled to the $8 for the special election day.

The matter does not apply to the larger cities of the State because their first registration day will be Tuesday, September 28.

Another matter which is occupying attention of the State Department officers is that while by the general election law, Tuesday, September 7, is made the first general registry day in the country and small town districts, under the special law for the election on the amendments, it is also made the day of registration all over the State on that voting. The election officers in districts outside of cities of more than 60,000 inhabitants are pointing out that there will be confusion in this situation.

The general election law requires them to meet September 7 and begin the house-to-house canvass for the registration, which canvass must be completed by the following Friday. They are questioning how they can begin a house-to-house canvass when compelled by the law for the amendment election to sit the same day as a board of registration. There is some talk that they may be allowed an additional day for the canvass, which will mean, of course, an additional day's pay.

The State printers are delivering to the Secretary of State the ballots for the election on the amendments. There are 1,350,000 of them and the will weigh twenty tons. Each ballot is about fourteen inches by twenty-one inches in size. The ballots will be sent next week to the various county clerks and by them will be distributed to the municipal clerks for placing in the voting places. The ballots must be distributed on the basis of 250 to each hundred voters, the Assembly election of 1908 being the guide.

SINGER ESCAPED ARMY SERVICE

Gianoli-Galletti, who does so many humorous roles at the Manhattan, is immune to seriousness, says a writer in Ainslee's Magazine. On the stage or off it, he is forever creating comedy.

In the beginning of his career this trait helped him out of a delaying predicament—the army.

Presenting himself for examination at the barracks of Milan, as ordered, he announced: "I am ill."

"What ails?" asked the officer in command.

"Heart failure," said Gianoli-Galletti, spurred to invention.

"Come back in a year," was the order.

It had worked! Perhaps, had the medical officer been less busy, it would have worked less well. But for one glorious year, at least, he was free.

Three nights later he made his début in "Don Pasquale." By unfortunate coincidence both examining officers, favoring the arts of peace as well as of war, not only attended the performance, but remembered it.

At the end of a busy twelve months, Gianoli-Galletti returned to the barracks on official invitation. "I am ill," he said. "Ive heart failure." And he repeated it glibly to the medical colonel.

"Sit down," was his polite invitation. "Didn't I see you in 'Don Pasquale' three nights after your last amiable visit here?"

"I don't know," replied Gianoli-Galletti. He had begun to say: "I hope not."

"How could you act and sing with so much vim with your heart failure?"

"I'm better when I sing," was the answer, accidentally true.

"You're a good artist," came insinuatingly, "I sing a little. I'm something of an amateur myself." Taking down a copy of the score from a shelf, he opened it at a duet. "Suppose we try this together?"

Gianoli-Galletti assented. Into the duet they plunged together, the colonel taking the soprano part. Forgetting all else in the moment, the opera buffo began to act, so did the colonel. The gaiety became uproarious. The book had been flung into a corner. In the moment of a climax a medical inspector entered.

"Will you kindly examine this gentleman's heart and see if it is palpitating," the colonel said to him suavely.

The colonel sat fanning himself after his recent exertions. "How is his heart?" he asked of the doctor.

"Better than mine," was the emphatic rejoiner.

Things suddenly grew clear. This, then, was the ruse of the military amateur, who had got him to sing with abandon in a scene that was simply irresistible. Gloom came down like a pall. Putting on his hat he went home. His heart failure had failed.

When he awakened next morning, with the arrival of his coffee, an official envelope lay on the tray beside it. He savagely opened it, read it through, turned it upside down, then sidewise, then sprang to the floor with a yell of delight. It was an official certificate that he had duly served out his time.

Former Mayor W. L. Sandt and daughters, of Rockview avenue, who have been spending three weeks in Vermont, returned home on Saturday.

Why Don't You Economize on Coal?

The hungry furnace and the coal man are a hard combination to beat, but the

BOYNTON

is the friend of the man who takes care of the fire. The square fire-pot prevents the clogging of clinkers around the sides of the fire. That means all fire—more heat per unit of space. The square pot gives a greater surface for combustion and heat radiation and actually takes less coal for a good fire. And then there's the Boynton special flue for carrying away the dust. You don't sift ashes all over the house when you shake down the BOYNTON.

Talk it over with the BOYNTON dealer in your town.

IN MEMORY OF HIM.

He came as gently and as wondrous kind
As comes the spring into this winter world,
Which, waking sadly, one day smiles to find
The frail green banners of the fields unfurled.

So silently he dwelt I scarce did know
The simple beauty of his soul, nor guess—
Save as I saw my own heart closer grow
To his—the sun of his heart's tenderness.

But, knowing him, a grave and finer grace
I found in work, a dignity in life,
Unmarred by sorry accidents of place,
Nur sullied by the commonness of strife.

There was not much of needless speech in him,
Nor, giving, did he give too oft his heart;
A touch of hand, a smile, and eyes' swift dim
At sorrow—these might save his love impart.

But Spring—a year of days all Spring—has gone,
Sudden and sad and strange, for that he died.
He who was here to laugh with me at dawn,
Tonight cries not such grief as I have cried.

He with the Spring he loved so well, and I
Tonight with winter—God forgive my pain
That blind, with outstretched hands, must question Why,
And call him fro mhis Springtime back again.

Gentle he came, and brave, and wondrous kind—
So has he gone, grieving, I think, to know,
How great the sorrow he has left behind,
Sad for the pity that he cannot show.

Let it be winter then a while with me—
He and the Spring shall keep the days I bless,
Till happy on some morning I shall see
With him far fields new green in peacefulness,

—Emery Pottle, in August Everybody's.

HELPFUL HINTS FOR HURRIED HOUSEWIVES.

If fat catches fire throw salt on it at once to prevent a disagreeable smell.

Save sour milk in any quantity, large or small, for it is so useful for cakes. With sour milk use carbonate of soda instead of baking powder.

The dish cloth should have more attention than is usually bestowed on it. Boiling in soda water once or twice a week will keep it perfectly sweet and clean.

To remove iron rust from any white fabric lay the spit over a tea kettle of boiling water. Place a cut lemon over the spot, pressing firmly. Remove occasionally in order to allow the juice to exaporate and the stain will disappear before one's eyes, no matter how stubborn or deep set.

FIGHTING THE ENGLISH SPARROW.

Methods of exterminating the English sparrow which were used with success at Moorestown, are described in the August number of Popular Mechanics.

One of these ideas is the organization of sparrow clubs, and another is the enlisting of all the boys in the neighborhood in the ranks of the of the sparrow killers. To encourage adults to join in the war prizes were offered to those destroying the most birds, with an annual supper, at which prizes were distributed and speeches made. Various styles of traps were used, also, all of which the article describes in detail.

Her Native City.

The misapplication of words in ordinary conversation is one of the postive and peculiar traits of a large proportion of the negro race, due in a measure to their desire to appear "educated" beyond their fellows, says the Bohemian.

An example of this characteristic occurred recently at Birmingham, Ala., when a group of elaborately attired negroes were leisurely sauntering along the handsome streets of that bustling Southern city, showing the sights to a young woman of the party who resided in another part of the South. Discussing the varied attractions of Brmingham, a dusky beau remarked that "Miss Pearl Lucile was very much delighted with our town or this her first visit."

Promptly, Pearl Lucile, in all the bravery of fashionable garb and fortified with the knowledge that she was esteemed a "star" guest, replied: "Of course, I am. I like this town so much I intends to make it my native city."

NOW A PROCTOR THEATRE

Manager Counihan Closes Deal Effecting Plainfield and Perth Amboy.

HE GETS BRONX THEATRE.

F. F. Proctor, Sr., and His Local Partner, H. S. Sanderson, to Maintain Both Theatres Here.

F. F. Proctor, Sr., of Keith & Proctor, and Harry S. Sanderson, who are associated in the management of Proctor's theatre, this city, Saturday night closed a deal whereby they take over the Plainfield theatre and the Majestic theatre in Perth Amboy, both of which were managed by William J. Counihan. The change becomes effective Monday, August 16, when Mr. Counihan will retire from the local theatrical field.

Harry C. Egerton formerly manager of the Royal theatre in Montreal, Canada, will be the new business manager for the Plainfield theatre, which in the future will be devoted entirely to first-class plays. No moving pictures or vaudeville will be presented there, that being reserved for Proctor's theatre on West Front street, where the same standard which has made the playhouse so popular will be maintained.

While the policy has not yet been definitely determined regarding the Majestic theatre at Perth Amboy, it is Proctor & Sanderson's intention of conducting it along the lines of Proctor's theatre, this city, that is motion pictures and vaudeville.

The change in local theatrical circles has been underway for the past three months, and repeated rumors of a deal were constantly heard. However, it was not closed until last night, when the papers were signed. Proctor & Sanderson lease the Plainfield and Majestic theatres for a term of years, Mr. Counihan still retaining the ownership of the buildings as before.

The changes are important so far as Plainfield is concerned. It will mean that the theatre-loving people will still have the opportunity of seeing only the best Broadway attractions, while those who like the life motion pictures and vaudeville will also have the chance of seeing the best in that line. Proctor and Sanderson will aim to give their patrons high-class amusement.

Mr. Proctor had a conference yesterday with Mr. Erlanger, of the theatrical firm of Klaw & Erlanger, and he assured the former that the Plainfield theatre would be given every consideration and that only strictly first-class plays would be booked.

There will be occasional weeks of popular repertoire.

Since entering the local theatrical field, the Proctor enterprise has been an important factor in providing amusement for Plainfieldites. The latest change gives Proctor and Sanderson complete control of theatricals in Plainfield and Perth Amboy.

Too much praise cannot be given Mr. Counihan for the way in which he has conducted the Plainfield theatre, which this week began its fifth year. The house was opened with George Ade's "County Chairman," and since that time Mr. Counihan has been successful in presenting only the best attractions here. He speaks in the highest terms of the Plainfield people, who, he says, have supported him and made it possible to attain success. In speaking of the change, today, Mr. Counihan said that he likes Plainfield one of the best show towns in the country and he likes the city so well that he will continue to reside here.

It is has always been Mr. Counihan's desire to enter the managerial field in New York and he will become the manager for Cohan & Harris' new theatre to be built in the Bronx. Samuel Cunningham, his treasurer, will enter the employ of Henry W. Savage in an official capacity, while Michael Shannon, who was manager of the Majestic theatre, will also identify himself with some theatrical enterprise.

Mr. Sanderson, who, since coming to Plainfield, has made a host of friends, will continue to give his attention to the business here. He has in contemplation several important changes at the Plainfield theatre, including a women's retiring room and a separate box-office window for the women, besides other conveniences of every consideration. This innovation, Mr. Sanderson believes will be appreciated by the women, who may attend performances without escorts.

Emery N. Downs, the popular manager of Proctor's theatre here, will open the Majestic theatre in Perth Amboy and remain there for a time, after which he will return to his present position here.

Mr. Sanderson in discussing the theatrical change here says that the fact that Proctor & Sanderson control both theatres will not mean a retrenchment in the slightest degree, in fact efforts will be made to give the patrons of both houses the very best possible. The policy which has made the name of Proctor famous the world over, will be followed, and with Mr. Sanderson here to give his personal attention to the business, assures much for the public. Mr. Counihan's bookings and contracts have also been taken over by Proctor & Sanderson.

During his residence in Plainfield Mr. Counihan has made a great many friends. Although having their support he has on numerous occasions surmounted obstacles that would have baffled most men. His house was opened in record-breaking time on the date set and ever since he has continued to be successful.

It was through the instrumentality of Theodore J. Shirley, of the firm of Shirley & Johnston, that the deal between Proctor & Sanderson and William J. Counihan was effected.

DUNELLEN PUPILS TO BE TAUGHT TO SING

Dunellen will inaugurate a course of musical instruction in its schools this fall, following the recommendation of County Superintendent of Brewster Willis. An instructor whose home is in New Brunswick has been engaged to teach music in the Dunellen schools and his will act as supervising instructor, as well as serving as a class teacher periodically, as is done in the schools of Plainfield and other cities.

The course in the Dunellen schools will include the element of music, such as every boy and girl should learn, and will be a preparation for Dunellen pupils who go to the Plainfield High Shcool to pursue the advanced course in music here.

Charles Clark was engaged by the Dunellen school board as janitor at a salary of $59.75 per month. The other business transacted was of a routine nature.

EDITORIAL ASSOCIATION CLAM BAKE AUGUST 30

The New Jersey Editorial Association has decided to hold its annual clam bake at Pleasure Bay this year and invitations have been issued for the event. This decision was reached at the recent meeting of the association held at Lake Minnewaska. In the circular announcing the event the committee says: "Those who have been there (Price's) do not need to be told of the greatness of the spread, and those who have not should be on hand this year to learn what the real thing is in clam bakes."

At this bake there will be an opportunity for newspaper men who are not members of the association to join. The plan is to meet at Price's Hotel at 12 o'clock sharp on August 30, and hold a business meeting of one hour at which time reports will be read and a general discussion of topics of interest to the members of the fraternity will take place. The clam bake will take place at 1 o'clock. It is expected that more than two hundred members of the association will attend.

PLAN BIG TIME ON DEMOCRATIC OUTING.

Arrangements are about completed for the fourteenth annual outing of the Democratic City Committee, which will be held on Wednesday, August 18. The Iron steamer Sirius has been chartered for the occasion and the destination of the excursion will be Witzel's Point View Grove, L. I.

The committee in charge is planning for 1,500 persons this year. Last year there were 1,200 persons on the boat. A brass band of twenty-five pieces has been engaged.

Upon the arrival of the excursion at the grove the Democrats will march to the grandstand and have their pictures taken in a group. After dinner there will be political talk, games and other amusements. Hugh F. Boyle, who has been intrusted with the athletic part of the day's offering, promises a lot of fun in the way of potato races and fat men's races.

The boat will leave the city dock, Elizabethport, at 9 o'clock. On the return trip, which will begin at 6 o'clock, the boat will lie off Coney Island, to give the excursionists an opportunity to view the electrical display over the water.

LEGAL REFORM IN NEW JERSEY,

Not Political, but For the Welfare of All.

HOW STATE WILL PROFIT.

Judge Charles C. Black of the Circuit Court Makes It Clear That the Commonwealth Will Be a Distinct Gainer by the Change—A Greater Amount of Business Can Be Transacted Without Increase of Judges.

Judge Charles C. Black of the circuit court, who was the Democratic candidate for governor of the state in 1904, has made the following clear and forceful statement of the advantages to the people which will be brought about by the adoption of the pending court amendments:

I have been asked to give a concise statement of the proposed constitutional amendments affecting the judicial system of the state, to be voted upon by the people on Sept. 14 next. As these proposed amendments are not a political issue, such a statement can be made for publication without violating that unwritten and good old time honored principle observed in New Jersey, that judges should refrain from participating in the turmoil of political discussion.

What the Judicial Amendments Propose

They propose that "the judicial power shall be vested in a court for the trial of impeachments, a supreme court, county courts and such other courts inferior to the supreme court as may be established by law, which inferior courts the legislature may alter or abolish as the public good shall require."

The supreme court shall be organized in three divisions—namely, the appeals division, presided over by a presiding justice, styled a "chief justice," and the chancery division, presided over by a presiding justice, who shall be styled a "chancellor."

The appeals division shall consist of the chief justice and six other justices to be assigned by the governor. The remaining justices shall be assigned by the supreme court to the law or chancery division as the business of the court may require.

The appellate division shall have and exercise the appellate jurisdiction and such original jurisdiction as may be incident to the complete determination of any cause on review.

The law division shall exercise the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the supreme court and the circuit courts in accordance with rules of practice and procedure prescribed by statute in the absence of statute by the supreme court.

The chancery division shall exercise the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the court of chancery and the chancellor in accordance with rules of practice and procedure prescribed by statute or in the absence of statute by the supreme court, but the justices of this division shall be under such control and supervision by the chancellor as shall be provided by the supreme court.

The supreme court may provide by rule for the transfer of any cause or issues from the law division to the chancery division, or from the chancery division to the law division of the supreme court, or from the county courts to the law division or the chancery division of the supreme court, and for the giving of complete legal and equitable relief in any cause in the court or division where it may be pending.

The chancellor and the chief justice of the supreme court and the vice chancellors and the associate justices of the supreme court in office when these amendments take effect shall be justices of the supreme court until the expiration of their respective terms.

To those familiar with the judicial system of the state it is clear that if these amendments are adopted by the people they will abolish a long list of existing courts—viz, court of errors and appeals, the supreme court, the prerogative court, the court of chancery, the circuit court, the common pleas court, the court of oyer and terminer and the quarter sessions—and substitute in their places a supreme court composed of three divisions, with appellate, common law and chancery jurisdiction, in the same area as now the several courts abolished, and county courts.

A common law suit or a suit to be tried by a jury, then as now, may be brought either in the supreme court, tried at the county seat in any county in the county court. The procedure shall be in accordance with the rules of practice and procedure prescribed by statute as now or, in the absence of statute by the supreme court—a most important provision for the prompt and effective disposition of litigation because the court itself is the best qualified expert body to regulate the mere formal procedure of a lawsuit, dictated by actual experience as observed in the trial of cases. This is modeled after the present English system.

What Will the State Gain?

First—The reasonable certainty as to jurisdiction by the court of the proposed litigation, which now is confused and uncertain in a considerable class of litigated cases, sometimes requiring a protracted litigation to ascertain whether the litigant is in the right court before the real controversy over the subject matter of a lawsuit is actually commenced.

Second—A greater elasticity and flexibility in the formal procedure. The unwary and inexperienced cannot be so easily checkmated. The court itself will have the power to prescribe the practice and procedure in the absence of statute.

Third—Greater simplicity.

Fourth—Preventing unnecessary delays on appeal. One appeal only from the trial court; now there may be two in a large class of cases in which the litigants of moderate means predominate, one by writ of error of the supreme court and then a second appeal by writ of error to the court of errors and appeals. So two appeals may be had in some cases from the orphans' court.

Fifth—A greater volume of business can be transacted by the same number of judges than is now possible. This will be true especially in the appellate court, and in those parts of the state where the trial work is congested if the judges can be readily adjusted to business.

Sixth—The sweeping away of many of the meaningless cobwebs which hang over the courts and the unnecessary formalities.

Seventh—Those who have made the calculation it is said that it will be a saving to the state of $35,000 per year for judges' salaries.

Eighth—The proposed amendments will give unity and balance to the judicial system of the state, which now is top heavy, and the duty to see that the judicial work of the state is properly carried forward will be lodged in one court, and that court will have the power to have it done, and it cannot evade responsibility.

Ninth—They leave untouched the method and procedure of administering equity and common law separate and by different judges, according to the long established practice in New Jersey; also the orphans' court and the criminal courts remain by name, presided over by the same judges as now, the county judge, and they leave also untouched our present excellent system of district courts, giving the legislature power, as now, to establish or abolish inferior courts.

All this is but saying that the proposed judicial amendments are in the line of progress, though conservative, for a progressive, growing state for the purpose of expediting justice. The northern part of the state is rapidly filling in population, which will bring increased litigation. The proposed amendments represent the conservative and best digested thought of the state after ten years of discussion and agitation, having received the attention of two conservative legislatures, and they have the unqualified support of both men as Mr. Charles H. Hartshorne, who has written a book on the courts of New Jersey, and whose unselfish devotion to the public good is unquestioned.

Opposition, if Any.

None that has been openly stated. Undoubtedly preference will always exist for a different system from the one proposed, owing partially to a thorough and accurate knowledge of the subject that only comes to the judge who has studied it, and partially to that feeling that what has been good enough in the past should not be changed, but the real opposition, if any, should and will come from those litigants, aggregations of wealth, who find in the present system a ready and powerful weapon in the hands of trained and skilful lawyers to tire their less fortunate adversary by appeals, delays, uncertainty and confusion until the deserving litigant may have to take what is offered in settlement without much regard for the justice of his demands.

This class of opposition, if any, will not assert itself in the open, but will use the inertia and indifference of the people to defeat individual opponents and doubtless under cover of some organizations, to accomplish the defeat of the amendments.

If there is one thing more important than another to the state it is that the means of obtaining justice should be prompt and expeditious, with no unnecessary delays and uncertainties. It is believed by those who have given the subject the best thought that the adoption of the proposed judicial amendments will greatly aid in this object and tend to keep New Jersey up to her ideal standards of Jersey justice.

JUDGE NEWCORN DECIDES AN IMPORTANT CASE.

Judge Newcorn handed down a decision this morning awarding to Harry C. Runyon and Company the possession of the pool tables and accessories for which Canfield sued Albert Kadish to recover, in replevin proceedings, on July 22. Judge Newcorn allowed six cents damages, cost of fees and counsel fee of $10.

This case was defended by Kadish through Harry C. Runyon and involved a delicate question of law, and took two weeks to decide after the case was tried.

Canfield sold Samuel Thornton two pool tables with cues, racks, etc. on partial payments. Thornton owed L. Moledesky for rent, the latter seized the pool tables and sold them at auction; Kadish bought them. Judge Newcorn decided that Moledesky had no right to seize the tables because notice had been served on Moledesky that the tables were simply leased and still the property of Canfield.

NICHOLS HEADS COUNCIL TO TELL OF CITY POLICE

L. B. Woolston Resigns as President of Borough Fathers.

COUNCIL'S ROUTINE BUSINESS.

Street Improvements Considered—Mayor Townsend Compliments Police on Charter Day Showing.

Councilman Charles L. Nichols was made president of the borough Common Council at the meeting last Saturday to take the place of Councilman Lemuel B. Woolston, whose resignation in that capacity was received and accepted. Mr. Woolston resigned owing to the fact that he is to be in Europe for two months.

In the report of Recorder Dolliver it was shown that there were 25 arrests during the month of July; $105 had been collected in fines; $50 was given to the Somerset Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and $10 to the State Commissioner of Motor Vehicles. The total amount of borough bills shown in the treasurer's report, to be $2,676.01. The fire department expenses for the month were $320.32.

The petition of George Marsh and five property owners in the vicinity of the affiant for the use of non-uniformed in capturing criminals wanted in other cities of the State, and in guarding the streets by night. He will tell of the work of the mounted squad during the Charter Day celebration and explain the call box system for patrolmen's use, and cite instances of its efficiency, and will speak of the harmony and fraternalism existing among the policemen, in accordance with the tenets of the association.

The local association, which was organized last December, has a membership of eighteen patrolmen, and there are three department superiors as honorary members. Patrolman William C. Mosher, known in police circles throughout the State as "Honest Bill" Messler, is president of the Plainfield Association, and came into prominence in the State association a few months ago by his diplomatic decisions as judge advocate in a deadlock involving the twelve police precincts of Hudson county. He is talked of as a delegate for the New Jersey association to the National convention of the patrolmen to be held in Denver next year, when his fellow delegates will be State President Henry W. Weller, of Newark, and E. S. Longstreet, of Asbury Park.

Patrolman Charles A. Flynn is vice-president of the Plainfield association, Patrolman Cornelius McCarthy its secretary; Patrolman Dennis O'Keefe, treasurer; Patrolman Daniel MacDonald, financial secretary; Patrolman Arthur McGinley, sergeant-at-arms, and Patrolman John Payne, executive committeeman. The officers of the local association were installed by a delegation of State officers from Newark and Jersey City. The Plainfielders are directly responsible for the formation of local patrolmen's associations at New Brunswick and Harrison, and delegations from the Plainfield force attended the installation ceremonies in those places.

The New Jersey Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, which now has a membership of nearly 3,000 patrolmen, was organized about nine years ago by Chief Monahan, of Jersey City, and ex-Chief Adams, of Newark, as a purely social organization. It grew into a State organization with the idea of securing co-operation among the police to get the best results in dealing with police matters in the larger cities. Local organizations are now established in about twenty-five cities and towns in different parts of the State. The key-note of the organization is fraternalism, and the men co-operate to quash favoritism and partiality. There are sick and death benefits.

The strength of the organization is shown by the success with which it fathered the police pension bill. The tenure of office bill and the measure requiring a policeman to serve five years as patrolman before advancement to superior offices. Association influence was also used in securing physical and mental examinations for police candidates, and examinations for vacancies among superiors, the idea being to secure the most able and efficient men among the police.

What a Mayor Thinks of the Association.

Mayor Townsend took occasion to compliment the borough police for effective work during the Charter Day celebration. They were in hand during the crowd and numerous automobiles on West End avenue at the fireworks exhibition was especially commended. "Good order throughout the borough was also maintained and not a report was necessary," he said, "and, in the parade, our police looke well."

JERSEYMEN GIVEN IMPORTANT POSTS

Just before the house adjourned Thursday, Uncle Joe Cannon shook the plum tree, and from it fell fruit that made some hearts glad and others bow down with sorrow. For weeks and weeks the house membership has awaited with keen expectancy the announcement of the list of committee assignments.

Among those whose heads were placed on the block were Representatives Cooper, of Wisconsin; Fowler, of New Jersey, and Gardiner, of Massachusetts. These gentlemen were among the most pestiferous among the Republican Insurgents. Each was succeeded by a man that has espoused the cause of the regular organization. Olmsted, of Pennsylvania, was named chairman of the insular committee; Fowler, of New York, placed at the head of the committee on banking and currency, while Rodenburg, of Illinois, succeeded to the chairmanship of the committee on industrial arts and expositions.

The important chairmanships of the important committees of the house now are as follows: Ways and means, Sereno Payne, of New York; appropriations, James E. Tawney, Minnesota; judiciary, Richard W. Parker, New Jersey; rivers and harbors, D. S. Alexander, New York; interstate and foreign commerce, James R. Mann, Illionis; labor, John J. Gardner, New Jersey; pensions, Henry C. Loudenslager, New Jersey; immigration, Benjamin F. Howell, New Jersey.

PYTHIANS RECEIVE ALTAR

Unity Lodgemen Turn Out in Force for Benevolent Exercises.

A LARGE SUM WAS RAISED.

Addresses by State Officials and Orange Pythians Mark Arrival of Altar on Its Tour.

One of the most enthusiastic and best attended meetings of Unity Lodge, Knights of Pythias, was held Thursday evening in the lodge rooms when a delegation from Plato lodge, Orange, came to this city and presented the famous Pythian altar to the local lodge. Over one hundred were present, and this is the largest number ever out at a local meeting since Unity lodge celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary two years ago.

Following the transaction of regular business a short recess was held until the members of Plato lodge arrived. With them were Grand Chancellor Henry A. Heinrichs, of Paterson, Grand Vice-Chancellor Lewis A. Drucker, of Elizabeth.

The altar was presented by the Plato lodge members with due formalities and the speech of acceptance was made by Presiding Officer Samuel Rothberg, who expressed the sentiment of the local lodge in a few well-chosen words.

A neat sum of money was raised Thursday to be added to the fund being raised for providing for aged Pythians. For the benefit of members of Unity lodge who were not present Thursday it is announced that further donations may be sent to Frank Putnam, keeper of records and seals.

Speeches were made by State Grand Chancellor Henry A. Heinrichs, of Paterson, Grand Vice-Chancellor Drucker, Deputy Frederick Sears, Chancellor Commander Powlison, of Bound Brook, Fred Douglas, of Perseverance Lodge; Past Chancellor C. J. Shridner, Past Chancellor V. W. Nadar Jr., M. F. Gano and Horace J. Martin.

In his speech following the presentation, Grand Chancellor Heinrichs referred to the altar and its use in extending and making more binding the fraternal spirit in the Knights of Pythias throughout the domain of New Jersey, and he spoke of the awakening in Pythian lodges created by the friendships that it would bring about.

NEW JERSEY WOMAN WOULD RUN "CATTERY."

James Tawney, chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations —and friend of homeless cats—has received a letter from May Cline, of Harmony, Warren county, who offers to relieve Mr. Tawney of all of his worries in the cat line by running a "cattery" in addition, of course, —a cat boarding house to be endowed by the government.

Mr. Tawney has received lots of "cat letters" since he openly championed the cause of homeless cats on the floor of the House.

Some of Miss (or Mrs.) Cline's views on the "cattery," as contained in her kind offer to the government, follow:

"My folks have ten cats and I can give you a correct estimate of the cost of 1,000 cats. It costs $3 a year for one cat—conservative estimate—if milk is given. But since the government eats would probably get buckets full of sweet skimmed milk, with a lot of bread in it, the cost would be probably as low as $2 a year. Next the help. As a manager I ask $40 a month and an assistant. This man I know right here. He is made for the job, and is a good farmer besides—honest, happy, old-fashioned, humorous, industrious, kind and a lover of animals and justice. He will exalt the job. Besides, he will live anywhere.

SURPRISE PARTY FOR REV. J. THOMAS DIGGS.

The Rev. J. Thomas Diggs, pastor of the Mt. Zion church, was tendered a surprise party by a number of parishioners of his church at his home Saturday evening. H: spent the day in New Brunswick with his daughter, Mrs. C. W. Woolsey, and on his return was surprised by a number of his friends, who came to remind him of his sixtieth birthday, and to make the occasion memorable to him.

The surprise committee was composed of Mrs. Sarah Sachal, Mrs. Sarah Marsh, Mrs. Laura Wilson, Mrs. Henrietta Grobes, Mrs. L. J. Henry, Alfred Grant and Alfred Wilson each ade speeches. A solo was rendered by Mrs. Mary E. Stasts. Among the gifts received by the Rev. Mr. Diggs was a handsome parlor lamp.

At that time he wrote he was on "The Great Incline, Mt. Lowe Railway," which is 3,000 feet long.

CASHED "QUEER" CHECKS

But Dr. Zelie's Colored Servant Denies That She Forged His Name.

THE EVIDENCE IS CONVINCING.

Colored Woman Who Drew on Clergyman's Account Arrested at City National Bank.

Celia Winston, colored, employed as a servant by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, was held by the police as a "suspicious character," until charges of forgery on three checks drawn against the clergyman's account at the City National Bank can be investigated. The woman had secured $20 on two checks of $10 each, drawn to "Cash" and dated July 3 and July 24. She was arrested in the City National Bank Monday afternoon, when she presented a check for $15, dated "August 31." The arrest was made upon the complaint of Cashier William F. Arnold, who engaged the woman in conversation until the arrival of Driver O'Gorman from police headquarters.

Brought before City Judge Runyon at the session of court today, the colored woman, although confronted by a most lucid proof positive of her forgeries, substantiated by the clergyman, who is summering at Cherryfield, Maine, flatly denied that she had written the checks. She said that Mrs. Zelie had given them to her.

The police are puzzled about the case, and are at loss to understand the attitude of the woman. City Judge Runyon gave her every opportunity to make a confession, explaining the seriousness of the offence and the conclusive evidence against her. She was then led back to a cell, where she will be held a prisoner, "on suspicion" until a reply can be received to a letter sent by Judge Runyon to Mrs. Zelie this morning.

Upon her arrest, the servant was requested to write Mr. Zelie's name several times. The writing, which is in ink, has been compared with the signatures on the checks, and there is a marked similarity in the formation of the letters. The forged checks do not closely resemble Mr. Zelie's writing. Subjected to a rigid "third degree" examination by Chief Kiely last night, the woman broke down completely, but never waivered in her statements that she is innocent.

A check drawn by the clergyman for salary at the time he left for his summer vacation last month, bears the number "1904," and this is the number on one of the other checks. The writing of which is an evident imitation of the salary check, although rather poorly done. At the bank, the Winston woman's attention was called to the word "August 31" on the check presented. She said that it was Mrs. Zelie's mistake, and that the date should be July 31. She sent the check to Mrs. Zelie, she says, before her arrest.

The check for $15 which brought about her arrest, was the first the woman had attempted to cash at the bank. One of the ten-dollar checks on which she got money last month was cashed by the Public Service Corporation at its local office, and the other by Dr. Jefferson C. Anderson. When these checks came to the bank, the suspicions of Cashier Arnold were aroused and he wrote to Dr. Zelie about the matter. The clergyman's reply stated that he had for some time suspected the woman and urged that the matter be reported to the police and any further attempts closely watched. At police headquarters, the prisoner said that before going away Mrs. Zelie had given her a check for $100, but that she had sent it back to her.

Celia Winston is a bride of less than a week. A few days ago, she says, she married David Mason, who was in court today. She had applied to the clergyman to again take her position as servant in the fall.

Horse Ran Away With Boy.

William Gray, twelve years old, lost control of one of Scott Terry's horses which he was driving to a blacksmith shop Monday afternoon and was thrown heavily at Watchung avenue and East Front street, sustaining painful bruises. The boy was taken to the office of Dr. F. W. Cornwell near by, where an examination by the physician showed that his injuries were slight. The horse was captured by Chief Marshal Weise, of North Plainfield, and reclaimed by Terry from the borough pound this morning.

Retains Residence in the Borough.

There are some people who are of the opinion that former Mayor Newton E. Smalley is a resident of North Plainfield township and not the borough and is therefore not eligible for office. Mr. Smalley stated yesterday that he still holds his residence in the borough, where he not only votes, but has his washing done, and is in every way a legal resident of the borough.

THE EXCISE QUESTION WILL BE A LEADING ISSUE

That the exercise question will again figure prominently in the election for members of the Legislature is the opinion of many well informed persons throughout the State, and, indeed, signs are not lacking that this result will be brought about, for the early campaign started by the Anti-Saloon League has een speedily followed by much activity on the part of the brewers.

When the Legislature passed the Bishops' law, about three years ago, it was thought that the excise question was settled for many years to come; but along came the local optionists. The latter, encouraged by the stringent clauses of the new liquor law, at once began agitating for the passage of their own pet measure, and they have kept at it ever since. That the saloon question will enter into the coming campaign has been a source of regret to not a few public spirited citizens, especially as the chief issue will be the regulation of utility corporations, and a movement has already been started for the enactment of some law by the next Legislature which will banish the excise question as a State issue and confine it exclusively to municipalities.

Those who favor this kind of legislation call it home rule, and their plan is to have the Legislature pass a general liquor law and leave it to the municipalities to regulate the sale. In support of this kind of legislation it is pointed out that the Fisk excise commission in its report showed that prohibition did not prohibit in New Jersey, and that in some places in the State the Bishops' law was not enforced, especially in regard to Sunday selling. This condition was said to be due to the condition of public sentiment. Under a home rule liquor law, according to its advocates, the people of each municipality would make their own regulations for the control of the liquor traffic, and the officials of the municipality would be the ones responsible for their enforcement, not the Governor or the State Legislature.

WAR SCARE OF 1805.

A letter from Ambassador Bayard, which is quoted by George F. Parker in his article on Cleveland in the July McClure's, shows the state of feeling in England in 1895, after the President had sent his famous Venezuela message to Congress. Mr. Parker was at that time consul at Birmingham. Ambassador Bayard's letter follows:

Embassy of the United States.

London, December 31, 1895.

Dear Mr. Parker:—I was out of town when your letter of November 27 arrived. Very soon thereafter a condition of affairs came on which rendered it difficult for me to give you the direct and positive reply to which you were entitled. April 20 is a long way off, and what might occur from day to day it was impossible to foretell. And as matters stand today I feel that all plans of enjoyment and pleasant hospitality may be upset and replaced by very different occupations; therefore I accept your suggestion that no harm can come from postponing until the February meeting of your club the formation of plans for my visit to you in April next.

By that time February arises the sky may have cleared and present clouds dispersed and with more cheerful hearts we may meet and greet our British kindred.

I will be most glad to come to Birmingham to view its beautiful and varied industries and look in the faces of its citizens, and this I fully expect to do; at the same time, you can comprehend how much there is to make me feel anxious, for there is too much room for fear in the remote risk of a collision between the nations who are the main guardians under God of the world's civilization.

Sincerely yours,

T. F. BAYARD.

THOMAS A. CALDER WEDS MISS LEILA A. HEISLER.

The rich bass voice of Thomas A. Calder, a former singer in Holy Cross choir, found a bride for him in the person of Miss Leila K. Heisler, at a ceremony, organist of the First Methodist church of Torrington, Conn., in which Mr. Calder is now bass soloist.

Rehearsals of church music became more frequent after Miss Heisler became the organist two years ago and as a result the music of this church was brought up to a high standard. The constant association of the two musical young people brought on a friendship which soon ripened into love and last Tuesday the couple stole away to New Britain, where they were wedded by Rev. M. S. Anderson.

They were both in their places on last Sunday morning and after the service their marriage was announced to the other members of the choir and so it leaked out. Mr. Calder was well known in this city when he sang in Holy Cross choir and was employed by Swift & Co., at Harrison.

INJURED IN AUTO CRASH

James Mair, Thrown 40 Feet, Broke 3 Ribs When Machine Hit Wagon.

IN JOHN A. STAATS' AUTO.

Mule Team Injured By Car in East End Collision Last Night. The Wagon Displayed No Lights.

James Mair, of Mountain avenue, lies at Muhlenberg hospital with three broken ribs and severe bruises and concussions as a result of a collision between the automobile owned and driven by John H. Staats, of Mountain avenue, and a lumber wagon of the J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Co., on East Front street, near Raymond avenue, at about 9 Monday night. One of the team of mules attached to the wagon is probably fatally injured by the collision and the other is badly cut and bruised.

Mr. Mair, whose condition is not considered serious, was thrown forty feet when the two vehicles came together, and was taken to Muhlenberg hospital in Mr. Staat's automobile. The examination by Dr. Pitts showed no internal injuries, and the man is resting comfortably today.

The accident happened as Mr. Staats and his neighbor were driving home in the machine. The wagon, which had been to Elizabeth, bore no lantern, and the gas lamps on the automobile were burning low, although the oil lamps were lighted. The lumber wagon was driven by Lewis Jackson, colored, and with him was John Dunning, colored. The machine was going eastward, on the north side of the roadway, according to Mr. Staats. The colored men who were driving in the opposite direction, assert that it was on the left side.

When the crash came and Mr. Mair was thrown out, both mules were thrown and severely injured. The pole of the lumber wagon was broken off. The front springs of the automobile were bent, the mudguards crumpled and the radiator and front wheel damaged. There were no arrests.

INTERESTING EXERCISES AT KING'S DAUGHTERS' CAMP

In spite of the excessive heat of last Sunday, the 4 o'clock service at the King's Daughters' Baby Camp was well attended, and the program made attractive for both children and visiting friends. George E. Hall was in charge of the meeting, while the address to the children was given by Miss Elmira C. Runyon, superintendent of the primary department of the Park Avenue Baptist Sunday-school. Miss Runyon held the undivided attention of the children as she talked to them about some of the things that are uppermost in a child's life and illustrated her remarks with stories such as boys and girls delight to hear.

A fine musical program under the leadership of Arthur S. Mosher, was rendered by the orchestra of the Park Avenue Baptist Sunday school, comprising Miss Mary E. Clark, pianist; Miss Arline Brown, Miss Marjorie Brown and Arthur S. Mosher, violins; Whitney Frazee and E. H. Guest, cornets. Mrs. Ada Cuming sang sweetly, 'By Thy Grace I Will."

These meetings are becoming more and more popular with the people of Plainfield and vicinity and are productive of much good among the children of the camp.

PRINCIPAL AND MRS. TRAVELL HAD FINE TRIP ABROAD.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira W. Travell, who have been abroad this summer, returned home Monday morning on the Merion landing at Philadelphia. Their trip was not unexpectedly last June after an endeavor to postpone it for a year. They purchased passage tickets, and when Mr. Travell was notified that they could not be changed, the party had to make the trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Travell visited all of the principal points of interest in England, including Stratford-on-Avon. Mr. Travell, who has been appointed superintendent of the Morristown schools, will live in this city for the rest of this month. Meanwhile he will find a suitable house in Morristown, so as to be well situated when his new school duties begin.

As to Wrecks.

"You show folks must do a lot of traveling," said the green breakman on the Kalakosh Junction line, "an' naturally I s'pose you've been in all kinds of railroad wrecks?"

"I have, my friend," said Actyr Barnes, the tragedian, gazing around the dilapidated day coach; "but the one I have in is positively the worst ever!"

Caught Largest Perch.

Miss Juliet Hill, of 55 Westervelt avenue, has the distinction of having caught the largest perch landed in the past three seasons at Florence, New Jersey. The catch was made when the young woman was in a boating party with some friends at Florence.

MRS. BURR A SUICIDE

HUSBAND DEAD

First Valedictorian of P. H. S. and Former City School Teacher Ends Her Life.

Mrs. Evelyn Hart Burr, whose death was reported in Monday's Daily Press, committed suicide by drowning herself in the Delaware river early Sunday morning, it was learned today. Following the death of her husband in this city last October, she brooded to such an extent that her health was affected. Last February she was taken from this city to the Easton Sanitarium where she has since been.

She was missed a few minutes after she effected her escape from the institution, an alarm was sounded and soon search for her was started. The woman was trailed to the river and in a short time her body was found in about four feet of water. Every effort was made to resuscitate the woman, but it was impossible to save her from death.

Mrs. Burr was suffering with a nervous trouble for a long time. She had repeatedly declared that she would kill herself, notwithstanding the fact that a close watch was kept over her. Recently a new nurse was secured from Norristown to look after her. The nurse had instructions that the patient should not be permitted to get out of her sight. At about 4:30 Sunday morning Mrs. Burr said she was going to the toilet room. The nurse was on duty, but did not see Mrs. Burr slip to the second-story balcony, where she managed to reach the fire escape and climb to the ground, scantily attired. Not more than two or three minutes later, so it is explained, the nurse discovered the escape and called Dr. Kinney, proprietor of the place, and other officials and nurses were notified. Searchers started in every direction. A short time later the body was found.

Mrs. Burr's daughter, Mrs. Charles Buckalew, of Rockview avenue, and Hudson Burr, of Newark, were immediately notified of her death. Instructions were given to have the body brought to this city. This was done yesterday.

ALUM-PLUMPED PICKLE BANNED

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief chemist of the Agricultural Department and guardian of the pure food laws, has started a crusade against embalmed cucumbers and gherkins inoculated with alum. He asserts that withered and half-spoiled cucumbers are given generous hypodermics of alum, and under its magic influence the once soft, soggy and generally disreputable pickle of commerce is plumped out, rejuvenated, and becomes so pleasing to the eye that few persons can resist its alluring attractiveness.

Although the Board of Food and Drug Inspection has had the question of the use of alum as a preservative under consideration for several weeks, no decision has yet been given.

Meanwhile Dr. Wiley is working assiduously against the embalmed pickle and the alleged unscrupulous undertakers. Alum, he says, is one of the lesser known drugs of undertakers, its use being more circumscribed than that of benzoate of soda, borax, formaldehyde and other chemicals on which manufacturers wax fat, while the consumers grow lean.

"What benzoate of soda is to the decaying tomato and borax to embalmed beef, alum is to the limp and lifeless cucumber," says Dr. Wiley. "The public does not appreciate the woes and misery concealed beneath the vinegar basket of the innocent looking pickle."

Dr. Wiley has many supporters in his fight against the rejuvenated gherkin, one gaunt, emaciated and weary of "life's fitful fever." Among them Dr. H. Hare, of Philadelphia, an author and lecturer on therapeutics. He says that alum has its uses, but among them is not the bolstering of forlorn cucumbers that they may become succulent pickles.

"I have had chemicals presented to me," said Dr. Hare, at a hearing before the board, "to show that pickles frequently contain quantities of alum sufficient to carry into the body in one cucumber as much as from one to five grains of alum, and I would consider every such dose to be deleterious, even if not repeated."

When asked by Dr. Wiley what he considered the minimum dose that could be administered without injury, he said that single doses of less than a grain might not be, but added that no one could feed him such doses. As he was not appearing as an expert against alum, Dr. Hare's testimony made a decided impression.

HAYMAKERS' CONVENTION TO BE HELD IN PLAINFIELD

Past Chief Haymaker A. E. Willard, accompanied by F. A. Wagner and R. W. Osland, of the local association, have returned from Camden, where they attended the annual convention of the Haymakers' Association of New Jersey, which was held at the rooms of Ottawa Tribe. About four hundred delegates were present.

When a vote was taken on the place of the next meeting, it was found that eighty per cent. of the delegates voted for Plainfield and the convention will be held here. Mr. Willard presented the beauties of this city and completely won the delegates over. At the first meeting of the local association in September, committees will be appointed to complete arrangements and take care of the details for the coming convention.

At the close of the convention in Camden a banquet was served, after which an entertainment was furnished. The delegates then went to Atlantic City, remaining over Sunday. Wetumpkah Hayloft, the name of the local body, will give the visiting haymakers a reception when they come to Plainfield.

A CLOTHES HANGER.

The raffia habit still persists, and there are even now a few things left uncovered and on which this attractive straw may be used. A clothes hanger is among them.

Not the usual small hanger to accommodate baby's coat or some single garment, but a strip of thin wood, two inches wide and two feet long, provided long tin tacks, with light brass hooks, screwed in, and two long wire eyes, one at either end, to fasten it in place. Wood and wire are wrapped with raffia exactly the making of patterns in this material is an art with those who read.

The hanger is intended for all the clothes that little Miss Six or Seven will take off. She should be taught to hang each garment on a separate hook, and for this purpose the raffia covered hanger will be placed within her reach. The long wire closet, with its high-up hooks and the slip-dresses and petticoats fall as soon as they are placed, need be no further obstacles to neatness. The hanger belongs near a window and fastened on the reverse side of the screen, behind which our little maid is taught to dress and undress.

The stick or wood may be padded, scented and puffed with silk or flowered dimity if the daintiness of the room demands something more ornate than twisted raffia. For the more fancy hanger belongs a ribbon covering for the wire eyes at the end of the hanger.

SHADE TREE COMMISSION GETS AN APPROPRIATION

The Common Council did not hold an adjourned meeting Monday, as originally intended. The meeting was to have been held for the purpose of appropriating about $200 to the Shade Tree Commission to take care of a number of injured trees about the city, but Mr. Buxton, chairman of the finance committee, found funds available for that purpose, making it unnecessary to hold a meeting.

An attempt was made to meet, however, but there was not a quorum present. The only members putting in appearance were President Tolles, Councilmen Gloak, Clay, Frank Randolph and Mygatt. Nothing but the roll was called, after which the members adjourned. It is not likely that another session will be held before the regular one in September, unless something important should happen requiring early action.

JUDGE WILLIAM NEWCORN ELECTED BANK DIRECTOR

The directors of the Borough National Bank have elected Judge William Newcorn a member of the board. He will also serve as counsel for the borough institution. His election will doubtless prove a valuable acquisition to the enterprising young bank, the success of which has been gratifying to the officers and directors.

Judge Newcorn has been a resident of Plainfield for a great many years and his success in the practice of law since his admission to the Bar has won for him a distinction, even in the district court he established here. Mr. Newcorn was appointed Judge by Gov. Fort and those who have had business in the court, have expressed themselves favorably as to Judge Newcorn's fairness and impartiality.

CONGRESSMAN FOWLER TO PUBLISH OPEN LETTER

Representative Charles N. Fowler, of the Fifth New Jersey district, formerly chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency, is preparing an open letter to Speaker Cannon which will be forthcoming in a day or two. The letter is written in view of Speaker Cannon's action in deposing Mr. Fowler from the chairmanship of the Banking and Currency Committee. Mr. Fowler was one of the "insurgents" to whom Speaker Cannon meted out punishment.

Mr. Fowler refused yesterday to make public any of the contents of his open letter. He said, however, that the anti-Cannon issue was one of national importance and that when the facts were disclosed they would go directly to the root of the problem which brought to an end last Thursday one of the stormiest sessions of Congress in many years. Mr. Fowler said that he could not be swerved from his purpose of fighting against the injustice with which he and every other member of Congress is familiar. As far as Speaker Cannon's action in deposing him was concerned, he said, he regarded himself as honored in having been singled out for such treatment, more than ever before. Mr. Fowler said that the new tariff bill was suited to the interests of New Jersey.

"It is probably as good a revision as we could hope to get," he asserted, "as you know that revisions must be based upon facts. Nor need we expect a tariff revision based upon facts until we have a permanent tariff commission composed of men of the very highest character and recognized as a responsible body, precisely as we now regard the Supreme Court."

CECIL RHODES.

The arch prospector of all times was Cecil Rhodes. For him it was not merely going out and putting down holes in likely places. At seventeen he was provided with tuberculosis and ordered south. Arriving at his brother Herbert's cotton plantation in Africa in the midst of the second diamond excitement, he, with Herbert, was drawn into the "new rush." They took a claim at Colesburg—at thirty shillings a month rental. In a few weeks each leased a full claim, all the law allowed. Cecil Rhoades set himself as many as he could lay hold of. Still did Rhodes keep pace with changing regulations that he returned to England at nineteen a millionaire.—Franklin Clarkin, in August Everybody's.

The Plainfield Country Club team defeated the New Brunswick Golf Club team at the latter place, Saturday afternoon by a score of 11 to 7. The Plainfield team was comprised of Willard Wadsworth, who won four down; W. Lester Glezney, who was one up; William T. Glezner, who was three down; C. B. Morgan, who was four up; H. D. Hibbard, who was six up and Roger F. Murray as three down. A return match will be played here on Saturday, September 18.

PURSE-SNATCHER CAUGHT

Two Youthful Highwaymen Get Mrs. A. R. Vail's Pocketbook on Duer St.

MAY BE FAGAN'S PUPILS.

Patrolman McCarthy Wins Recognition as Sleuth by Quick Capture in the West End.

Two youthful highwaymen, the eldest of whom is thirteen years old, were arrested Monday afternoon after a daring hold up in the borough, when one of them snatched the pocketbook of Mrs. Albert R. Vail, of Somerset place, at Duer street and Craig place. The boys, Morris Bussel, 13 and Abraham Powers, 11, are the sons of Max Bussel, a Mason place shoemaker, and were arrested at their home by Patrolman McCarthy two hours after the hold-up.

Remanded to the North Plainfield police after a night in city court cells, the boys were given a hearing before Justice of the Peace Thomas Snape at borough police headquarters at 11 Tuesday. Morris was held to await the action of the grand jury and went to the Somerset county jail at Somerville this afternoon, bail in the sum of $500 having been fixed by Judge Schenck, of the Somerville court. The younger boy was freed on his parents' recognizance.

The city police believe that the brothers are pupils of a local "Fagan," and seek to identify them with other similar pocketbook snatchings within the past few weeks. The result of questioning on this point at city police headquarters has not been made public, but up to noon there had been no arrest.

The capture of the young highwayman by Patrolman Cornelius McCarthy is the result of excellent detective work by the policeman. The boys were his prisoners exactly two hours after the hold-up took place, although the identification as to the identity of the young highwayman were furnished the patrolman.

According to Mrs. Vail's story to Patrolman Payne, to whom she immediately reported the hold-up, the boys came up behind her as she was going home at about 3 o'clock after a shopping trip. She carried her pocketbook, which contained $9.04 in bills and coppers, on her arm, with a package. The older boy snatched the pocketbook as the pair darted past her, tearing the handle off of it in doing so. Mrs. Vail pursued the pair along Craig place to Grove street, and along that street to Front street, where they disappeared westward. The pocketbook was found at their home.

HACKENSACK YOUNGSTER CHANGES HIS COLOR

Mrs. John E. Travers, of Hackensack, is angry clear through today. She feels that her confidence has been abused and by a two-months-old baby, too.

When the baby was found in a shoe box near the Hotel Kingsland two weeks ago, soon after the departure of a big red touring car containing a party of well dressed women, there was a great fuss over the little stranger. Several score women gathered round, chucked the youngster under the chin and spoke their minds freely about the woman who had deserted it.

Mrs. Travers claimed the child and took it home. A visitor to her home some time later remarked that baby seemed to be getting darker—probably from sunburn.

"It's beginning to worry me," said Mrs. Travers, holding the baby at a distance. "Sometimes I think its parents must have been Spaniards."

"Does it eat anything?" her visitor asked.

"Bless its little heart. I can't give it enough watermelon."

"Watermelon!" shrieked the visitor. "Why, there is something the matter with a baby that eats that kind of stuff. If I were you I'd ask Dr. Brooks about it."

And Dr. Brooks was hastily summoned.

"What makes it so dark?" she asked.

"That's natural enough," said the physician without a smile. "It's a picaninny."

All the smelling salts in Hackensack were exhausted in an effort to revive Mrs. Travers, and now the youngster has its mail addressed to the poorhouse.

She Declines.

"He keeps telling me that his heart is shattered."

"Maybe he expects you to put it together again."

"Well, I never was good at these jigsaw puzzles."—Louisville Courier Journal.

W. J. Battfield and Daughters Win.

TELLS OF SECOND BIRTH

Rev. Dr. E. P. Johnston Delivers a Strong Sermon at Union Service.

RIGHT MOTIVES ARE ESSENTIAL

Those Who Have Not The Spiritual Sense Are Born Once, and Die Twice, He Says.

Despite the warm weather a large congregation attended the union service Sunday in the First Presbyterian church, when the Rev. E. P. Johnson, of New Brunswick, preached. Music was rendered by the congregation, and the Rev. Mr. Lewis Bond read the scripture.

Dr. Johnson dwelt to some extent on the second birth of the spiritual birth. "Those who have not the spiritual sense are born but once, and die twice," he said.

In speaking of motives, he showed how all of our actions are determined by motives, and, as an essential, how necessary it is to be actuated by the right motives. "When we know that a man's motives are pure," he said, "then we trust him implicitly. Where we do not know a man's motives, we should strive to find out what they are; for all of our estimation of him, will inevitably spring from this source."

"Sympathy of heart, lies in the same plane with high motives, and as a corollary all virtue really springs from the union of the two. Thus, it is our duty to look first for a man's motives. Once we understand these, then we understand the man. A lot of misunderstanding in the world would be done away with if people would only be more sympathetic in this respect towards their neighbors.

"There are many critics of the Christian religion who complain of its lack of humanity. Why that is exactly what it teaches—the fellowship of man. Brotherly love is one of the prime forces in it, taught by our Lord Jesus Christ, and in his life exemplified by Him. In this world we want a wider understanding of man for man. This understanding must be tempered by a broad sympathy and open heartedness. Much of it exists today, but as we are looking for a universal state of happiness in the world and a better condition of man, we must strive to make it more apparent, and more common. Then, in truth we will have that brotherly love that our Lord preached and taught."

Next Sunday evening the union service will be held in the Methodist church and will be in charge of the Rev. Mr. Parks, of Philadelphia.

THE WORKING GIRL IN SUMMER

Girls do not of intention select bad amusement places to go to in the summer. The girl whose temperament and disposition crave unnatural forms of excitement is nearly beyond the bounds of salvation, but ninety out of one hundred girls want only what they are entitled to —innocent relaxation. The moving picture show is on the wane. The skating rink har its day long ago. The dance is destined to be the next feature in popular amusement.

Let us provide it plentifully, safely and inexpensively. Then the winter problem will be taken in hand. The bill to regulate and license academies meets only a few of the most apparent evils. How to legislate out of existence the bad features of the summer amusement places seems almost unanswerable, since there are so many political and other interests that work underneath all these enterprises. Why not a public dance platform, to which admission is charged, and which is properly conducted? They have them in France and Germany—and they work and they pay. Why not a public casino? Why not other amusement features in some corners of the great new parks which we are acquiring? These things do no harm, and they offer innocent diversion of the kind which the multitude seeks.—From the July Survey.

DOG BITES LITTLE BOY AT NETHERWOOD CAMP.

A brown mongrel dog caused a small panic among the children at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home Sunday morning, when it attacked ten-year-old "Jakey" Foster, whose home is on Third avenue, New York, and bit him on the right leg. Dr. N. W. Currie was summoned and dressed the wound. The dog, which is not believed to have been rabid, has been destroyed.

"Jakey," who was playing in the street in front of the Home with several other children, tried to pet the dog in order to quiet it growling toward him. The animal snarled, and snapping at him, sank its teeth into the calf of his leg. A well-dressed woman, whose name could not be learned, ran from the dog just before it attacked the boy, and took refuge on a near-by piazza. "Jakey's" wound is slight, and Dr. Currie says there is little danger.

ZIONISTS GET SUPPORT

Local Society Helps Movement for Center of Hebrew Culture.

TO LOCATE IN PALESTINE.

A. H. Frumenson Speaks of Work of Dr. Nordau Before Large Audience in Y. M. H. A. Hall.

Through the efforts of the local Zionist Society, Bret Zion, A. H. Frumenson, a noted New York orator, spoke before a large audience at the Y. M. H. A. hall on Grove street, Sunday. His speech covered the idea and the scope of the Zionistic movement which is now of pregnant interest to the Jewish people throughout the civilized world. He outlined the movement of which Dr. Max Nordau is the head and told of some of the accomplishments of the latter.

The Jewish people, he said, are accustomed to celebrate deaths and fasts among their people, but not births. This is due to the fact that when a Jewish man is born the race does not know definitely whether he will remain true to the race. In the case of Dr. Nordau it is the celebration of the 60th birthday. The Jews live abnormally and have no land. Now the Zionistic movement is striving to obtain a land for these people. If Dr. Hertzl, the founder of the movement, is compared to Moses, it is fitting to compare Dr. Nordau to Aaron.

The Bible states that the Jews will sometime return to Palestine by a miracle. Now it is imperative to determine what a miracle is. Our modern inventions, our tunnels, our wireless telegraphy were considered miracles, and the inventors of them, dreamers, before they became realities. It is the same relation here, we who are furthering the movement are now considered by some to be dreamers.

He then showed how the Jewish people constitute a distinct nationality. They have a common language, the Hebrew; they have a common history, a common literature, and their traditions are the same. Further, their physiognomies mark them as distinct from others, no matter where they may live. They have the characteristics of a nation, they have sons to whom the world pays great tribute, why should they not have the right to establish their own home?

In introducing Dr. Fromenson, Judge William N. Newcomb, of this city, spoke of the work of Dr. Nordau. Dr. Nordau he said was born in Budapest, studied medicine and later engaged in journalism, where he made a name for himself. His book, "Degeneration," created a sensation in the world of letters. Music by the choir, who sang in Hebrew and in Yiddish, added to the meeting yesterday.

The local society is working to harmonize the general movement to establish a center for Jewish culture, in Palestine. The idea is not to have Hebrews who are established in this country and in other countries leave them, or forswear them, but to help those who wish to locate in a native land. Further, it is a movement to awaken a strong national conscience among these people, whose achievements, he said, rank high in every field of human endeavor.

MRS. BURR'S DEATH DUE TO GRIEF FOR HUSBAND

Mrs. Evelyn Hart Burr, wife of the late Samuel DeVere Burr, died Sunday morning in Easton, Pa., where she had been for the past five months, following the death of her husband last October. The shock of Mr. Burr's death impaired her health and the sought relief in the Easton Sanitarium.

Mrs. Burr, nee Miss Evelyn Hart, was born in Cranford, April 6, 1853. She was educated in the Plainfield schools and was a classmate of Samuel Burr, whom she later married. She graduated from the old Plainfield High School in 1870, the first class that went out from that school, and was valedictorian. She then taught in the city schools for a few years, after which she married the late Samuel DeVere Burr.

For some time after their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Burr lived in Brooklyn, N. Y., but finally moved to Plainfield, where they resided until *the death of Mr. Burr last Oc*tober. Mrs. Burr was a member of the First Presbyterian church.

Mrs. Burr is survived by two brothers, Ebeneezar Hart, of Jersey City, and L. E. Hart, of Westfield; and two sisters, Mrs. Augustus Hart and Miss Emma Hart, of Asbury Park.

A daughter, Mrs. Charles W. Buckalew, of 5 Rockview avenue, also survives her. Previous to her marriage, Mrs. Buckalew was graduated from the Plainfield High School with honors, and she too, later taught in the city schools. One son, Hudson C. Burr, is now living in Newark. He was graduated from the city high school in the class of 1906 and was a student at Brown University.

CONGER ADMITS CRIMES

Plainfielder Caught in Newark with the "Goods On" Says He Took Horse and Wagon.

SUSPECTED OF OTHER CRIMES.

Cigars and Money Found On His Person—Taken to Rahway Saturday—Gave Wrong Addresses.

Edward Conger, the self-confessed horse thief and holdup man, was taken from the City Hospital in Newark Saturday to Rahway by Detective Conger, of that city. Before he was taken away his photograph was taken together with his pedigree and he was measured by the Bertillon system.

Conger has admitted stealing the horse and runabout he was driving at the time of his arrest and has also confessed the attempted holdup of a storekeeper in Rahway. When questioned by the police in regard to the robberies at Maplewood and Bronner's hotel on Springfield avenue, Conger said, "Oh, I am sick, captain, I don't know what I did," and that was all the man would say.

Mrs. Frankton, of Springfield avenue, Maplewood, has identified Conger as the man who broke a window in her place last Tuesday night, getting away with $1.61 and a box of cigars. Several addresses in this city have been given by the prisoner, the last being 411 Park street, it is said. These addresses are all fictitious but it is known for a fact by the police of this city that Conger lived on West Second street or in this vicinity. A long sentence is staring him in the face for these three crimes committed within a few hours.

Conger's record shows that he has been up on charges before the local police on several occasions but never for anything quite as serious as the present crimes. The crimes include holding up a woman on the outskirts of Rahway at the point of a revolver and when resistence was made to his demands, stealing some cigars from the counter. In order to make his getaway he stole the horse and runabout which had been left standing in front of an adjacent store. Previous to these two maneuvres he had broken into two places along the road near Rahway in which the *haul secured was of small conse*quence.

Conger's arrest was due as much to the fact that he was taken ill suddenly and was unable to get by the Newark police, as that the horse he drove was in almost exhausted condition from the hard drive it had been subjected to.

CONNETT AND VAN ORDERN APPEAR IN BOROUGH COURT

Miss Emeline Connett, colored, and Daniel VanOrdern, who sometime ago figured in a police raid on New street, were arraigned before Mayor Samuel Townsend in the borough police court, Monday, on a charge of being drunk and disorderly at 58 Jackson avenue, Saturday night. They were given their choice of paying a $10 fine or spending the next ten days in the county jail. Miss Connett will pay her fine, while her companion will doubtless go to jail. Both pleaded guilty to the charge.

The pair was captured by Chief Marshal Weiss. Van Orden is 63 years of age, and he and Miss Connett were captured in a raid for a similar disturbance on New street several months ago. At the time, VanOrden was found in the cellar of the house with several ribs broken. As a result of that escapade, Miss Connett spent a short vacation in the county jail at Elizabeth.

Munoz—Schorb.

Miss Cornelia E. Schorb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Schorb, of the New Madison, became the bride of Manuel Munoz, of Cranford on Saturday afternoon in Christ church, Elizabeth. Rev. Samuel Porter, assistant rector of the church, performed the ceremony in the absence of Rev. Dr. H. H. Eberly, who is touring Europe. The ceremony was witnessed by the family and a brother-law of the groom. The couple are spending a brief honeymoon at Atlantic City and on their return will go to Plainfield to live where Mr. Munoz has his business.

Different Now.

"Before we were married," sighs the trusting wife, "you vowed that my slightest wish should be law."

"Hah!" sniffed the brutal husband, without looking up from his magazine, "you read the papers you'd know there isn't any respect for law nowadays."—Judge.

"What makes the ships out there wobble about so?" asked the summer visitor of the old salt.

The annual excursion of Hope chapel to Asbury Park will be on Saturday and everyone looks forward to this day's outing as one of the best in the year. A long day will be afforded at the shore.

WANT MORE LIGHTS NOW

Berkeley Heights Township Committee Deny Petition for Lights.

ROAD IS IN BAD CONDITION.

Lack of Funds Responsible For Dark Roads—Errors in Assessments. Rectified.

At a meeting of the Township Committee held Friday evening in the Berkeley Lyceum, the matter of additional electric lights was discussed by the members of the committee. Several citizens of the township were in attendance. Among them were the officers of the township society of Our Men. The committee decided to continue the lights on Plainfield avenue from the Catholic church to the Valley road, but are held up on account of the township of North Plainfield not having yet rented the Commonwealth Water and Light Co. a franchise which will enable that company to place the poles on twelve hundred feet of Plainfield avenue, which lies in the township of North Plainfield, Somerset county.

It was said, however, that the township of New Providence could overcome the difficulty by extending the lights from Stony Hill Road down Lord's lane, a distance of thirty-five hundred feet to Plainfield avenue. This would require seven additional lights, it was said. In lighting up that park of Plainfield avenue lying within the county of Somerset, which is the most dangerous part of Plainfield avenue, the road being very narrow and in extremely bad repair.

Committeeman Kuntz presented a petition from tax payers living on the road from Hess' corner to Union Village, asking for six lights on that road. Committeeman Fullerton could not comment, he said, to vote for lights on that road, but would vote for lights on Plainfield avenue, because he has to travel that road in order to get to the Lyceum. It was suggested by some of the petitioners that inasmuch as Mr. Fullerton had figured out that the committee had enough funds to install six or eight lights and that for the present, owing to the difficulty with the township of North Plainfield, the lights not be placed on Plainfield avenue, that they be placed on the village road.

Committeeman Fullerton then discovered that there was not money enough to put in any more new lights. Committeeman Oechsner then moved that no more new lights be placed until the people vote an additional appropriation at the polls this fall, and Committeeman Fullerton computed the amount necessary to be $750 instead of $450, the present appropriation. The committee voted unanimously in favor of Mr. Oechsner's motion. The balance due on the county road bonds amounting in all to about $1,200 is payable this fall and the collector of the township was instructed to pay the county collector the amount on September 27.

Charles L. Miltner, who was elected constable last fall did not file his bonds in time, so the committee appointed him to fill the unexpired term of his office, so Miltner will be constable for three years anyway. Committeeman Kuntz complained of the overhanging trees on Plainfield avenue, property owned by A. M. Layat and Henry S. Fullerton. He stated that lights would be no use there anyway unless the trees were trimmed generously, that the boughs of the trees hanging down over and touch the smallest conveyance traveling through that road.

Letters were received from the collector of taxes asking to be relieved from the collection of certain assessments that certain properties were assessed twice to different people. The errors were rectified and the collector relieved. The meeting then adjourned to meet the first Friday in September at the same place.

Federal Auto Bill.

"Announcement by Governor Fort, of New Jersey, of a movement in the Eastern States, including New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Connecticut and Massachusetts, to adopt automobile regulations applicable in each State, and to have the license numbers applicable in each State good in the other States, is interesting," remarked S. T. Moss, treasurer of the American Motor Car Manufacturers' Association. "If this movement can be brought to a definite basis it will mean much toward the adoption of a federal bill, which is the goal of all the automobilists."

Speakers for State Convention.

PARK GOLF CLUB PLAYERS DIVIDE HONORS

The only event at the Park Golf Club, Saturday, was the weekly competition for the President's and Golf Club cups. Despite the fact that so many members are away there was a good field out and some good scores were returned.

Samuel Townsend and R. B. Titsworth were tied for first honors with a net score of 77, while W. R. Faber was a close second with a score of 79. The leading scores:

Samuel Townsend, 97, 20-77; R. B. Titsworth, 101, 24-77; W. R. Faber, 93, 14-79; Charles B. Morse, 97, 14-83; Dr. H. K. Carroll, 93, 7-86; W. V. Byard, 107, 14-93.

PLAINFIELD LOSES IN CLOSE GAME AT RAHWAY

Notwithstanding Martin's slugging of the ball Saturday, Plainfield could not do better than lose to Rahway by the score of three to two. Clark, Rahway's slab artist had the Indian sign on Manager Dorflinger's hustlers, and there was nothing doing in the run line for Plainfield until the eighth session. Rahway was strengthened by Kuhn and Maniel, of the St. Benedict's team of Newark, and added to Clark's fine work in the box the combination was too strong for Plainfield.

ORANGE Y.M.C.A. BEATS HOME TEAM EASILY

The Orange Y. M. C. A. team came to Plainfield Saturday and walloped the home team good and proper. The two teams started the ball rolling in the initial inning with a pair of tallies each and the home team got in the lead in the third session, but Terry weakened in the seventh and Orange put a crimp in any aspirations Plainfield may have had by scoring two runs and clinching the game in the eighth with two more. The features of the game were the batting of Stover of the locals and H. Williams, of Orange. The latter had three two-baggers to his credit out of five times up.

FALLING POLE KILLS BOY

Four Year-Old Frank Durso Crushed to Death by the Heavy Timber.

WAS WATCHING THE WORKMEN.

Fatal Accident Happened When Pole Slipped As It Was Being Lowered Into the Hole.

Frank Durso, the four-year-old son of Joseph Durso, of 950 West Third street, was fatally crushed by a falling pulley-line pole at the home of Rosario Dura, of 255 Prescott place, Saturday afternoon. Death was instantaneous.

The fatal accident happened at shortly after 5 o'clock, when the thirty-foot timber slipped from the shoulder of Salvatore Verbario, who was assisting Dura, as it was being lowered into the hole the men had dug for it. As it fell, the pole struck a barrel, and bounded from this, bearing the little boy down beneath it. The workmen hastily lifted the big timber and carried the little fellow into the house, and Mrs. Durso, who is also the mother of an eighteen-months-old baby, was notified. The accident caused terror among the Italians of the section, where little Durso was a great favorite. He was one of a group of Italian children who stood watching the men as they worked.

The excitement attracted Patrolman Fahey, who summoned City Physician Lufbarrow and County Physician F. W. Westcott. An examination showed that the boy had been killed instantly, and the county physician caused the body to be removed to Cole's undertaking rooms. The funeral was held Monday at 3 o'clock from the home of the boy's parents, and the interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

WHEN OLD AGE COMES.

If God grant me old age,
I would see some things finished,
Some stone outworn;
Some stone prepared for builders yet unborn.
Nor would I be the salted, weary sage
Who sees no strange new wonder every morn,
And with me there on wrinkled cheek
he shelf
Crowd memories from which I cull the best—
And live old, strifes, old kisses, old tears;
For if I be no burden to myself
I shall be less a burden to the rest.

If God grant you old age,
I'll love the record writ in whitened hair,
I'll read each wrinkle wrought by patient care,
As oft as one would scan a treasured page,
Knowing by heart each sentence graven there.
I'd have you know life's evil and and life's good.
And gaze out calmly, sweetly on it all—
Serene with hope, whatever may befall;
As though a love-strong spirit ever stood
With arm about you, waiting any call.

If God grant us old age,
I'd have us very lenient toward our kind,
Letting our waning senses first grow blind
Toward each that youthful zealots can engage,
While we hug closer all the good we find.
I'd have us worldly foolish, heaven wise,
Each holding each frail saccor to withstand,
Ungrudging, ev'ry mortal day's demand;
While fear-fed lovers gaze in our old eyes,
And go forth bold and glad and hand in hand.
—Burges Johnson in Harper's Magazine for August.

ROSA ROSAE.

I knew two roses; red and white were they,
And both were born beside the imperial sea.
One bowed beneath the kisses of the spray,
The other bloomed in fair virginity—
A flower and a woman.
And one day
The woman plucked the flower, and thoughtfully
Pressed it within her bosom, where it lay,
A warm blush on a cold divinity.
And still my placid Rose is standing there,
—A Peri at the gate of Paradise—
Faint tropic odors in her banded hair
And ever a silent glory in her eyes;
And I, who love my roses, in despair
See how one dreams the while the other dies.
Yet could I welcome death to find it where
My red rose in that fragrant chalice lies.

The total liabilities in commercial failures in the United States in July, according to Dun's Review, were the smallest of any month since March, 1907, the month of the so-called silent panic. In only six of the months since 1905 does the total of liabilities appear less. The number of failures was 1,105, as against 1,223 in July of last year. The liabilities in July were $9,527,893 in all, as compared with $12,607,122 in June of this year and $14,222,126 in July, 1908; $12,534,710 in July, 1907, and $6,919,014 in the same month of 1906. FIGHTERS AS PLAYERS

GIRLS WOULD PAY THE FINE.

Michael Quigley Fined Eight Dollars For Assault on John Hurley In an East End Stable.

"The Fighting Groom, or Poor Board at Hurley's," was the title of a matinee performance presented in a Notherwood stable Wednesday afternoon, the final act of which was given in the city police court today. The production, starring Michael Quigley, in title role, and John Hurley in "heavy" part, includes an argument, an invasion of the police, a fast fight between the principal characters, aided—or hindered—by a bull dog; an $8 fine, imposed by His Honor (City Judge Runyon); heart-drama of two fair maids, two of whom would pay Quigley's fine, and glowering looks between the principals as the curtain goes down.

The action in the matinee starts when Quigley, The Fighting Groom, engages in conversation with Hurley, the coachman, about the quality of meat he has for dinner as Hurley's lodger. Both are in the stable, and sundry drinks are in Michael. Some stirring "heavy" lines by the coachman cause the groom to develop pugilistic wrath, and a fight is awaited. But Hurley, in hope of a bicycle and pedals off stage to get the police. The curtain falls leaving Quigley well up stage, whispering in the ear of his bull-dog, who sneaks in upper left, as Hurley departs.

The police patrol is seen in the second act, manned by Driver O'Gorman and Patrolman Flatley. The principals face each other, and the grinding of their teeth (meaning hate), can be heard as far back as row J. The coachman grips the order to close in on The Fighting Groom. Patrolman Flatley steps forward, hastily assuming a do-or-die expression. Suddenly the groom springs for his opponent. (To quote Hurley from the trial scene in the last act: "He made a drive at me like a snappin' turtle, makin' a lot of Bob Fitzsimmons passes.") The men close, and The Fighting Groom carves his initials neatly under the coachman's left eye with his fingernails. The policeman springs forward, but the bull-dog enters suddenly and rushes to him, becoming very much attached to his trousers' leg. The Patrolman's do-or-die expression suddenly changes to a do-or-be-killed expression, and there are seventy seconds of quick action all around.

But right triumphs. The act terminates as the policeman leads his prisoner to the hurry up wagon, and the final glimpse of the stage shows a handsome stepping gore from his carved features.

The last act shows a police court scene. City Judge Runyon, Chief Kelly and Patrolman Flatley are on stage as The Fighting Groom is led from his cell. Far up stage, two young women are seen, and during the entire scene their bated breathing can be distinctly heard. The Fighting Groom, the coachman and the policeman have good monologues, but the real thrill comes with City Judge Runyon's lines: "Eight dollars or twenty days." Then it is that the two young women rush to the prisoner, the one thrusting a fat pocketbook into his hands and the other using attractive stage business. The Fight Groom pulls a twenty-dollar yellow-back from his jeans, but the Chief asks for green paper, and the exact amount of the fine is soon forthcoming. Muffled threats of a lost job are heard from the coachman as The Fighting Groom goes off stage, followed by the ardent glances of the two young women.

"THE WHITE STORE" OUTING WAS A GREAT SUCCESS.

The employes of "The White Store," A. E. Force & Co., proprietors, enjoyed their annual picnic on Tuesday at Riverside Park, on the Raritan River. It was originally planned to go to Chimney Rock, but when the party reached there they found another large outing party at the Rock and decided to make the change.

Every convenience was afforded at the Park for the Plainfielders, and all agreed that it was the best day's outing yet held. During the day all sorts of games were enjoyed, and at night the young people found the pavilion a delightful place for dancing. At noon a fine dinner was served.

Dr. Wormley Goes South.

Dr. B. C. Wormley, who has been practicing dentistry here for the past three years, has accepted the position of assistant demonstrator in the dental department of Howard University, Washington, D. C. He will leave this city some time during the present month to reside and practice at 1922 Eleventh street, N. W., in that city, where his wife and son now await him. He will probably be succeeded here by Dr. J. L. Baxter, of Newark, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania.

NEW YORK IS PUT ON THE DEFENSIVE

Interesting developments have followed the communication of Edlow W. Harrison, an engineer in the employ of the Passaic Valley Sewerage Commission, to Hugh Gordon Miller, special assistant to the Attorney-General of the United States, regarding New York's pollution of the bay and the contention that, therefore, the Empire State's suit against the local commission and this commonwealth can have no standing in court.

The recoil of the boomerang, to which Mr. Harrison's communication gave increased impetus, neared home this week, when the pollution committee of the New York Merchants' Association made application to George W. Wickersham, Attorney-General of the United States, to take action against Greater New York to begin proceedings to compel the city to improve its present methods of sewage disposal. It pointed out also that under a federal law fines amounting to $500 per day could be accumulated against the city. According to the committee's letter to the Attorney-General, the fine amounts to $31,200 daily.

But this is not all. It appears from the pollution committee's letter that, while the State authorities of New York have been actively engaged in the legal attempt to prevent New Jersey delivering purified sewage into the bay, they have utterly ignored a petition, which has long been on file in the executive chamber at Albany, to compel their chief city to observe the law.

Several years ago, the letter goes on, the Metropolitan Sewerage Commission was created by the State of New York for the very purpose of studying and reporting on sewage disposal, and a strong recommendation was sent by the body to Mayor McClellan urging that "no further sewer work be done without taking into consideration the early need for sewage disposal." Despite the fact that numerous plans were submitted, the committee continues, no action was taken on the recommendation.

"In view, therefore * * *," the letter concludes, "of indifference of the municipality of Greater New York, we respectfully request that the Department of Justice institute such proceedings as may protect the health, the commercial interests and the general welfare of [illegible] the most important States and the principal harbor of the United States."

GEORGE M'VOY WEDDED ALMOST A YEAR AGO

Carefully keeping the secret of their wedding for ten months, George McVoy, a former ball player of this city, and Miss Beulah Cole, of Scotch Plains, Friday made announcement of their marriage on October 14 last in Metuchen.

The couple had been engaged for some time and while in Metuchen on a driving trip last October decided to meet life's battle together. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. W. Crocroft, of Metuchen. Mr. McVoy planned to announce his marriage last Christmas, but a trip South prevented this. He returned recently at the time of the death of his mother but decided not to make it public just then. The announcement was not made until today, although the fact that they were married was long suspected by intimate friends of the couple.

Mrs. McVoy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Cole, of Scotch Plains, and Mr. McVoy is the son of I. L. McVoy, of 305 East Front street. The latter was formerly a local ball player, who played on the Orange Field Club team, both in football and in baseball. He is now employed by his father as a plumber. Mrs. McVoy is a member of the choir of All Saints' Episcopal church of Scotch Plains, but has now tendered her resignation. She will continue teaching music.

MISS ABBIE LORETTA O'KEEFE BRIDE OF DENNIS M'CARTHY.

Miss Abbie Loretta O'Keefe, of this city, and Dennis McCarthy, of Elizabeth, were quietly married by the Rev. Father Hogan in St. Mary's church last evening. The wedding was simple, and following it, Mr. and Mrs. McCarthy left for a brief honeymoon.

The witnesses were James Marrow, of Elizabeth, and Miss Margaret O'Keefe, of this city, a sister of the bride. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. O'Keefe, of 543 West Fifth street.

She Was Too Quick.

There were three at the little table in the cafe, a lady and two men. Suddenly the electric lights went out, and the lady, quickly and noiselessly, drew back.

An instant later there was the smack of a compound kiss. As the electric lights went up each man was seen smiling complacently.

"I thought I heard a kiss," said the lady, "but nobody kissed me."

Then the men suddenly glared at each other and flushed and looked painfully sheepish.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

REV. DR. EATON, FARMER

Former Pastor of John D. Rockefeller's Church is Contented.

FARM IN WATCHUNG HILLS.

Says Work Is a Pleasure—Jersey the Finest State in the Union—No Better City Than Plainfield.

Surrounded by nature's best and toning up his system for the life of the city during the coming winter, the Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, and formerly John D. Rockefeller's pastor in Cleveland, was found hard at work at his farm on Watchung Mountain last week. Hard work, according to the Doctor's definition of it, may better be termed limitless pleasure.

When seen first the Doctor was busily engaged putting the finishing touches on the barn like structure which he has built to cover a new gasolene ram recently installed.

"Do I like farm work?" he repeated. "Well, that is a very simple question and easily answered. Of course I love my work in the ministry and I love the work on the farm, and consequently I am happy 365 days in the year. The air is delicious and there is health in every breath of it, and as I look around, taking in the beautiful view, and think of the possibilities there spread out before me I thank God for it all. Nature is beautiful in every aspect, and in this particular spot I believe she is at her best.

Was an Abandoned Farm.

"This place was an old abandoned farm when I took hold of it two months ago, but now, even though the work is but half done, the change is wonderful. For some reason or other the place had been allowed to deteriorate for a long period, and many of the fields were not ploughed for years, but with a few weeks' work with the proper implements we have restored the place to something like its former beauty.

"I believe that Jersey is one of the finest States in the Union and to prove my faith in it I shall spend the greater part of each year on my farm. It is a farm and will be run just as any other farm would be conducted by any other farmer. The produce will be marketed and sold for the best prices I can obtain for it. Plainfield offers as good a market as any other nearby city, and I am sure that the tomatoes, cabbages and sweet corn raised here at Sunbright will compare favorably with those raised elsewhere.

"As I said, I love farming for itself, not what it may produce in the way of income. I have selected the best of stock, and being as good a judge of animals as those who deal in them, I have no fear being misled in my selections. As to the actual work of cultivation I do my turn with the hired men and accomplish just as much as any of them can do, and I find that the work agrees with me. There is nothing better in the world for a minister of the Gospel or any other man of sedentary habits than to get out close to nature and learn the lessons she teaches.

"Five years ago while in Cleveland I was a victim of typhoid fever, and a year ago was stricken with the same disease a second time. I then made up my mind that the place for me was where such things do not exist, and today I feel as though my system is entirely rid of the germs of disease, and that I am as strong and well as any human being could well wish to be.

Why He Selected Jersey.

"My reason for selecting New Jersey as a place for carrying out my ideas of farming was principally because of its nearness to the city. The railroad affords a train service that just suits me, and then the exquisite natural beauty of the hills here captivated me. You see, I am so near the city and yet, when that little ridge is between me and it I am away out in the forest. It hardly seems possible that just beyond that little hill lies the most beautiful city in the State, if not in the country, yet it is so.

"I shall spend at least a year studying the situation, and by that time I ought to be in a position to know just what is best in the way of crops and my mistakes of this year will be corrected. I have made the discovery this year that corn and cabbage will give excellent results under proper cultivation and, as you can see, I have set out enough plants to make quite a showing and they are all healthy and bid fair to yield me a handsome enough for the use of my family.

"If you had brought your camera yesterday you might have obtained a picture which would have been illuminative, if not dignified, from the viewpoint of a farmer. I was ploughing the south end of the farm, where that corn is growing and in some way or other the team managed to back up far enough to mount the plough, and for a few minutes I was not certain whether the horses had decided to turn back somersault or that it was some new way they had of ploughing in this State and which I had never learned. It was truly a comical sight for a few moments. But we got the horses going again and we finished the last furrow without further incident. Then to fill out the day's work I got out the harrow and smoothed the whole thing out.

Days Grow in Beauty.

"The experiences of one day are much like those of another, except that each one brings to me more forcibly the fact that God in His goodness makes each one more beautiful. Some day taken on a more beautiful blue; the sun shines just a little brighter; there is just a little more radiance shed abroad, and it is reflected in everything around me. Oh, yes! the simple life as I live it here is the ideal life. It gets beyond the comprehension of man what an infinite pleasure lurks in every blade of grass; what a poem may be found in the leaf of every tree—the whole is a symphony of nature's handiwork to be comprehended only by a nature lover."

Dr. Eaton takes pride in pointing out the beauty about his farm. The farm is on a side hill in the centre of the long range and comprises about one hundred acres, practically all cleared. The farm extends all the way across the valley and its limits take in the two sets of hills which stretch away for miles east and west. It is an ideal spot for the purpose for which Dr. Eaton bought—as a health resort without the usual accompaniments of fashion and fashion's extravagance.

There one may be comfortable to the last degree and still not be afraid of fracturing any of the laws laid down for the devotees of the mode. In the warmest weather the place is comfortable and blankets are needed at night. At the southern extreme of the farm is a sheet of water which irrigates the lower end of the fields in which the doctor's small herd of Jersey cows graze. The upper portion of the field is irrigated by water from a well driven into the rock a hundred feet. This water is carried to the side fields by a series of canals, thus moistening a large area which would otherwise have suffered during the dry spell that began this week's vacation has just passed. That this system of watering the earth has been a success is proved by a glance at the vegetables growing on the hillside— row upon row of healthy tomato plants, lima beans, cabbages and a other small garden truck and fields of waving corn.

Children Enjoy it Too.

The doctor's children, of which there are five—four girls and one boy—are healthy and plump and appear to have taken to the life of farmer's children. The simple faith as they do the every day routine of school when in the city.

The doctor is the same irresistible personality in his farmer garb as when in the pulpit. Tall, vigorous, magnificent picture of health, as he stands leaning on the handle of the hoe which he has been plying among the weeds he is just as much at home as though standing before one of his immense audiences delivering a sermon.

Speaking of the problems that oftentimes confront men who follow agricultural pursuits, Dr. Eaton said: "From my earliest childhood I have been a natural farmer and the experience gained at the old farm in Ohio readily qualifies me for the apparently hard things and solve the knotty problems of sewing and planning which the gentleman farmer usually leaves to his hired expert. Yes, experience is the best and most thorough teacher."

While the pastor of the Euclid Avenue Church in Cleveland, Dr. Eaton enjoyed his penchant for farming, but on a much smaller scale. He said that he finds the Jersey more sturdy, hardy and shrewd and believes the State to be one of the most delightful in which to live. Of Plainfield, the "City Beautiful," he has nothing but words of praise to utter. Not only the city itself but the people are so far above the average that he believes it can confidently be held up as a model, both in its government and its well kept streets and handsome residences.

"And just to think it is only twelve minutes away from those forests is almost incredible," he said in parting.—N. Y. Herald.

Building Boom in West End.

The Home Real Estate Company has now in course of construction six dwellings on West Fourth street, two of which are nearly completed. These houses have seven rooms and reception hall, with all improvements. They are located in that part of the West End, where there has been a demand for just such houses and if the local shops resume on full time there will undoubtedly be more than twenty-five dwellings of this character erected during the coming year.

N. B. SMALLEY FOR MAYOR

Talked of as Successor to Samuel Townsend the Present Executive.

SEVERAL OTHER CANDIDATES.

Political Pot Beginning to Boil in Somerset County—Assemblyman Smalley to Be Renominated.

The political pot is now beginning to boil in Somerset county, and especially North Plainfield, in a way that is making the "wise ones" take notice. Already there is considerable talk as to the probable candidates for State, county and local offices, in North Plainfield, where many political battles have been waged there promises to be a lively campaign.

There is a strong sentiment among the Republicans of the borough in favor of nominating a party candidate for Mayor to succeed Mayor Samuel Townsend, whose term expires, although the Democrats will undoubtedly again name Mr. Townsend. The friends of James K. Arnold, former Councilman and borough clerk, are urging him to stand for the nomination, while the name of Councilman L. R. Woolston has also been prominently mentioned.

Of course, it is expected that Mr. Townsend, who has made a good record, will be urged to take a renomination, but it is said that the friends of William J. Conroy will endeavor to get his name at the head of the ticket.

A Courier man with a prominent Republican of the borough today, a reporter for The Daily Press learned that it is not at all improbable that former Mayor Newton B. Smalley would be urged to take the nomination. Two years ago he declined election has just passed. That this system of watering the earth has been a success is proved by a glance at the vegetables growing on the hillside— row upon row of healthy tomato plants, lima beans, cabbages and a other small garden truck and fields of waving corn.

The terms of two Councilmen, Morris C. Van Arsdale and H. R. Waldron expire this year, but so far as can be learned, they will both be renominated, no apparent opposition having thus far developed.

The term of Assessman W. W. Smalley, of Bound Brook, also expires this year and there appears to be no question but what he will be renominated by the Republicans.

BOROUGH GIRLS RAISE MONEY FOR BABY CAMP.

A number of charitably inclined borough girls raised $12.30 for the benefit of the King's Daughters' baby camp by a cake sale at the home of Daniel R. Douglas on Grove street Thursday afternoon.

The candy and cake tables were attractively decorated, and Japanese lanterns added to the scheme of decoration. The candy table was in charge of Miss Henrietta Stewart, and Miss Mabel Douglas presided at the cake table. Fancy goods table was in charge of Miss Charlotte Wadams, and the fancy goods table was in charge of Miss Lucy Douglas. Ice cream was sold in a booth conducted by Miss Rose Andrews, and Douglas Marsland carved watermelon for the guests for a nominal fee per slice. Grab bags and other fair attractions helped to lend interest to the affair, and when it closed in the evening nothing was left save a few souvenir postal cards. Howard Riley ably assisted the girls in the work.

This is the second effort of the kind by the same coterie of girls. Last year they raised a substantial sum for the Day Nursery. They had good support in the neighborhood and purpose holding a similar fair annually.

TOO MUCH SISTER-IN-LAW CAUSES TROUBLE IN HOME.

A sister-in-law, not a mother-in-law, is at the bottom of the martial troubles between Leonard Yung and his wife, who live at 27 Somerset street. Because of the sister-in-law, who lives across the hall from them in the same apartment, the relations between Mr. and Mrs. Yung became estranged some time ago. Yung forbade his wife to speak to her sister; and when the latter not only talked to her, but went out with her evenings to live, Yung drowned his sorrows in the cup that cheers. This led to his losing a position as hospital assistant, and later as a barber.

The upshot of it all was that he could not earn enough to support his wife and fifteen-year-old son, and so decided to live by himself, ordering his wife to move out. This happened Thursday night. The disturbance brought Chief Weiss, who placed Yung under arrest. In court Friday morning he was sentenced to three days in the borough lockup by Mayor Townsend. Mrs. Yung left the court room smiling.

$20,000 DISSIPATED

FRED KANEN NOW POOR

Misfortune has befallen the family of Charles Kanen, a former tailor of this city, who used to live at the corner of Fifth street and Watchung avenue, according to advices received in this city.

Mr. Kanen, it is understood, is living in Philadelphia, while his family is living in the Bronx, New York. The fortune of $20,000 which Fred Kanen, his son, received as damages from the Central Railroad of New Jersey for being injured in the Westfield wreck is said to have been exhausted. Fred Kanen is now a clerk in the business department of Collier's Weekly.

Young Kanen was employed by a New York brokerage firm as a messenger boy, at the time of the Westfield wreck. He figured in the latter and was seriously injured. The case aroused much sympathy in this city, and after hanging fire for three years was finally adjusted. Damages of $20,000 were awarded young Kanen on the belief that he would never be able to walk again. A prominent lawyer of West Eight street, this city, contributed his legal services free out of sympathy for the family. A year later young Kanen was able to be out and to walk around. Now he has full use of all of his faculties, and is, practically, none the worse for the ordeal through which he went.

The Kanen girls, Clara and Florence, were graduated from the city high school in the class of 1907, and shortly after this the family moved to the Bronx, New York. Shortly after the wreck, Charles Kanen relinquished his tailoring business to engage in other business in New York. This latter business it is said, required capital at intervals, which gradually sapped away his money without bringing any tangible return. Good fortune favored him at intervals, but this was followed by disaster.

Martin J. Whalen Surprised.

A surprise party was tendered Martin J. Whalen at Ravine Road by a party of his friends Thursday night. Dancing was a feature of the evening's entertainment. Those present were: Anna Whalen, Alice Bohrer, Anna Thompson, Bertha Brokaw, Benjamin Thompson, Robert Skinner, Carrie Borup, Clyde Davis, Charles Schroder, Dorothy Lowney, Daniel McCormick, Ella Adams, Ella Connolly, Ethel Voehl, Ervin DeMeit, Frank Sturphorne, Florence Courtney, Irene Borup, George Brick, George Estelle, George McClusker, George Bowe, Hannah Hansen, Herbert Adams, Hilda Bennett, Hilda Blam, Helen Borup, L. Henry, Harry Voehl, Harold Vanderhoef, Ida Quinn, Jennie Griffin, Jennie Griffin, James McColey, James Whalen, John King, James Guttridge, James Caufield, John Gidden, John Conkley, James Henry, Leonard Bennett, Lillian Bowe, Lillian Courtney, Linden VanDoren, Lucretia Whalen, Martin Behrend, Marion Thompson, May Linden, Maida Brick, Vincent Marsh, Nora Callahan, Nellie Linden, Paul Rietor, Sarah Heyser, Wilbur DeWolt and Sadie Bowe.

THE BATHING GIRL OF 1909.

Among the varied bathing suits brought out for the summer season, a fashionable shop has projected upon the public the queerest one of all. Its novelty will probably gain a wide following.

It is of old-fashioned figured silk, the kind worn by grandma ago. The foundation color is of pink or blue or brown, with stripes of white and colored flowers over the surface.

The model is the popular semi-princess one, with a narrow belt at the waist and back, and a box plait down front and back. There is a Dutch neck, a lingerie collar and gathered sleeves half way to elbow.

The gown is only half of the costume. The accessories are important, too. There is a Charlotte Corday cap of silk, lined with rubber, with long streamers from the sides; a pair of shoes reaching well above the ankles, made with rubber soles, the top part of the silk, wide open in front and laced across like sandals with ribbons to match. The silk stockings are of the color of the silk frock.

The cap and the shoes are not so novel, however, as the sunshade and the reticule. Both of these are of the silk.

The sunshade is wide and flat, with a long bamboo handle and the reticule is a generous affair made like a sewing bag and carried over the arm by long wide ribbons of the silk.

The idea of adding these articles to a bathing costume is good and acceptable. Of course, they belong to the beach and not to the water. But even the best swimmers spend a great deal of their time on the beach these days.

As for the reticule it will prove a delight to every woman. In it she carries all the little articles that are necessary, such as talcum powder, a handkerchief, possibly cold cream, a book or magazine to read, her comb and brush, etc.

It is a dainty substitute for the black satchel. When there is so much of a beach parade these days, and when it is the habit to spend hours of the morning in one's bathing suit, it is quite a pretty idea to have the fight shoes, the picture hat, the gay little reticule and the necessary sunshade all in harmony with the suit.

MALONE IS NON-SUITED

Judge Isaac P. Runyon Takes Case from Jury After Recess.

PROBABLE CAUSE PROVED.

In the suit of Donato Malone for $500 damages for false arrest, imprisonment and malicious prosecution, against Salvatore Isolde, sometimes known as Salvatore Saldo, before Judge Isaac P. Runyon and a jury in the District court Thursday, some difficulty was experienced in obtaining a jury. After nine men had taken their seats in the jury box the panel was exhausted.

Some considerable hustling on the part of Justice Hezekiah Hand, which took fifteen or twenty minutes resulted in filling the vacancies in the box and the trial proceeded. Attorney F. J. Blatz appeared for the plaintiff and George W. Moy was the defendant's counsel.

According to Attorney Blatz's opening speech to the jury, Malone was accused, arrested, tried and acquitted on the charge of attempted criminal assault on the four-year-old daughter of Saldo on February 6, last, and for this Malone seeks to recover damages in the sum above noted.

City Judge William N. Runyon was the first witness for the plaintiff and testified to the issuance of the warrant for the arrest of Malone. Dr. Alvin R. Eaton, of Elizabeth, was then called, but was excused from testifying on objections raised by Attorney Moy and sustained by Judge Runyon.

Donato Malone, the plaintiff in the case, then took the stand and told through interpreter Skelley the story of the alleged crime and the arrest and indictment. He was released, besides the clubbing he received from Saldo.

Dr. Eaton was recalled to the stand and testified as to Malone's condition when the doctor examined him in the jail at Elizabeth. Dr. Eaton's testimony was all expert and had reference to the possible effect on heroin of a crime such as Malone is alleged to have attempted.

Attorney Moy pleaded for nonsuit in the case alleging that the probable cause for Saldo's action in having Malone arrested had been proved.

Judge Runyon, after listening to a strong presentation of the facts of the case by Mr. Blatz, decided that Malone had no ground for suit and discharged the jury. Judge Runyon decided the case on the testimony of Saldo himself, which is of a character which prevents its publication, and the decision rendered in the case of McFadden vs. Lane, 59 Atl. Dep. 365, by Judge Pitney, "Malice in law is the intentional doing of a wrongful act without just cause or excuse. A sworn accusation of an attempt to assault or other crime made as the basis of a criminal prosecution is excusable if probable excuse exists for the accusation, although acquittal follows." To disprove probable cause in a malicious prosecution, the defendant must show by preponderence of evidence that the defendant instituted the proceedings against him without reasonable or probable cause."

SOMERVILLE GIRL WEDS COUNCILMAN'S SON.

William Wilson, son of Councilman W. W. Wilson, of West Third street, and Miss Bertha Colvin, daughter of Michael Colvin, of Somerville, were married Wednesday afternoon at the latter's home in Somerville, Rev. Father Bogaard officiating. The bride was attended by Miss Ella Lappin, of this city, as bridesmaid, and Miles Wilson, a brother of the groom, was best man.

L. L. Baker Locates Here.

L. L. Baker, of Newark, who for five years was the assistant purchasing agent for the National Biscuit Company, for its seventy factories, has purchased the ice cream and confectionery business of T. B. Kolb on West Front street, and will make a number of improvements, with a view to conducting a first-class place. Mr. Kolb will go to his farm at Keyport.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 15, 1909.

REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—"Pilgrim's Progress" series.—VIII. Two valleys.—Ps. xxiii, 1-6; Mic. vii, 8; Rom. viii, 35-39.

Having sojourned in the Palace Plentiful and been instructed and having "put on the whole armor of God," Christian resumed his journey. He was accompanied part of the way by Discretion, Piety, Charity and Prudence, good companions of Christian at all time. These inhabitants of the palace accompanied him down to the foot of the hill upon which the beautiful palace was located. Supplying him with food and drink they returned and left him to continue alone.

His first experience following these events consisted in passing through two valleys, the valley of Humiliation and the valley of the Shadow of Death. In these valleys he met with serious difficulties and dangers. The Christian life is not always an easy one. Temptations assail us within and without. The pathway is often narrow and difficult of following, and all along the way we must trust in the strength of God and "follow where He leadeth." This was what Christian did, and in doing so he overcame. "Who is he that overcometh the world but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?" "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." Nothing can separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus."

1. The valley of Humiliation. No sooner had Christian entered this valley than he met "a foul fiend coming over the field to meet him. His name was Apollyon." Apollyon represents an evil spirit who tries to disturb the faith of men, to devour their souls. Christian was alarmed, but met the enemy. An argument arose as to whether Christian belonged to the kingdom of Apollyon or to the kingdom of Christ. At last they entered upon a severe struggle. But Christian put his strength in God and won the victory. The temptation here described refers to an inward rather than an outward one. Bunyan passed through the most dreadful mental and spiritual temptations, far beyond what the average Christian does; hence his strong presentation of inward spiritual temptations and conflicts, which may not, from want of experience, be fully understood by all Christians. We also have our inward doubts and depressions. Sometimes God's providences produce in us such a frame of mind. We ask why and get no definite answer. But God will keep us and strengthen us in this valley as He did Christian, we put our trust in Him.

2. The valley of the Shadow of Death. From the first valley Christian passed into the second. Some who had turned back urged Christian to do so, telling him of their awful experiences in the dark valley. But it was in the way to the celestial city, so undismayed he went boldly on. That some who start on the heavenly way and turn back should not cause us to do so. Yielding unto the devil is the only assurance of eternal life. "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee the crown of life." "No cross, no crown." The valley of the Shadow of Death was a place of awful expectations. The pathway was narrow and dark. "The mouth of hell stood hard by the wayside." There were flames of fire, fierce noises. He heard one singing, "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the Shadow of Death I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me." At this he was comforted. He prayed unto God in his trouble, and God delivered him. Valleys of darkness beset our way. Despair seems to settle upon us. But let us not fear. God will be with us. And if God be with us who can be against us?

BIBLE READINGS.

Ex. v. 15-23; Ps. xxiii, 27; cvii, 1-8; Jer. ii, 6; Heb. iii, 12-19; Eph. vi, 10-18; Rom. viii, 20-23; I John ii, 8-11; v, 1-7; Rev. ii, 10.

International C. E. Headquarters.

The purchase of two lots of land at the corner of Longwood and Huntington avenues, in Boston, by the United Society of Christian Endeavor has assured the erection of a building for new international headquarters for the society. The two parcels contain 13,044 square feet and are assessed on a valuation of $10,000. A five story commodious building to cost $200,000 or more is planned. It will contain offices of the United Society of Christian Endeavor of America and the World's Christian Endeavor union. There will be accommodations for the different branches of the society's work, including the publishing house. The upper floors of the building will be divided into halls and offices. It is the expectation of the officers that the building will be ready in the fall of 1910. Attention is being considered of having the wood and stone used in its erection come from all parts of the world. It has also been suggested that some of the rooms be furnished and named after some of the countries interested in the work. In the subscription for shares of the building fund at $5 a share California has so far taken more shares than any other state in the west. Austria has sent $1,000, and the following have subscribed: Marshall and Caroline islands, Norway, Denmark, Germany, Spain, Portugal, Italy, France and Russia. It is known that $100,000 is devoted to the cause in the Ills of people interested in the society. The people have $50,000 in hand and $30,000 in pledges.

From Far Norway.

On Christian Endeavor day the following cablegram was received by Dr. Clark at Boston from a Norwegian Christian Endeavorers:

All Norwegian Endeavorers send Dr Clark blessings and thanks. KLAEBOE.

QUARRELS OF MARRIED PEOPLE

You may play with fire; you may look into the muzzle of your gun to see if it is loaded; you may skate on thin ice; you may fool with dynamite; you may face the dogs of the old man who is the father of the girl you intend to wed, but you may not meddle with the quarrels of married people. It's a ticklish thing to do, asserts a writer in the New York Weekly.

The mutual friend has a hard time of it invariably. In nine cases out of ten, be his efforts every so disinterested, he ends by being heartily detested by both parties.

When your friend who has been a short time married comes to you and tells you how Kate has deceived him, and how dreadfully he was taken in by marrying her, don't listen to him. Change the conversation. Talk about the war in India, or the boils that Job had, or the last poem on spring, or anything else you fancy you don't talk about his wife with him.

There are some things a man must face alone. A married man, we mean. There are facts he has to meet, there are many disagreeable discoveries he must make, and all he can do is to "grin and bear it."

He has to discover that in many respects his wife is not the girl he courted; and if it shocks him, let him keep it to himself. You cannot help him to make her over into what he fancied her. It takes some time for two people to find out each other peculiarities, and it takes still longer for each one to be reconciled to those peculiarities.

There is no such thing as perfection in this world, or a man, either. The best human being that ever lived was full of imperfections. But when a woman is in love, she fancies her John is the sum and substance of all earthly perfection, and she is heartbroken when he swears over the way his bosoms are starched; and he, in turn, is sorry he ever married when she snaps out the intelligence that he ought to have to go without a shirt, for swearing at that same.

And this is the time when no mutual friend ought to interfere. Let the belligerents alone. It is all in a lifetime. It is part of the discipline which comes to every human heart.

A man and his wife must live in unity in other—not in their friends; and when they quarrel, if they are let severely alone by outsiders, they generally manage to settle things in due course of time. Mutual friends, or friends of friends, are responsible for most of the divorces.

It is like fanning a fire to advise a married woman or a married man what to do in a quarrel. Don't do it. It is none of your affair. Stand on neutral ground. Never interfere unless you see that there is going to be bloodshed. And then the probabilities are that if there is any blood spilled, it will be yours; for nine times out of ten two opposing forces will unite when a third party butts in.

So when your friends are quarreling, you had better go on a fishing tour, or take an agency for peddling shoestrings on commission. You want be out of the way.

REWARD OF THE FAITHFUL SERVANT.

The Merchant Prince had sent for the Faithful Clerk, who confronted his master tremblingly.

"Jenkins," said the Merchant Prince, "you have been in my employ for twenty-five years."

"Yes, sir," faltered the Faithful Clerk.

"Twenty-five years today, is it not?"

"Yes, sir. Thank you, sir, for remembering it."

"Tut! tut! You have been an honor to the house."

"Thank you again, sir."

"You have proved yourself worthy of my confidence."

"Oh, sir."

"You have grown gray in my service."

"Yes, sir."

"Jenkins, as a slight token of my recognition of this fact I have a present for you. Pray accept this bottle of hair dye!"—Woman's Home Companion for July.

THE ALMSBAG.

One of the newest wrinkles of fashion and a quaintly pretty and useful one is the "almsbag." These hanging pockets are made in many ways and of all kinds of materials. Some belong to the bill, others a part of the gown. One shown is a suit of white linen was about five inches wide in the greatest width. The embroidery and monogram were in white cotton and a pearl button fastened the flap. It was lined with linen, and the stitching on the outside edge kept it flat. Linen fringe gave a finish to the bottom, and stitched straps suspended it from the belt.

Grape Marmalade.

Marmalade made of fox grapes is very good. The grapes should be stripped from thestems and put in a wide-mouthed stone par set in a deep pan of boiling water. Heat until the grapes begin to soften; then stir with a wooden spoon or paddle. When they are thoroughly crushed and broken rub through a sieve, rejecting the seeds. Measure the pulp and to every pint allow one-half pound of sugar. Put over the fire and boil for a half-hour, stirring constantly. Put in sealed jars or jelly glasses.

LIFE PROBLEM AND SCIENCE.

"The first obvious thing about any "living" being is the substance of it—the pounds of material of which it is composed, writes Robert Kennedy Duncan in Harper's Magazine. Is there anything about it "make" of this material that is mysterious, esoteric; anything that might show the action or the presence of this "Life?" There is this about the substances that constitute a "living" being; there is the bewildering complexity of them, and their liability of irritability. These two characteristics of "living" matter are so salient as to appear at first sight transcendental. But this is not so; the complexity of these substances is due chiefly to the carbon atoms that in such large measure comprise them. There is nothing transcendental about this power of the carbon atom; it is a long known, perfectly recognized fact of general chemistry—"vitality" has nothing to do with it.

As for the lability of "living" matter, it is due in the main to the nitrogen atom, the most powerful, mutable entity in nature. There is nothing occult about it; in fact, the chemistry of nitrogen and the nitrogen atom is much more pronounced in guncotton, nitroglycerine, and in gunpowder, than it is in the proteids of the animal tissues. There is thus about the two most salient characteristics of "living" matter nothing that is mysterious, ultraknowledgeable, or extra-scientific.

As for the intrinsic nature of these substances, there is this to be said: that when the chemist can make in his laboratory bodies identical in composition and in property with substances of vegetable or animal origin, there is no longer any mystery in these substances per se—i. e., except in so far as everything is mystery. He has been able to do this, and every year brings its increasing swarm of synthesized natural products. To take a few examples; he has recently made in his laboratory the indigo of the indigo plant; vanillin of the vanilla pod; chrysin of popular buds; apiegnin of parsley; luteolin of the broom plant; ricetin of yellow cedar; quercetin of sumac; kampferol of the blue larkspur; galangrin of the galanga root; camphor of the camphor tree, and seven more.

Others have been made in the laboratory that are the products of the animal organism—dozens of compounds—such as cystein and cystine, leucine, indolacetic acid, and even uric acid, which are responsible for most of the divorces.

It is like fanning a fire to advise a married woman or a married man what to do in a quarrel. Don't do it. It is none of your affair. Stand on neutral ground. Never interfere unless you see that there is going to be bloodshed. And then the probabilities are that if there is any blood spilled, it will be yours; for nine times out of ten two opposing forces will unite when a third party butts in.

INTERESTING SERVICES ON THE MOUNTAIN.

The services at the King's Daughters' Camp on the mountain yesterday afternoon was largely attended and was of marked interest throughout. The meeting was in charge of George E. Hall, superintendent of the Park avenue Sunday school. Mrs. J. A. Powlison continued her talk about "Little Houses," which she began last Sunday. The speaker illustrated her remarks by the use of several anecdotes of boys and girls, all of which held the closest attention of the children as well as their elders.

The local corps of the Salvation Army took a prominent part in the meeting. Prayer was offered by Mrs. John W. Price; the Scriptures was read by Mrs. Captain S. A. Hewitt; duets were sung by Misses Sadie and Julia Price and Captain Hewitt led the singing. E. H. Guest played a cornet solo. The stage which had been donated for the use of these meetings carried thirty guests to the camp and many more were in attendance. These meetings will continue the balance of the summer.

WOMEN AND THE PICNIC.

An investigator, fired with a desire to find out just how far woman had been ruled by a helpmate to her alleged lord during the recent era of economy, took a reckless plunge into a stormy sea of figures and came up, breathless, but clutching various statistical pearls. There was truly no doubt that America had been saving money, even in the most important matter of woman's apparel and adornment. For where were the duties levied on diamonds and pearls? So small as almost to escape notice. As for ostriches, if they were not already plucked their crowning glory, they had fled to

WINTER HOME FOR BIRDS.

In Bowdoinham is a bird nursery where all through the winter months the apple and cherry trees are filled with bluejays, woodpeckers, and others, eight varities of birds having been seen there this season by Mrs. W. B. Kendall, says the Kennebec (Me.) Journal.

In the trees the Kendalls place long strips of suet suspended by wires, and further down in the branches of a cherry tree is a big box fastened accurely and always well filled with corn. "We never use cracked corn now," said Mrs. Kendall, "as the English sparrows get it all away from the others. Some days the box is blue with the bluejays. There are two kinds of woodpeckers.

"Morning is the best time to watch the birds, though; they come in great numbers for their breakfast. When it is very cold the Carolina wrens or winter chippies come down from Canada. Then there are the pine gros beaks—big flock of them—and that red-headed woodpecker you see swinging away as he hangs to that piece of suet in very tame. I go out and talk to him often and he is never the least bit frightened. One chickadee family—father, mother and baby—is very interesting.

"We have the hairy and downy woodpeckers, the nut hatches, chickadees, Canadian sparrows and the English sparrows, the bluejays and the pine gros beaks, and sometimes the shriek or butcher bird makes his appearance. The other birds are frightened of him, for he kills them when he gets a chance."

STY LOTION.

A simple and helpful lotion consists of camphor water one ounce, and muriate of morphine, two grains. Apply with a bit of cotton. Do not strain the eyes, as the pain will only be increased. The better way is to have the sty lanced, but many people object to the knife. However, the operation is a very simple one in the hands of a physician, and in a case where stye come on the eye several times a year, they have been apparently checked by lancing.

LITERARY

An important feature of Woman's Home Companion this summer is the Reminiscences of the late venerable Edward Everett Hale. The August issue contains, in place of its regular monthly chapter of the Reminiscences, the publication of which commenced before Doctor Hale's death, a beautiful tribute to the eminent writer and minister by his personal friend W. H. McElroy.

The leading article of the August Century, the Midsummer Holiday Number, is Mr. Richard Watson Gilder's "Grover Cleveland: A Record of Friendship," a sympathetic appreciation of the personality of Mr. Cleveland as revealed in an intimacy of many years. The reminiscences will extend to some three instalments in The Century Magazine. In them Mr. Gilder records a friendship of twenty-one years, extending from the time of the Democratic campaign in the first term of the ex-President's death. These papers constitute the most intimate description of Mr. Cleveland's life and character and personal traits—as President and ex-President, at work and at play—that has yet been given to the world. The pictures are new and mainly from amateur sources. One of the pictures in the August number gives the interior of the studio at Marion—with Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson and Mrs. Cleveland and her mother—in which room Mr. Cleveland conducted a sort of moot-court of the most amusing description, "one night in Marion."

The Fiction Number (August) of Scribner's Magazine presents a remarkable list of the best American and English writers—Maurice Hewlett, Edith Wharton, E. W. Hornung, F. Hopkinson Smith, Mary Cholmondeley, Katharine Holland Brown, Thomas Nelson Page, and Margaret Sherwood. These writers are represented by characteristic stories showing the particular charm that has made them not only popular but highly esteemed by their excellent workmanship. The stories, most of them illustrated, are: "Beckwith's Fairy," by Maurice Hewlett—afantastic tale of the present day in rural England. "The Bob," by Edith Wharton—"the another of Men's Men," this one putting in contrast personal loyalty and the scientific spirit.

The Red Book Magazine for August will no doubt be preserved for a longer period than a monthly magazine is, due to the publication in that issue of "The House of Joy that is Gone," an exquisite prose fancy by Richard Le Gallienne.

In the August number of "Success Magazine" begins a series of little comedies of "Kon and Mewee," under the title, "New Tales of the Road," by Charles N. Crewdson. In "She Is an Actress," Mabel Taliaferro cries out against the injustice done her profession by calling all behind the footlights "actresses." Mary Heaton Vorse, in an article called "What Women Might Do For Their Towns," points out some duties which every home-loving woman should keep in her heart. "Brer Boll Weevil," by Barry Dickson, tells a story which tells of the ruin done cotton and credit by a mere bug.

William J. Locke tells a charming romantic story of a rejuvenated love, entitled "A Moonlight Effect," in the August number of the American Magazine. In addition, Jack London recounts the tragic case of "The Shrieker of Koo," Stewart Edward White writes about a mystery and a murder in "The Hole in the Cap." Harvey J. O'Higgins tells a story of touching pathos and Irish humor in "His Mother," and Lincoln Colcord contributes which is the form have placed him among the popular novelists as a "best seller." This time Dr. Thomas talks of "Indispensable Bacteria," and tells of the bottle of germs that can be ordered by mail, and will do the work of many loads of old fertilizer. The article teems with startling truths, and is so simply written that to understand it requires no previous scientific experience.

The August issue of the Atlantic Monthly is a midsummer number distinguished by the publication of a complete novelette entitled "Cecily." The story is by William J. Hopkins, the author of "The Clammer," which was one of the most successful short stories of recent philosophy and humor which characterized his works. There are two papers of literary appreciation on "George Meredith" and "Oliver Wendell Holmes."

If fresh fish is to be kept overnight it should be salted and laid on an earthen dish, not placed on a board or shelf.

PLAINFIELD A. C. DEFEATED IN CLOSE GAME

The Plainfield A. C. was defeated by the Berkeley Heights A. C., at the latter place, Saturday afternoon, by the score of 9 to 8, in a well-played, fast contest. The Plainfield boys scored four runs in the ninth inning and came near winning out, but Wolfe, the opposing pitcher, proved a little too strong and nipped their aspirations in the bud.

Johnston, who pitched for Plainfield, had good control and plenty of speed. Plainfield outbatted Berkeley Heights, securing thirteen hits to ten for the latter, but the winning aggregation bunched their bingles. The score:

F. C. SUTRO SPEAKS AT THE FRESH AIR CAMP.

The meeting at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home Sunday afternoon was well attended and included some fifty mothers of the children who are being entertained at the camp. The services were in charge of F. C. Sutro, of Basking Ridge, who was accompanied by several members of the choir of the First Presbyterian church of that town.

Mr. Sutro gave an interesting talk to the children taking for his subject the proverb: "Go to the ant thou sluggard." Mr. Sutro made the story plain in his comparison of the industry and co-operation of the little insects and what is possible for children to accomplish.

Rev. Morgan Ashley, rector of St. Stephen's church, who followed Mr. Sutro, used no text, but took the soldier as his topic, drawing from it a lesson in obedience and facing the great enemy—sin.

Miss Emma Collins, of the Basking Ridge choir, sang two solos accompanied on the organ by Miss Backoven. A very good collection was taken up.

Heard Something.

One summer evening a miller was leaning over his garden gate, facing the road, enjoying his pipe, when a wretched young farmer happened to be passing. The miller, in a friendly tone, said:

"Good evening, George."

"I didn't speak," said George, gruffly.

"Oh," said the miller, "I thought you did; but it must have been your ears flapping."

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Luna Park, always foremost in the summer amusement line, is about to spring another surprise. The magic device by which more than thirty-four million persons have been whirled around and tossed into fits of laughter are to be opened to public view. Like many of the magicians tricks, which are made doubly interesting by an exposure following their presentation, several of the rides are to be demolished in their entirety. Their machinery is to be placed on view and their wonders explained.

Thousands of visitors to Luna this summer have expressed a desire to see the workings of the various devices and since the queen of England and Empress Victoria began to pay regular visits to Shepherd's Bush to ride on the Witching Waves, the number of inquisitors has greatly increased. The Queen and her daughter descended a narrow ladder to the machinery pit to see the intricate and cleverly devised machinery of the waves at work and as this rolling sea was first installed by T. Von Kannel, the originator of the revolving doors, at Luna Park, Frederic Thompson determined to show every American what the Queen saw, the secret of sailing in baskets.

The fascinating contrivance attracts both young and old, providing no end of fun for everyone. All who have visited Luna this summer have heard the "Scotch! You'll get wet if you can't swim! Let me steer!" And a young miss grabs the wheel and bump! goes the car, while the spectators shout with glee.

A clothes basket on wheels mounting waterless waves, is the way the ride was described by one who was at a loss to give a clearer account of it. It is a trip around an undulating course, surrounding a long "island" with rocky shores and on it sail small vessels on wheels, propelled by the surface as well. The boats amble around and zig-zag and flounder in the trough of the seas, at the sweet will of the occupant. One of the fascinating parts is the idea of having a hand in the running and trying to conquer the vagaries of a lurching vessel. This feature attracts everyone, from infant to grandfather. Of course the wrecks are the funniest part, when the occur gallant sailor laddies cross the seas and promptly rescue the party in distress. Sometimes, the whole case in steering will take the most timid safely around the course. Most persons, though, find sport in experimenting and new "stunts" crop up daily.

"A Gentleman from Mississippi" is again at the Bijon Theatre, having terminated Saturday night last a highly successful engagement at the Aerial Gardens. During the two months that the play was on the roof the Bijon Theatre was entirely redecorated and refurnished and for the coming season it will be numbered among the prettiest playhouses of the metropolis. The piece is the most successful play produced in recent years. It is full of fun, a line in its four acts that is not in the spirit of pure comedy, by which is meant a play that truly reflects life without touching more than lightly upon the tragic aspect that must, sooner or later, darken all are not conducted according to the strict moral law. In this play, the characters of Carolina Langdon, Senator Langdon's lovely elder daughter, and Charles Norton, a member of the House of Representatives from Mississippi, who is trying to carry the burden of a wrong they seek to do the fair name of the girl's fine minded father. They think that they can enrich themselves at the expense of the nation if they can shove a cube of ice into the deal that is to have such rich fruit. But the father has taken into his service a young newspaper man, alert as a deer and smart as a man well can be; and this spry youngster, his wife helped by the love for the new Senator's daughter, knows all concerned the way out of the darkness into which a few moments of deceit has plunged them. Thomas A. Wise and Douglas Fairbanks will continue to head the large cast.

Tonic for Dry Skin.

Be very careful in the choice of soaps, as many have the tendency of making the skin tight and drawn. Lanna oil soap or olive soap agree perfectly with the skin. Apply this tonic with a bit of medicated cotton several times a day: Glycerine, 2 ounces; limewater, 2 ounces; distilled witch hazel, 2 ounces. Once each week cream should be excellent for missaging.

An Odd Decoration.

For a table decoration on a very warm day, it would be hard to find anything more dainty and refreshing than the following: Fill a rose bowl with sparkling mineral water, and immerse in it the stems of nasturtiums with a few of the leaves below the surface, after a short time the blossoms and foliage will become covered with a mass of frost-like moisture, which is very cool and attractive in appearance.

Ethics of the Case.

"Look here, doctor," says the expatient, coming into the physician's office with a determined expression. "I've just had the X-rays turned on me, and I find that when you operated on me you left a pair of surgical scissors in me."

"Bless me!" says the specialist. "I had missed them. Thank you so much, my good may, I will add their cost to your bill."—Life.

REV. DR. EATON TO SPEAK AT NETHERWOOD CAMP

There is a treat in store for those who attend the services at Netherwood Fresh Air Home next Sunday afternoon. Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, former pastor of the Euclid Avenue Baptist church of Cleveland, Ohio, where John D. Rockefeller is a worshipper, will talk to the children. Doctor Eaton has consistently refused to leave his mountain home to preach during his summer vacation, but he could not resist the appeal made in behalf of the poor children from the slums of the big city. There will also be some noted singers to render solos.

The stereopticon which was to have arrived on Saturday was shipped to another Netherwood in New York State, so the children were disappointed. It is expected that the machine will be at the Home today and announcement will be made later as to the evenings on which exhibitions will be given. Miss Curry would be glad if some elocutionist and singers of comic songs would volunteer to amuse some of the evenings of this week and next.

VAGRANT "TYPO" IS CAUGHT PANHANDLING

A type-setter, who calls no place but "Merrie England" his home, was arrested by Patrolman Messler on North avenue Sunday afternoon, when he was engaged in "bracing" people for the "carfare to Bound Brook." The man said his name is Jowan Smith and told a pathetic story of sickness and love that won him a suspended sentence from City Judge Runyon at his hearing Monday morning.

After a short dissertation about the evils of linotype machines as killers of the printer's business, "Smith" told of a lost job in Bound Brook, where he said he has relatives. "I had seven cents left when I got to Plainfield yesterday," he said, "and it was too late to walk to Bound Brook, so I asked a man for money. I have a rich sweet-heart over in England, and I guess I'll go back there and marry her. She's got a fortune of 40,000 pounds, and used to spend her money on me freely before I came to America."

Asked why he didn't settle down and work, the prisoner said that he had been "set back" by a stroke of paralysis, and at the time of his sickness, a physician had told him that he'd never walk again. "If you'd given me a job in Plainfield anyhow, and as he started out of the court-room he said. "Say, I wish that physician could see me now!"

FUMIGATING CANDLES CAUSE ALARM OF FIRE IN WEST END.

Mistaking the smoke from burning sulphur candles used in fumigating the home of C. Wesley Holland, of West Seventh street, for smoke coming from a chimney, a passerby sent in an alarm to the West End fire company at 2:30 o'clock Monday afternoon.

The firemen responded in good time, but had nothing to do. It appears that a domestic opened one of the windows in a room where the candles were burning, and the smoke issuing from the window attracted the attention of a passerby who sent in a still alarm.

Plainfielders on Canoeing Trip.

Edward Abbott, of West Front street; Frank Wilcox, of Watchung avenue; Russel Morris, of East Seventh street, and Alfred Beeken, of Fanwood, who left last week for a trip to Hedgeville by way of the Morris canal, reached there after a three days' trip. They passed through sixteen locks and eight planes and they are now encamped at the Ram's Horn on Halsey Island. The camping spot was given to them by John Hall, of this city. They will leave Monday for home, making the trip by way of the Raritan canal.

Successful Automobile Tour.

The auto touring party under the management of F. S. Cutter, of Sandford avenue, returned home Sunday afternoon after a most delightful and successful tour of eight days, which included a stop at Poughkeepsie, Saratoga, Lake George (two days' visit) and returning by way of the Berkshire Hills. The party included Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Cutter, Miss S. Etta Rayboet and Miss Lillian A. Force. Mr. Cutter is an ideal chauffeur, and his E-M-F car behaved admirably, and no accident occurred to mar the pleasure of the trip which was nearly 800 miles.

Counsellor Crane Wears a Smile.

R. Newton Crane, the famous counsellor, he of the small stature, but massive brain, is passing around some Perfectos among his intimates today besides wearing a grin that occasionally broadens into a smile that won't come off. The cause, well, that you could almost guess, but if you're not a good guesser it's twins, a boy and a girl, and both are doing well as Mrs. Crane. The twins were born at the Tentsloff Sanatorium, New York City, on Saturday.

The town of Cranford has been given the decision in the suit against M. B. Block's bondsman, Morris Abrams, of this city, but the latter has appealed the case to the higher courts. Cranford has been boarding Mrs. Block for the past five weeks.

THE "STILL SMALL VOICE."

The moral of this story may be that it is better to heed the warnings of the "still small voice" before it is driven to the use of the telephone.

A New York lawyer, gazing idly out of his window, saw a sight in an office across the street that made him rub his eyes and look again. Yes there was no doubt it. The pretty stenographer was sitting upon the knee of her employer. The lawyer noticed the name that was lettered on the window and then searched in the telephone book. Still keeping his eye upon the scene across the street, he called the gentleman up. In a few moments he saw him start violently, and take down the receiver.

"Yes," said the lawyer through the telephone, "I should think you would start."

The victim whisked his arm from his former position and began to stammer something.

"Yes," continued the lawyer severely, "I think you'd better take that arm away. And while you're about it, as long as there seem to be plenty of chairs in the room—"

The victim brushed the lady from his lap rather roughly, it is to be feared. "Who—who the devil is this, anyhow?" he managed to splutter.

"I," answered the lawyer in deep, impressive tones, "am your conscience!" And then he hung up.—Everybody's Magazine.

PLAINFIELD TO HAVE FOUR MORE ELECTION OFFICERS.

The Union County Board of Elections will meet on Monday, August 16, when three names received from both Republicans and Democrats and from which will be chosen election officers for the various districts in the county. The board has organized by re-electing Robert H. McAdams, of Elizabeth, chairman; George J. Stewart, of Elizabeth, secretary; S. Rusling Ryno, of Rahway, clerk; Oliver Conklin, of Elizabeth, sergeant at arms. The other members of the board are Ralph L. Morrow, of this city, and Fred Zior, of Elizabeth.

On account of the opening of a new election district in the Second ward, there will be four new election officers required, making a total of forty for the entire city, comprising Republicans and Democrats.

DEATH OF CHARLES YEAGER A PROMINENT MASON.

Charles Yeager, of 826 Webster place, died Monday after a lingering illness of cancer. Mr. Leager was in his sixty-third year and besides his wife leaves a family of two sons and three daughters. He was connected for several years with the Plainfield Storage Company as manager and was well known throughout the furniture trade. He was a member of Washington chapter, R. A. M., and had been a resident of this city for the past twenty-five years. He was born in Germany, but all his children were born in Madison, or this city.

The five children surviving Mr. Yeager are Harry C. and Albert R. and Emma J., Florence M. Yeager, and Mrs. Margaret L. Black, all of Plainfield.

PLAINFIELD DOGS WIN AT LONG BRANCH SHOW

Summer folk from cottage colonies, which dot the North Jersey shore, as well as dog fanciers from all parts of the State, attended the second annual exhibition of the Monmouth County Kennel Club at Hollywood Park, Long Branch, Saturday afternoon. There were 950 entries, and the largest crowd of Plainfielders at any show was noted.

Plainfield dogs, as usual, figured prominently in the awards. Meadowview Kennels, owned by A. G. Hotsey, won the winners in both dog and bitch classes, with Meadowview Yale and Meadowview Beatrice. They also won a cup for the best bred dog by exhibitor with champion Meadowview Rock, who was shown with Lady Allister for exhibition and specials only. The kennels also won in the brace and team class.

CONOVER WAS TOO STRONG FOR NEWTON A.C.

St. Mary's defeated the fast Newton A. C. of Rahway, Saturday afternoon on St. Mary's oval by the score of 9 to 3. "Hub" Conover and T. Mullen cared for the curve department of the St. Mary's nine, and did effective work. Ayers and Witheridge were the box for the visitors. Ayers was hit freely at all times. Three strike outs were credited to him, while his opponent, Conover, pitched a steady game fanning out eleven batsmen. He got good support from his team mates.

The score stood 3 to2 up to the seventh inning, when St. Mary's came to the bat. Heavy hitting then won the game. The score and summary follow:

EVEN EYELET BORDERS.

Few women can work smoothly the open eyelet borders so much seen in Madeira embroidery. There is a way to make the edges uniform where one eyelet joins another, and the general effect is spoiled.

The reason of this is that the work is not properly done. An instructor who had a number of natives from the Island of Madeira exhibiting their work in this country disclosed the secret of the smooth openings.

Each eyelet is outlined with cotton in the usual way; is then slit, if the shape be oval, and pierced if round, and the edges turned back with a needle. This is as any one would do, but in the working of the over-and-over stitch lies the difference.

Instead of finishing each eyelet at a time, as most of us would do, it is worked half way round on each side to where one opening joins the next one. Then that eyelet is done in the same way, and so on around the entire outer line of the border. The work is then reversed and the upper half of the eyelets embroidered in the same way.

With this treatment there is no unevenness, pulling or ugly ridges where the stitches meet, so hard to avoid by ordinary method of working.

Young People Find Employment.

The following young people, who have completed their course of study at the Plainfield Business College, have accepted positions since last week: Miss Kathryn Samson, of Dunellen, with H. E. Brown, of Liberty street, New York city; Miss May Fisher, with George A. Beaton, 115 Broadway, New York city; Miss Alice Winters with Arm at 95 Liberty street, New York city, and Wallace Hill with Ransom Concrete Co. of this city.

AUTO 'BUS LINE STARTS

Two Railroads and Three Towns Now Connected With Plainfield.

MANY GO TO METUCHEN.

"No Conductor" 'Buses Now Make the Trip Every Two Hours by Way of South Plainfield and Oak Tree.

The Plainfield Auto Bus Company started its service from this city to South Plainfield, Oak Tree and Metuchen this morning, when a party of directors made the first trip over the route. The 'bus started from Rowley's drug store at 8:30 o'clock and its occupants were Isaac Schwed, Ira L. LaRue, Fred A. Duttenhofer, Milton Mendel, Frank L. C. Martin, Frank Rowley, Clarence Levy, Thomas Brantingham and a Daily Press reporter. A. E. Force, the president of the company, and Judge William Newcorn, the vice-president, were both unable to accompany the party.

The trip was made in good time and the 'bus won favorable comment all along the route. Farmers gathered with their families and laborers to greet the party as it passed by, and at Metuchen, Mayor Wilson and a party of representative business and professional men welcomed the Plainfielders. The trip from Metuchen to this city, including several stops, was made in thirty-two minutes. This is considered good time.

All of the roads over which the route passes are macadamized and there are no railroad crossings. In fact the most dangerous crossing in the whole route is at the corner of Fourth street and Park avenue, this city. The route connects the Central Railroad with the Lehigh Valley Railroad at South Plainfield and at Oak Tree, and also the Pennsylvania Railroad at Metuchen. At this place it also connects with a trolley line, leading to New Brunswick and Perth Amboy. The trip to either of these places from Metuchen may be made for ten cents. By reason of this, it opens up to Plainfielders for a small fare, a quick and convenient pathway to the pleasure resorts and beaches on Staten Island and the coast. The route passes through the picturesque country surrounding Oak Tree and as a rate of speed averaging fifteen miles an hour is maintained, the trip to and from Metuchen bids fair to become popular as a pleasure journey.

The 'bus is a large carryall, enamelled in black, with gold lettering below the windows. It will seat fourteen people with comfort and runs easily. There is comparatively little vibration and as skilled mechanics are employed, the danger from breakdowns is very slight. The 'buses are of the "no conductor" type. Passengers deposit their fare in an automatic register, which the chauffeur turns after the coin has been deposited. In this way the services of a conductor are dispensed with. The company for the present will operate two cars. One will be used in the morning and the other in the afternoon. They will be in charge of Edward J. Varley and Bertram V. Brokaw. A larger 'bus is held in reserve by the company to be used for excursions and for special automobile parties.

The service is now in operation and will be continued daily, including Sunday. 'Buses will leave the Plainfield postoffice at six o'clock in the morning and every two hours thereafter until ten o'clock at night. Returning, the 'buses will leave Metuchen on the odd hours, starting at seven o'clock and continuing until eleven o'clock. Provided that the patronage warrants it, hourly trips will be made from each point in the near future. At present the trip from Plainfield to Metuchen is made in slightly over half an hour, but the established schedule provides for a forty-five minute trip. The fare for the full trip either way is twenty-five cents. From this city to South Plainfield it is ten cents, and an additional five cents is charged to Oak Tree. Trips may be made between stations for a fare of ten cents.

Many Plainfielders took occasion to make the trip today and all expressed general satisfaction with the service. The officers of the company are: A. E. Force, president; William Newcorn, vice-president; Fred A. Duttenhofer, secretary, and Isaac Schwed, treasurer.

Dr. Geswein to Remain Here.

Dr. C. A. Geswein, of The Bristol, West Front street and Central avenue, who had planned to remove to Springfield, this county, to practice medicine, has changed his mind and will remain at his present place of residence and continue to practice here.

F. C. Burner, of Jackson avenue, went to the hospital, last night, where he will undergo an operation.

WORK ON TUBERCULOSIS PAVILION PROGRESSING

The foundations of the tuberculosis pavilion being erected by the Plainfield Society for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis on the Muhlenberg Hospital grounds, have been completed and all is in readiness for the frame work of the building. The building committee has announced that the pavilion will probably be ready for the accommodation of patients by the first of October.

Miss Josephine Hughes, superintendent of Muhlenberg Hospital, together with members of the hospital medical staff and William Dutcher, chairman of the camp executive committee, are planning a trip to the State sanatorium at Glen Gardner for the purpose of observing the methods employed at that institution, and the local society will adapt the most up-to-date methods of treatment and care at the camp. Miss Georgiana Hoadley Smith, chairman of the sub-committee on supplies for the pavilion, reports that many of the necessary interior furnishings have been provided, but the camp still needs eight beds, with bedding, and chairs, tables, crockery and kitchen utensils.

William Dutcher, chairman of the camp executive committee, has issued an appeal for funds and cooperation on the part of the Plainfield public. In this appeal, he states that the society intends to conduct a campaign of education regarding tuberculosis and its prevention in the city schools during the coming winter term. To do this work of instruction, as well as to maintain the camp, Mr. Dutcher requests liberal contributions, and these may be sent to Edward F. Fleckert, chairman of the finance committee, at the Plainfield Trust Company.

DEMANDS FOR OFFICE HELP.

Many Local Firms are Increasing Their Office Forces.

Since Monday morning the Drake Business College has had seven calls from Plainfield business houses for competent bookkeepers or stenographers at salaries ranging from eight to fifteen dollars per week. One young man who has been attending this college but four months was placed in a position, as stenographer in the office of a local manufacturing concern at a salary of ten dollars per week. Another young man sixteen years old, was placed in a similar position at a salary of eight dollars per week for the start.

Drake College has won the confidence of the majority of the business men of Plainfield as well as a large proportion of its citizens.

If you wish your son or daughter to become proficient in English, bookkeeping, shorthand and typewriting and secure a good paying position when the course is completed, enroll him now, for the fall term, August 30. If you wish to fit your son or daughter for business in the least possible time, and at the least possible expense, enroll him in the day school, Monday morning, August 23.

Any former graduate of this school not entirely satisfied with his present position, should communicate with the Principal of Drake College, as there are no students sufficiently advanced to meet the present demand on this college for competent office help.

PEDIGREED PERSIAN CAT IMPORTED BY MISS MYGRANT

The Hafiz Cattery, owned by Miss T. Louise Mygrant, of Fanwood, has a recent acquisition which is unique in that it is the only example of its kind living in this county. The animal is a cream Persian male with a pedigree dating back as far as pedigrees of the feline tribe usually go and is a beauty in its class.

This highly pedigreed cat arrived from Barnard Castle, England, yesterday and great things are promised for its future. It will be exhibited at the shows after it has become thoroughly acclimated. The previous importations of this species of feline have not resulted favorably and if this one lives his progeny will be much sought after.

Removed to Muhlenberg Hospital.

Through the kind offices of William Jeffery, of Berkeley Heights, and Theodore J. Hervey Doane, of this city, Mrs. August Ketschau, aged 70 years, of Glenside, New Providence township, was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital today for eye treatment. Mrs. Ketschau, who is in poor circumstances, was found yesterday by Mr. Jeffery at her home suffering from partial blindnes, due to a severe cold. He immediately took steps to have the woman removed to the hospital.

—Fancy fruit, the finest grown, and fresh vegetables, the pick of the market, are offered at Neuman Bros.' store today. There is nothing better for a summer diet and the prices are reasonable.

DEMOCRATS ON OUTING

Fourteenth Annual Event Greatest in History of Democratic City Committee.

MAY MEET WEST INDIAN GAIT.

Dennis F. Collins, James E. Martine and Charles A. Towne to Speak at Grove.

An overcast sky, ominous in its portents greeted the early visions of the Democrats who had made up their minds to attend the fourteenth annual outing of the Democratic county committee today. All the arrangements for the trip were completed last night and the final caution read to the weather man. But despite the warnings given to the controller of the weather the early morning indications did not presage a pleasant day. The weather reports said that a West Indian cyclone was on its way up the coast and the influence of that kind of a storm is always felt in Long Island Sound.

The stout iron steamer Sirius will be tested to its capacity according to all indications and it is confidently expected that the outing will prove the most interesting and successful of any in the history of the organization. The advance sale of tickets has been enormous, in fact, far in advance of any previous event of the kind and between 1,200 and 1,500 persons are expected to attend.

There will be many prominent statesmen in the party among whom Frank S. Katzenbach, of Trenton, is conspicuous. Mr. Katzenbach's friends are booming him for the gubernatorial nomination next year and this subject will engross the members of today's picnic on the way to the grove at College Point. Of course, James E. Martine, the famous Plainfielder, is among the partisans and is down for one of his silvery speeches.

Another, who is not a Jerseyman, but is known throughout the length and breadth of the land for his eloquence, Charles A. Towne, will be heard in a speech at the grove. Mayor Victor Mravlag, was invited but it was not certain that he would grace the occasion with his presence.

The party will go to Witzel's Point View Grove at College Point, and expect to reach that haven of rest and enjoyment at 9 o'clock this morning. Returning they will leave the grove at 6 o'clock and will probably reach the dock at Elizabeth at 9 tonight.

According to the arrangements it is proposed that on reaching the grove the guests will form in line, headed by the band and march in solid phalanxes to the pavilion, where the sumptuous repast promised by the committee of arrangements will await them. Here the perfect service of the well accustomed host will proceed to fill up the hungry company with a dinner such as only he knows how to serve.

At this point in the proceedings it is expected that the oratory will be turned on. And it is hoped by those who are unable to attend this impressive and important function that faithful chroniclers of the doings of the day will not have lost their cunning nor their pencils their points, so that a true record of the thrilling oubliettsis of oratory may be faithfully recorded.

When Mr. Martine was discerned coming toward the dock he was greeted with cheers that could be heard for many blocks. The Plainfielder acknowledged the reception by doffing his yachting cap and bowing to the assembled multitude. All of which goes to prove that "Jim" is as popular as ever and is still loved by the "peepul."

LIBRARY AT SCOTCH PLAINS CLOSED FOR LACK OF FUNDS.

At a meeting of the Public Library Association of Scotch Plains held last evening it was decided to close the library on September 1. This action was found necessary owing to lack of support by the public, and the inability of the association to obtain sufficient funds to carry on the work.

It is to be regretted that such an action was necessary in view of the fact that this institution has had a existence of thirty years. In its time it has had the support of many public spirited citizens, and to these it owes many thanks for its life.

Trinity Endeavorers at the Camp.

Despite the inclement weather last night a large delegation from the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church, was present at the Norwood Fresh Air Camp and took charge of the service. The program comprised vocal and instrumental music, an illustrated talk which held the undivided attention of the young people and children. Plans are under way for an interesting service on Sunday afternoon.

SCOTT HELD IN $300 BAIL FOR STABBING

Since Father Adam fell from grace, led on by Mother Eve,
Fair Eden's site has long been lost, at least so men believe.
But comes the news from those who know, and this they oft repeat,
That Brookside is the very spot; our parents' first retreat.

Nathaniel Scott, who knifed Joseph Pritchard in the back in a fight between the colored men at a Madison avenue pool-room Monday night, was held under $300 bail to await the action of the grand jury, at his hearing before Judge Runyon at the city court this morning. In default of the bond, Scott was taken to the county jail at Elizabeth this afternoon.

Pritchard, who has a deep cut seven inches long in his left shoulder, was in court, although apparently very weak. He was the stakeholder in a game of "Chicago pool" between Scott and "Polly" Pollard, colored, and the fight started when he refused to pay the bet to Scott, who claimed that he had won. According to Pritchard's story, which is verified by several witnesses, Pollard won the game by a single point, despite the fact that the 13 ball in the "rotation" game had been awarded to Scott to settle a dispute.

According to the injured man, Scott got angry at what he said was an attempt on the part of "the gang" to cheat him out of his winnings, and drawing a short-bladed pocket knife, lunged at the stake-holder as he turned from him to avoid an argument. The stab was a deep one, and in withdrawing the knife, Scott cut his own hand, inflicting a cut on other blow. Pritchard got his hand severely cut. Backing over to the pool-table, the injured man seized two balls and threw them at his assailant, then turned and ran out through the side door. Scott's story of self-defense was upheld by several witnesses of the fight.

At the arrival of the police patrol, Scott was taken to a cell, while Pritchard's friends escorted him to Dr. J. C. Anderson, where his wounds were dressed. His injuries prevented him from appearing in court yesterday morning, when the case was postponed.

DEMOCRATS WILL MAKE COMPLETE CITY TICKET

This city will witness one of the old time contests for city offices this fall if the plans of the Democrats are carried out as they are now inclined. For some time the leaders of the party have been working together gathering the clans who will put up a stiff fight for all the offices within the gift of the people.

The recently reorganized Democratic club has put new life into the party organization and interest in the city government and the effort is not of the spasmodic kind. Under the presidency of Leroy J. Ellis the club has been strengthened and the interests of its members been awakened. There is no doubt that this recuperation of the forces will be felt in every district of the city.

The possible candidates for the different offices are being canvassed and in due time the names will come up for endorsement. As yet the identity of the nominees for the offices is not being given out, but it is said that they will be those who can poll not only the full Democratic vote but who have many friends in the Republican ranks. Practically all the offices of honors in this fall's campaign feel sure of their ability to win out; anyway they will go into the scrimmage with that intention, and with the infusion of new blood into the regular organization there will be something doing.

NEW 2 CENT POSTAGE STAMP.

Will Commemorate the Hudson-Fulton Celebration—Its Description.

A new two-cent stamp will be issued by the Postoffice Department to commemorate the Hudson-Fulton celebration from September 25 to October 9. Postmaster-General Hitchcock yesterday gave the order for the new issue. Fifty millions of these stamps will be issued, and it is hoped to have them on sale by September 25.

The stamp is oblong, about ⅞ by 1⅜ inches in size and comprises a border containing at the top the inscription "Hudson-Fulton Centenary" with the dates "1609" and "1909." Below this inscription in a curved line are the words "U. S. Postage." At the bottom on each side is a prominent Arabic numeral 2 with the words: "Two Cents" in a panel between the figures.

In the centre is engraved a picture showing the Palisades of the Hudson in the background with the Half Moon going up the river and the Clermont steaming in the opposite direction. In the foreground is an Indian in a canoe and in the distance, just discernible, is a canoe containing four other Indians, the canoes representing the first means of navigating the river.

The stamp will be printed in the same color as the present two-cent stamp.

MRS. YUNG NOT WORRIED, HUSBAND MAY BE ALIVE

An investigation is being conducted into the reported drowning of Leonard Yung, the Somerset street barber, in Passaic. From facts gathered in town this morning it was learned that Yung was not living with his wife at the time of his disappearance and for some time previous to that event.

Mrs. Yung seems not to be worried over the fact that a man resembling her husband has been found drowned and apparently will do nothing toward identifying the body now at the Passaic morgue. She went out of town this morning but did not go to Passaic. It is understood that Mrs. Yung will go there if the body found in the river answers to the description of her husband.

The police of all the nearby cities and towns have been given a clear description of Yung and have been asked to be on the lookout for the missing man.

MASTER CHARLES GREENE ENTERTAINS HIS FRIENDS.

Master Charles Greene, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Harry Greene, of West Seventh street, entertained some of his friends yesterday in honor of his ninth birthday. In the afternoon Master Charles was the host at a theatre party who took in the motion pictures and vaudeville at Proctor's, and afterwards at his home a delightful little supper was enjoyed.

The young man was the recipient of many handsome and useful gifts among which was a Pierce bicycle from his father. The supper was served in the dining room of his home and the room was beautifully decorated in honor of the occasion. The center of the table was ornamented with a huge birthday cake embellished with nine burning candles which caused no end of mirth among the young guests.

Among those who wished Master Charles many happy returns of the day and partook of his hospitality were Junior Penn, Marion Green, Harry and John Darlow, Clarence Skiff and Charles Green, all of Plainfield; and Katheryn and Charles A. Brown, 2d, of Jacksonville, Florida, who arrived yesterday to make an extended visit.

Warren Chapel's Excursion.

The Sunday school of Warren chapel tomorrow will be the last of the excursions to go to Asbury Park this season, and a big crowd is expected to join them. From newspaper reports it would seem that the ocean has at no time this summer been in a more turbulent mood and it is said that the seas washing up on the shore are mountainous. Such a sight is well worth seeing and those who go tomorrow will have an opportunity of seeing the result of a West Indian cyclone on the waters of our coast. The train leaves the North avenue station at 8:15.

STATE TEAM READY FOR BIG MATCH

After several weeks of hard work on the rifle range at Sea Girt the men who will constitute the New Jersey State team to shoot in the national match at Camp Perry, O., next week, and later in the Dryden trophy match at Sea Girt, will leave for the big Buckeye rifle range tonight.

The rain of yesterday prevented the riflemen from doing any work on the long ranges, as had been expected, but the work of last week put the team in splendid condition, and if everything goes right the men will get more practise at Camp Perry before the big match.

The State team will be made up of some of the "old time" expert shots, and there is every indication that New Jersey will have a much better standing in the match this year than it did a year ago. General Bird W. Spencer, the team captain, is confident that the team will do well, and he believes that some of the State organizations represented will have to do some fine shooting to get a better place than New Jersey hopes to have at the ending of the national match.

The team will be made up as follows: General Bird W. Spencer, team captain; Lieutenant-Colonel William Libbey, of Princeton, assistant inspector of rifle practise; Lieutenant-Colonel Wm. A. Tewes, assistant inspector of small arms practise; Lieutenant-Colonel Arthur Rowland, of Newark, of the division staff; Major Winfield S. Price, of Camden; Major D. T. Mathers, Third Regiment; Major William B. Martin, Second Regiment; Captain John J. Fearen, Third Regiment; Captain John Malcolm, Fifth Regiment; Captain William A. Higgins, Fourth Regiment; Captain A. H. Pfeill, Third Regiment; Captain Owen Smith, Fourth Regiment; Captain Charles F. Silvester; First Lieutenant Arthur G. Jaggard, Third Regiment; Sergeant Adon W. Muller, Third Regiment; Sergeant George W. P. Silvester, Second Regiment; Sergeant Albert C. Mayer, Second Regiment; Corporal Fred G. Scheiler, First Regiment; Private William C. Danser, Second Regiment.

It is evident from this list that New Jersey has a number of the best riflemen in the State with the team this year. Major William B. Martin made a phenomenal score when the team was abroad three years ago; Lieutenant-Colonel Arthur Rowland and Lieutenant-Colonel William A. Tewes, are both splendid shots and can be relied upon in an emergency. Major Winfield S. Price, Lieutenant-Colonel William Libbey and Captain Silverter are riflemen of about the same calibre, and the new men in the team have been pretty well tried out and it is expected they will make good scores.

Mrs. John Gray Foster, of Mercer avenue, and her niece, Miss Ruth Van Vliet, of Washington avenue, have gone to Nova Scotia on a pleasure trip with a party of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Federman and daughter, Florence, of Flatbush, L. I., are spending the month of August with Mrs. Fedderman's father, Floyd Fuller, of Arlington avenue.

DOLLIVER HOLDS GREEN

Borough Recorder Fixes Bail for Johnson's Assailant at $1,000.

JUSTICE SNAPE FINED HIM.

Re-arrested, the Colored Fighter Must Now Face Grand Jury as Result of Brickyard Fight.

Benjamin Green, colored, was held in $1,000 bail for the grand jury by Recorder Charles Dolliver in the borough police court this morning. Yesterday afternoon Green was released by Justice Snape after a hearing, for want of sufficient evidence. This morning Green was re-arrested by Deetive Totten and Chief Weiss.

Green is the negro who severely battered up Richard Johnson in the Hand brick yards Sunday afternoon. The latter is now in the hospital, and is in such a condition that he cannot talk. His eyes are nearly closed as a result of the beating he received at the hands of Green, but the physicians say that he will not die.

At the hearing yesterday afternoon before Justice Snape, "Pop" Chandler, an employee of the brick yards, testified that the two men had had an argument in the morning, but did not come to blows. Edward Britten, who found Johnson in the shanty testified to the condition of the latter, as did also Dr. Pitts who attended him at Muhlenberg hospital. Owing to his inability to talk, Johnson could make no statement to be used at the hearing.

Green was represented by Samuel S. Swackhamer, who, though he failed to shake the testimony of the witnesses showed the court that Green, too, had been battered up by Johnson. Taking this into consideration, the court dismissed him. E. H. Hand, for whom Green works, appeared at the hearing and said that he would be responsible at any time for the presence of Green at a trial. Green was re-arrested this morning and bail was furnished by Mr. Hand, his employer.

GOLDEN EAGLES TO VISIT SOMERVILLE LODGEMEN.

Members of Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, together with Eagles from New Brunswick and the Oranges, will be the guests of Golden Crown Castle, at Somerville, tomorrow night, when the past chiefs' degree will be conferred upon about fifteen candidates. The Plainfield lodgemen will make the trip by train.

Grand Chief Sidney Hall, of Millville, will make an address, as will William Albee, an officer of the Paterson Castle. Mr. Albee is the leading candidate for Grand Sir Herald of the district. It is now almost certain that Horace J. Martin, Sr., will be the lodgemen's choice for the office of Grand Chief in the election to be held at the Golden Eagles' convention at Trenton Labor Day.

TWO "HELPLESS" DRUNKS GET SENTENCE SUSPENDED

John Archbold, whose home is in Washington Valley was helped to a jag by several well-meaning friends yesterday afternoon, with whom he be lined up at many bars. Patrolman Flynn found him "down and out" on Somerset street yesterday afternoon and sentence was suspended at his hearing before Judge Runyon this morning.

Mike Giraly, who swings a pick with the Central Railroad section gang, got a liquor lining yesterday afternoon and fell asleep on the railroad bank. In his dreams he rolled down the embankment to East Third street, and woke to find himself in the custody of Patrolman Flynn. He is a Slav, and said he had never been arrested before. Judge Runyon suspended sentence.

Over a Thousand Dogs Licensed.

Tax Collector William B. Townsend wrote out dog license No. 942 at his office this morning. This means that there are more than a thousand licensed dogs in the city, for the dogs for which fifteen kennel licenses have been issued are not included in this numbered count. The police are still active in the enforcement of the ordinance.

Mrs. Collins and her son, Paul Collins, of Salem, are visiting at the home of Mrs. Collins' sister, Mrs. Reuben Knox, of Rockview avenue.

Mrs. W. R. Causebrook and son John, of East Second street, left today to visit friends at Boston. They will not return until after Labor Day.

Rev. Royal A. Stout, of the Netherwood Reformed church, Leland avenue, will have charge of the prayer-meeting at Trinity Reformed church tonight.

TWO NOTED JURISTS FAVOR AMENDMENTS

Why Pitney and Van Syckle Are For Judiciary Changes.

To the Press and Public of New Jersey:

Gentlemen—In the New York Press of the 15th inst. appeared a brief but pithy paragraph challenging the motives of "some wily old jurists who have friends in line for executive consideration" advocating the adoption of the proposed judiciary amendments.

I wish to present the other side of the proposition.

To characterize ex-Supreme Court Justice Bennet Van Syckle and ex-Vice Chancellor Henry C. Pitney, the father of the present chancellor of New Jersey, as "wily old jurists" is not a proper appreciation of these men.

Van Syckle and Pitney are two men whose lives have been pure and noble so long that there are few men alive who can remember when they earned their high reputation. No man alive can remember a single act or deed of either man which dulls the luster of his life. Van Syckle is a Democrat, Pitney a Republican. Both are so aged that their remaining days among us can be but few. Van Syckle is seventy-nine, Pitney eighty-two. Both are men with unimpaired mental activity. Pitney still continues his bank work and enjoys travel. Van Syckle delights every one who comes in contact with him and is still occasionally in active practice as counsel in large cases. Pitney was a judge of our equity court for eight years. Van Syckle was a justice of our supreme court for thirty-five years. Van Syckle resigned five years ago, Pitney resigned two years ago, both because they wished to live long and in perfect health. Their advanced years would not permit of their giving the old number of hours a day to their work and they had too much spirit to continue to hold their judgeships and not do their full share of the work.

Rich in experience and learning, pure and noble in spirit and intent, they are devoting their remaining energy to aid in the adoption of these amendments only because they wish to contribute something more to their native state which has so signally honored them. They are not "wily old jurists." Pitney favors the change in the courts, although its effect would be to deprive his own son of his present exalted position as the highest judge in the entire state of New Jersey.

Just a word as to what these judiciary amendments will do. Their purpose is not to give more lawyers fat jobs." They actually reduce the number of judges and result in the state paying out less money to its judges. They do not change the law or equity procedure or the basic law of our state. They are intended in the interest of the people of the state of New Jersey and suitors in her courts to provide a more speedy trial and determination of issues. Suitors want their cases finally decided quickly. The independent court of appeals is intended to bring this about. The court sitting only as an appellate court will be able to dispose of all its business each term. The present appellate court, having other duties to perform, cannot even hear a cause until six months after, in fairness to suitors, it ought to be heard and will be heard by the new court. Most of the injustice done by courts to suitors is caused by delay.

The proposed amendments will again make it possible for the supreme court judges to try cases in the counties, giving litigants in counties the right to try their cases before the county judge or the supreme court judge. The supreme court judges by the present cumbrous system are hardly ever able to go to their counties.

The courts as at present constituted were established about sixty-five years ago and were admirably well suited to New Jersey's needs for many decades. For the past fifteen years it has grown more and more apparent that a new system of courts was necessary to avoid delay. Governor Voorhees, Governor Murphy and Governor Stokes have all recognized it. Governor Stokes appointed the commission which prepared the constitutional amendment in order to get the relief necessary. A number of legislatures have recognized the need for the proposed amendments. These amendments have been passed by large majorities in the legislatures of last year and the year before. They have been approved by large majorities of the lawyers in the county bar associations and in the State Bar association. We can fairly say they meet with the approval of the circuit court judges. They favor the amendments, although their adoption by the people puts their court out of business and at the end of their terms that judicial usefulness. The vice chancellors seem to all approve the proposed amendments. The press of New Jersey seems to be almost unanimously in favor of the amendments. The present governor of New Jersey, who sat for many years in the supreme court and court of appeals and is thoroughly familiar with the court needs of the state, favors these amendments. The present chancellor approves the amendments, although they do away with his pre-eminence.

The lawyers of the state will not be affected one way or the other by the change of the courts. The change will slightly decrease the number of judges. The lawyers will have to study anew the system of courts, but that will be about as far as the proposed changes will affect the people at large. The courts will go on and on just the same. The suitors will be the only ones affected. They are the only ones interested. They will find their causes determined much more quickly, which is what the suitor needs. It is one of the great duties of a wise state government to provide efficient courts. State government is dependent on a prompt and fair administration of justice by its courts. That is why Governor Voorhees, Governor Murphy, Governor Stokes and Governor Fort have successively advocated and favored the proposed change in our courts. The amendments have been well and carefully considered by successive legislatures and governors. Now they are before the people for adoption or rejection. The State Bar association has appointed a committee to give such information as it can to the press and the public. Practically without funds it cannot do very much, but the proposed amendments have been repeatedly printed in the papers. Careful explanation has appeared in the public press. The majority of the New Jersey newspapers seem to be in favor of them. I believe the proposed amendments will furnish much better court facilities to the people of our state. I voted for them in the house of assembly and favor them now.

Knowing the disinterestedness of ex-Justice Van Syckle and ex-Vice Chancellor Pitney and the purity of their motives in advocating the adoption of the proposed judiciary amendments, I cannot let go unchallenged this pithy challenge of their motives. Yours very truly,

CHARLES E. HENDRICKSON, JR.

How to Vote.

These amendments are of vital importance to the fundamental law of the state, and it is surprising that the people do not take more interest in them. The amending of the constitution is of vastly greater importance than the electing of some official.

At the top of each amendment two words will be printed on the ticket to be voted. These words are:

FOR AGAINST

If you vote for the amendment just run your pencil through the word against in this way ~~AGAINST~~. You will then vote for the amendment.

There are five amendments on the ticket, and you will need to mark out the word "against" in that way five times where it occurs on the ticket to vote for all the amendments.

EVERY CITIZEN SHOULD VOTE. In this case it is not only a privilege, but a DUTY.

The election takes place at a SPECIAL election held over the entire state on TUESDAY, SEPT. 14, 1909.

OLD COACH IS ON SHOW.

Relic in Seattle Exemplifies Mail Transportation Growth.

In the mail transportation department of the government exhibit at the Alaska-Yukon Pacific exposition there is one relic of other days which appeals to the pioneer and exemplifies in a vivid way the Titanic strides even in recent years, in the matter of mail transportation. It is an old-time Rocky Mountain mail coach, the property of S. S. Huntley, of the Yellowstone Park Transportation Company, and is still in a fair state of preservation, though showing unmistakable signs of hard usage.

The coach was first used in the early seventies in the Montana mail service between Helena and Bozeman, making a trip once each week. The coach was captured by Indians in 1877 and was only recaptured after a long pursuit and severe battle. Many persons of note and national prominence have ridden in this coach.

General Garfield, prior to his election to the presidency, was once its passenger. President Arthur in 1883 was indebted to it for services rendered and General Sherman in 1877 made a trip from Fort Ellis to Helena, a distance of 108 miles, in eight hours, being driven by six horses which were relayed every twelve miles. The coach is of the Concord type, having no springs whatever, but the body is supported by huge leather straps on either side, which gives it the peculiar rocking motion associated with old-time coaches.

Two of a Kind.

"After all," said the man who was good at sizing up, "people are pretty much alike the world over."

"What now?" asked the man who was never good at guessing.

"Well, everybody buys more or less truck, either for ornamental purposes or because they think it may come in handy some time."

"I don't follow."

"Well, Patterson over there growled a lot because his wife bought an iron stag for the front lawn. Said it might be nice to look at, but would never help 'em to get anywhere."

"And—"

"And yesterday he went out and bought one of those $7,000 airships."—Boston Herald.

GRANGERS AT PITMAN

Gloucester County Farmers Gather to Hear Senator Frelinghuysen.

THE FARMER IS AN ARTIST.

President of New Jersey's Senate Tells How Improvements Can Be Made Through Legislation.

Hon. Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, President of the New Jersey State Senate, addressed the State Grange, at Pitman, Gloucester county Thursday on "The Importance of Agriculture to State and Nation." His audience was composed of members and friends of the grange to the number of over two thousand, and at its conclusion Mr. Frelinghuysen was loudly applauded. He said in part:

"It is a pleasure for me to be with you today and speak to you on a subject which interests all of us. When people connected with any pursuit gather in such numbers I cannot look upon them but with great respect, and I confess I am more impressed when assembled before me are those whose interests and whose hopes are connected with the cultivation of the soil.

"The importance of agriculture to a State or a nation is obvious to every man. The civilized and commercial countries are so connected and their interests so blended that the prospects of a short crop deranges and agitates the commerce of the whole trading world.

My county, Somerset, is an agricultural county. In it I reside and have spent the happiest days of my life on a farm whose acres were tilled by my great grandfather and my father, and it is my ambition that those who follow me will keep that same farm in cultivation. There are many untilled farms in the southwest section which are and will be reclaimed. How? By better means of transportation and higher prices for products, so that the farmer can compete with the higher wages of the cities. Such results can be brought about only by co-operation. You must take an active interest in legislation. New Jersey has done much for the farmer, but it can do more. Encourage your Senators and Assemblymen whenever they stand for your interests."

Referring to the milk question, Mr. Frelinghuysen said: "Many laws have been enacted to protect the public against unsanitary and impure milk. This is a question which has been agitated for many years. The farmer is surrounded by restrictive laws. It is almost impossible for him under present conditions to secure an adequate return for this important food product.

"We are living in an age of scientific advance. Laws are being enacted for pure food, pure water and pure milk. I believe in simple justice to the farmer. I believe when a man gets up at 5 o'clock on a cold winter's morning and milks a kicking cow, after being compelled to become a Baptist, strains the milk and carries it four or five miles to a creamery, such milk ought to be worth liquid gold from the laboring man's point. We have seen the cost of living advance but the farmer still gets a pittance for that important food of mankind.

"In the decade 1896 to 1906 the value of New Jersey farm products increased from $46,000,000 to $76,000,000, while the value of horses on the farm remained stationary during the whole period at $23,000,000. So Jersey has fallen into the background as a horse producing State. To improve conditions I introduced two bills—one providing that all stallions should be sound and free from all hereditary disease; the other creating a livestock commission and appropriating $20,000 for the purchase of heavy draft and coaching type horses. An excellent commission was named, the object being to encourage the farmers and breeders of New Jersey to produce a more useful as well as a more marketable type of work horses."

Mr. Frelinghuysen then gave a history of the work accomplished by the commission appointed under his bills and stated that within a few years Jersey will stand where she ought to stand as a livestock producing State. He also gave the grangers some very good advice on agricultural economics and lastly spoke on patriotism, telling the story of Philip Nolan, "the man without a country."

In conclusion the speaker said: "Whatever else may be undervalued or overlooked, let us never forget that the cultivation of the earth is the most important labor of man. Man may be civilized in some degree without a great progress in manufactures and with little commerce with his distant neighbors, but without the cultivation of the earth he is in all histories a savage. When tillage begins all other arts follow. The farmers, therefore, are the founders of civilization, and it is the duty of the legislators of the State of New Jersey to do their best to see that the State goes forward and not backward in this important industry."

"The preached that married you says you only gave him a dollar."

"He ought to be glad I didn't sue him for damages."—Judge.

WANT THIRTY-CENT FARE FROM SOUTH ORANGE

That it costs more to ride on the Lackawanna Railroad from South Orange to New York, by the single fare scale, than from intermediate stations to the metropolis is the contention made by Albert G. Borden, of South Orange, in a letter which he has written on behalf of constituents in the South Orange Village Board of Trustees. The fare question has been argued by commuters on trains, and now the board is asked to take up the matter with the railroad officials.

According to Mr. Borden's communication five to ten cents can be saved on a single New York trip by buying tickets at South Orange to stations between and then from them to New York. He figures it out as follows: "A through ticket to New York from South Orange costs forty cents. The fare to Orange is ten cents, and from there to New York, twenty-five cents, a total of thirty-five cents, with a saving of a nickel.

"And again: A ticket to Roseville costs fifteen cents, from there to New York fifteen more, a total of ten cents less than the fare from South Orange."

The board is urged to confer with the railroad officials with the purpose of obtaining a thirty-cent fare from South Orange.

Mr. Borden holds that this should be granted the more readily because the Lackawanna charges an extra fare through the Hudson River tunnel, which is not done, it is alleged, by the Pennsylvania Railroad.

NECESSITIES GOING HIGHER.

Bradstreet's Says the Average Is Next to the Highest on Record.

Bradstreet's index number of commodity prices as of August 1 shows that the prices of necessaries are rising steadily. The August 1 number is $8.5039, the highest that has been quoted since December 1, 1907, when prices were beginning to show the effect of the slump in business, and it is one-half of 1 per cent. over the figure for July 1. Taking comparison by the season of the year it is the highest figure for August 1 on record with the exception of that on August 1, 1907. Bradstreet's says:

"Every one knows that commodities are high, and that as a result household budgets in homes of limited incomes feel the burden of this upward tendency. In fact, in some quarters economies have to be rigidly practiced in order to make both ends meet, as it were.

"Under the circumstances there is naturally more or less discontent because of the high level of things, which feeling is hardly assuaged by the knowledge that employment is generally as plentiful and the wages were not cut to any extent during the recent depression, that yields of farm products from the big surplus-producing regions are of bounteous proportions, and that as a result prosperity is still within the home hold. Indeed, these plenteous supplies of farm products portend an easier situation in the not distant future, the cereals having already felt the effects of actual or prospective new supplies."

MEASURING OIL BY MACHINERY.

An oil measuring and filling machine which has a compensating arrangement for varying the capacity of the measures to meet the increase and decrease in bulk due to rise and fall of temperature, or for dealing with oils of different specific gravities, so that the same weight can be placed in each can, although the gravity may vary considerably throughout the day, is described with illustration in Popular Mechanics.

The degree of accuracy attained is claimed to be very high. In a machine of ten four-gallon measures the variation in any one measure is not more than .076 per cent., and in the range of ten measures only .008 per cent. This accuracy is obtained by the use of closed measures, filled under pressure, the air being driven off through air valves fixed at the highest point of each measure. These valves close automatically the moment the measures are filled, an indicator showing whether the measures are full or empty.

Being Broad-Minded

"You say that you do not like him and yet you are going to vote for him?"

"Sure. My personal feelings should not influence me in a matter where the public welfare is at stake. He is a smart man."

"What causes you to believe that he is so smart?"

"He met my wife before I did and could have married her, but did not."—Houston Post.

"In Dreamland" to Be Seen Here.

"In Dreamland," Emmet Devoy's comedy fantasy, will have its premier at the Plainfield theatre, Wednesday night, August 25. After a few one night stands in engagement with the managers of the Park theatre, Philadelphia, and a tour of the Pacific coast and return will follow.

A Roseville mother who wished to make a rag doll for her small daughter utilized the face of a pretty girl from a stenciled pillow cover. The effect was decidedly attractive and made the manufacture of the rag doll a simple matter.

HOUSE NUMBERS WRONG, CRAIG PLACE TANGLE

A peculiar mix up in conditions on Duer street has developed which may cost every property owner along that thoroughfare a small sum of money to set right. Owing to the building of a new double house just below Craig place, between the bridge and the German Reformed church, the house numbering of the street has been thrown out of harmony. There are at present two numbers 5 and 7 for different houses on the same side of the street, but on different blocks.

As a result of this, Dr. George R. Boston recently had a load of straw delivered at No. 5 Duer, which should have gone to Mrs. Ann Hedden, who lives at the same number on Duer street, but beyond Craig place. Mail has been confused repeatedly and both people have been put to much inconvenience.

Duer street formerly began at Craig place and the first number on that thoroughfare on the odd side, number 5 was given to the house now occupied by Mrs. Ann Hedden. The error began with the house adjoining Plainfield, and now begins at the middle of the Madison avenue—Duer street bridge. Hence when Dr. Boston recently built a new house below Craig place numbers 6 and 7 were given to his property. There is room for more houses below Craig place on Duer street, and as a result of this it is only a question of time when they will be built and the necessity of more accurate house numbering be made apparent. Whenever this occurs there will be more "dual" numbers.

The houses are not numbered by the "standard block" system on Duer street, which makes every block total one hundred. By this reason it will take more than two blocks to set the present wrong numbering straight.

The expense of the numbering must be borne by the property owners along the street, and as the cost of the numbers ranges from three cents to five dollars, it would not be easy to compute the total expense of the improvement. The matter will be called to the attention of the borough council at its next meeting.

GETS PAY FOR LAND THE OCEAN HAS STOLEN.

That ocean front property at Atlantic City not only has a high but a rapidly increasing value, has been shown by a grant made by the State Riparian Commission, for which a price four times greater than the customary figure was paid. The grant was made to Howard G. Harris, of Atlantic City, and $20 a foot for 300 feet between Nashville and Franklin avenues, in Ventnor, was given to the State for the riparian title.

The grant was allowed by the commission upon the repeated request of Harris, and had to do with the settlement of the estate of John Trenwith, of Philadelphia, who was formerly owner of property in Ventnor and Chelsea. The sale to Harris by the estate was made by order of the court, and the selling agent was the Guarantee Trust Company, of Atlantic City. Just what the nature of the sale was, or its terms, the riparian commissioners were not informed, but enough was disclosed, it is understood, to lead to the belief title to the tract had been given which could not be successfully proven if put forward without the riparian grant.

The Trenwith estate had been held in trust by the Guarantee Trust Company for many years, and the tract in Ventnor recently was sold. The purchaser, so the story now goes, found his ocean frontage was all right as far as breadth went, but was shy many feet in depth. Investigation proved the ocean had washed in and away much of the beach front, and that the title had been given for the full acreage in the original tract as it at first came into the trust company's hands.

The purchaser, it is related, felt he should have all the land he had paid for, and expressed a willingness to be satisfied with riparian rights to the tract in question. Somebody had to get these for him, it is understood, and they cost $6,000 for the 300 feet frontage. Whether the trust company lost this amount because of the defective title has not been brought out, but Harris was given the grant, which was allowed on July 31 last.

It has been a long time since any riparian grants have been made in this vicinity, the last highest price for the same being $5 a foot. The entire riparian frontage at this resort is now under control of the city, but Ventnor, which adjoins Atlantic City on the south, has never taken advantage of the act, except as far as ownership by individuals is concerned. It was learned yesterday that the State has never received as high a price for ocean front rights, although a slightly higher price has been asked before by the commission.

Dissolution of Partnership.

The catering establishment hitherto conducted by David DeMolli and Joseph Milani on West Front street has been dissolved by mutual consent and will hereafter be conducted by Mr. DeMolli under the old firm name. The firm has been doing business for the last five or six years.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

The Hon. Charles N. Fowler is no longer chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency. So certain monetary legislation on which it would have been his pride and privilege to direct in a positive way, to the great advantage of the nation and the world at large, he will have to do with only in the capacity of a private member.

Under the circumstances it is natural that Mr. Fowler should be gloomy as he looks into the future as far as a statesman can see. For he is a great believer in the wisdom of committees, when properly directed by the right sort of chairmen. On the other hand, he has no very high opinion of the House as a whole. Thus, speaking of the new tariff law, while admitting that his own State is not likely to suffer, he is forced to admit that everything is not as it ought to be. As he puts it:

"It is probably as good a revision as we could hope to get, as long as tariff revisions must be based upon facts and not upon theories. Nor need we expect a tariff revision based upon facts until we have a permanent tariff commission composed of men of the very highest character and recognized as a responsible body. Fortunately we now regard the Supreme Court."

To whom or what would Mr. Fowler make his ideal commission responsible? No doubt to the Executive. It is the fashion nowadays for Congress to abandon as many of its powers as possible. But how simple it would be for a little band of highly trained experts, all of them as well informed on the subject of the tariff as Mr. Fowler is on finance, to frame a bill, submit it for Executive approval, and then send it on to the National Legislature for formal acceptance. Under such circumstances the wheels would go around with no friction whatever. And when the work was over there would be no complaints that somebody on board of late to the effect that the new law was not perfect.—New York Evening Sun.

A careful record of weather conditions in Newark, reported by "The Sunday Call" of that city, shows that for the last ten years the prognostications of the government Weather Bureau have been notably accurate. Weather predictions have ranged from about 70 to 94 per cent of accuracy, and the predictions of temperature from 71 to 99. In the ten years there were seventeen months in which not a single error was made, but every month in another year of the ten was the actual number of errors. This is an indictment of those wholesalers who keep the price up until they were forced by competition to put it down. To the average citizen it must seem as if this whole business would bear investigation. If ice can now be sold at a profit at the rate of $3.50 a ton why could it not have been sold at less than $6 a ton in the early part of the season or at least a month ago?

Of course, the answer to this from the wholesalers is easily anticipated. They will say, no doubt, that cool weather and economy on the part of the consumer in the use of ice has left a price-reducing supply on their hands. That may or may not be true. But it tends to reduce the matter to a simple question of supply and demand. That this may apply, and does apply, to natural ice no one will deny, but how it can be made to apply to manufacture and sale of artificial ice the consumer, in the light of the available information on the subject, will find it hard to understand. It must also seem to the most unthinking individual that if this ice can be sold now, with a fair measure of profit, at $2.50 or $4 a ton, there never was any good and honest reason for making the price $6.—Newark Evening News.

MASONIC BODY CONDUCTS FUNERAL FOR LATE MEMBER

The funeral services of Charles Yaeger were held from the late home on Webster place, at 2:30 o'clock, Wednesday afternoon. Rev. Elory Bowers, curate of Grace church, officiated. The services were attended by Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. & A. M., of which M. Yaeger was a member for a great many years. There were numerous floral tributes, including four set pieces.

The Episcopal service was used at the house and at the grave the Masons took charge. W. G. Hutchcroft, as Master of the lodge, conducted the Masonic ritualistics service. The pall bearers were Charles Tallmid, Edward Buck, Stephen H. Baldwin, Alonzo Bilen, J. W. Aydsickel, J. E. Flannery.

MIDDLESEX COUNTY VALUATIONS INCREASE

According to the returns of the State Board of Assessors on the valuation and assessment of second-class railroad property just made to the Middlesex County Tax Board, the valuation in Piscataway township is $243,851, as against $244,351 last year. In Dunellen the valuation is $51,029 as against $50,929 last year, a substantial increase.

The rates of taxation would be lower in Middlesex county this year if all other conditions were the same as before. That will be the case should the Supreme Court decide that second-class railroad property shall be included in the returns of the comptroller.

This question was raised a few weeks ago when the borough of Kenilworth took action against the State board for the equalizations of taxes, the comptroller and the boards of the twenty-one counties in the State. As yet the court has not rendered its decision and the State board has made its customary return to Clerk Spencer.

The rates of valuation for second-class railroad property in this county this year is $3,029,695, whereas it was $2,925,820 last year. In some cases the valuation is the same, but in the majority of instances there is an increase, which is a benefit for the invidual property holder.

THIS BURGLAR HAD THIRTY-FIVE SWEETHEARTS.

Many burglars have kept diaries, but it remained for Edgar Weidner to keep a complete list of his 109 stealings as well as a list of his alleged thirty-five sweethearts in three States. Weidner, who was sent to the Eastern Penitentiary by Judge Endlich, of Easton, Pa., under an indeterminate sentence, after pleading guilty to burglary and larceny, is considered by the county authorities to be a dangerous man.

County Detective Merkel was able to follow Weidner's movements and procure the information which finally broke down the prisoner's story and led him to confess the truthful history of a pocket diary, which Weidner dropped while pursued at Lyons, where he was caught by the Kutztown authorities.

Weidner broke jail at Boyertown, after his original arrest for deserting his wife. Then the theft of this diary is written his name, "Edgar Weidner, of Kingsland, and Lynhurst, N. J., and a native of Reading," in bold letters. Reading residences where he boarded are then mentioned.

Next is a list of thirty-five alleged sweethearts. The first twenty-five on the list are Reading women, one from New Jersey, a Kutztown widow, five Harrisburg favorites, two Philadelphia friends and another from Easton. Weidner deserted his wife when she was confined at the Reading hospital.

After the names and addresses of his sweethearts follows a list of 109 places which Weidner has evidently visited during his criminal escapades. These towns are located in Pennsylvania, Delaware and New Jersey.

He left Kutztown, as he stated, on April 11, and came to Reading, leaving that city for Sinking Spring, Wernersville, Womelsdorf and thence to Harrisburg, whence he went to Philadelphia by way of Lancaster. He then proceeded to New Jersey by way of Camden, visiting Trenton, Princeton and Plainfield, crossing last from Phillipsburg to Easton. He then visited forty Pennsylvania towns.

In the places visited Weidner, according to his figures, got away with $403, the items ranging from $1 to $42.

Celebrates Birthday Anniversary.

Mrs. Sarah Powlison celebrated the eighty-sixth anniversary of her birthday Wednesday at her home on Rockview avenue, the borough, surrounded by her relatives and intimate friends. Mrs. Powlison was born at Pluckemin, Somerset county, and lived there until her marriage. For a time she lived at Bound Brook and then removed to North Plainfield, thirty-one years ago. Her maiden name was Miss Sarah VanArsdale. She is the mother of J. A. Powlison, of Powlison & Jones, and an aunt to Borough Councilman Morris C. VanArsdale. She also has many other relatives.

Attended a Luncheon.

Mrs. C. D. VanZandt and Miss Emma VanZandt, of Fairview avenue, attended a luncheon, which was given by Mrs. R. Droescher, of Cranford, Thursday afternoon. Covers were laid for ten and guests were present from Cranford, Westfield and Plainfield.

Washington Rock Popular.

Washington Rock continues to be the favorite rendevous for picnicking parties in this vicinity despite the undeveloped section of the mountain in which it is located. Parties have been visiting the rock almost steadily during the past five weeks, and there seems to be no abatement in the number as the summer advances.

"All I did," said the big grain speculator, "was to take advantage of an opportunity."

DAMAGE SUIT AGAINST REV. DR. G. A. EATON

Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, who has recently bought a farm on the mountain at Watchung, is being sued for damages by Samuel Goldstein, a former tenant on the Bartle farm, which property was included in the land purchased by Dr. Eaton. The cause of the action is: Goldstein had a lease of the farm known as the William Bartle farm at Watchung, and when Dr. Eaton began to buy up the land he bought the property from Bartle which is occupied by Goldstein.

Dr. Eaton went to Goldstein, so it is said, and got him to sign an agreement whereby Goldstein surrendered his lease in consideration of the Doctor's moving the house occupied by Goldstein across the road and giving him the house rent free until March, 1901. Doctor Eaton employed a house mover to place the building on the other side of the road and it was done, but since the house has rested on its new foundation it has sunk and has become uninhabitable, so it is alleged.

The case is to come before the Somerset county circuit court next month. Robert Newton Crane appears for Goldstein and Winfield S. Angleman will defend the action for Rev. Dr. Eaton.

SOME THINGS THAT ARE NICE TO EAT.

Odd that the things we like are always bad for us. Why, for instance, should cold bread be more wholesome than new? The latter's reputation is simply shocking, and the excellence of the stale loaf is preached in every household. Yet does bread fresh from the oven actually produce injurious qualities which the day or two old loaf does not? Then is it only our fancy? asks "Rosaline" in Black and White. Hard-boiled eggs, when hot and not included in pie or curry, are dangerous to tackle; but when cold and properly pickled we can eat them with impunity. Of course, plum pudding, salmon, all nice eatables, have a bad character, and sometimes one speculates if it may not be due to their very niceness and had its origin in bygone Puritanism.

No doubt, good people once believed it chastened the spirit to deny the flesh the delicacies it desired; then sense of personal virtue waxed stronger after a meal of crusts and lentils than after one of turtle and fat capon, and it is not impossible that in the course of time we have confused physical with moral wellbeing.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS EXCURSION WAS A SUCCESS.

The annual excursion of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, to Asbury Park Thursday, was a great success. Two special trains of coaches were required to convey the Plainfielders and those from North Plainfield, Stirling and Dunellen to the shore, and not an accident of any kind happened to mar the day's pleasure. The committee in charge managed affairs of the season, and the efficient committee made it a business to see that every precaution against accident was provided for.

The Plainfielders had a fine time at the shore. There was a strong sea breeze and all the attractions were well patronized. Among those who probably had the best time was "Uncle Dave," who found much pleasure in distributing small coins to the children. They were all his friends and the remebrance helped many a tot to have some fun.

WILBUR F. BARRELL DIES IN BROOKLYN.

Wilbur F. Barrell, a former Plainfielder, and an old time minstrel, one of the survivors of that celebrated band of Philadelphia fun makers, Carncross & Dixey, who in their Eleventh street theatre gained a national reputation, died Wednesday at his home, 346 Gates avenue, Brooklyn. He was sixty-nine years old.

Mr. Barrell joined the Carncross minstrels when he was a young man and remained with the company until fifteen years ago, when he retired. During his stage career he was associated with Francis Wilson, Eddie Foy and William Emerson. He left a son and four daughters, one of the latter being a member of the "Beauty Spot" company at the Heraldo Square Theatre.

Mr. Barrell lived in Plainfield for several years and was a well known figure in the events of his time here, and was very popular.

Investigating Health Conditions.

The assistant inspector of the State Board of Health has investigated conditions at Bonegut brook, Dunellen, which were alleged to be unsanitary, owing to residents along the brook throwing refuse into it. The matter will receive attention later, but for the immediate present nothing will be done.

Tax Collector George F. Brown, of the borough, who has been seriously ill for a long time, having been confined to his room for months, shows signs of slight improvement and is now able to get about the house with assistance.

OUT OF JAIL -- SPANKED

Cheap Detective Stories Led Busel to Borough Highway Robbery.

MOTHER IS SERIOUSLY ILL.

Moses Bender Punished $250 Bail Last Night to Release Friend's Son From County Jail.

Sensational literature of the five-cent detective story type led Morris Busel, the thirteen year old son of Max Busel, of Manson place to commit highway robbery according to a statement made by him after his release on $250 bail from the Somerville County jail Wednesday evening. The lad had been reading literature of this type for some time, and was imbued with the desire to do something daring. The robbery of a woman in broad daylight seemed to furnish every element of excitement that the lad craved and for this reason the hold up of Mrs. Arthur Vail on Somerset street was planned and carried out.

Since the lad's commitment to the county jail without bail by Justice Thomas Snape, of the borough, the boy's mother has been seriously ill. His release on bail furnished by Moses Bender, of Somerset street, by Judge William Newcorn Wednesday has not materially bettered her condition, and she is now under the care of a physician. The chap's father, who has a muscular right arm developed by fifteen years' handling of the shoemaker's hammer, vented his parental wrath on the youngster in an hour's session in the wood shed, Thursday morning.

Up to the time of the flogging the little chap bore his disgrace with comparative indifference, and statements as to the effect of his conduct on his mother apparently did not affect him. He cried a little when taken to jail, and when put in the borough cell after the hearing before Justice Thomas Snape. The latter held young Busel under grand jury without bail. Max Busel secured the legal service of Judge William Newcorn, and Wednesday afternoon the two made the trip to Somerville, where they persuaded Judge Schenck whom they found at his home, to fix a bail for the release of the youngster. Moses Bender, of Somerset street, an intimate friend of Busel, furnished the money.

Young Busel is now at home and is not permitted to leave the street. His hearing will come up in September, when it is likely, that, owing to his age, he will be turned over to a probation officer. The lad read cheap literature in secret.

ANSWER FILED IN ODD FELLOWS' HOME SUIT.

An answer has been filed in the Court of Chancery to the injunction proceedings instituted by Cornucopia Lodge No. 180, I. O. O. F., of Jersey City, to restrain the Odd Fellows' Home of New Jersey, which formerly conducted the Odd Fellows' Home in Trenton, from distributing its assets. These include $12,000 received from the grand lodge of New Jersey for the transfer of the Odd Fellows' Home property to the grand lodge.

The defendant corporation denies the allegation of the bill that all the money received by it from donations and other sources was expended for the support and maintenance of the home, claiming that $4,000 was expended in the way of the mortgage on the property, $2,500 was deposited in the bank, and $4,000 of the purchase price of the home is also on deposit. It appears from the answer that the donations received for the home were put with the money received by the corporation as dues from the lodges holding membership in the corporation. The fund thus mingled was used for the support of the home, except the balance remaining in the hands of the corporation and including the $12,000 received from the grand lodge.

It is denied that there was any understanding with the grand lodge that it was to have any equity in the property of the defendant corporation. It is contended that even should the court decide that the money of the corporation is a trust fund it is nevertheless entitled under its constitution and bylaws to administer the trust itself without consultation with the grand lodge or Sumner Lodge. The latter is one of the fifty-eight lodges of the State composing the corporation of the Odd Fellows' Home. It claims that the assets should be distributed pro rata among the fifty-eight lodges. A schedule filed with the bill shows that Sumner Lodge contributed $2,257 to the Home, the total contributed by all the lodges in the corporation being $56,299.

COUNTY ASSEMBLY TICKET

Republicans Will Name Schwartz, Pierce and Thompson, 'Tis Said.

MR. KIRSTEIN WILL RETIRE.

Fled Ward Wants a Councilmanic Member-at-Large — Another Member of the City Executive Committee.

There is no doubt but that the Republican candidates for Assembly this fall will be Carlton B. Pierce, of Cranford; Augusts F. Schwartz, of Elizabeth, and Lloyd Thompson, of Westfield. Alfred Kirstein, of Rahway, having declined a renomination, or having intimated that he would under no circumstances accept one, leaves the field clear for Mr. Thompson, who it is said, will be the only likely candidates to succeed Mr. Kirstein.

But this does not mean that Rahway will be left out entirely from representation in the apportionment of political preferences, and as Mr. Thompson withdrew last year when he learned that Rahway and Elizabeth were out with candidates, some recognition will have to be given.

As to the offices of County Register and County Clerk it is practically assured that Frank H. Smith, of this city, will get the nomination for the former and James C. Calvert, of Elizabeth, the nomination for the latter offices. Both of these men have been tried out in their respective places and have been found equal to the duties of them. The endorsement received from State Senator Ackerman will no doubt go a long way toward strengthening the possibilities of the nominations going the way pointed out above.

It may be supposed that this combination was resolved upon at the recent outing of the County committee, but such is not the case. The matter was scarcely discussed.

In city affairs there is a strong probability of an effort being made for changes in the ward representatives of councilmen-at-large. It has been said that the First ward is anxious to have a representative of this section and with a view of not sacrificing one of the present incumbents. The second, third and fourth wards now represented by F. L. Montgomery, C. C. Randolph and W. W. Wilson, respectively, will undoubtedly be nominated but the "New Idea" people have 'ideas' of their own and will undoubtedly put forward candidates of their own and in spite of the fact that numerically the first ward is scarcely entitled to a councilman-at-large, will make a desperate effort to work in a man for the honor of that ward.

The fact that another district has been added to the second ward will give that ward an extra representative in the city executive committee thus adding to the Republican forces on the board.

SCRAMBLE FOR CENSUS JOBS.

So Far the Regulars Have the Best of It—Hope for New Idea Men.

There is considerable anxiety among the politicians in many sections of the State over the coming appointment of census supervisors for New Jersey. Thus far two have been named—William Brown, of Camden, in the First District, and Harry B. Saltus, of Trenton, in the Fourth District. Brown is one of the chief lieutenants of David Baird, and was the unsuccessful candidate for the Republican nomination for sheriff in Camden county last fall. Salter, in addition to filling the office of City Clerk of Trenton, is one of the chief political lieutenants of United States Senator Frank O. Briggs and General C. Edward Murray.

While the place of supervisor is looked upon as a good one, the chief interest in the job is the large amount of patronage, in the shape of enumerators, which the incumbent has at his disposal, and the appointment of Brown and Saltus means that none but rock ribbed regulars will be appointed.

There was some apprehension among the regulars in Hudson county yesterday over the report that the census bureau was seriously considering the name of John Weastell, a prominent New Idea advocate, for supervisor in that district. Weastell was the supervisor when the last census was taken. At that time there were no dissensions in the party. Since then, however, he has affiliated himself with George Record in the New Idea movement, and is one of its stanchest supporters, being a member of its executive committee. Weastell's appointment would be a hard blow to the regulars, as he would be pretty certain to appoint none but New Idea men as enumerators in the two hundred or more election precincts in the county. The regulars want Marcus Higginbotham, a young lawyer, to get the place.

THE INK OF DESTINY

By WILL KENYON

(Copyright, by Homestead Pub. Co.)

"Will we make it, Mojave girl?" the gaunt man croaked through cracked and blistered lips to his ratty little mule. The man walked, resting his hand affectionately on the mule's withers.

Before, behind, and everywhere, the desert stretched away in miles of fantastic imagery. Nothing but heat, thirst and death. Oppressed with utter loneliness, the gaunt man lifted his voice and cursed, but the vast barrens made a jest of his impotence and turned his oaths to bitter laughter.

Every laboring step a growing agony, resolutely denied. His mouth was as dry as the white bones back yonder, the burnished disk in the heavens seared his eyes, and his brain reeled, but the iron spirit refused to succumb to the tyranny of environment. On and on, and on he pressed, his padded footfalls inaudible in the awesome immensity.

The desert rose gently to a rock-ribbed rim, and the added toil of the ascent cruelly taxed the well-nigh spent travelers. Mojave stopped once, and the fear-frenzied man rained futile blows upon her. After a time the brute moved on of her own accord. Thrice they stopped, the breath of life sucking shallowly, unconsciously in and out of the channels of respiration. At the third halt the man looked about him dully, the volcanic rim which hedged in the desert falling dimly on his filmy vision. It seemed an equal span against a lake of deep turquoise sky.

He turned stiffly and gazed back across the desert, a quivering hell of sand and painted rocks, done in brick-red and umber, and orange, brown, black and yellow, to the distant mountains lowmink large in a violet haze, from whence he had won thus far. Slowly his eye circled back with quickening perception to the flinty barrier. And then he knew. The desert was passed!

With an inarticulate cry rattling in his throat he plunged forward, to have his legs limply refuse him. He lurched drunkenly against Mojave, clutching her gear to keep from falling. Hope died instantly and his travailing soul gave birth to poignant despair.

On the inclined plane a wisp of breeze strayed over the desert rim, blowing cool on his cheek, growing stronger and fresher. Mojave threw her head up into the wind like a startled antelope. She snuffed the current for an instant and with a screaming bray breasted the remaining slope, the exhausted man himself scarcely retaining his hold on her trappings. A glimpse over the brink made him a man again. There lay a rugged, seamy valley, splashed with vivid green grass and sentinel cottonwoods patrolling the course of a running stream, winding down in silvery reaches and feather-tipped rapids. Water!

Down they plunged, gasping, sliding, leaping, stumbling, insane with thirst, blind to the cruel stab of rock and root—plunged headlong into the cool, shallow stream. The man fondled the water as a miser caresses his gold; he wallowed in it, kissed it, lapped it up greedily like a dog. In the mighty revulsion of feeling the dried-up wells of his eyes found relief in tears.

Three things bring a man to such a pass. Lust for gold, love for a woman, and revenge. Aaron Whipple knew not this last, but the other two were inseparably woven into the fabric of his life, a most intricate pattern. Lust for gold and love for a woman had carried him far afield to the violet mountains lying behind the fearsome desert, and love for a woman had urged him through two score miles of heat, thirst and death to keep his knightly word to that woman.

As he lay there on the dry sands, his blistered feet laving in the refreshing waters of the singing stream, the sun's heat mercifully tempered by grateful breezes, with life strength streaming into every fiber of his being and the gift of life flowing evenly through his veins again—under such strange circumstances this man of iron did the most unexpected thing in the world.

Fumbling with stiffened fingers at the neck of his flannel shirt he drew forth a worn packet of oiled silk, neatly sewn with even stitches; long and round and slender. He placed it in his lap and then searched out a tiny celluloid calendar, a miniature record of the twelvemonth. Each small square allotted to a day had been pierced through with a pin, one every 24 hours, until there remained but one intact—that of the last day in the year. This Aaron punctured, and the cycle was complete.

In a fit of sullen wrath he tore the calendar to bits and tossed the ghost-record of a vanished year to the winds, each particle the acute testimony of herculean labor; each day an eternity of crushed hope and sterile endeavor.

Turning eagerly to the packet he ripped off the coverings, disclosing a fountain pen, a hard-rubber reservoir of ink, a stamped envelope and several sheets of note paper—strange things to interest a man set down a hundred miles from any known habitation. On one closely written sheet were these words:

Dear Aaron: To-day you are keeping the compact made one year ago. I wonder where you are and what you are doing—how it farez—if you rest, and, so, with me. God grant that all is well with you, and that the words you are about to pen will bring joy to my heart, falst with the longing, and the waiting, and the dread uncertainty. It was brave of you to challenge fate alone in the wild mountain fastnesses, but rash—so rash!—to risk yourself in one short year. I have faith in you, Aaron. I believe in your scientific knowledge. But even science must be backed by the gold you covet. Don't you see it leaves too much to blind chance?—that you have no right to put me in the balance against Luck?

You don't know how I tremble as I write and make ready my little packet. I shall not even say adieu, for I believe, and I pray that, for the sake of your pride and for the sake of that thing men call honor, your spirit refused to be subdued by

LOST IN THE NINTH

Plainfield Neglects Opportunity to Tie Score and Win Out

AFTER A BATTING RALLY.

"Dave" Driscoll's Aggregation Takes Fourth Contest in the Series

By a Score of 9 to 8.

But for the indecision of Washburn in the last inning, Plainfield might have tied the score, and possibly won the game with New Brunswick, Saturday afternoon. As it was the visitors from the Middlesex county seat went home with the victory of 9 to 8.

The game opened with the advantage for the visitors. Ortlelb let the first two batsmen walk. W. Stallings then sacrificed, advancing the first two to second and third bases, and E. Stallings two base hit brought Harter and Driscoll home. Another run was also scored in the first innings. The second inning was likewise; three more runs, making a total of six, to the one run for the Plainfielders. At the end of the sixth inning the game stood 8 to 2 in favor of the visitors. They relaxed a little in their play, and Plainfield scored two runs in the seventh, to one by New Brunswick, which incidentally, was the last to be scored by them. Plainfield played a steadier game though. Neither scored in the eighth, but in the ninth, Plainfield bade fair to tie the score.

Clinton let Boyd walk to first base, Emery singled and Martin bunted. This left the bases full. This timeliness of Martin's bunt, let Boyd in home. On Washburn's hit to right field and the wild throw back to home, Emery, Martin and Barnes all crossed the home plate. Washburn was on third, when they were still bunting for the ball in the bleachers and might easily have come home, tying the game. The man who was coaching him at base held him there, though, and as a consequence, no more runs were scored, so New Brunswick left the field victors by the narrow margin of one run.

For individual work O'Loughlin showed up well with three hits, while Jack Martin for New Brunswick played a fast and faultless game. Emery's work was creditable.

LIFE AND LOVE.

"Thou are a dream," said Life to Love;
"Then let us to our dreams be true;"
And replied: "This well: I know;
A dream am I, a dream are you.
Then let us to our dreams be true;"
And skipped away among the trees.
Anon to fly, to ride the clouds,
To laugh in the storm, to bathe in the sun—
For Love is free through Love's a dream.

"Thou are a dream," said Love to Life,
"But I am real;" and Life replied:
"A dream am I, and real are you!
Then let us to ourselves be true;"
And loudly laughed and ran away
To bask and bathe, to throb with joy,
To girdle the world in fond embrace,
And Love lay dead, no longer free.

DEFEAT FAST NORTH ENDS

Plainfield A. C. Triumph Over Elizabeth Club by a Score of Eight to Three.

JOHNSTON'S FINE PITCHING.

Hann and Meyer Lead Locals in Hitting—Springer and Knauer Twirl for the Visitors.

The fast North End A. C., of Elizabeth, was defeated by the Plainfield A. C. on the Clinton avenue grounds, Saturday afternoon, by the score of 8 to 3. Johnston was selected to do the twirling for the locals and deserves credit for the excellent game he pitched. His deceptive curves were used with good effect and he was invinvible at critical stages of the contest. Moran, who has been doing the backstop work for the G. & F. Club lately, was sent behind the bat and his classy all-round work, especially base throwing, was one of the features.

Hann and Meyer led in batting for the locals, the former securing two two-base hits and a single and Meyer had three singles to his credit, all made when they were most needed. They also pulled off some classy inside playing that kept the opposing team guessing.

Luthman proved to be in a class by himself as a third sacker and plays the position like a veteran. Byard also covered first base in regular Hal Chase style and the outfield took care of several difficult fly balls. McDonough made a hard running catch in the last inning that brought the fans to their feet.

The North Ends sent Springer to the firing line and he stayed there for six innings. Although he pitched good enough to win an ordinary game, the locals were able to bunch their hits off him at the proper time. He was replaced by Knauer in the seventh, who struck out four batsmen and allowed but ont hit. Stanley did some clever work for the catcher as the locals found out. The entire infield was fast and well drilled in inside play. Warren and Palmer led the batting for their team. Warren secured two two-base hits and Palmer's two-bagger in the second inning came at ever right time. The contest was not started until 4:30 as the trolleys were not running on scheduled time at Elizabeth and delayed the visitors. Manager Pope was congratulated upon securing such a strong attraction. SO. PLAINFIELD DEFEATS ATLANTIC FIELD CLUB

The South Plainfield Baseball Club won another victory Monday by defeating the Atlantic Field Club, from Perth Amboy, by a score of 5 to 3.

Thomas, of South Plainfield, showed great form, getting ten strikeouts, walking one man and allowing but one hit. It looked as though he would have a no-hit, no-run game to his credit, up to the sixth inning, when a couple of errors allowed three runs to score, and in the eighth laning Koyen secured the only hit made off his delivery.

Tommie Mullen was behind the bat and handled Thomas' benders in fine style. His hitting was a feature of the game, a home run and a single being his share.

Hann and Hanson also did good work with the stick getting a two-bagger and three-bagger respectively. Toolin started for his team throwing bases like a shot and allowing very few men to st.al on him.

The home team out hit the visitors getting nine clean hits and scoring all their runs on hits. The Amboy team scored all three of their runs in the sixth inning on two errors.

South Plainfield will play the fast Delta Athletic Club from Keasbey, next Sunday at South Plainfield.

The largest crowd of the season attended the races of the Woodbridge and Rahway Driving Club at Demorest Saturday. SURPRISE PARTY FOR ALBERT M. LEDERER.

Albert M. Lederer was given a surprise party at the home of John C. Van Dyke, 255 East Fifth street, Monday which was attended by a large number of friends of the family. Mr. Van Dyke was formerly Mr. Lederer's teacher in Trinity Reformed Sunday school. The evening was pleasantly spent with instrumental and vocal music rendered by Mr. Lederer and her two daughters, the Misses Alberta and Lucille. C. W. Runyon sang a solo accompanied on the harp by Miss Trabel.

The occasion was Mr. Lederer's birthday and in honor of the event the table was beautifully decorated in red and white and bore a birthday cake decorated with candles numbering the years of Mr. Lederer's life up to date. The illuminated cake made a very pretty appearance on the table. The guests departed at a late hour wishing Mr. Lederer many happy returns of the day.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE IS UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

Messrs. F. F. Proctor, Sr., and Harry S. Sanderson, the new lessees of the Plainfield theatre, took possession Monday, and Harry C. Egerton, the new manager for the playhouse, is now in charge there. Plans for a great many improvements, that are sure to be appreciated by patrons, will be effected shortly. As no shows are booked for the house until Saturday, an opportunity will be given to thoroughly clean and renovate the house.

Among the changes planned by the new management will be a women's retiring room on the first floor adjoining the main entrance, and there will also be a ticket office window there for the exclusive use of women. Manager Egerton has had an extensive experience in the theatrical business and is thoroughly equipped in every way for the position here to which he will devote his entire time. The attractions booked for the coming season are the latest Broadway successes.

Mr. Sanderson has been assured by Klaw & Erlanger, whose attractions will be booked here, that they will give their personal attention to the shows to be sent here. There will also be an occasional presentation of popular repertoire shows at popular prices.

PLANS CONFERENCE OF JERSEY MAYORS

To better regulate excise conditions in the different cities throughout the State, Mayor Victor Mravlag has planned a conference of all New Jersey's Mayors, which, if his idea meets with general approval, will probably be held in Newark in the fall. At the proposed conference there will be a general discussion of the excise laws, especially that law which applies to Sunday closing. It is possible that an excise measure may be drawn up at the conference and submitted to the State Legislature.

Mayor Victor Mravlag said yesterday that Mayor Haussling, of Newark, told him a few days ago, when asked about the plan, that he would support it if Mayor Mravlag took the initial steps. "I intend to take the step," Mayor Mravlag said yesterday. "I fully believe that the Governor would support the plan. He could hardly do otherwise if the big cities of the State were behind the movement. If we decided upon a plan for the better regulation of excise conditions and it did not prove effective after a reasonable trial, it could, of course, be easily repealed, or revised to suit the needs of the majority.

"It is well known that the present excise condition throughout the State is unsatisfactory. In some places there is a flagrant disregard, while in others the law is enforced, and Rahway Driving Club at Demorest Saturday. CO. K.'S FINE WORK ON STATE RIFLE RANGE

The members of Company K, who returned Saturday night after spending a week in camp at Sea Girt, made marked progress in their work on the rifle range this year. The average scores were thirty-five per cent higher than those of last year. Lieut. A. I. Littell had charge of the company practice on the range, and under the coaching of Sergeants Hort, Apgar, Tranchand, and Phillips all showed much improvement.

Captain H. B. Kitchell, Lieut. A. I. Littell, Sergeants Hort, Trenchard and Phillips all qualified as expert riflemen. Sergeants Pearson and Apgar qualified as sharpshooters. Seven corporals and twenty-seven privates qualified as marksmen. The general work of the company was very satisfactory throughout. Another chance will be afforded those who did not get the opportunity to qualify and the company hopes to rank among the leaders this year. Those who qualified last week are as follows:

Experts—Captain H. B. Kitchell, Lieut. A. I. Littell, Sergeant N. H. Hort, Sergeant A. R. Trenchard, Sergeant A. R. Phillips.

COUNTY REPUBLICANS ARE PLANNING DOLLAR DINNER

The Union County Republican Committee met at Elizabeth Monday night and discussed the dollar dinner to be given at the Hill House, Rahway, on September 22. It is expected that seven hundred people will sit down to dinner that night and elaborate arrangements are being made for the annual affair.

There was also some discussion regarding the proposed constitutional amendments to be voted on September 14. The committee, it was learned, had not familiarized itself thoroughly with the provisions of it was announced that it would have something more to say on the subject later.

County Clerk James C. Calvert today received word from the Secretary of State that 44,000 ballots had been shipped to Elizabeth for the September election. That will allow 2½ ballots for everyone of the 25,000 voters in the county.

The county committee last night also received an informal report from the committee on outing. All returns have not been in yet, and a complete report will be made later.

"SPITE" BARN ERECTED, WILL BOROUGH BUY?

Michael Gallagher, of Dunellen, is still holding to his original intention of keeping a roughly constructed barn on North avenue, that place, in the heart of the business section, despite the protests of his neighbors and business men. Gallagher, it is said, built the structure out of spite, because he lost some street sprinkling work, which is now being done by another party through one of the Dunellen councilmen.

Offers to buy the property haven't reached Mr. Gallagher's price, and threats to burn it have not yet been made openly, but he has received some anonymous letters. Apparently, Gallagher is trying to stir up a lot of sentiment against the building, however, and to get the borough to pay him a big price for the property. He was sick for some time, and immediately after he recovered a suit was brought against him on a civil charge. This aroused Mr. Gallagher's ire and now it is alleged he is trying to get his revenge.

His Opportunity.

"You'll have to send for another doctor," said the one who had been called, after a glance at the patient.

"Am I so ill as that?" gasped the sufferer.

"I don't know how ill you are," replied the man of medicine, "but I know you're the lawyer who cross-examined me when I appeared as an expert witness. My conscience won't let me kill you, and I'll be hanged if I want to cure you. Good day."—Exchange.

Lady (after tendering a shilling for fare)—And here are two buns you can have, my man.

Cabby—Thank you kindly, lady. I suppose you don't 'appen to 'ave a wisp of 'ay for the 'orse.—Bassell's Saturday Journal.

ATTRACTIVE SERVICE AT MOUNTAIN CAMP

The 4 o'clock service at the Kings Daughters' Baby Camp Sunday afternoon was unusually interesting and largely attended. The meeting was in charge of George E. Hall. The local corps of the Salvation Army were present and added materially to the effectiveness of the program, which included Scripture reading by Mrs. Capt. Hewitt, and two duets sweetly sung by the Misses Sadie and Julia Price. Capt. Hewitt led the singing throughout the meeting, assisted by Miss Miriam Hall, pianist; Martin A. Korff, violinist, and E. H. Guest, cornetist.

The talk to the children was given by Mrs. J. M. Tier, the superintendent of a large and highly successful primary department in the Trinity Reformed Sunday school. Mrs. Tier held the close attention of children and adults alike, as in her pleasing way she told stories about several of the prominent Bible characters. The lessons which the speaker drew from the stories appealed to both young and old in the meeting; and no one could listen to her earnest words without being helped and encouraged to live a truer Christian life.

The camp never looked more attractive than it did yesterday, located as it is on the top of the mountain, with a magnificent view that is well worth the trip to see, and many people from Plainfield and vicinity took advantage of the perfect weather to attend the service and visit the camp. The stage was taxed to its utmost capacity to accommodate the people who attended the service; in addition to which two automobiles made several trips from the trolley to the camp. These Sunday afternoon services have become an attractive feature of the King's Daughters' Baby Camp, and have already resulted in much good to the children and mothers who are privileged to spend a little while on the top of this beautiful mountain.

OVERFLOW MEETING AT THE NETHERWOOD CAMP

Every seat in the large auditorium at the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp was occupied Sunday and extra camp stools were required to accommodate the crowd. The 4 o'clock services at this camp seem to increase in interest and popularity as the season advances and yesterday's service was no exception to the preceding ones.

The meeting was in charge of R. F. Hadley and the talk was by Rev. F. G. Snowden, pastor of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian church, Elizabeth. Mr. Snowden gave a highly interesting talk on the subject of snakes, taking his text from Numbers 21: 4-9. This talk was so absorbing that the usual commotion among the children was absent, even the grown-ups listened eagerly to the development of the lessons evolved from the "fiery serpents" which Moses banished from the camp of the Israelites.

This was Mr. Snowden's second talk at the camp, hence the large attendance. Whenever he is announced to speak here is always a big audience to greet him. The music, too, was an attractive feature of the afternoon service. Mrs. J. A. Rawson and Mrs. Robert Humpston rendered solos, and a quartet composed of Mrs. Humpston, Mrs. Rawson, Mr. Hadley and D. M. Runyon sang two beautiful selections. Percy Mygrant, of Fanwood, assisted with the cornet, while Clifford Braider and Mrs. Humpston presided at the organ. Next Sunday a rare treat is in store for those who attend and everybody will be welcome.

SAM CUNNINGHAM SIGNS CONTRACT WITH JOE WEBER.

Samuel Cunningham, who has been treasurer of the Plainfield theatre, from the time it was opened until the recent change was effected, whereby Proctor & Sanderson became lessees, has signed a contract with Joe Weber for the coming season to manage one of the six companies now presenting Edward Locke's famous play, "The Climax." Mr. Cunningham will assume his new position September 1. At present he does not know which company he will be with, whether he will go on the road or be located in New York. Since coming to Plainfield Mr. Cunningham has made a host of friends. He had several offers and today decided to accept the one made by Joe Weber. He will remain in Plainfield until September.

PHOTOGRAPHING SOUND.

Professor Dayton C. Miller, of Cleveland, Ohio, says he has discovered a means of photographing sound. He claims that by the use of his device it will be possible to distinguish on films the difference between the human voice and the sonorous of musical instrument. The invention directly photographs the sound waves, magnifying them 2,000 times, and recording them on films.

In his invention Professor Miller has used a harmonic analyzer, an instrument made in Switzerland, which separates sound waves into their component parts. —Van Norden Magazine.

For Sleepy Hotel Guests.

Now it is unnecessary for weary, watchless hotel guests to climb out of bed and call to the telephone central when they wish to discover the time. The whole laborious business is eliminated by a new device which may be attached to the bedpost or placed under the pillow. It consists of a small telephone receiver, connected with a master clock situated some place in the hotel. The sleeper wakes up but is averse to rising. He reaches to the telephone receiver, places it to his ear and presses a button. A set of gongs will then stroke the hour, the quarter and the number of minutes past the hour.—From Van Norden Magazine.

Y.M.C.A. CAMPERS RETURN

The Association State Camp Breaks Up After a Successful Season.

ATHLETIC AWARDS GIVEN OUT.

Charles Martin, a Local Association Member, Wins Honors in Season's Quoit Contest.

One of the most successful seasons that the State camps of the Y. M. C. A. has enjoyed came to a close Thursday. Excellent camp spirit was manifested in each of the three sections of campers and there was a large increase in the number of association men from all parts of the State.

In athletics, Orange association was the victor with ninety-three points, and will hold the Hilton Bull cup for this year. The boys having the highest number of points were Henderson Murphree, Roland Gifford, P. H. Campbell, H. Baldwin and Spencer Hamilton. Montclair association was second with fifty-nine points; Elizabeth third, with twenty-seven points, and Hudson City third, with thirteen points.

In tennis, Charles Williams, of Montclair, held first place in the first section, and Francis Peal in the second section and James Simister in the third section. In the finals Jas. Simister won out and will hold the cup for one year.

In quoits it was very close between Gordon Kissoch, of Summit, and Charles Martin, of this city, but finally Charles Martin won out and will play off with Arthur Winey, champion of the third section. The champion of the State cup, as well as the victors of all the camps of the State, will meet at a central point this fall to play off the State championship games, and the winner will be awarded the silver cup.

The boys are beginning to send in their pictures for the photography competition, but it will not be known for several weeks who the winner will be.

The camp has been fortunate this year in having a number of experts in attendance at different times during the seasons, and among them were Alfred Gaskill, State forester; A. S. Williams, representing the New York zoological gardens, with special lectures on snakes of New Jersey; J. C. Lipman, professor of agriculture at Rutgers College; A. B. Kummel, State geologist; Lieut. W. E. Longfellow of the U. S. Volunteer Life Saving Corps. The State Library at Trenton has loaned as very fine set of nature study books, and the U. S. Department of Agriculture assisted in the department of work.

A special meeting of the boys' work committee of the State composed of Charles T. Kilborne, East Orange, chairman; H. S. Park, Ridgewood; J. T. Sproull, Arlington, and David Lindsay, Newark, was held at Wawayanda on Saturday and a number of changes were suggested for the ensuing year.

The after party, under the leadership of Charles R. Scott, the director, will spend several days in carrying out the plans proposed by the committee and from them the winter preparations for the 1910 camp will be made so as to increase the efficiency of the camp.

CHINESE IMPORTS OF CRACKERS INCREASING.

In response to inquiries, Consul Wilbur T. Gracey, of Tsingtau, furnishes the following report regarding the trade in biscuits, crackers and cakes in China:

During the past few years one of the large growing imports of China has been crackers and biscuits. The native Chinese have taken to their use, they can now be found in the majority of the large restaurants in the principal cities, and they are used in ever-increasing quantities by the better class of Chinese in their homes. Four and three of these have been locally manufactured, but the superiority of foreign-made biscuits has been recognized here, and large quantities of these products are imported from England, one British firm having a practical monopoly of the trade. The biscuits made by this firm have become well known throughout the empire, and the introduction of another kind and quality can only be accomplished by a thorough campaign.

There are practically no direct importations into this city, except the few cases of German biscuits abovementioned, which come out on ships direct from Germany. All the other products come in Shanghai and are there resold to the different Chinese shopkeepers in the ports and to the interior of China.—Consular Reports.

CIVIL SERVICE RECORDS SHOW 1139 APPOINTMENTS

Some amusement has been caused about the State house by the statement, which recently was current, that the work of the Civil Service Commission has thus far resulted in the appointment of just one person to office. This inaccuracy is exposed by reference to the record of appointments which has actually been made. Omitting some hundreds in the labor class, for which no examinations were held, there were down to July 1 of this year, or in the first nine months of the operation of the law, no fewer than 1,139 appointments to places in the classified civil service under the provisions of the civil service law and as results of examinations conducted by the commission.

Of this number 842 were in the State service, the remainder being in the services of five municipalities which have adopted the law. The 842 State appointments comprised competitive places in seventeen different repartments and institutions of the State government at Trenton, Railway, Morris Plains, Kearny, Vineland and Montclair. Among them were clerks, stenographers, typewriters, book-keepers, firemen engineers, guards, supervisors and others. The non-competitive appointments, which were also made after official examinations, were in nineteen different departments and institutions of the State service and included a great variety of occupations.

In the various municipal services, competitive places were filled in ten departments or institutions in Newark, nine in Essex county, two in Jersey City and four in Bayonne. Non-competitive municipal appointments after examination were made in eight departments or institutions in Newark, five in Essex county, one in Jersey City and one in Bayonne.

A recapitulation of the various activities of the Civil Service Commission down to July 1 comprises the following items:

Competitive examinations held, 88; candidates examined, 1,672; candidates accepted and put on eligible lists, 636; candidates rejected, 999; not yet passed upon, 37; competitive appointments made, 842; non-competitive appointments made, 1,095; dismissals from service, 101; reinstatements of men wrongfully dismissed, 10.

THE FIRST WEDDING IN OCEAN GROVE AUDITORIUM.

For the first time in its history the Ocean Grove Auditorium is to be the scene of a wedding on the evening of September 8, when Miss Hana Stokes Ballard, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Ballard, becomes the bride of Lloyd Lewis, of New York, formerly of Asbury Park. The wedding is to be a notable one in several respects.

Miss Ballard is the only daughter of a member of the Ocean Grove Campmeeting Association to be married in the grove. She is to be married by her father, the venerable president of the Campmeeting City, and she will be given away by Governor Fort. Dr. Ballard is an uncle of Mrs. Fort.

A thousand invitations will be issued for the marriage, and the guests will include many church and State officials, editors, officials and prominent people throughout Monmouth county. The big auditorium, where America's most noted clergymen and the world's greatest singers have swayed thousands, will be elaborately decorated for the occasion. The big new organ and probably the Ocean Grove orchestra will play the wedding march.

Miss Ballard is to be attended by Mrs. Howard Hastings, formerly Miss Jessie Hazelrig, as maiden of honor. Her bridesmaids will be Miss Lillian Bailey, of Ocean Grove; Miss Helen Van Cleaf, of Asbury Park; Miss Edna Herring, of New York, an Asbury Park summer resident; Miss Lillian Ralston, of Allentown; Miss Edith Morgan, daughter of Tall Esen Morgan, of Ocean Grove, and Miss Maria Wood, of New York.

Mr. Lewis' best man is to be Abraham Havens. The ushers are to be Irving Scott, Frank Lyons, Bruce Conoyer, Herman Beringer, Albert Getz, Frederick Weber, Frederick Jocelyn and Stewart Farrell.

CHARLES DILTS PAYS EXTRA FINE FOR RUNNING AWAY.

Charles Dilts, of Jackson avenue, who escaped from Marshall Pope, of the borough police force on July 22, when the latter arrested another man, was fined five dollars Saturday morning by Mayor Townsend in the borough police court.

The police have been on the lookout for Dilts for some time. His partner was fined $2, but as Dilts caused the police extra work in locating him, an additional three dollars was added to his debt.

THE LAWS EXPLAINED

Technicalities Under High Court Decisions Governed Canfield Case.

LANDLORDS VERSES TENANTS.

Unrecorded Contract May Be Enforced Against Ordinary Creditors of Buyer.

The recent decision handed down by Judge Newcorn in the replevin suit of Alfred Canfield, of Newark, against Louis Kadish, of this city, in which the former sought to recover two pool tables and their accessories, was quite in keeping with precedent and the cases mentioned in his findings prove the Judge's stand as taken.

In a similar suit brought by one Davis and a landlord against a Mrs. Herring in November, 1858, in which household goods were seized and impounded for rent due the defendant, won on the ground that the landlord had no right to seize the goods which were held by Mrs. Herring on a bill of sale.

The then Judge opined that a person holding personal property under a bill of sale from one the defendant cannot be impeached for fraud by the vendor, or any person claiming title under him, except a bona fide creditor having a legal lien upon the property.

Distress, or suit, will not lie (stand good) for rent until it is due; and, although the property is not appraised and sold until after the rent is due, the irregularity is not thereby cured but the distrainor (plaintiff) will be liable as a trespasser from the beginning.

The party whose goods are unlawfully distrained does not forfeit or waive any legal right, by not claiming the goods when the distress is made, in order to sue the party who actually owns the goods does not lose his interests in them when they may be seized illegally.

On the other hand respecting goods held on a duly executed lease the position taken by the Judge in the case of the Singer Mfg. Company in November, 1903, is equally clear. D. Wolffe & Co., sought to restrain the Singer Company from seizing a sewing machine held on a lease by a woman client of the concern. The judge ruled in this case that as a lease had been duly signed by the woman and only a portion of the amount due on the machine had been paid the company had retained its title to the machine. The legal opinion in this case is, that in order to impound, that is, to seize and hold under restraint goods sold under a lease, the leasing company or individual loses its claim only when the full amount of money considered action is paid by the purchaser of the property. Such a lease is not a contract for the conditional sale of goods required to be recorded according to law.

There is another phase of the question treated in the suit of Reichman vs. Masker at a later date in which the judge holds that an unrecorded contract for the conditional sale of goods and chattles accompanied by an actual delivery and followed by an actual and continued change of possession of the things contracted to be sold, may be enforced against ordinary creditors of the person contracting to buy the goods.

In the Canfield case L. Moledesky seized two pool table bought on a lease from Canfield by Samuel Thornton, and offered the tables for sale at public auction. The defendant, L. Kadish, bought the tables, although a notice had been served that the goods had not been paid for up to the time of the sale. It was proved at the trial that Thornton had signed a lease and the full amount due on the tables not having been paid, according to the law on the subject the tables really belonged to Canfield. The seizure by Moldesky was for rent due on the premises occupied by the buyer of the tables. As a natural result, according to the rulings in the previous three cases noted by Judge Newcorn, the case was won by Canfield and the costs and counsel fee allowed to Lawyer Robert Newton Crane, who appeared for Canfield.

STRANGE WOMAN ROBS DUNELLEN MAN OF $30

A clever robbery was prepetrated in Dunellen Thursday afternoon, when an unknown woman took $30 from the top of the safe in the office of William H. Cole, a coal and grain dealer of that place. Mr. Cole left the money on top of the safe while he stepped back to the rear for a second, intending to unlock the combination when he returned. As the office was deserted at the time he did this with impunity.

When he went up to the safe a few minutes later to put the money in it, the greenbacks had gone. For the moment he thought that he put the bills in his pocket, and so made a search through them as well as about the office. When he convinced himself that he had left the bills on the top of the safe the idea of a robbery dawned in his mind and he went outside to look for the thief. The time that he had taken to search the office and through his pockets had evidently given the thief time to get away for there was no one in sight. He informed the police of the matter and the only clue is that furnished by some pedestrians who said that they say a strange woman in the vicinity of the office earlier in the afternoon. Marshal Sliney is now working on the case.

HEALTH INSPECTOR ACTS; M'INTYRE IS BURIED

After having served his country in the Civil War in the Eighth U. S colored troops, William McIntyre, who has lived here for nearly half a century, and who died Monday friendless and poor, was buried Friday through the generosity of Henry DeMott, of Somerset street. The Borough Health Inspector viewed the body of the dead man and ordered that it be buried.

Relatives were consulted but no money could be raised to bear the cost of burial. As he had lost his effective papers no assistance could be obtained from the government. Meanwhile the need of burial was urgent. The borough Overseer of the Poor was consulted in the matter. He talked with Mayor Townsend; but no money was forthcoming. A meagre return of $10 from a life insurance company was made, but this lacked $15 of the necessary amount.

Becoming disgusted with the procedure of events, Mr. DeMott bore the expense personally, and the veteran negro received a respectable burial.

STATE AUTO FUNDS TO IMPROVE COUNTY ROADS

Now that the Union County Board of Freeholders will receive about $10,000 for use on the county roads, that being the county's share of the fund collected by the State from motor vehicle registration, licenses and fines, Major King, director of the board, has been making a list of the roads upon which the freeholders wish the money applied. Before the money will be paid, however, the roads to be improved, must be designated and be approved by the State commissioner.

Major King will shortly forward this information to Commissioner Gillyson. The roads selected are Seven Bridge road and Cowperis avenue, Springfield; St. George's avenue, Linden; North avenue, Garwood and Westfield; South avenue, Fanwood, and Mountain avenue, Scotch Plains.

The funds which is now being divided has been accumulating for three or four years. The law first said that the money in this fund could only be used for State Aid roads, Another law was passed the next year including county roads and last year another law was passed which allows still more latitude. In every instance, however, the State commissioner has to be satisfied that the money is rightly used for the improvement of roads which need it. Hereafter, it is probable that the money will be divided among the counties annually.

MANY FRIENDS ATTEND FUNERAL OF J. P. POWERS.

The funeral of John P. Powers took place Friday morning from St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield, Father Miller, the pastor, conducted the services and a solemn high mass of requiem was sung. The church was filled with the friends and relatives of the young man and many floral offerings testified to the esteem in which he was held.

The Knights of Columbus and the Plainfield Druggists' Association were represented with beautiful set pieces of roses and forget-me-nots while many other pieces were from friends. Many of those who attended the services at the church were deterred from accompanying the body to the cemetery owing to the rain. The pall bearers were John J. Kenney, Dennis Geelan, John Traynor, Joseph Burke, James Burke and Frank Burke. The interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

JERSEY'S BUMPER CROP

Products for July Far Exceed Any Month in History of Southern Section.

IMPROVED SHIPPING FACILITIES

Pennsylvania Railroad Has Been Conducting a Campaign in Behalf of Agriculture Interests.

More perishable freight was shipped by farmers of Southern New Jersey during the month of July than in any previous month in the history of that section. A million and a half dollars worth of produce was distributed over the New England States, the Middle West, and Canada from points located on the West Jersey & Seashore Railroad, a part of the Pennsylvania Railroad system.

In July, 1907, the value of produce shipped by farmers of the six lower counties of New Jersey was $746,800. In 1908 the estimated value of the shipments was $1,175,000, while July of this year shows an increase over 1908 of $385,600. The total number of cars used to transport this freight was 3,909—over 37 miles of cars if placed end to end.

Two thousand, three hundred and twenty-two cars of potatoes were shipped from Southern New Jersey in July, while it required 1,047 cars to haul tomatoes that was 3,369—transportation. The other 540 cars were loaded as follows: Apples, 5; berries, 148; clams and oysters, 165; fish, 148; peppers, 19; poultry, 46; mixed carloads, 9.

In the last three years the Pennsylvania Railroad has been conducting a development campaign in behalf of the agricultural and commercial interests of New Jersey. Commission merchants, and buyers all over the country have been supplied with lists of reliable growers and shippers in that section, and the result has been that the market for Southern New Jersey produce has been greatly widened. In addition, to enable the farmer to market his products to the best advantage the most advantageous prices, special schedules have been established and trains known as "Preference Freight" trains have been operated. These have rights over all other freight trains, and put the products of the markets in the best possible condition.

That the campaign conducted by the railroad, together with the establishment of fast freight service and the improvement of its facilities, has put the farmers in Southern New Jersey in touch with the consumers of a very wide area is indicated in the following distribution of the July shipments from that section:

Twelve hundred cars were sent to Jersey City and New York, 628 to Camden and Philadelphia, 418 to Boston, 258 to other points in Massachusetts, 257 to Newark, 263 to Pittsburg, other points in Pennsylvania, 144; other New Jersey points 55, New York points 216, Ohio 80, Chicago 17, Maryland points 2, Connecticut 150, Vermont 9, New Hampshire 57, Maine 27, Rhode Island 6, Toronto 19, Montreal 15, and Michigan 8.

The shipments in 1905 show an increase of 964 cars over 1908, and 1,831 cars over 1907.

DOUBLE RUNAWAY CAUSES CONSIDERABLE EXCITEMENT.

A double runaway took place in when a horse owned by Louis K. Hyde attached to a light trap ran away down Mountain avenue towards Somerset street, and there collided with a Public Service Corporation wagon causing the horse attached to it, to run away also.

Mr. Hyde's horse took fright at an automobile and broke away from where it was standing near the lodge. No one was in the rig at the time. Chief of Police eGorge Weiss, of the borough, saw the runaway and stopped the Hyde horse, while pedestrians at the corner of Somerset street caught the other animal, which was going at a good pace towards this city.

Neither of the wagons was damaged to any extent and the horses were uninjured.

POSTAL RECEIPTS SHOW A GOOD GAIN IN TRADE.

With two exceptions the gross receipts for July of fifty of the largest postoffices in the United States show an increase over July, 1908. The total receipts were $7,240,628, a net increase of $584,888. The two offices which showed a decline in receipts were St. Louis and Scranton, Pa.

The receipts for New York were $1,400,513, an increase of $122,084 over July, 1908. Receipts for Brooklyn were $173,276, an increase of $11,630. Postal receipts of the fifty postoffices throughout the country usually reflect the condition of business. As this is accepted generally the gross postal receipts for the month just closed show that business has improved in every part of the country.

The per cent. of increase by the fifty largest offices in the country reached 8.78 over July, 1908.

EXPLAINS WHY WOMEN MUST BE DECEIVERS

Many causes have contributed to developing in womankind the arts of deceit, writes Cesare Lombroso in La Revue, of Paris. In the first place, they are the weaker physical vessel, and it is necessary for them to have recourse to lying and guile. In all probability Spencer's conjecture is true that in tribal times the women who deceitfully pretended to resent the aggression of the men really proved most acceptable to these.

Modesty has, as Stendhal pointed out, this result, namely, that it forces women to become habitual liars. There can be no question that the last thing a woman will admit is that she is an armorous or loveloving creature. A man may tell a woman that he loves her, but should a woman reveal the extent of her "feelings" to a man her reputation is gone, or at least in danger.

You will note the result of this modesty among many peoples. In England, for example, it is a highly shocking thing to mention the word shirt in the presence of a lady. And just consider our circumlocutions of language in the presence of women and girls. They continually hear lies told them, and so become accustomed to the art of lying.

Again, the sexual struggle ever forces the woman to conceal her defects, her age, her illnesses, so as not to disillusionize the men. It as frequently as not forces a woman to hide her brighter intellectual qualities, such, for example, as wit, spirituality or genius, which men, as a rule, do not care to find in their wives. And also as often as not a woman will feign feelings which she possesses not in order to enslave the heart of a possible admirer. Thus they pretend to love the fine arts. They even affect to be interested in army matters when there happen to soldiers among their admirers.

What are cosmetics, dyes and the whole scheme of toilet accessories but so many lies with which the struggle with man is to be maintained and reinforced? In fine, a woman who should be perfectly sincere and who should reveal to a lover all her faults and foibles, would be her worst enemy. She would soon kill her admirer's love, since love in a man is a less potent force than vanity.

Woman, like a child, and because she is weak, has an instinctive desire for protection, and to be under the protection of a man constitutes at once her pride and her happiness. And it is just for this reason that she often feigns unhappiness or discomfort that she does not feel, so as to enlist the sympathies of men; she will pretend to be sick in order to win the attentions of others, and consequently we have deluded ourselves into the notion that women are more sensitive, though personally I have always found them to be far less sensitive than this quality. One of woman's best tricks, when she finds herself in an inextricable quandry, is to pretend to faint—and it is her morbid desire for protection and sympathy which often causes her to practice these deceits even when she is most guilty. Even the love of woman finds its origin in this desire for protection, and it is, moreover, one reason why women ever affect to be weaker than they really are. In matters of auto-suggestion woman is far more open to self-conviction than man. When, for example, she invents a calumny about another person she is ever the first to become convinced of its truth herself.

THE GREAT BLIND.

The great sightless of the world prove that blindness is no insurmountable handicap to success in life. Blind Homer, weaving legends of heroes and gods; Milton, creating epics of heaven and hell, have been followed in this more practical age by that unique woman figure, Helen Keller; that great ship designer, John Herreshoff; the great economist, Henry Fawcett, of England; the orator, Thomas Gore, of Oklahoma; Louis Braille, who gave the sightless the inestimable blessing of reading, and Joseph Pulitzer, the great blind journalist. Others there be, hardly less notable than these, who by unusual and patient effort have made themselves useful citizens, adding to the world's happines and triumphing over their blindness, which, of all afflictions, seems most stultifying.

It is a curious fact that the ratio of really gifted blind people is out of all proportion to their total number when one considers those with those who have full power to see. Nature, as if repentant at the affliction it has imposed upon these people, seems to endeavor to make partial amends by sharpening the other faculties to an almost uncanny degree in some instances. We need only to study briefly the lives of the great quartet to perceive this.—Von Norden Magazine.

"She Who Dreams."

A Maori's idea of a woman is expressed in the phrase "she who dreams," which means that her thoughts are on higher plane than his. He allows her absolute freedom of speech and manner, for he is sure that if there is anything to be said or done a woman's refinement and, sicerity will exceed his own.—Ladies' Field.

KEAN ON G. O. P. OUTING

Elizabeth Senator is at Rockaway Beach with "The Faithful" Today.

BOOM FOR VIVIAN LEWIS.

Politicians Seem to Favor Him for Gubernatorial Candidate—Big Plainfield Turnout.

The Steamer Isabelle, with 500 good and faithful Republicans aboard, left Elizabethport at 10:30 o'clock this morning for the annual outing of the G. O. P. of Union county to Rockaway Beach. It was planned to start at 10 o'clock, but a telephone message was received from Vivian Lewis that he intended making the trip, but would be a little late. In consequence the boat was held up for a half hour.

Today's trip is a notable one in several respects. United States Senator John Kean is "among those present" for the first time on a similar outing, and it is expected that the popular Union county man will receive a cordial reception. There are nearly one hundred Plainfielders in the party, headed by County Chairman F. H. Smith.

It is expected that a quiet Union county boom will be started today for Vivian Lewis as a gubernatorial candidate. It is known that he has aspirations in that direction and will doubtless accept the opportunity to get the support of the county members of the party, as well as the leaders.

Other booms started were for F. H. Smith as a candidate for renomination as county register, and James C. Calvert as county clerk. Every member of the party will be supplied with a badge bearing the name of Mr. Smith and Mr. Calvert.

At the beach an old-time clambake was enjoyed. During the afternoon the time was spent playing all kinds of games, including baseball, and concluding with a fat men's race. The day's outing was concluded with a sight-seeing trip about New York harbor.

REV. DR. CHAMBLISS TO ADDRESS S. S. WORKERS

Rev. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, will address the annual convention of the Middlesex county Sunday-schools to be held at the Sayreville M. E. church, Thursday, September 9. His address will be given at the closing service of the convention, to be held Thursday evening.

Extensive preparations for the convention are now nearing completion, and a program of especial interest to Sunday-school workers has been arranged by the committee, which is made up of the officers of the Middlesex county association. The opening services will be marked by devotional exercises in charge of Rev. R. R. Stiez pastor of the Sayreville German Presbyterian church; Rev. Harold P. Sloan, of the South River M. E. church, and Rev. Samuel Hickman, of the entertaining church.

Evangelistic work in the Sunday-school will be the subject of an address to pastors and leaders by Rev. Abram Duryee, of Hackensack, who is prominent in State Christian Endeavor work. Rev. Mr. Duryee will also conduct a conference on the subject, during the noon intermission. Miss Alice B. Hamlin, who succeeds Miss Rose Scott as superintendent of elementary work, will address the convention on "Missions in the Sunday school." The occasion will mark her first appearance in this capacity. Rev. E. M. Ferguson, the State secretary, will exhibit a chart showing the progress of the various schols throughout the county and how the work is approaching the standard set down by the State Sunday-school association.

The County Sunday-school association is headed by Rev. F. T. B. Reynolds, of Spotswood, and among its officers are Rev. W. W. Casselberry, formerly pastor of the Dunellen Presbyterian church, who is now vice-president, and Rev. Henry N. Jordan, of Dunellen, who is superintendent of the home department.

Judge Enjoys Auto Trip.

Judge and Mrs. William N. Newcorn returned Friday from an automobile trip to Long Branch. The trip was made in Mr. Newcorn's new Mitchell car. Good roads were reported most of the way, save for one bad stretch. There was no breakdowns or holdups for speeding, and the trip was ideal in every respect. Though the trip was made by Mr. Newcorn's family, going to Long Branch, his daughter, Miss Neeca Newcorn, and niece, Miss Jessie Levy, of Pittsburg, remained at the shore as the guests of Mrs. Newcorn's sister, who has a cottage there.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 22, 1909.

(By REV. S. H. DOYLE.)

Topic—Two prayer lessons.—Matt. vi, 5-8; xxi. 18-16.

To more people the idea of being taught to pray may seem repugnant. But this should not be their feeling, for if we are taught, as we are, how to address man, how much more should we learn how to address God! There is no place in the Christian religion where we are more irreverent than in prayer. I do not refer so much to our attitude while another prays, though there is enough irreverence here. The angels approach God in the most reverential way, exclaiming, "Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty!" On the other hand, men approach Him most carelessly, and during prayer by another the laziest and loungiest attitude is assumed. But these things, while serious enough, are not so serious as the irreverence which I have in mind. Many more think of learning how to pray, of studying the Biblical and other prayers as ideals. Others, again, form no idea of what they are going to say in prayer. They never in any sense prepare their prayers. If called upon to address man the least time for preparation, but no preparation is necessary to address God. If they approach a king every method of procedure is thoroughly studied, but in approaching God no such preparedness is considered necessary. Any thoughts that happen to come to their minds may be addressed to God. But prayer, approach to God, is a most sacred act of devotion, and we should learn to pray only as we are led in the most devout manner. John taught his disciples to pray, and, inspired by their example, the disciples of Christ asked Him to teach them to pray. He did not hesitate and gave them a comprehensive but succinct and perfectly simple. Moreover, on other occasions He taught them how and where to pray to obtain the answers.

The first lesson is on sincerity in prayer. The first truth teaches how not to pray. "And when thou prayest, thou shall not be as the hypocrites are." The hypocrites prayed to be seen of men and not so much to be heard of God. If on the way to the temple or the hour of prayer, when the time came those who had not arrived stood where they were and offered up their devotions. The Pharisees were often purposely late and stood on the corners and made very long prayers that they might see how devout they were regardless of God's attitude toward them. There was no sincerity in such prayers, and Christ in this lesson teaches us against praying after such a fashion. He then follows with a positive line of instruction. "Thou, when thou prayest, enter thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door pray to thy Father which is in secret." Let us remember that Christ refers here to personal, individual prayer as distinguished from praying in public. Moreover, on other occasions He taught them how and where to pray to obtain the answers.

Every evening the drawing-rooms were converted into impromptu charades. Some lady would suggest a word or phrase, and forthwith it word or phrase, and forthwith it of a sportive little joke she had read the word games now current with us in America had their origin in the necessity the French salons were under in the last century to divert themselves.

In some of the salons the fashion of keeping a daily chronicle of news, which was too often a mere chronicle of scandal, was adopted. Madame Doublet de Person issued bulletins which she called "Nouvelles a la main." In the apartments two registers were kept, one of the authentic news received here and there by her guests, the other of floating rumors and on dits; and from these the budget of her chronicle was made up and circulated throughout France.

CONVERTING OLD PAVEMENT INTO NEW.

A new paving machine which uses old pavements of granite blocks, bricks or cobblestone as the foundation on which to lay a surface of asphalt is described with illustrations in the August Popular Mechanics.

This is accomplished by heating the old surface with a large and continuous blast of heated air from the machine. Immediately over this heated surface is applied a coat of melted asphalt or other bituminous cement. The heated condition of the stone causing perfect adhesion. No flame is permitted to come in contact with the stone, so that no part of it becomes overheated and cracked. A final layer of asphalt completes the underlying, thus converting the old, rough pavement into a smooth and noiseless thoroughfare. The same machine is used for resurfacing or patching wornout asphalt pavements.

SONNET OF SABBATH MORN.

With silent awe I hail the sacred morn,
That solemnly wakes while all the fields are still;
A soothing calm on every breeze is borne,
A graver mummur echoes from the hill,
And softer sings the linnet from the thorn;
The skylark warbles in a tone less shrill.
Hail, light serene! hail, sacred Sabbath morn!
The sky a placid yellow lustre fills,
The gales that lately sighed along the grove
Have hushed their drowsy wings in dead repose;
The hovering rack of clouds forgets to move,
So soft the day when the first morn arose!

Poppies for House Use.

Poppies are among the prettiest of the garden flowers, but most people find them exceedingly difficult to use successfully indoors. However, the secret of keeping them fresh in water is to have a pail or jar well filled with water at hand when the flowers are cut. Plunge each immediately into the water, before it has a chance to droop. After the flowers have had an opportunity to drink their fill, they may be transferred into the vases for house use.

WHEN MEN DID FANCY WORK.

During the old regime in France, about which so much glamour remains to us, the very men who were living and making the history of the empire of Louis, passed their leisure time in a way that seems to us of today utterly ridiculous, says a writer in Appleton's Monthly. In all the fancy work on which ladies employed themselves, the men seem to have taken part.

Poinsinet, in one of his comedies, represents a young marquis entering a room where two fair damsels are embroidering. One is working a piece of dress trimming, the other a Marly flounce. The beau examines the embroidery with the eye of a connoisseur, points out here and there the special good touches, and is too polite to notice any defects. He takes a little gold tube out of the pocket of his richly decorated waistcoat, and selects a dainty gold needle. He goes to the frame at which Cidalise is working, and finishes the flower which she had begun. From her he moves to the sofa, and, seizing one end of the flounce, assists Ismene, to whom he pays special attention, to complete her task.

At this time it was the custom of the ladies invariably to carry their work-bags with them to the evening receptions, in which they had not only their embroidery materials, but the last novel, the popular song, and the patch boxes and rouge pots. Gentlemen also carried deftly embroidered little bags into company, which held "a whole arsenal of cutlery and fancy articles, such as boxes of different shapes filled with lozenges, snuff and scent."

In the days when the fashion of the day was to cut out drawings from books and pamphlets, and to paste them on screens, lamp shades, boxes and vases. The skill in this was to so arrange the drawings, or parts of different drawings, as to produce a curious or pleasing effect. Then there came a season when all *the rage was for charades and rid*dles, which gave a peculiarly good opportunity to exercise the light and rapid wit so conspicuous in the French.

FOR THE LUNCHEON TABLE.

Dishes That the "Kiddies" Will Be Sure to Enjoy.

Brown Bean Soup.—Soak one pint brown beans over night, cook three hours in slowly boiling water, mash well, add milk to thin, then butter, pepper, salt and sugar in such quantity as to cut the crude taste of beans. When in tureen slice over a lemon. Serve with toasted, buttered crackers.

Beet Hash.—Several cold beets chopped, equal amount of cold potatoes, and if possible in corned beef liquor and chopped. Mix as for meat hash and heat, seasoning with butter pepper and salt.

Hamburger Steak.—Get 15 cents' worth of round steak and have it run through the machine. Over an equal quantity of stale bread pour sufficient milk to soften; mix meat and bread together, season with salt and pepper; shape into cakes and fry brown. In mixing be careful not to mix bread and meat until they become soggy.

Suet Pudding.—Three cups flour, two teaspoonfuls baking powder, one cup chopped suet, one cup stiff batter. Pour into well greased double boiler and cook three hours. Serve with liquid sauce.

Chicken Boudins.

For one pint of cold minced chicken allow one tablespoonful of butter, half a cup of dry bread crumbs, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, half a cup of water, whites of two eggs; quarter of a grated nutmeg, a pinch of sage and salt and pepper to taste. Heat the butter and add the bread crumbs; when hot, fry until the crumbs begin to brown, then remove from fire and add the water, then the minced chicken, the seasoning and last the eggs beaten to a froth; blend thoroughly, then put the mixture into a pan and bake in a moderate oven for half an hour; then pour over it a cream sauce, and serve.

Baltimore Whip.

Grate the rind of two lemons and squeeze out the juice; add two teaspoonfuls of vanilla, one cup of pulverized sugar, whites of two eggs, and the juice of four oras. Beat for ten minutes. Dissolve two boxes of gelatine in a cup of warm water; when cool add to other ingredients drop by drop, then fold in the well-beaten whites of four eggs, beating constantly. Serve with orange juice, sweetened, and marraschino sirup.

Devonshire Puffs.

This is an old-fashioned recipe that I always find popular. Peel and bake some apples, when cold mix the pulp, free from cores, with sufficient sugar to sweeten and a little grated lemon peel. Make some nice short crust, lay the prepared apple on a square of paste, and fold it over so as to form a three-cornered puff. Bake in a quick oven for 20 minutes. Sift white sugar over and serve.

Starch Polish.

Take one ounce of spermaceti, one ounce of white wax, melt and run into a thin cake on a plate. A piece the size of a quarter of a dollar added to a quart of prepared starch will give a beautiful luster to the clothes and keep the irons from sticking.

A Glossy Starch.

A laundress recently told the secret of her glossy, smooth-looking starch; when it came to a good boil she added a small piece of butter the size of a walnut. This not only gives a nice finish, makes ironing easier, but prevents the starch from boiling over.

Tongue Sandwiches.

Chop fine cold boiled tongue, season with pepper, mustard and black pepper. Add melted butter and sweet cream until smooth like paste. Then spread between slices of buttered bread.

Mustard Sauce.

Four tablespoonfuls of mustard, one tablespoon of sugar, one teaspoon each of salt and pepper. Mix with boiling water to consistency of thick paste and thin with vinegar.

ECONOMIES IN COOKING.

The housekeeper who is truly economical utilizes the things that most of us would throw away. Few women, for instance, know that peapods have any other use than to be thrown in the garbage pail; yet a delicious soup can be made from them, also a salad that some persons fancy.

In making the soup, pick the peas carefully and lay aside such pods as are fresh and green. Remove the string and stem from each pod. Put a small piece of cover with cold water and let them cook slowly until soft. Drain the liquid through colander, pressing out as much substance from the pods as you can. The water in which the peas are boiled can be added to this liquid.

Pea Pod Salad.—When ready to serve bring the liquid to boil add an equal quantity of milk or less if necessary, a slice of onion, plenty of salt, pepper and paprica, and thicken with a tablespoonful of butter and flour rubbed together.

Frankly pea pod salad is not so appetizing as the soup. Cook the pods until tender, but not so soft as for soup. Let them get icy cold and serve with a highly seasoned mayonnaise. If chopped cold beets or remnants or cauliflower are added to the pods, the salad is improved.

Another economy is a salad dressing that is a friend in need for the housekeeper who learns to utilize her sour milk. To a kitchen cup of sour milk or cream—sour cream is best—add a teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, a teaspoonful of mustard and another of cornstarch, also plenty of red and black pepper.

Cook the dry ingredients, salt, mustard, sugar and pepper in egg, stir it in milk and bring to boil. Add the cornstarch, which has been thinned in a little cold milk or water, and stir until the mixture thickens about as consistency as thick mayonnaise. Then add a piece of butter size of egg, or two tablespoon*fuls of oil; lastly pour in a half cup* of vinegar. Let the mixture boil up until thick.

This dressing when packed in a glass jar will keep a long time on the ice, and is invaluable for sliced tomatoes, potato salad, cold slaw, and is even a good substitue for Hollandaise sauce with asparagus or cauliflower.

A FEW SEASHORE TIPS.

A steamer rug is good, but a large rubber sheet is even better to spread on the beach when baby and the very small children are taken to the seashore, or even to the mountain camp.

There are times when, notwithstanding the heat of the sun and the fact that the tide is well out, the sand stays moist—far too moist for a small child to sit on for any considerable time. The dragging of cushions to the beach, even in the smallest way, is impossible, because of the distance; camp chairs will help out the *situation for moth*er, but not for baby, and the rubber sheet alone will satisfactorily supply the need.

A pail is a most necessary all-summer possession, for there are innumerable little things that should be stowed away in trunk or box, but which will mildew or spot without extra wrapping during a stay of some duration. Cotton wadding and oil paper are the natural resources of the seashore packer. We have heard, too, of packing dainty kid gloves in a tightly screwed quart jar as a precaution against the small yellow spots that show by the end of the season on even the most ordinary colors and qualities.

An extra flooding with oil will be necessary for the sewing machine, and as a protection for the metal parts a large square of wool flannel should be wrapped around it while not in use.

Needles should be stuck through oily flannel, and the various sci*ssors should be rubbed with oil occa*sionally.

Rod pillows are better for seaside use than those stuffed with down or feathers, and wall paper is a good scheme generally for any house in a region where there is perpetual damp.

Bare walls of the seashore cottage should be smoothed over carefully to fill in all cracks, and then painted with three separate coats of heavy paint in soft and restful tones to reflect the subdued "light that never is on land or sea" near the sandy coast.

WORTH KNOWING.

Old pieces of soap can be put into a small baking powder box which has been punctured with nail holes. The box can be thrown into the dishpan and used the same as any soap shaker. This is a good way to use small particles of toilet and laundry soap.

For the roast of cold lamb course serve an egg salad sprinkled with minced mint leaves.

Place a box of lime in the closet in which linen, preserves, etc., are stored away. It will prevent mold from gathering on the fruit.

A small clean sponge and a bowl of water are essentials upon the ironing board when fine lingerie garments must frequently be dampened. A bowl of clear starch water is also needed.

Mixing Flour and Milk.

When mixing flour and milk, try using a fork instead of a spoon. The operation will be perceptibly shortened.

AMERICANS WITHOUT COUNTRY.

I think it from the ranks of the fastidious and indifferent that the confirmed expatriates the generally recruited, writes Mary Crawford Frasier in Scribner's. The newly rich are less tempted to abandon America altogether. They rush to Europe when they can, they are seen in all the smart hotels, make the fortunes of dressmakers and jewelers, and then come home, because mere wealth is much more of a power on this side than on the other.

The real expatriate despises and avoids them; they jar on his sensibilities too rudely. He and his fellows have, as a rule, much to say of the refined interests, the uplifting surroundings which they can cultivate and enjoy abroad; yet intimacy with them leads to the conviction that those who are not professional workers take but slight notice of the treasures of art, or thought, or nature, by with they are surrounded. They are really people who want to lick all the jam of life without ever getting to its crust.

The American expatriates who have distinguished themselves can be counted on the fingers of one hand. Most of the others form a non-producing class, deteriorating in quality as it increases in numbers. The expatriates draw their income from American sources, contribute nothing but abuse in return, and are as unprofitable to the country of their origin or creation as can be parentage. With the exception of the few American women who have married happily abroad and who have had the wisdom to heartily espouse the country as well as the husband, the expatriates are living wherever they may be. They hobnob lustily with other aliens and abuse the institutions of their chosen residence with a virulence only suppressed during their rare visit to America; they openly condemn the religion, the politics, the national institutions of the country where they have established themselves, contribute nothing towards its defenses or its development, and die, after forty or fifty years' exile, in profound ignorance of all that is best in their surroundings.

If they behave themselves, they are regarded with amused tolerance by the social world of their alienship, used unscrupulously when they are well off, and left to pay for their forgotten the moment anything of real importance is in hand! Why not?

SUCCESSFUL NEGRO FARMERS.

The biggest negro farm in South Carolina is in Marion county, according to the Columbia Sun. It used to be Tracy Alford, but Tracy has increased in town property and sold his farm down. Marion yet holds the belt regardless of the claims of Sumter and Orangeburg counties, and even of William Murry, of Wedgefield, who has 180 acres in cotton and who has ginned a hundred bales, and even our friend "Bob" Rabb, of Cross Hill, who makes 100 bales a year.

Butler General, a quiet, unassuming looking negro, who lives about five miles from Marion Courthouse, is really the biggest negro farmer in South Carolina. General has 200 acres in cotton in one level field without a flow or a wash-out, and 100 acres in another lot, 300 acres in cotton as fine as any man's, from which General says he will gather 250 bales and perhaps more. This is his own land, for which he would not take $75 an acre.

It is one unbroken field of as fine farm land, level and all stumped, as Aycock or any white farmer owns, and it cost General, after him years ago $25 and $30 and acre. He has 200 acres of valuable timber land and several hundred acres on his other places, about one thousand acres in all. He runs eighteen plows on his plantation and used 140 tons of guano, costing him about $2,000. His farm supplies cost $3,000, making his outlay $5,000.

General is an open-hearted, progressive negro. He has a church and a school house on his place and gets all the labor he wants to work his farm. Anderson General, a brother, works one of the plantations, keeping it up to the acre mark. Both the Generals are good, law-abiding men, lovers of the acre and loyal citizens.

USE FOR OLD PARASOLS.

When your parasol gets shabby don't throw it away—there are numerous uses for it.

When the covering has worn at the seams cover it with a bit of lace, inserting oval pieces of applique; stitch it firmly to the material on the outside and cut the worn silk from underneath.

Worn edges can be finished with a frill of inch wide velvet or silk ribbon in the middle of each panel.

For greater elaboration the bow knot can be arranged in the middle of each panel.

If the parasol is spotted in one panel and the rest are in good condition the spot can be cut out and the embroidering a large oval medallion in self colors or white with the monogram of the owner in the middle.

A unique effect was seen recently in a parasol which had a lining of pale yellow. This was covered with net in almost the same tone and the ruffle was briar-stitched in reddish brown.

HORSES PERFECTLY TRAINED.

Extraordinary Intelligence of Mounts of City Patrolmen.

Chicago papers told the other day in picture and story of a policeman's horse that followed his master into a barber shop. A Philadelphia police horse, not long ago, caused some excitement by trudging along behind his rider right into the city hall. But for every yarn about intelligent police mounts in other cities, the average New York traffic "cop" has one to match, says the New York Tribune. As a Park Row city cavalryman remarked, patting the glossy brown neck of his aid and companion: "He knows a heap more'n a whole lot of the 'muts' that we protect, and if he didn't he wouldn't be fit for his job." One day recently a patrolman had dismounted at a congested spot to straighten out a tangle of vehicles, leaving his horse, untied and unguarded, near the curb. This animal stayed right there, as still as a soldier at attention, until the odor of a fine bas*ket of peaches, just out of reach* across the sidewalk, struck his nostrils. The bait was too tempting even for that well trained horse, and he began to edge sidewise toward the luscious meal. Just then his rider, busy a hundred feet up the street, saw him and yelled: "Hey, you, Bob, turn around, there!" And Bob turned around obediently and put temptation behind him.

DEMAND MIRRORS IN CHURCHES.

Architect Says Women Are Clamoring for Innovation.

"I won't name the church," said the architect's young man. "It is one that stood in need of repairs a short while ago. My boss got the job of putting it in order. I attended to most of the preliminary details, and I give you my word that in the list of improvements recommended by the committee was a lot of small mirrors to be put into the backs of the seats so the ladies could see how their hats looked when they knelt down to pray.

"Before the work was really begun the rest of the congregation got wind of the contemplated innovation and raised no end of a row. The question, 'Looking glasses or no looking glasses,' became the issue in the church. The conservative 'noes' won out by a small majority. They insisted that people kneel for devotional purposes, not to study the set of their hats, and that to put temptation in the shape of a mirror into the book of every seat would be positively criminal.

"But it is a question that will bob up again with the building of other churches. Most of the women of the congregation are demanding looking glasses in the churches, either in the pews or set as panels in the walls."

Angler's Bitter Memories.

Although angling has been and still is one of the chief delights of my life, something bitter always arises when I think of my fishing experiences. Right from my earliest years to handle a rod and throw a fly, it has, nevertheless, never been my good fortune to grass a really big fish. On the other hand, some of the greatest fishers in the land, I am going, I have ever known have "wiped my eye" time and again at salmon fishing. Only a year or two since I had a friend staying with me at Dupplin Castle, who, to the best of my belief, had never before handled a salmon rod or any kind of rod in his life. But almost at the first cast—if one could dignify the action by such a name—he rose, hooked and eventually grassed a 40-pounder. Another friend, also an unassuming looking fisherman, killed, single-handed, a splendid fish that went all but 50 pounds. But I, who have given years to the game, have never seen my spring balance tally more than 31 pounds.

Descendants of Massasoit.

Two princesses, representatives of the only real American royalty, de*scendants of that Massasoit whose* word was law to 20 villages and 20,000 men, are living in poverty on the shores of Lake Assawampsett, Massachusetts. They are Teweelesema and Wootoneksnuske. An effort is being made to secure for these last of the royal blood of the Wampanoags a material recognition of their rights and of the services which their ancestor, the mighty sachem Massasoit, performed for the pioneers of New England. For without Massasoit's friendship and protection the struggling colonists would have been swept from the land.

Human Nature.

An old maid's love affairs of her youth grow big in proportion to her years. By the time she is 50 she thinks she was the prettiest girl in town and tries to make every other one believe she was once beautiful and attractive.

A woman wonders why her next door neighbor does not punish her child for putting sticky fingers on her porch chairs, while she will allow her own child to jump unmolested on her neighbor's flower beds.

His Hopes Went Up in Smoke.

Here is an instance of a man's hopes actually going up in smoke. The Rev. William Berg of Hartford was the man. He was the leading candidate for the pastorate of the Milneauga Congregational church. One day recently he offered a cigar to the deacon of the church. The parishioners heard of the minister's devotion to the weed, and as an overwhelming vote decided to choose a pastor who did not smoke.

PUT CHECK ON APPETITE.

It is told of an old-time boarding-mistress of Marblehead, a shrewd dame who kept her boarders under admirable control, that once, on Saturday night, a daring man broke the unwritten law of the establishment, and asked a second time for beans, relates Fourth Dimension. Once on several others, who had not dared, but were ready to follow a leader should he succeed, looked up expectantly.

The landlady promptly ladled into the plate of the rash innovator a last spoonful, scraped from the deepest interior of the dish, and sweeping the table with a beaming smile, declared triumphantly:

"There! I calculated on just enough to a bean!"

Second helpings were otherwise discouraged by a boarding mistress of Old Norley. A young school teacher, late to dinner from a skating party, ate little of the half-cold and unappetizing first courses, but ven*tured a second request for hit mince* pie. It was served without comment, but a few minutes after dinner the maid tapped at her door.

"Missus says she's afraid that pie won't set well," she announced, "and she says, shan't she make you some ginger tea?"

The kind offer was declined; but a half-hour the maid appeared again.

"Missus says she's sure you must be needing some tea by now," she stated. "She'll send some right up the minute you say so. It's all ready."

Somewhat less graciously, the offer was declined again; but in a few minutes the maid reappeared with a tray, and "Here's your ginger tea. Missus says you better be on the safe side, and take it."

Rather sharply the tray was repudiated. Five minutes later the maid knocked once more.

"Missus says, she's got to go out, but she left a saucer of tea in her mind to leave you. She's put your ginger tea on the back of the stove keepin' hot; and you'll find the extract bottle on the second shelf of the pantry, if you want any more. She says she hopes you'll be all right, but there was a awful rich, and two pieces was enough to upset an ostrich."

They did not disturb the digestion of the healthy and hungry young school mistress; but she never risked a surprise party on Sunday's solicitude by second helpings. The ginger tea had cured her of that.

THE WILDERNESS.

This theatre of bloody conflicts is a vast sea, so to speak, of dense forest—a second growth more than a century old. It is made up chiefly of scrubby, low-limbed, stubborn oaks, and disordered, jagged pines. The soil is cold and thin—thin here and there scattering clumps of alien cedars. Some of the oaks are large enough to cut two railroad ties, and every once and a while you come across an acre or two of pines ten or twelve inches in diameter, tall and tapering, true to the soaring propensities of their kind. But generally, and above all where the battle was fought, the trees are noticeably stunted, and so close together, and their branches so interlaced with a thick underbrush, that it is very difficult indeed to make one's way through them.—July Atlantic.

SUCCESS.

There's a word of cheer for the man with pluck,
Who never gives way to an adverse luck;
Who never confesses that he is stuck,
But keeps on moiling
With vigor and toiling,
No matter what comes and no matter what goes,
He laughs at the man with a burden of woes,
And finally harvests the crop that he sows,
His "stick-to-it" spirit eventually grows
On those whom he meets
In the marts and the streets
And the byways and highways of life, and he greets
With a strong word of courage the man who retreats
At the first sign of failure, and shows him the way
To work with the sun if he wants to make hay.
He lives on the song side
Of life, on the strong side,
And knows not the wrong side,
But clutches the right;
Tenaciously clings till he comes out victorious,
Earning his spurs in a struggle most glorious;
Comes back for more in each unequal fight;
Finally winning the goal he is after,
Spreading his doctrine of grit and of laughter.

A Youthful Reasoner.

A teacher in a midland town in England is noted, says a writer in M. A. P., for his patriotic fervor. One day in class, while in a particularly uplifted mood, he turned to one of his pupils an average English boy of 12.

"Now Tommy," said he, "tell us what you would think if you saw the Union Jack waving proudly over the field of battle?"

"I should think," replied Tommy, "that the wind was blowing."—Youth's Companion.

JUDGE LEWIS S. HYER DIES AT RAHWAY

Judge Lewis S. Hyer, an old time newspaper man and one of the staunchest Democrats in Union county, died at his home in Rahway Sunday after a short illness. The funeral was held from Trinity Methodist church on Rahway Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Judge Hyer was born at Freehold on March 1, 1839, and was in his seventy-first year. His father was Aaron P. Hyer and his mother's maiden name was Gertrude Cottrell, both natives of Monmouth county (now Ocean county). In 1855 he became a "printer's devil" in the office of the Monmouth Democrat, and soon showed ability as a printer, and advancing to the post of chief of compositors soon was put in charge of that department of the paper. In 1862 he worked for the New York Journal of Commerce for three months, but changed for a position on the National Democrat, of Rahway. He leased the paper for a year and finally bought it.

Judge Hyer was not an office seeker, but at the earnest solicitation of his friends accepted the nomination for Mayor in 1874, and won what was then a splendid victory over his Republican opponent, who had been in office for several years. He was successively appointed clerk to the Board of Chosen Freeholders and City Clerk and finally a judge of the court of common Pleas by Governor Ludlow. He was a member of the Methodist church in Rahway and retired from active business several years ago.

MR. AND MRS. DEBELE HOME FROM DRIVING TRIP.

Mr. and Mrs. William Debele returned Saturday night from a two weeks' driving trip throughout the southern and central parts of New Jersey, after a rail journey to points of interest in Delaware, Washington, D. C., and other large cities.

The trip included visits to the Du-Pont powder works, and to the new Union station in Washington. Wednesday of last week was spent in fishing and a drive of 45 miles through a steady rain storm to Atlantic City was made the following day. At Hammontown, Mr. Debele met many of his old schoolmates. An old time dance with accordian music was held, and the men engaged in reminiscences of boyhood days.

BUTTER FROM OIL PLANT.

The Standard Oil Company began work this week on a $60,000 plant for the manufacture of butter from oil. The company's chemists, after months of labor, have evolved a process by which they say butter and lard may be manufactured from oil.

At the Tidewater Works in the rear of the new site is the machinery, recently patented, which will be used in transforming the oil into the product. More than $300,000, it is said, was spent before the process was perfected.

The new plant will be erected on a site 400x250 feet, fronting on East Twenty-second street, and adjoining the Tidewater Oil yard. The plant will employ several hundred men.

Preparatory Delay.

"Did you ever try gardening?" asked Mr. Crosslots.

"Once," answered the man who always has a discouraged look. "By the time I had read all the publications necessary to inform me onu the subject, the season for flowers and vegetables was over."—Washington Star.

THE GREATNESS OF MAN

Rev. Charles A. Dunn Delivers a Masterly Sermon at the Union Service.

THE SOURCE OF POWER.

Divine Describes Two Classes of Great Men, as Exemplified by Daniel and Joseph.

"Thy gentleness hath made me great," taken from II Samuel, XXII, 36, formed the text of an interesting sermon by the Rev. Charles E. Dunn, of Philadelphia, at the union service in the Methodist church Sunday. The service was well attended and many remained afterwards to shake hands with the former Plainfielder.

The text fell into two divisions: the greatness of David and the source of its power. "There are two classes of great men in the world," he said, "those whose greatness is a steady moral grandeur unmarred by great sins, as for example, Daniel and Joseph, and those whose great saintliness is stained with great sinfulness. David belonged to the latter class. Perhaps the greatness of David may impress itself upon us in two ways. We may consider him a great sinner, and we may consider him a great saint. In his sin, considering him as a sinner, and in his ruin, there are traces of his greatness. Greatness is seen in the ruin that sin makes of men as well as in the perfected morality that illustrates and conditions it. Is it not so in nature and art? Who could behold the ruins in Rome, Athens, Egypt, etc., without being impressed with their former grandeur? So it is with man. His ruin, not only his moral grandeur, impresses us with his greatness.

"But we pass from this to a more pleasant task. David's greatness is seen in his great sainthood. It is this moral uprising that makes David truly great. Men have exalted the earthward at the expense of the godward. For instance: Alexander, Frederick of Prussia, Napoleon, Lord Bacon. What a contrast: Gladstone and Bismark!

"The source of David's greatness lies in the text. Thy gentleness hath made me great, actually this means meekness, condescension, littleness of God. This makes men great. Wonderful thought. We can understand how man's lowliness before God makes him great; but the thought of the text is the reverse of this. It is the littleness of God making men great.

"Now it is not easy to bring this thought to its proper proportion. Men have thought that the great book by which we are lifted to God is the greatness of God. David frequently emphasized this thought. In the Old Testament the greatness of God as seen in great things is emphasized. In the New Testament all is different. Paul tells us that the literal gentleness of God makes men great?" He then brought illustrations from the life of David to illustrate his point.

MISS CLARA SHEPPARD BRIDE OF GEO. SANDERS

Miss Clara Sheppard, daughter of the late Captain Charles Sheppard, and George Sanders, of Orchard Beach, were married Monday at the home of the Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck. The wedding was simple and was witnessed by the Misses Elizabeth Sanders and Mildred Everett and Mrs. Clifford Brokaw.

Immediately after the ceremony the young couple left for the south, where they will spend a two weeks' honeymoon. Mr. Sanders is head clerk at Neuman Brothers' grocery store, and Miss Sheppard was formerly employed there. On their return from the honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Sanders will live in this city at the home of the groom.

Right on Time.

Six dainty color pictures of six beautiful actresses are given in the issue of Sunday, August 22. Every one will want these pictures. The set will be incomplete without them. Begin at once. This is the most novel and unique newspaper offer made in years. There will also be the words and music (complete) of a new song.

Welcomed Returning Superintendent

Ira W. Travell, assistant superintendent of the Hope chapel Sunday school, was given a cordial welcome when he resumed his Sunday school duties Sunday, after a six weeks' absence in Europe. Mr. Travell will continue his work at the chapel until September, when he and his family will remove to Morristown, where he has been appointed superintendent of schools.

DENTISTRY IN TURKEY.

Crude Methods Are Practised in the Interior.

Consul William W. Masterson, of Harput, has learned something of the manner in which persons are fitted for the dental profession in Turkey and just what is required to secure a permission to practise, concerning which he writes:

"The candidate has fitted himself to pass an examination before the Imperial Medical Board at Constantinople on elementary branches of surgery, anatomy and medicine, and a few other topics prescribed by the board, he is given a certificate permitting him to practise dentistry, but, as I understand it, there is no regular board of dental surgeons before which the applicant must appear for examination.

"In this interior country the practise of dentistry could hardly be designated by the term "profession." The persons who follow the calling are frequently barbers, who pull teeth in connection with their tonsorial duties, and I have upon one occasion met a shoe maker who carried on the dental profession as a side line.

"With no greater preparation for practising dentistry than is required, indeed hardly be said that the work done is very crude, that the method of procedure with patients would seem unbearable to Americans, and, as a consequence, the principal work of a dentist is pulling such teeth as are no longer fit for service and in making artificial teeth of a crude and inartistic comfortable pattern.

"Some few dentists in the larger interior cities have dental engines of foot power pattern and a small supply of tools for filling teeth, but the greater number of dentists confine their practise to pulling teeth and making artificial sets. Such an appliance as a modern adjustable dental chair is not known, an ordinary house chir answering the purpose. Where teeth are to be pulled only, the barber dentists in the villages require their patients to sit on the ground, as in this manner a stronger grip may be secured on the aching molar.

"In line with other improvements, the dental profession will be placed on a higher basis, actually this examination will be required; also schools for the proper teaching of this great profession will be inaugurated. At present the followers of the calling have no conception of its possibilities, and such dentists as do not in a position financially, if so inclined, to purchase a well-appointed stock of instruments, appliances, and accessories such as pertain to a dental office as understood in the United States. Teeth, however, does not apply to the up-to-date dentists of Constantinople, Smyrna, Beirut and other large coast cities who are graduates of European and American dental schools.—Consular Reports.

FIRST AID TO INJURED.

Not every one knows what to do when burnt; nor is it the time to learn remedies when touched by fire. Every household should have some preparation for quick relief of burns and bad cuts.

It is not enough to know what to do, but the means of doing it must be at hand. The wise woman with children has a convenient shelf, where is stored a package of absorbent cotton, rolls of bandages, court plaster, surgical scissors, soft pieces of old linen, antiseptic washes, witch hazel, some good salve, a bottle of carbolic acid labeled poison, a cake af antiseptic soap, a hypodermic syringe, a hot water bottle, turpentine, a roll of mustard plasters, lime water and linseed oil.

While any severe burn or cut should mean a doctor, much can be done to alleviate pain until he comes.

For burns a soothing application is equal parts of linseed oil and lime water. Soak lint or strips of linen in this mixture and renew whenever necessary.

A slight burn kept soaked with witch hazel will soon cease to pain. If this is not at hand cover tightly with ordinary kitchen soap and dredge the wound with flour.

Another simple remedy for burns is made by adding to a cupful of olive oil a teaspoonful of carbolic acid. Apply bandage soaked in the mixture.

A bad bruise can be eased by applying witch hazel. This is also excellent if one has bun a nasty nail into the flesh.

In case of a deep cut wash it out well with warm soapy water and then with some antiseptic solution. There are many of these that can be bought ready prepared, and your physician will tell you a good one. A weak solution of carbolic acid is easily prepared—a half-teaspoonful of the acid to a tumbler of water.

If the clothes seem to have stuck to a wound do not tear them off, but soften with warm olive oil the parts that adhere, having first cut away the clothing close to the wound with sharp scissors.

For a bad sprain put first under hot water and then under cold. Keep this up until the doctor arrives. Or bandage the wound in some of the clay preparations recommended to reduce swelling and pain.

PLAINFIELD SCHOOLBOY SECOND TO RALPH ROSE

All the newspapers are saying pleasant things about R. J. Lawrence, the Plainfield boy, who in the colors of the New York Athletic club, won the preliminary put in the sixteen pound shot and in the final of that event was second to Ralph Rose, the champion, and beat out Talbot the former champion, at Seattle on Saturday.

Lawrence's put would in ordinary company have put him in a class by himself, but at Seattle he was up against the best athletes in this country. Lawrence is a mere boy compared with his rivals and his put of forty-seven feet six inches stamps him as one of the best in the country.

Lawrence was a Leal's school graduate and a member of last years Y. M. C. A. team, and showed up prominently at the association meets. At Newark last year he made the members of the association look up and take notice, by his work in the weight contests. In Brooklyn, too, his uniformly good work stamped him as a comer. It is predicted that in another year Rose will have to look out for this young man in the shot put and hammer throws. Rose's put in this event was 50.26 feet, or about two and three quarter feet better than Lawrence's.

WOULDN'T COOK MACARONI SO FATHER BEAT HER

Andrew Robert, a diminutive West End Italian, whose Lord Dundreary facial decorations have won him the name "The Goat," has a patriotic love of macaroni. Fellow lodgers in Robert's home made merry at a christening Sunday afternoon, and there was lots "on the side." These facts, assorted as desired, brought about the be-whiskered man's arrest by Patrolman Safron and Saunders, and Judge Runyon's edict that he pay a fine of $8 at his hearing Monday in the city court.

Robert's daughter was the cause of the mix-up that brought the police and the neighbors, and broke up the christening party. She refused to cook macaroni for the "padre" and although she is the feminine of the "Great Big Brudda 'Sylvest'" type, the irate parent sailed in and gave the severe punishing for her disobedience.

Robert can't talk United States, but through an interpreter he told the court that he was "pretty well stewed" as a result of christening libations he had indulged in, and "between drinks" he came up to his rooms and ordered his daughter to prepare him some macaroni. The Italian Amazon refused, and Andrew and she started an indoor marathon, when he made for her to enforce obedience. The woman was finally cornered and the irate father administered sundry blows of correction, tearing off most of the young woman's clothes in making the capture. The punishment proved more interesting than the christening party, for it soon came upstairs to get in on the "parental authority" number.

Then the cops came, and Andrew went. This aroused universal sympathy, and started the Italian populace toward headquarters, where unsuccessful efforts to have the bewhiskered man freed lasted until late at night. At police headquarters today, there was no sign of the disobedient daughter, and neighbors who came to bail Andrew out, started starting out to intercede for the "padre," went off to Dunellen on a little social junket. A scandal has started, and the police will investigate.

Boiled Frosting.

Put into an agate saucepan one cupful fine granulated sugar and one-third cupful of hot water. Cook without stirring until it spins a thread when a fork is dipped in. Have ready the white of one egg beaten stiff with an eighth of a teaspoonful cream of tartar. Pour the boiling sirup slowly into the egg, beating steadily until a good consistency for spreading. Flavor with vanilla. One-half cupful chopped almonds and two tablespoonfuls powdered chocolate may be added to this frosting when one wishes a change.

"What are these for?" touching his eyes.

"To see wiv," he answered.

"And this?" touching his nose.

"To smell wiv," he answered.

"And your mouth?"

"Oh, to eat."

"What are your ears for?"

This was a puzzler, but after a moment, he said with firm conviction: "To wash."—Delineator.

Treat at Baby Camp.

The children at the King's Daughters' Baby Camp on the mountain were treated to a bountiful supply of ice cream and cake last Saturday afternoon, furnished by the "Loyal Circle of King's Daughters" of Netherwood. Several members of the circle visited the camp and spent pleasant afternoon in giving the children a good time.

A CORKING GOOD TIME

SENATOR JOHN KEAN SILENT.

Vivian Lewis' Boom for Governor Is Launched—Buxton Would Decline Nomination for Assembly.

The Union County Republican Committee with several hundred guests went to Rockaway beach Saturday and from the reports of "those present" it was a great day for the excursion. Ideal weather, a good vessel and a prodigious amount of fun were the contributing factors to one of the most pleasant outings ever held by the association.

It was a jolly crowd that boarded the Isabelle at Elizabeth Saturday morning, 500 strong they went aboard by twos and threes until at ten o'clock, the announced hour for starting there was hardly room for any more. About this time, however, a message was received from Vivian Lewis stating that he had been delayed and to "please hold the boat," or words to that effect. So the boat did not leave the city dock until nearly half past ten.

Councilman Herbert Buxton came rushing down to his motor car at three minutes before ten, closely followed by United States Senator John Kean, in his red touring car. Senator Kean, State Treasurer "Uncle John" Voorhees, Sheriff Hany Kean and County Chairman Frank H. Smith sought a quiet spot on the after hurricane deck and soon after starting were joined by Mr. Lewis. There followed an hour's confab in which it was apparent to an observer that no matter what happened to the rest of the voyagers things were breaking pleasantly for at least one of the members of the party.

The trip down through the Kills and out into the lower bay was delightful and it was so cool that many who had taken the precaution to bring light overcoats with them quietly put them on and proceeded to enjoy the cool breeze which was blowing up strong from the southeast. Down below on the main deck ample provision had been made for the comfort of the inner man. A fine lunch and drinkables of all sorts were lavishly handed out and no one who had an appetite could complain of things to satisfy it.

As the boat neared the outer bay the timorous ones, those who were afraid of mal de mer, sought the spots where the motion was least, because of the choppy sea brought up by the wind. But it was all unnecessary. No one was sick and the sun came out strong and betokened an admirable day's outing. The early morning promises of bad weather were not carried out.

The great question of the site for the local postoffice was one of the topics of conversation and brought out nothing new regarding its location although several plots of ground have been under consideration.

A development not entirely unexpected was the announcement that Mr. Buxton would not consider a nomination for the assembly this year. However, Mr. Buxton feels that if his friends want him to again run for councilmanic honors he will be glad to accept. The reason he could not see his way clear to accepting a nomination for the assembly is his business interests which preclude his giving the time that such a post requires.

As far as could be ascertained nothing definite was arranged regarding the gubernatorial aspirant of Mr. Lewis, but it seemed to be in the atmosphere that his name will come before the convention and that he will have the support of the party.

The boat arrived at Rockaway at 12:45 o'clock and three quarters of an hour later the tables were groaning under the weight of the good things which the capable committee had prepared for the excursionists. After the fish had been served, at a given signal the whole company arose and sang "The Star Spangled Banner," accompanied by the orchestra, and the throngs around the pavilion, outside of the diners, joined in the really thrilling singing. Then, of course after this was interspersed with some popular song. "Harrigan" was there both musically and in the flesh, and made a great hit.

When the coffee came along Andrew McCardle, to whom the success of the event was largely due, read a cablegram from State Senator Ackerman, which said: "Best wishes for a pleasant excursion and a safe return. Best wishes for Calvert and Smith." This was greeted with cheers and a tiger. Many of the excursionists took advantage of the opportunity for a dip in the ocean during the four hours alloted to them to take in the sights before the return trip was begun.

On the return trip the boat reached Elizabeth at 9:45 at night, but the Plainfield delegation had to wait at Elizabeth for a train until 11 o'clock, getting home at 11:20. Contrary to expectations there were no speeches made at the dinner so that no extra work developed upon the correspondents.

Among the Plainfield contingent on the boat were: Winfield S. Angleman, William Townsend, Howard Woolston, Justice Hezekiah Hand, Judge William Newcorn, Robert Newcorn, Postmaster E. H. Bird, Harry Runyon, W. L. Hetfield, Jr., Horace Adams, Julius Williams, Charles Matt, John H. Cose, R. S. Craig, W. A. Craig, Charles Dunham, Frank Randolph, Frank Linke, Alexander Ayres, Joseph Bowman, Geo. Foster, George A. Tobin, Charles Ward and John Mortimer.

When about to leave the dock at Rockaway it was discovered that several of the party were not on board the boat, which was several yards away with her precious painted homeward. An attempt was made to return to the dock for those who were left, but owing to the rough sea it was found impossible. So it turned out that everybody who went to Rockaway on the boat did not return on her, which also accounts for the early arrivals on Sunday morning. The names of those left behind could not be ascertained this morning.

BITTEN MAN CLIMBS TREE, BULL-DOG HANGS FAST

Attacked by a bull-dog belonging to Borough Clerk Fred Martin, J. Newton Drake, of Somerset street, had his legs severely lacerated and his clothes torn as he hung suspended from a tree near Martin's bungalow on Johnson's drive Saturday afternoon. Seeing his predictament, those at the bungalow came to his assistance, but it was necessary to pour three pails of water over the angry dog before it would loose its hold. Mr. Drake, who was painfully injured, had the bites cauterized by Dr. D. C. Adams, and is confined to his home.

Mr. Drake was attacked as he walked past the bungalow on his return from a moonlight walk. The dog rushed out, without provocation, Mr. Drake says, and seized him by the leg. Struggling to free himself, Mr. Drake ran for a tree near by and climbed it. The dog hung on, although swinging clear of the ground, and it was not brought to help. It is reported that he will bring suit against Martin for his injuries.

JERSEY'S ELECTION METHODS.

Gov. Fort Explains the Proposed Fifth Constitutional Amendment.

Gov. J. Franklin Fort in a letter to the First Ward Republican Club, of Montclair, seeks to dispel any doubt as to the meaning of the proposed fifth amendment of the New Jersey Constitution, which relates to the election of assemblymen. Gov. Fort in answer to the questions submitted by the club says:

"The amendment now pending was drawn for the express purpose of not only making it lawful, but to require that the Legislature should divide each county into districts so that Assemblymen should be elected from each district—elected by the voters of that district only.

"The pending amendment provides that after each Federal census the Legislature shall divide and arrange each county into a district or districts for the election therein of a member or members of the General Assembly. The intent is perfectly clear and the proposed amendment when construed in the light of our past history is free from any ambiguity. Those who wish to compel the election of Assembly in legally constituted districts of less territory than a whole county, in counties to which more than one Assemblyman is apportioned, should support the fifth amendment."

Under the clause of the present Constitution of New Jersey for a quarter of a century or more the counties were divided by statute into Assembly districts, and one Assemblyman was elected from each by the voters of each. About fifteen or more years ago the Supreme Court decided that under the Constitution this method of district election was not permissable, but that all the voters of each county must vote for all Assemblymen apportioned to such county.

DEDICATE Y. M. H. A. HALL

Mayor Townsend, Rabbi Ruthman and Falk Younkers Among the Speakers.

SAMUEL ROTHBERG PRESIDES.

Object of the Association is to Uplift and Uphold Judaism—Building Cost $5,000.

The new hall of the Y. M. H. A. on Grove street was dedicated Sunday afternoon. The exercises were well attended and included speeches by Mayor Townsend, of the borough, Rabbi Ruthman and Samuel Rothberg, president of the association.

Judge William Newcorn was to have been the chairman of the meeting but could not attend on account of illness. In his place Samuel Rothberg, the president, acted in the capacity and introduced the various speakers. The first speaker was Mayor Townsend.

The Mayor welcomed the association to the borough and complimented them on the good work that it had done. He took special notice of the efforts of the officers of the association, under whose direction the association has prospered and has broadened and made more active its scope.

Falk Younkers, secretary of the Y. M. H. A. of New York, was the next speaker. He told of the work of the association of which he is secretary. 3,000 Jewish young men are in his association, and as a result of his experience he gave some valuable points of advice to the local body.

Rabbi Ruthman gave a talk in Hebrew and offered his services to the association. Harry Feinberg, who has been the superintendent of the Y. M. H. A. Bible school, organized three years ago, was the next speaker. He explained the work that is being done by the Bible school and told of the moral support that is needed. A stirring speech by Henry Rosenbaum to the officers and members aroused much enthusiasm. He said that the only support that the association wanted was not financial, but otherwise as well.

Samuel Rothberg, the president, was the last speaker. He gave a brief history of the association and its growth and state, some of its accomplishments and objects. The object of the association, he said, is to uplift and uphold Judaism. He asked for the hearty co-operation of all in the work, and explained that moral support was fully as much needed as financial support.

Superintendent of Schools Henry M. Maxson and H. C. Krebs were to have spoken, but they did not return from their vacations. Mayor Flak was also prevented from being present. Special music was rendered by a chorus of children from the Bible school under the direction of David J. Wolfe. Music during the intermission was furnished by Naylor's orchestra.

The association is raising $2,000 to make alterations and additions to the hall. It is planned to fit up the basement with class rooms for the Bible school, and a twenty-foot addition will be put on in the rear. Upstairs the auditorium and lecture room will be located. When this is completed the total cost of the building will have been $5,000. The association is in a prosperous condition and has accomplished much good in this city.

OLD DISPUTED QUESTION LEADS TO FIGHT AND FINES.

James Shannon, a moulder of this city, and Fred Conklin, a painter of Howard street, North Plainfield, had a disagreement over the relative advantages of Plainfield and North Plainfield in front of a hotel on Somerset street, this borough, Saturday night. Their arguments led to fists.

The men were fighting with the advantage slightly in favor of this city, when Marshal Kellar and Chief Weiss swooped down upon them and placed them under arrest. When arraigned before Recorder Dolliver Monday morning each was fined three dollars. Both paid the money.

Funeral of Daniel J. Buckley.

The funeral of Daniel J. Buckley, who died in North Plainfield last Sunday, was held Tuesday at St. Joseph's church, in the borough, where a solemn mass of requiem was celebrated by the rector Father Miller. The pallbearers were four brothers, sons of Mr. Buckley—Frank, Edward, Vincent and Timothy Carroll. The interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

FOWLER A JOKE--CANNON

"All of Congress Knows He is a Joke" Says the Speaker.

HIS ANSWER TO THE TIRADE.

"Uncle Joe" Uses Profane Words in Expressing His Contempt for the Representative of This District.

The letter of Representative Fowler denouncing Speaker Cannon's financial record in Congress was shown to Mr. Cannon yesterday at Mackinac Island, Michigan, where the Speaker is spending his vacation. The Speaker, hurt, angry and sore, said many things about Mr. Fowler and the letter which he specifically marked down as not for presentation to the public.

"Why in h— should I notice Fowler?" asked the Speaker in biting tones when the proof sheets of the Fowler denunciation were handed him. However, he read every word of it, and he winced perceptibly at times.

"To those who have the patience to read this letter, if any such there be, it will appear that when, in the exercise of the duties thrown upon me as Speaker of the House of Representatives, I failed to make him chairman of the committee on Banking and Currency to his mind I became thoroughly selfish and generally a bad citizen and Representative.

"Will you speak specifically of any of the items in the Fowler arraignment?" the Speaker was asked.

"Why in the h— should I answer him?" he replied. "He is a d— joke. All of Congress knows he is a joke."

"Well, what about his specific charges as regards the alleged packing of the Conference Committee on the tariff bill?" the Speaker was asked.

"Put that question specifically and I will answer it," said the Speaker.

"Was the Conference Committee on the part of the House named through any arrangement between you and Senator Aldrich, or were the House conferees named in the manner or form charged by Representative Fowler?" was the categorical question submitted.

This is the dictated reply of the Speaker:

"It is beneath my contempt or dignity to notice any statement made by Fowler that there was any sort of an arrangement by which the House tariff conferrees were named. It is below my notice."

The Speaker closed with the statement that he would not further dignify the Fowler letter by discussing it, publicly or privately. "I am through with Fowler and the Fowler letter," he said.

ATTENTION, YOUNG FOLKS!

If you were suddenly informed that hereafter you must be self supporting, or in other words, earn your own livelihood, what would you do? If you had previously attended a good business college and had a thorough knowledge of business and shorthand you would have no cause for worry. But if you have had no business training, well, read carefully the following:

Young men and young women are daily calling at the Drake Business College of this city to make arrangements to begin a course in the school when the Fall term opens, Monday morning, August 30. They have learned by comparing the various schools that the best to attend is the largest school, as it naturally would have the greatest influence in the business world. There are seven Drake schools in the vicinity of New York city, which have successfully graduated over 18,000 young men and young women and have furnished them with good paying positions. The Drake College Company maintains a large employment bureau with offices in the Tribune building, New York city. The sole purpose of this Employment Bureau is to look after the interests of the Drake Graduates regardless of the number of positions it may have previously found for them. During the last few weeks, the Drake College of Plainfield has had fully a dozen calls for stenographers that they were unable to fill owing to the scarcity of Drake College Graduates out of employment. When you attend one of these colleges you may be sure that you can complete the full course in the least time, at the least expense and that you have the influence of the largest and most popular business college in the State of New Jersey. A beautiful catalogue containing detailed information regarding the work of the school will be mailed, on request, to any reader of this paper. The office will be open each evening until 10 p. m. when visitors are welcome to inspect the school.

TAYLOR HELD FOR THEFT

Big Negro Who Broke Jail Remanded for the Grand Jury.

ALLEGE HE STOLE A WHEEL.

Prisoner Is Positively Identified by Two Cabmen for Theft on June 7—He Denies It.

Lucius Taylor, the giant negro, who escaped from his cell at police headquarters yesterday and was captured by Detective Sergeant Flynn at the point of a revolver a few minutes later on Arlington avenue, was taken to the county jail at Elizabeth this afternoon in default of $200 bail, imposed by City Judge Runyon. Chris Mobus and Thomas Higgins, two hackmen, positively identified Taylor as the man who took the bicycle belonging to William Murphy, a telegraph boy, from in front of the North Avenue station on the night of June 7. William H. Murphy, the boy's father, swore out a warrant for the man this morning, and he will be held to await the action of the grand jury. Taylor absolutely denied the charge of theft.

According to the story of the hackmen, Taylor, who was released from State's prison on June 7, came to this city, where he has relatives, and according to the story told by the hackmen, was at the North avenue station at shortly after 10 o'clock that night. They positively identified him by his gigantic build and his small ears.

"Say, boys, I'm just out of the coop." Taylor is alleged to have said to the hackmen. "I haven't any money, but there's a wheel up there by the curb that I'd like to take. Do you think I can get away with it?" The drivers thought he was joking, and replied: "Go as far as you like." A train drew in about this time, and one of the hackmen got a "fare." Mobus, seeing afterwards that the wheel was missing, reported it to the boy, and drove after Taylor in his carriage. He could not locate him, and reported the matter to headquarters by telephone.

Taylor stands two inches over six feet, and the wheel he stole—a brand new one—has a twenty-inch frame. The hackmen say he tumbled off several times before he succeeded in mounting and riding off. Taylor, who had asked for a hearing before City Judge Runyon, positively denied the charge, and calmly assured the hackmen that they must be mistaken. The identification was absolute.

The police kept a close watch over the big prisoner after his escape, and Taylor is decidedly discouraged because of his failure to get away. He talked freely about his plan to get out. "I worked too quick," he said, "and wasn't careful enough. That's the trouble when you're in a hurry, you ain't careful enough.

The colored man gained his temporary freedom by jumping from the window in City Judge Runyon's private office. Detective Sergeant Flynn heard the shade tear as the man went through the window, and pursued him on a wheel, which he took from an East Fourth street cyclist, unknown to him at the time. The negro was considerably surprised at the sudden request to dismount and loan the bike, but everything was satisfactorily explained when the policeman returned with his prisoner. Flynn overtook Taylor, who was on foot, on Arlington avenue, and captured him at the point of a revolver. The negro attempted no resistance.

Only the immediate families of the couple witnessed the ceremony. The couple left yesterday afternoon for Perkasie, where the groom has a farm.

HOLTON WILL CONTEST

Physician Testifies to the Making of Rich Woman's Will.

FIGHTING FOR THE ESTATE.

Many Lawyers in the Case Which Is Being Heard Before Judge Schenck of Somerville.

The first hearing in the Miss Mary E. Holton will contest was held yesterday before Judge Schenck in the Somerset County Orphans' court at Somerville. There was a large number of interested persons present, including the relatives who seek to have the will probated and those who oppose this action.

William A. Coddington, of the firm of Reed and Coddington, was present to represent the executors, who want the will probated. Col. Nelson Y. Dungan and A. M. Beekman, of Somerville; A. C. Streitwolf, Jr., of New Brunswick, and Winfield S. Angleman, of this city, were there in behalf of the relatives who seek to prevent the probating of the instrument, while Hugh K. Gaston was present in behalf of Former Sheriff Edward E. Cooper, who a few weeks ago was put in charge of the estate pending the litigation.

The whole afternoon was taken up with the examination of Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan, one of the subscribers to the will. He testified in detail as to what took place at the time the will was signed. He stated that besides himself, there were present Mrs. Barnes, a nurse, Reuben Knox, the lawyer, and Miss Mary E. Holton. He said that she was in bed, propped up with pillows. He also testified that she appeared to be very ill and her death was only a question of time. He further stated that her hand was considerably swollen.

The witness further said that about ten days previous to the time of signing the will, on a Sunday and Monday, he signed codicils to a previous will. The present will which is now being contested was signed on May 5, last. At the end of three hours, Mr. Brock, who acted as the examination, an adjournment was taken to September 10, when Mrs. Barnes will be examined.

It is estimated that the present value of the estate it about $25,000, $15,000 personal and $10,000 in realty. Only the year previous to her death Miss Holton gave away approximately about $100,000 in realty and cash, chiefly to various societies in the Baptist denomination. If the contestants of the will are successful in annulling the probate of the will, they will seek to have these transfers of property set aside.

REV. JOHN Y. BROEK IS BUSY IN THE WEST.

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, who is spending his vacation at his former home, Grand Rapids, Mich., writes to a Plainfield friend that he is to be present at the laying of the corner-stone services of the First Reformed church, Grandville, Mich., a growing suburb of Grand Rapids, Tuesday afternoon, August 31.

Since going away, Mr. Broek has been doing a little mission work. He was instrumental in purchasing for the Grandville church the pipe organ now in use in the First Reformed church, Somerville. It is to make way for a larger instrument in the Somerville church. On Sunday Mr. Broek will preach in Trinity Reformed church, Grand Rapids. In commenting on this fact, he says that "it sounds so much like Plainfield that I could not turn it down."

In reference to the laying of the corner-stone of the church at Grandville, Mr. Broek says that he promised to attend, and the church arranged the services so that he and his brother, Rev. Albertus Broek, of Newark, could be present. He adds that he is enjoying his vacation and expects to be in his city pulpit Trinity Reformed church on Sunday, September 5.

NEIGHBORS' ROW AIRED IN THE POLICE COURT

A West End delegation of Russian folk thronged the city court-room today when Mrs. Harry Cohen lodged a complaint against Mrs. Fanny Mutrick's twelve-year-old son Joseph, who yesterday threw a stone through her window as a means of avenging corporal punishment of his little sister by a member of the Cohen family.

The lineup at the bar of justice comprised Mr. and Mrs. Cohen, an interpreter, their colored washerwoman, Mrs. Cohen, her son and daughter, their interpreter and an obliging neighbor. With the exception of the two interpreters, all talked at once. The Mutricks live upstairs over the Cohens, on West Third street. The families may be called neighborly only in point of contiguity.

Like the old woman who lived in a shoe, Mrs. Mutrick believes she has too many children, according to her statement in court. Mrs. Cohen's home also looks like the Gerry Society's rooms when all the children are at home. The youngsters inherit the neighborly feelings of their parents. Judge Runyon braved the foreign jargon for about a half hour, and then declared that both parties were at fault, and suspended sentence all round, with the suggestion that hostilities cease.

FOUNTAINS SHUT OFF IN FEAR OF GLANDERS

Assistant Health Officer John O'Brien has shut off the fountains in five places in this city owing to the presence of glanders in Newark, which has appeared to an alarming extent during the past few days. The health department of Newark has lost all control over the spread of the disease and in order to prevent its spread to this city extraordinary precautions are being taken.

David D. Chandler, the Newark Health Officer, has notified Mr. O'Brien that it will be dangerous to keep the fountains running as at any moment a horse infected may start the disease here. Once started it will be a difficult matter to prevent the spread of glanders. Horse owners are advised to use their own pails for watering their horses while out of the city and to be careful that the feed pails used are those in use in their own stables. In any event it is hazardous to use any pails or feed bags belonging to any stable other than those used in the home stables. The disease is causing the deaths of ten or a dozen horses a day in Newark.

The fountains to be shut off are located as follows: West Front street near Grant avenue; West Second street near New street; Liberty street near West Third; Muhlenberg place corner of South Second and West Eighth at the City Park.

POSTMASTER HOME FROM BIG CONVENTION

Postmaster Elias H. Bird has returned from Toledo, Ohio, where last week he attended the annual convention of the National Association of Postmasters. He was the only postmaster from New Jersey at the gathering and he cannot speak too highly of the courtesies extended and the good time he had. While in Toledo he witnessed the laying of the corner-stone of the new postoffice building in that city. Postmaster-General Frank Hitchcock was in charge of the exercises.

There was reported 398 first-class postoffices in the United States, and there were present 278 postmasters, including the officials from Washington. Mr. Bird says that much good resulted from the convention in the way of new ideas presented for the benefit of the association. He returned home by the way of Detroit and Buffalo.

Referring to the enterprise of the western cities, Mr. Bird says that in many respects they are far ahead of eastern cities. This he said was particularly true as to trolley service, electric lighting and hotels. One night he counted twenty-nine arc lights on one block in Toledo. As to trolley service he says it is possible to reach every point quickly and the cars of the most modern type are operated frequently.

Following an informal reception the couple left for Atlantic City where they will spend their honeymoon.

Mr. Gaffney is a popular reporter on the Courier-News and has many friends as has his bride. Mr. and Mrs. Gaffney will reside in this city.

NEW 1910 HUDSON CAR ARRIVED

The Hudson "20" on exhibition at the salesroom of Andrew C. Thompson Automobile Co. is attracting an unusual amount of attention. This little car shows many features, which heretofore has been found only in very high priced cars, naturally the first thing the visitor wants to see is the motor, and the designer of the Hudson car is particularly proud of this part of the machine.

The Hudson motor is of the Renault type; it has a stroke of 4½ inches, which is long in proportion to the bore which is 3¾. The European designers are fast adopting the long stroke motor, and the Hudson people claim it possesses many advantages which should recommend it to the average owner.

The spring suspension of the Hudson follows the practice used on the majority of the high priced cars, being semi-elliptic in front and ¾ elliptic in rear. The springs seem to be unusual long and heavy and capable of supporting much more weight than they will ever be called upon to carry.

Mr. Thompson says everyone is very enthusiastic about the little car, and the only difficulty is going to be in getting enough cars to supply the demand. ***

Elsie Lambertson.

Elsie Lambertson, the eleven-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hans Lambertson, died last night at the home of the parents in South Plains from summer complaint. The funeral will be held from the home tomorrow afternoon and the burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

JOHN MOTTLEY WEDS MISS MARY E. SMITH

An elaborate wedding was celebrated in St. Bernard's R. C. church at Raritan this afternoon at 4 o'clock when Miss Mary E. Smith, the eldest daughter of Mrs. Catharine Smith, of First avenue, Raritan, became the bride of John Mottley, the youngest son of Mrs. Mary Mottley, of Richmond street, this city.

Rev. Father J. J. Zimmer, pastor of St. Bernard's church performed the ceremony. The altar was prettily decorated with cut flowers, palms and ferns. The church was filled with the friends and relatives of the couple.

The bride was given away by her brother, William J. Smith. Promptly at 4 o'clock the bride entered the church leaning on the arm of her brother, preceded by the ushers and bridesmaid. Edward F. Purcell, of Raritan, presided at the organ and as the bridal procession passed up the aisle the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march were heard.

The bride was attired in mousseline satin, trimmed with rose point lace and chiffon and wore a large picture hat to match and carried a bouquet of bridal roses and lillies of the valley. Miss Katharine C. Mogan, of Arlington, was the bridesmaid. She was gowned in a lace robe over taffeta and also wore a picture hat and carried a bouquet of pink asters.

J. C. Callahan, of this city was best man. The ushers were Frank A. Cook, of Raritan, a cousin of the bride, and James P. Mottley, a cousin of the groom, of this city. In an exchange of gifts, the bride presented the groom with a gold ring set with rubies, while the groom's gift to the bride was a piano. The bridesmaid received a gold bracelet from the bride and the groom presented gold stick pins to the ushers.

A reception followed the ceremony and a sumptuous wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's mother. The music was furnished by the Crescent Orchestra augmented in the evening by the Crescent Cornet band. A splendid musical program being rendered in the evening.

The newly wedded pair left on a late train for Philadelphia, from where they will visit Washington, D. C., Old Point Comfort, Va., and Atlantic City. They will reside at the groom's newly prepared home on Richmond and East Third streets, where Mr. Mottley is in business.

Repairing Brick Pavement.

Street Commissioner Gevett's men are gradually completing the repairs to the brick pavement in the business section of the city. Possibly, the worst spots are to be found on Park avenue, between North avenue and Second street, where large cracks have developed in the pavement. The cost of this work will come out of the money withheld by the city from Contractor C. M. Meeker for repairs. A sufficient sum was held back to cover this work.

FATHER BOGAN RETURNS

Delightful Trip Abroad Ends This Morning—Welcomed by Ringing of Bells.

"THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOME"

Some of the Incidents of the Voyage, Celebrates Twenty-fourth Anniversary of Ordination.

Rev. Father Bernard M. Bogan, rector of St. Mary's church, returned this morning at about 10 o'clock and his coming was heralded by the ringing of the church bell, which no doubt as Father Bogan says, "Startled the vicinity and my parishioners." Father Bogan looks as well as he say he feels, but when seen by the Press reporter was awfully hungry. "This morning," he said, "I ordered a steak from my steward for breakfast and he brought me one that needed a hammer to straighten it out on. This circumstance accounts for my hunger.

"We had a delightful trip home of six and a half days and the congenial company made the voyage all the more enjoyable. This was my first trip abroad and I can assure you that every minute was crowded with pleasure for me, except perhaps when in Italy they tried to make me a street cleaning commissioner by throwing me out of my carriage and making me clean up the street with my clothes.

"I was in the company of Archbishop Farley when he was tendered a reception by Cardinal Logue, who became so friendly with John D. Rockefeller, when the eminent private made his first visit to this country. The reception took place in Ireland, at Kingstown, and was an interesting as well as an enjoyable function. In fact it was one of the most enjoyable incidents of the trip. We found the Cardinal just as lovable and hospitable as ever.

"At a special audience I had with His Holiness, Pius X, I was authorized to bestow the Apostolic benediction on the congregation of St. Mary's. While in Southern Italy I had the pleasure of visiting the former home of Marion Crawford, the novelist and Amalfi, the beautiful. I found these places so attractive that I was loath to leave them, but after all, there is no place like home.

"Rome I found to be modern in all its various phases and quite different from what my imagination had led me to expect. There I attended the banquet given by the alumni of the American College which was given in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of its founding. On board the Carpathia, the boat on which I sailed in May, quite a celebration was given in my honor the occasion being the twenty-fourth anniversary of my ordination as a priest. This happened on May 19, while we were passing the Azores.

When asked whether he had gained any weight Father Bogan said that the only wait he had was at Glanevon, Ireland, where he had to cool off in the waiting room of a tram car which never came. Speaking of the famous places in France, particularly the old churches, he said that as a matter of fact the only thing they could boast of was their antiquity and their beauty. As for progressiveness they are not to be compared with the churches here.

Father Bogan described the ring presented by the Pope to Archbishop Farley as a most beautiful gem and it was the admiration of all the priests in the company. As to the rumor that Archbishop Farley was to be made a Cardinal, Father Bogan said it was only a rumor, as those astute men in the Vatican are not given to divulging the inner secrets of the Holy See.

Fathers Hogan and Sciola will now be given a vacation while Father Bogan takes up the duties of the parish.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ACT

New Law Goes Into Effect September 1—Some of Its Provisions

SENATOR ACKERMAN'S WORK.

Knowledge of Risky Conditions by Employe No Bar to Recovery of Damages.

The Employers' Liability Act, which was introduced and pushed with untiring energy by Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, and which was approved and signed by Governor J. Franklin Fort, on April 15, this year, goes into effect on September 1. It is entitled "An act to extend and regulate the liability of employers for injury or death to employes in certain cases."

This law, which is similar in scope to laws enacted in other States and over which months of incessant labor have been devoted in its framing and argument wherever presented, is one calculated to protect employes in the performance of their work under hazardous conditions, such conditions being susceptible of correction. In part it reads as follows: "Where after this act takes effect, personal injury or death results to an employe who is himself in the exercise of reasonable care at the time:

"I. By reason of any defect in the condition of the ways, works, machinery or plant connected with or used in the business of the employer, which arose from, or had not been discovered or remedied, owing to the negligence of the employer, or any person in the service of the employer, and entrusted by him with the duty of seeing that the ways, works, machinery or plant were in proper condition; or

"II. By reason of negligence of any person in the service of the employer intrusted with, and at the time of the injury exercising superintendence whose sole or principal duty is that of superintendence, or in the absence of such superintendence any person acting as superintendent with the authority and consent of such employer; or

"III. By reason of the negligence of any person in the service of the employer who has the charge or control of any signal, switch, locomotive engine or train upon a railroad; said employe, or in case the injury results in death, the executor or administrator of such deceased employe who has left surviving a husband, wife, or next of kin, shall have the same right of compensation and remedies against the employer as if the employe had not been an employe of, nor in the service of the employer, nor engaged in his work. The provisions of this section relating to actions for causing death by negligence, so far as the same are consistent with this act, shall apply to an action brought by an executor or administrator of such deceased employe suing under the provisions of this act."

According to other sections of the law notice of an action must be given the employer within 120 days and the action actually be begun within one year after the occurrence of the accident causing injury or death. The notice is required to be in writing. In case the injured person is unable to give the notice with in the prescribed time because of disability, an extension of time (10 days) after the disability is removed is allowed by the law.

In case of death without having given the notice of suit an executor or administrator may give the notice sixty days after his appointment, but no one under the provision of section two shall be deemed to be invalid or insufficient solely by reason of any inaccuracy in stating the time, place or cause of the injury if it be shown that there was no intention to mislead, and that the party entitled to notice was not, in fact, misled thereby.

Section three of the act says that an employe entering upon or continuing in the service of an employer, shall be presumed to have assumed all risks necessarily incident to his occupation or employment. The necessary risks of the employment shall, in all cases arising after this act takes effect, be considered as including those risks, and those only, which are inherent in the nature of the business, and which remain after the employer has exercised due care in providing for the safety of his employes, and has complied with the laws affecting or regulating the business or occupation for the greater safety of such employes. In an action maintained for the recovery of damages for personal injuries to an employe, received after this act takes effect, owing to any cause for which the employer would otherwise be liable, the fact that the employe continued in the service of the employer in the same place and course of employment after the discovery by such employe, or after he had been informed of the danger of personal injury therefrom, shall not, as a matter of law, be considered as an assent by such employe to the existence or continuance of such risks of personal injury therefrom, or as negligence contributing to such injury.

An employer who shall have contributed to a mutual benefit fund may prove in mitigation of damages recoverable by an employe under this law such proportion of the pecuniary benefit, which has been received by such employe from such society on account of such contribution of employer, as the contribution of such employer to such fund or society bears to the whole contribution thereto.

CENSUS OF RELIGIONS IN THE UNITED STATES

Standing out as a conspicuous features of the bulletin issued Thursday by the census bureau, entitled "Census of Religious Bodies," is the fact that out of a church membership in the United States in 1906 of nearly 33,000,000 males formed considerably more than half of the total.

Of the total church membership reported by the various religious bodies and classified by sex, 43.1 per cent. were males and 56.9 per cent. were females. Among the Protestants the difference was greater, only 39.3 per cent. being males, while in the Roman Catholic church the males formed 49.2 per cent. of the total membership.

Fewer males than females were found among the Latter Day Saints (Mormons), the Lutherans, the Disciples, Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians and Protestant Episcopalians, the percentage of male members decreasing in the order shown, and there being but 35.5 per cent. male among the Episcopalians. Among the Christian Scientists only 27.6 per cent., but in the Greek Orthodox church 93.9 per cent. were men.

Other features of the report show that there were a billion and quarter dollars invested in church edifices, and that every day eight new churches send their spires skyward.

Of the total estimated population of continental United States in 1906, the church members formed 39.1 per cent., as against 32.7 per cent. in 1890. Of this 34.7 per cent. increase, the Roman Catholic church is credited with 4.4 per cent. and the Protestants with 1.8 per cent.; the remainder divided among all other denominations.

The total church membership for 1906 was 32,936,445, of which number the Protestants were credited with 20,287,742, and the Roman Catholics with 12,079,142. Of the Protestant bodies, the Methodists numbered 5,749,838; the Baptists, 5,662,234; the Lutherans, 2,112,494; the Presbyterians, 1,820,555, and Disciples or "Christians," 1,142,355.

The rate of increase shown for the Roman Catholic church is 93.5 per cent., which is more than twice that for all the Protestant bodies combined.

COUNTY RATABLES THIS YEAR WILL BE $126,541,252

The Union County Board of Taxation at Elizabeth Saturday claimed that all the books of the assessors are in but the one from the Third ward, this city. From the figures thus far compiled it is stated authoritatively that the county tax rate the coming year will be higher than that of last year, when it was $1.40. This will be due to the decrease in the second-class railroad property valuations.

The total ratables in the county this year will be about $126,541,252, an increase of $7,570,138 over last year. In 1908 the increase was $4,500,000 and in 1907 it was $8,000,000. Nothing definite as to the Plainfield rate is obtainable at present. This will not be known until all the books are in and the assessments approved.

READY TO WELCOME HIS OLD COMMANDER.

John Mundrane, of Rahway, received a letter yesterday from Captain William B. Carey, of Windsor, Conn., saying that he is preparing for the reunion of the old command of the Civil War, Company I, Fifth New York Veteran Volunteer Cavalry, known as the Ira Harris Cavalry. The reunion is to be held September 13 at Mr. Mundrane's residence in Hamilton street, Rahway. There are but a few of the command now able to attend, but a rousing reception will be given them.

Mr. Mundrane's wife and daughter Maud presented him Tuesday with a solid gold regimental badge, with a ribbon of yellow, the regimental colors, to go with it. The badge has on the top crossbar the name "John Mundrane." In the centre is a five pointed star, the points lettered N. Y. V. C., indicating the New York Veteran Volunteer Cavalry. Below the star and also at the bottom of the trophy are crossed swords, resting at peace.

Her Leap Year Proposal.

"You've been courting me now for a number of years, George," remarked a girl to a young man, "and I want to make a little leap year proposal."

"I—I am not in a position to marry just yet," stammered the youth; "but—"

"Who said anything about marriage?" interrupted the girl. "I was going to propose that you stop courting here and give somebody else a chance!"

P.H.S. RE-OPENS SEPT. 14

MANY CHANGES IN FACULTY.

Everything in Readiness for Resumption of School Duties—Principal Lindsey Best to Assume New Position.

With the approach of fall, the small boy and his little sister are again preparing to take up their books for the fall and winter term of school after enjoying a long summer vacation. The opening day this year occurs Tuesday, September 14. On this day all of the teachers and pupils will be in their places, and the school work, now carefully planned, will be carried out with a minumum of confusion.

The new Washington school at Darrow avenue will be opened. Contractors have now practically finished the work and the school furniture is being put in. PATRIOT SONS DENY RELIGIOUS PREJUDICE

The twenty-ninth annual convention of the Patriotic Order Sons of America, which has been held in the Y. M. C. A. at Asbury Park, came to a close Wednesday. It will meet next year in Hoboken, that city having won out over Camden. Before adjourning for all time a statement published in The Monitor, a Roman Catholic journal printed in Newark, thought to be injurious to the order, was denounced as false. The action was taken by the adoption of a vigorously worded resolution which was freely discussed before adoption.

The Monitor, it is asserted, printed an article in June stating that the members of the Patriotic Sons were pledged not to support Roman Catholics. This the members of the order contradict in the resolution, asserting that they treat with equal justice "all men of whatever persuasion, social, religious or political." The resolution provided that the State executive committee be authorized to take whatever steps and expend whatever money may be needed to secure a correction of the alleged misrepresentation.

The following were offered in nomination for national representatives: S. L. Davis, W. C. Cutter, E. C. Mehrhoff, H. L. Bond, F. W. Bohm, Charles H. J. Britz, William A. Donaghy, Alfred Moore, S. S. Brown, W. A. Crane, William Disbrow, J. F. Cobb, S. H. Rennells, W. H. Titus, F. C. Torrey, C. H. Schemella, G. C. Murphy, C. H. Elder, I. N. Wyckoff, E. C. Waddington, Mr. Lytle.

None of the amendments proposed were put into effect, as the three-fourths vote necessary to pass them was not forthcoming.

The proposition to reduce the per capita tax from twenty-five cents to twenty cents was defeated and a resolution passed to use that additional amount each year to extending the order throughout the State. The amendment, which was recommended by the president, to divide the State into six districts and have six district presidents, instead of one for each county as at present, was rejected. The amendment looking to a reduction of the representatives also failed to secure a sufficient number of votes to so amend the constitution.

WILL THE FAILURE OR SUCCESS OF THE NEW TARIFF

Rest on the Final Test of the Cost of Living.

The following note addressed to the New York Sun by Mr. Sminch, who is private secretary to State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, is self explanatory and as it is a timely question and of interest to all who followed the tariff debates and who are interested in its results we publish the question and the Sun's reply in full,

Gold Production and the Cost of Living.

To the Editor of The Sun—Sir: As The Sun is usually very accurate in its editorial statements I beg to inquire if in its opinion the failure or success of the new tariff is to rest on the final test of the cost of living.

In a recent editorial you declare that "if there is no reduction in the cost of living complaints will be renewed and another period of agitation will ensue."

Will not the world's production of gold enter into the questions of prices and the cost of living? If so, should it not be considered when treating of prices and the tariff?

The other day you reported Dun's Review as saying:

"Gold production, always a stimulator of enterprise, was the heaviest on record in the first half of the year and over 60 per cent. of it went into bank vaults to become the basis of credit."

If there should be a stimulation of enterprise and business activity, accompanied by an increasing consuming power, would not the usual operation of the economic law of supply and demand tend to check any general fall in prices, provided there had been no overproduction?

From your general commercial and financial news falling markets are not anticipated, but on the contrary it appears to be the belief that firm, steady markets are apt to prevail for some time to come. Will the new tariff be responsible for these conditions?

This note is not written for the purpose of sustaining any theories on the subject of the tariff, but with the object of developing all the economic facts surrounding a possible increase in prices and the cost of living.

CHARLES S. SMINCK.

Plainfield, N. J., Aug. 16.

We reply that the world's production of gold will certainly enter into the question of the cost of living, and should be considered when treating of prices under the new tariff. It will be a plus or a minus factor in relation to the effect of the tariff, just as the effect of the tariff will be a plus or a minus factor in relation to the effect of gold production on the purchasing power of money and cost of living.

REPUBLICAN SLATE MADE AT CLAMBAKE

Morris county Republicans to the number of one hundred and twenty-five, with State Treasurer Daniel Voorhees at their head, went to the Highlands Wednesday to talk politics and eat clams. The occasion was the annual outing of the Morris County Board of Freeholders.

On the way to the clambake the party met and fraternized with the Democratic Joel Parker Association, of Newark, on the Sandy Hook boat. The Morris county "bake" was served at the Ocean View House.

Edward K. Mills, candidate for nomination as Senator, who has the support of the regular Republican machine of Morris county and Joseph Righter, the "new idea" senatorial candidate, were in the party. It was practically agreed that Righter will be beaten. It was also decided to nominate Assemblyman Oscar B. Smith, of Flanders, for another term and also to give an Assembly nomination to William F. Burch, of Dover. The Republican gubernatorial nomination was actively discussed and the names of State Banking and Insurance Commissioner Vivian Lewis and Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Somerset county, were mentioned. It was the sense of the gathering that Commissioner Lewis will be the candidate. The Morris county civil war will throw its influence.

Some of those in the party besides State Treasurer Daniel Voorhees were Edward K. Mills, John Capstick, Judge Elmer Mills, Joseph Richter, John Hall, Edward Duffy, Judge Dwyer, James Bellingham, Mayor Richard J. Chaplin, of Mount Arlington, Reuben Burtchall, Assemblyman James Lyon, Eugene Burke, William J. Powers, Mayor Cornelius Copp, of Boonton; George Estel, Dr. Gus Becker, George Allen, James Connelly, John H. Martin, Al Richards, Collins Weir, Robert F. Jenkins, Manning Merchant, H. C. Newkirk, E. B. Mott, Joseph Harris, John G. Smith, Edward Frost, Louis Wolfe, Col. Boonton; George Weber, H. Jennings, Theodore Young, Albert Nelson, Jere White, Charles Thisler, Judge P. Howard, Andrew Gerin, Charles A. Baker, E. B. Nabor, W. A. Weir, William Jerner, Sheriff Orr, of Hackettstown; John Konuchon and Louis Beyler.

C. R. R. IMPROVEMENTS AT PHILLIPSBURG.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey contemplates spending $100,000 to improve its facilities at Phillipsburg. The work will be commenced at once and will require about six months for completion.

The steam shovel will be put to work at Mount's crossing and will operate to Black Dan's cut, to do away with the dangerous grade crossings at those places, an excavation will be made along Dempster's Park and that vicinity to make room for an additional track, and a retaining wall will be built along the Warren foundry property. The money that will be spent for the operation is exclusive of the $50,000 contract recently awarded for the erection of a big coal station at the roundhouse.

Virgins.

As it happened, however, the five foolish virgins were observed, in their perplexity, by five wise men.

"Permit me!" quoth each of these, and stepped up and filled a virgin's lamp for her, adding: "Now, you just about need somebody to look out for you, eh?"

And upon the five foolish virgins blushing violently and looking shyly down, the five wise men lost no time in procuring licenses, and they all lived happily ever after.

As for the wise virgins, they sniffed some when they heard the news, and unadvertised with considerable acerbity on the ancient mystery of the way of a man with a maid, and let it go at that.—Puck.

CALF ATE VEGETABLES; ITS OWNER IN COURT

Because Hyman Semer, of West Third street, keeps a calf, a horse and a lot of chickens, Mrs. Eva W. Green, who lives just around the corner, on Lee place, hasn't been successful with her garden. That's what Mrs. Green says.

Because the calf got loose from the barn and wandered over into Mrs. Green's lima bean patch, she was assaulted and threatened by friends and neighbors of the woman. That's what Mrs. Semer says.

Because calves and vegetable gardens don't mix, and because this isn't the first time there have been complaints about the Semer's straying live-stock, a twenty-dollar fine will be the penalty for the next offense. That's what Judge Runyon says.

And it all come out in the city court Friday. Mrs. Green told with almost incredible rapidity how she was tired of planting lima beans for the chickens to dig up, or for the calf to crop off, and how she had threatened, at one time, to shoot, "for the horse to eat off." She wanted to make the calf's last visit a test case against her neighbor, and told the details of the little bovine's depredations. A neighbor, who came with her as a witness, told how her own garden was only preserved from ravages of chickens by a fence of wire netting, and concluded with the statement that she'd "shooed four chickens out" just before she came to court. After these narrations of damage done, Mrs. Semer didn't have much of a case. She could only tell how she had been mistreated by Mrs. Green's friends There were no witnesses to verify the details.

"The next time I hear a report of any of your live-stock getting in Mrs. Green's vegetable garden," said Judge Runyon, "I'm going to fine you $20."

"Thank you," said Mrs. Semer.

WILL DEFER ACTION ON POSTAL BANKS.

There is no chance that the question of postal savings banks will come up at the next session of Congress, according to a statement made Wednesday by Representative Weeks of Massachusetts, a member of the Monetary Commission. That session, he said, will probably be devoted almost entirely to the President's program for corporation control, and the Moneary Commission, with its jurisdiction over all phases of the banking and currency question, will not report before the short session following, or at a special session to be called early next fall. With the whole subject of the country's financial system coming up for modification, said Mr. Weeks, it would be most unreasonable to establish a new set of banks without any reference to the changes that will immediately be made.

"The commission," said Mr. Weeks, "has ample power to consider not only the currency system, but the entire banking system of the United States, and will have a carefully considered report to make at the earliest possible moment. If the tariff had not been under consideration this summer, I have no doubt the Monetary Commission would have made its report at the coming session of Congress, but, owing to many members being intimately occupied with tariff matters, it has been impossible for the commission to do any work recently. It is therefore probable that a report cannot be made until a year from next winter, but in either case it does not seem to me that it would be wise or sensible to undertake the establishment of another system of banks when the Monetary Commission will be likely to cover the whole subject."

FERDINAND TITSWORTH NIGHT DIRECTOR OF PLAYGROUNDS.

Ferdinand Titsworth, of East Fifth street, has secured a night assignment for playground duty on the East Side of New York. He is now filling a day as well as night assignment. Mr. Titsworth is a teacher in the exclusive Irving school for boys at Tarrytown, and during the summer devotes his time to playground work. His ability to deal successfully with boys coupled with his athletic ability led to his appointment to afternoon playground work, after he had passed the usual civil service examination with a standing of 100 per cent.

Mr. Titsworth's popularity with the children over whom he was placed and his knack for devising new ideas to interest them attracted the attention of the playground inspectors who gave him the night assignment. He is now filling both positions. In the fall he will resume his position as teacher at the Irving school.

An electric fan, which arises from a jar like a plant and is driven by a battery within the jar, is the invention of a Philadelphia physician. It can be picked up and set on a table or chair in any room and is carried from place to place as its services are demanded. The electric battery will drive it 48 hours without recharging, and as this can be recharged for 50 cents, the cost for power is but one cent an hour as compared to the three cents an hour that direct current from an electriclight service would cost. The price of such an outfit is about $15.—From Popular Mechanics.

M'CAULEY HANGS HIMSELF

HAD JUST BEEN SENTENCED.

Arrested for Panhandling, 31-Year-Old Police Court "Regular" Makes Noose Out Of His Belt.

Within ten minutes after hearing Judge William N. Runyon sentence him to sixty days imprisonment in the county jail at Elizabeth, James McCauley, arrested more times than any man of his age on the police court records, hanged himself in a cell in court cell about 9:30 Saturday morning. Driver Thomas O'Gorman, passing through the cell room a few minutes afterwards, found his dead body, swinging by his belt from one of the iron cross-bars which form the roof of the cell. It was cut down by Detective Sergeant Flynn and after an examination by Dr. C. A. Gesswein showed that life was extinct, was removed to Cole's undertaking rooms.

McCauley's arrest on Friday came by Patrolman Flynn Saturday marked his first appearance in the city court for twenty-eight days, and for two weeks of this time he had steady work for the first time in five years. He was arrested for panhandling, and a city fireman brought against him a charge of disorderly conduct on East Second street.

Upon his arrest on July 23, Judge Runyon sentenced him to sixty days in the county jail, and suspended sentence. This morning, therefore, there was nothing for the magistrate to do but pass the sentence, which had been witheld pending his next arrest.

After being led back to his cell at about 9:30 o'clock, McCauley asked Captain Frederickson when he would be taken to Elizabeth. The Captain replied that he would be committed after dinner, and left the cell room. It was about five minutes after this that Driver O'Gorman found McCauley's body.

The prisoner worked quickly after coming to his decision to kill himself. He took off his leather belt and tying it to one of the iron bars which form the cell roof, fastened the other end about his neck. The strap was so short that his body was forced to the floor in such a way that he stood on the iron cell bunk while adjusting the noose and then jumped to the floor. Policeman at headquarters heard no sound. He was not under the influence of liquor.

The dead man, who was thirty-one years old, came to this country from Ireland when a boy. His only relatives, it is said are two aunts, living in this city. He was for many years employed as a groom and coachman by J. W. Reinhardt.

McCauley's craving for liquor and his love of mischief have given him the longest police court record for a man of his age in Union county at least. "D. and D." and "Malicious Mischief" are the only charges against him, and the police say that he was generally harmless when drunk. He was first arrested by Sergeant Overbaugh on July 25, 1902, when he paid a five-dollar fine on a drunk and disorderly charge. In March, 1904, Captain Frederickson arrested him for the second time, and he paid an equal fine for a similar offense. After this, he left Mr. Reinhart's employ and ever since has claimed "no place" as his home.

His police record is appalling. Since February, 1906, he has spent fourteen months in jail as the result of arrests in Plainfield, and was on one occasion, banished from the city for six months. The North Plainfield police have a long record of his offenses against the peace of the borough, and many boroughites remember him as the man who decorated Marshal Pope to the Union county side of the Somerset street bridge, to years ago, when pursued for arrest and turning on him, engaged him in the only fight he is on record for. The Westfield police have a fair sized record of McCauley, too, for he has been arrested there many times within the past five years.

McCauley's suicide is the first in the history of the present police headquarters, although there have been several unsuccessful attempts in the cells. William Ross, a prisoner, hanged himself in a similar manner in a police court cell, when headquarters were located on East Front street.

'SPITE BARN' EXPLAINED

Michael Gallagher Tells Why He Spoiled Dunellen's Choicest Business Site.

HE WILL FIGHT THE BOROUGH.

Owner Wants Dunellen Fire Department Exhibit On Charter Day Housed in New "City Hall."

"Gallagher's City Hall," a barn-like structure, next to the Dunellen Postoffice building, which is said to be a "spite house," is not there, for the purpose of making either the borough or any one else pay Michael Gallagher "his price" for the structure, according to a statement made by him Wednesday afternoon. Further, he says that this property is not for sale, as he considers it the most valuable piece of property, located on the only vacant lot, in the heart of the business section. This he says, will bring a handsome figure at a sale in a few years.

When Councilman Huff was tearing down the frame building occupied by him," said Mr. Gallagher, "he told Councilman Berkheiser that the council ought to pass an ordinance to prevent me from putting up a frame building on the lot where the barn now stands. Mr. Huff also told Firman Glue that the council should pass an ordinance to prevent me from building out beyond the other buildings when the former learned that I had purchased the lot without any restrictions, and that I had the liberty to build any kind of a structure and as far out as I wished, so long as the drip did not fall on the sidewalk. My deed calls for 50x150 feet, five feet further out than either of the buildings on each side of me. The matter was brought to the attention of Mayor Swackhamer, and the latter commissioned the borough counsel, Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., to draw up a building ordinance. On the afternoon of day that the council was to meet to act on the ordinance the framework of 'Gallagher's City Hall' was erected. Thus the efforts of the council were made futile," he said.

"As to my losing the street sprinkling contract, which Dunellen officials say is the reason for my erecting the 'spite house,' I will say that Huff's bid was $3.90 per day for nine hours' work against my bid of $4.50. This was the corollary of a statement Huff had that my teams could not have a day's work on the borough streets if he could help it. When that monument on my other corner property had to be moved, affecting Huff, it made a difference as to whom it was moved. As to my attitude in this matter I will emphatically say that it is a poor worm that will not squirm when it is tread upon; and a good one that doesn't ask for quarter when it has turned. This expresses epigrammatically my situation in the matter."

"Street Commissioner Staats was informed by me that he could not have my teams for use on the street sprinklers. And, the borough owes me for two days work last year; so it is easy to see that I can live without working.

"It was through me that the Dunellen Lumber and Stone Company had to move from the corner of Washington street and North avenue. When Alvah Gray, president of the Dunellen bank and president of this company, brough a civil suit against me for $14, Henry Garretson, the postmaster, who is one of his partners, did his best to prevent the pressing of the suit.

"Three months ago I notified Walter Runyon to remove obstructions protruding from his brick walls over into my property. This was not done, and I am now putting it before the return of Mr. C. Todd, of Tarrytown, from whom I purchased the property. When he returns I mean to get all that is coming to me in my deed.

"The only threat that has been made to me that the building would be burned down, came from Assessor John H. L. Peters, who informed me that that might be done. He was impartial in the matter, and merely stated this as an expression of the temper of the people who own property in the vicinity of my 'spite house.' But, if that building is ever burned down, I'd build a greater eyesore in its place. I've engaged counsel and will fight.

"The present 'spite house' will be completed soon. One of the stores I will rent out, the other I hereby respectfully give to Charles E. Tinsman for use of the Dunellen Fire Department—the fire department that represented the borough in the Charter Day parade."

MARTINE WOULD BE CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR

"If the Democratic party of New Jersey deems it proper and fitting I am willing to accept the gubernatorial nomination and will make a determined fight to win." Those were the words spoken by James E. Martine while on the Democratic outing at Witzel's Point Grove, Wednesday. The announcement was received with shouts and continued cheering by the Democrats, who seemed to see in the "farmer orator" a Moses, who can lead them out of the wilderness.

Although defeated time and again, this fact does not appear to discourage Mr. Martine. The least and as in the past he stands willing to sacrifice all personal interests to become the standard-bearer of his party.

"My position depends upon the graciousness and confidence of the convention. If the delegates think I can poll more votes than anyone else, then I will be the party candidate for governor," said Mr. Martine.

Frank S. Katzenbach, former Mayor of Trenton, and the opponent of Governor Franklin Fort in the last gubernatorial contest, is also a promising candidate, and his many friends in Mercer county are persistent in putting him forward as the party's choice for the highest position in the gift of the State.

WILLIAM JEFFERY OUT FOR COUNTY COMMITTEE

Berkeley Heights Republicans, who are members of the Township Improvement Society, met at the Berkeley Lyceum Thursday night and selected William Jeffery, president of the organization, to head the township ticket as candidate for member of the Union County Republican Committee. The nomination was upon the recommendation of the Society's candidacy committee of nine, and Mr. Jeffery was supported for the candidacy in a petition signed by seventy of the eighty-two party supporters.

A complete ticket was framed with the exception of three offices, which will be considered later. The candidates for the other offices on the ticket are as follows:

Collector of Taxes, Augustus M. Layal; township committeeman, Frank C. Shaffer; delegate to State convention, Bernard F. Cummings; alternate, John W. English; constable, Rudolph A. Shaffer; surveyor of highways, Joseph Amkino; poundkeeper, Guiliano Carlucio. Both *parties agree on the year's appro*priation, and will ask for $750, the same amount required last year.

BANQUETTED MR. MATT

Real Estate Man Guest of Friends at Dinner at the Waldorf Last Night.

WIT AND WISDOM FEATURES.

Toast Master Buxton the "Court Jester" on the Job—Music by Quartette.

"Sow Helpfulness and you will reap Happiness" was the trite inscription over the list of toasts given at the complimentary banquet tendered by his friends to Charles "Portaupeck" Matt at the Waldorf Hotel Wednesday. An the manner in which the advice was carried out left no doubt that the words of the proverb sank deep into the hearts of the diners.

More than twenty of Mr. Matt's friends gathered around the festive board at 9 o'clock primarily to discuss a most tempting feast and secondarily to listen to words of wisdom from some of the witty men of the town. When wit and wisdom meet there is always a flow of soul and in this instance there was a big reserve of both commodities to draw from. F. W. Hand was the first called upon to respond to the toast, "Our Guest," and handed out a few bouquets to Mr. Matt. The dinner was given as a testimonial of appreciation for the many courtesies extended by Mr. Matt to his friends at Portaupeck.

Toastmaster Herbert Buxton successively introduced Mr. Matt, who made a response to Mr. Hand's speech; J. H. Cose, who had "good fellowship" as his topic; J. M. Williams, who was indescribly funny in responding to "skyhousboating;" F. H. Firstbrook, who had to tell when not to make "quick decision;" Arnold Nischwitz, who believes in the "live and let live" theory, and not to be entirely out of the game Mr. Buxton, himself interspersed a few remarks. He believes that "Sorrow is a job-lot of second-hand joy; that the things you get for nothing are the most expensive and if you don't know what to say don't say it."

The banquet was a twelve course affair and tickled the palates of the guests among whom were: J. F. Buckle, Judge William Newcorn, J. H. Cose, Herbert Buxton, L. A. Bellis, F. W. Hand, Elmer Cutting, Harry Blimm, John Todd, William Smith, Charles "Portaupeck" Matt, Julius M. Williams, William Mazocco, Alfred Prudhon, E. C. Searing, Wilson Frederick, Philip Jahn, H. C. Van Emburgh, Henry Vosseler, D. J. Carney, F. W. Hand and John Nichol. A quartet composed of Elmer Cutting, Harry Blimm, John Todd and William Smith, rendered some choice selections which received the hearty applause of the banqueters.

PLAINFIELD ATHLETE TO ENTER PRINCETON

Russell J. Lawrence, of this city, the distinguished young athlete, who came into the limelight at Seattle by winning the national junior championship in the sixteen pound shot put and who took second place in the senior event and third place in the senior javelin throw, will enter Princeton university in the fall.

The acquisition of Lawrence to the Tiger track team is indeed an important one as Princeton has been lamentably weak in the field events for the past several years.

Lawrence, who finished second to Ralph Rose in the senior shot put, was entered under the colors of the N. Y. A. C. and no doubt gave Rose a scare. Last spring the Plainfield boy broke the world's interscholastic indoor record in the twelve pound shot put at the Poly Prep, meet in Brooklyn, throwing the weight 54 feet 1½ inches.

A short time later he again demonstrated that he is a world beater, *by defeating the field in a shot put*ting contest at Madison Square Garden. He is also a broad jumper of considerable ability and athletic experts who have watched him 'work think he has a great future before him.

Until three years ago he gave no sign of developing into anything unusual as an athlete. He had no interest in the shot putting and for broad jumping the only thing he had tried, he had but a mild regard.

Physical Director George L. Listman, of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A., looked him over carefully as he fooled around the gym with his schoolmates, and caught a hint of the shot putter in his movements. He induced Lawrence to work with the twelve pound and started him off.

There was nothing to Lawrence at the time but promise. His best put was 34 feet, but the boy is a plugger, and when he had made up his mind to become a shot putter, he went at the game like a work horse going up hill.

He worked and worked and worked, then worked a little more to keep his hand in. It took him two years to round into shape, under Mr. Listman's careful coaching, but he found it worth while when he got started.

With the handling to be had there, Lawrence should develop into an interscholastic star at Princeton. He is a modest, unassuming youngster and will do as he is told. Princeton needs athletic stars as no other big college does, and the Plainfield boy will find his work cut out for him when he reaches Old Nassau.

In the spring Lawrence was considering entering Rutgers in the fall, but Track Coach Al Copeland saw possibilities in this young man and he induced him to go to Princeton.

HOME OF JOHN VANNEST ENTERED AND $20 TAKEN

An early morning burglary took place at the home of John Van Nest, of Martinsville, Friday. Twenty dollars in cash which was in the possession of his daughter, Miss Hattie Van Nest, who was keeping it for a church, was taken, as well as some other small articles of value.

The burglars effected an entrance through a window. A chair was taken from a neighbor's porch and was used against the support of the front porch of the Van Nest house. The burglars then climbed over the chair to the porch and from there to the window.

The presence of the intruders was unknown to any of the family. Joseph Van Nest returned home at 1 o'clock, was taken, as well as some other small articles of value.

BOROUGH MAN ROBBED

Fountain Pen Snatched From Lorin Burt's Pocket in New York City.

CROWD CHASES THE THIEF.

Highwayman Captured and Police Will Prosecute, Although North Plainfielder Got His Property Back.

Because a stranger put his hand in the vest pocket of Lorin Burt, of 33 Park place, the borough, and took out a valuable fountain pen, the New York police have locked upon his conception for highway robbery. The theft took place Wednesday afternoon in New York. Mr. Burt was walking along a crowded thoroughfare with his coat open, when a stranger spotted the fountain pen in Mr. Burt's pocket. He hastily shot his hand out for it, grabbed it and then started to run.

Mr. Burt was too quick for him, however, and caught his shoulder before the thief could get away. Then he grabbed the pen from the hands of the man and let him go. The latter started to run, followed by a mob of men and boys shouting "stop thief." The chase led through the crowded street and the man bade fair to be lost in the throng when he plunged directly into the arms of a policeman at a corner, who brought him to a sudden stop. The policeman heard the story from a number of eye witnesses, and decided to take the prisoner to police headquarters. Mr. Burt was obliged to go along to testify against him.

When the thief saw that he was worsted, he tried to turn the incident off with an apology. Mr. Burt was satisfied to get the pen back and was willing to have the incident closed in this way; but the New York police looked at the matter in a *different light. The theft was a dar*ing one and took place in broad daylight on a crowded street showing that the perpetrator was of no ordinary calibre.

The police regard it as being just as serious as if the man had stolen a diamond jewelled watch and he was held for trial by the police. The penalty for highway robbery of this type is from three to twenty years in State's prison, with or without hard labor.

Mr. Burt has no option in the matter, and whether he presses the case or not, the State will do so, and he will be subjected to the inconvenience of having to appear in court to testify against the thief at a loss of much valuable time. Further he had to buy a new fountain pen for use in his business, owing to the fact that the one that was stolen was kept by the New York police to be used at the trial.

Mr. Burt is much displeased at the outcome of the affair as he has no desire to press the charge against the stranger.

SUPERVISOR MEEKER SAYS BRIDGES CAN BE BUILT.

State Supervisor of Roads Robert A. Meeker, of this city, in speaking of the bridges it will be necessary to build at Deal Lake, Shark River and Manasquan for the proposed Ocean Boulevard, from Atlantic Highlands to Cape May, said yesterday that the construction of bridges at these points was not only feasible but easy of accomplishment. A twenty-foot culvert of re-enforced concrete will solve the Deal Lake connection. Mr. Meeker also said that the trouble at Shark river is that the outlet has been made too wide. An outlet 80 or 100 feet wide will meet the demand there.

Governor John Franklin Fort is quite as enthusiastic over the pro*jected thoroughfare and says the* Ocean Boulevard is assured. It means more to the people of New Jersey than any other subject now under consideration. Last year's boulevard law was a good beginning, and this winter ought to see things work a great help for the project.

GAS "CUT OFFS" BEING INSTALLED BY P. S. C.

Between sixty and seventy gas "cut offs" have thus far been put in by the Public Service Corporation in this city in front of hotels and other public buildings, in compliance with a recent ordinance adopted by the Common Council as an extra precaution against fire.

The ordinance provides that these "cut offs" be put in at the curb, in front of all churches, hotels, schools and other public buildings in this city. This is done so that in case of fire the gas may be turned off easily, thus lessening the danger from serious fire. The work is nearing completion.

The improvement is the result of suggestions made by Chief Deane, who realized the possible danger of combustion from gas in large buildings or public halls in case of fire. The ordinance does not apply to the ordinary dwelling.

MISS MARY J. TYGARD BRIDE OF CHICAGO MAN

Miss Mary J. Tygard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Tygard, of South avenue, was the bride of William F. Heuning, of Chicago, at a pretty wedding at the Tygard home, 920 South avenue, Thursday. Rev. Morgan Ashley, rector of St. Stephen's church, officiated.

The ceremony was performed in the parlor of the home, which was lavishly decorated with flowers and plants for the occasion. Miss Carrie Borrop was bridesmaid, and John Borrop best man. Mendelssohn's wedding march was played by Miss Theresa K. Kahrmann.

Following the ceremony a wedding collation was served, and the pair were given a merry send-off when they left for the West, taking the train at the North Avenue station. They will stop at Pittsburg for a short sojourn on their way to Chicago, where they will make their future home.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

It is the inalienable right of any American citizen to criticize the design or color scheme of the American flag. The free man who thinks that he could write a better national anthem than the Star Spangled Banner isn't necessarily committing sacrilege. Perhaps neither the flag nor the anthem exactly square with all the canons of art. It may be admitted that both are susceptible of improvement. The parties who from time to time are called upon to perform this work for one or the other, should not be harshly dealt with. They mean no harm, its only an effort on their part to demonstrate at once their patriotism and their artistic perceptions.

At the same time, it is just as well to let it be known that the flag and the anthem suit as excellently. This is especially true of the flag. It might be a little longer or a little wider, or have fewer stars or, stars differently arranged in the blue, but just as it is, it does everything a flag can do. The most artistic of the improvers will admit, too, that in comparison with the flag of any other country, they have seen, it doesn't suffer. The men of old patriots who designed it knew a whole lot about symbolism and weren't deficient in artistic perception by any means. It has served admirably from the beginning. It has been so often baptized in blood and has led this nation into such world prominence that any little additions or subtraction now seem quite superfluous. Besides, there's so much obvious re*formation to be accomplished else*where that it seems really a waste of time and effort to commence tinkering with Old Glory.

Why not tackle the currency sys*tem, bossism in politics, the conser*vation of our national resources, direct primaries on a thousand and one other of the live, burning questions of the hour? When we have accomplished the real social, economic and political reforms that suggest themselves it will be time enough to add some touches to the flag.—Newark Evening News.

WEATHER NO OBSTACLE

Joy of Democratic Outing Not Dampened by Cloudy Skies.

DISCUSS CANDIDATES CHANCES.

Boat Shaken Up Off Coney Island—Runs in Ball Game too Numerous to Mention—The Committee.

Wednesday's outing of the Union County Democratic Committee was one of the most successful and best attended affairs of the kind ever held by the organization. Nearly 1,200 men were on board the Sirius when she pulled out from the city dock at Elizabeth. All the old standbys of the county were on hand and despite the uncomfortable weather the enjoyment was keen.

The boat reached the point of debarkation on schedule time and the party made short work of getting to the grove where a sumptuous dinner was awaiting them. Full justice was rendered to the good things provided by the Witzel Hotel. Nothing of any consequence transpired on the trip to the Long Island resort, not even in the political line, in fact the outing took on the aspect of what it was intended to be—a pleasure trip.

The atmosphere, however, seemed to be permeated with a feeling that this year the party has a good chance to land at least two of the Assemblymen which are to be elected this fall. There was also a feeling manifested that some words that were overheard that by making strong, Democratic nominations the present Republican county clerk and register will have to work hard to retain their places.

The fact that Fred Zior, secretary of the city, and county committee, has entered the field against John J. McGrath, for city treasurer of Elizabeth, was a topic of considerable comment on the way to the grove. Both of these men are popular and both have good political backing and the chances of the two men took up a good hour's time in the discussion.

The young men of the party enjoyed the program of sports which had been arranged by Tax Assessor Hugh F. Boyle. The record of runs in the baseball game between the married men and bachelors would be too much for the presses to handle so it will have to be omitted. Everybody had a good time and the return was made with no untoward incidents, excepting, that off Coney Island, where the party went to see the illuminations, a terrific sea tumbled the excursionists about considerably.

The outing committee consisted of Alderman George H. Schlotterer, as chairman; Fred Zior, James L. Butler, William Mariga, John H. R. Corbet, James Norton, James P. Kelly, Edward A. Brennan, Hugh F. Boyle, Anthony Ugly, Jacob W. Shepard and C. M. B. Keimig.

The committee passed resolutions deploring the recent death of Judge Lewis S. Hyer, of Rahway, and a note of action was forwarded to the family of the lamented member. Owing to the funeral of the Judge there was no representation from Rahway on the outing.

SALVATION ARMY TO GIVE POOR PEOPLE A FREE OUTING.

Arrangements are about complete at the local headquarters of the Salvation Army for a large free outing for the poor people of the city and borough on Labor Day. The woods back of the Grossmann School on Watchung Crest, has been secured for the occasion through the kindness of Dr. Grossmann.

The army officers in their visitations meet so many mothers and children who never get any vacation or recreation during the hot summer months and the outing is specially intended for their benefit. Everything will be provided free to those who are found worthy and a profitable and pleasant time is anticipated. Captain Hewitt is anxious to hear from a number of people who have automobiles who will donate for an hour during the morning to convey those unable to walk to the top of the mountain.

Funeral of Mrs. DeLany.

Rev. A. E. Finn, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, officiated at the funeral of Mrs. Henrietta C. DeLany, held at her late home on Madison avenue Thursday afternoon. The clergyman took occasion to mention Mrs. DeLany's faithful work as a teacher in the Park Avenue Baptist Sunday-school for ten years, and to speak of her activity in her church home. George E. Hall, Charles F. Dayton, Charles VanWinkle and Joseph M. Hawkins were the pall-bearers, and the interment was at Hillside cemetery.

Not Exempt.

An evangelist who exhorting his hearers to flee from the wrath to come. "I warn you," he thundered, "that 'there will be weeping, and wailing, and gnashing of teeth!'"

At this moment an old woman in the gallery stood up. "Sir," she shouted, "I have no teeth."

"Madam," returned the evangelist, severely, "teeth will be provided."—Success Magazine.

HEAR SERMON ON FAITH

Rev. James T. Dickinson, of Rochester, Addresses Congregations.

AT THEIR UNION SERVICES.

No Home Happy Without a Strong Faith Says the Clergyman in Sermon at First Presbyterian.

One of the largest congregations that has gathered during the series of union services held in this city, attended the last night at the First Presbyterian church, when the Rev. James T. Dickinson, of Rochester, gave a masterful sermon on Faith.

He took his text from Mathew xvii, 20: "If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove and nothing shall be impossible unto you." His sermon resolved itself into three heads: "General Faith, Faith for Large Things, and Faith for Small Things."

Faith he said is the husband of the home. No home can be happy, or can exist without a strong faith. From the home it extends to the business work. The panic of 1907 to the business world had its root in scepticism. Faith must be able to rise up and be strong enough to see the goodness in the world, in humanity, in God. But we may come from this higher idealism to the lower everyday life where we must permeate everything with a wholesome faith.

Gladstone was religiously grounded. His heart was religious. In the midst of a great public and scholarly career he paused to do good among the lowly; so Gladstone's trust in God came down to humble affairs.

"Can faith remove a mountain? I believe it can," Christ didn't mean it in the physical sense, but intellectually and spiritually. But it is true literally. The Alps of Switzerland have been removed, by tunneling, so far as they obstructed travel; the Hudson and the East river have been removed by tunnels. Faith did it; When ever you go under these tunnels you are paying tribute to faith.

"In the spiritual world, what mountains of doubt and scepticism and ignorance, did not Luther remove by his strong faith! It is a good thing to have even a little faith for it grows into a big faith. Little Greece sent out a philosophy that is world wide; Palestine sent out a Christianity; England a little island, grew to be the greatest empire in the world. So, one little thy root of faith, grows into a tree of gigantic proportions, whose faith is then indomitable. But it isn't the size of the faith that counts; its its object. A faith even though little will link us to the Saviour, to share in his great fatherhood and many blessings; a little faith is your best treasure."

JULIA WARD HOWE'S CREED.

To begin, then, with the simple notions of my childhood. I was born in a world in which the belief in a future life was almost unquestioned. The blessedness of heaven and the torment of hell were presented to my infant imagination as the ultimates of my good or ill conduct in everyday life. Like most other children, I believed what I was told, and in general tried to obey the commands of my elders. I loved to hear about the heavenly life, which somehow seemed to furnish the skyscope of my days as they were added in weeks, months and years. I recall having once made an offering to the God of my childish prayers. The altar was a little stool, the sacrifice some small object which I supposed to be of value. I remember also refusing to say my prayers to a new nursery assistant, because it did not appear to me fitting to take a stranger into my confidence.—Julia Ward Howe in Harper's Bazar.

'PHONE STATIONS LOOTED

Smooth Thief Gets $42 from Booths at Local Hotel and a Drug Store.

WAS HIDDEN AS HE WORKED.

Well Dressed Man With Black Satchel Makes Big Haul —Similar Operations Elsewhere.

Telephone pay stations at the Hotel Iroquois and at Cadmus Bros.' drug store were looted yesterday, and about $42 in silver taken from the booth tills. Of this money, it is believed that $30 was taken from the hotel 'phone in the morning, and about $12 from the drug store in the afternoon. The police have a description of the thief, who worked leisurely, and whom Detective Sergeant Flynn believes to be the same man who robbed pay stations at Elizabeth Sunday and at Paterson and Dover last week.

A. L. Conant, a collector for the telephone company, discovered the loss at the hotel when he went there to make his regular monthly collection yesterday morning. The till seemed properly locked, but when he unfastened the Yale lock, he found that the metal till drawer was missing, and in the space beneath it lay a quarter, a nickel and a dime. The instrument is in the reading room of the hotel and no one had noticed any one enter or leave the booth. One of the men in the room at the time Conant discovered the loss said that he had just put the quarter in the instrument, making an out of town call.

The returns from this booth average about $30 a month, and it is claimed by the telephone company that this amount has been stolen. The Yale lock was not visibly damaged, although it jammed slightly as the collector tested it after discovering the loss. The police believe that the lock was forced by inserting a steel blade vertically in the upper part, and in this way springing the catch.

At Cadmus' drug store, where the robbery was discovered at about 4 o'clock in the afternoon by one of the company's "trouble men," the lock and the till drawer were both missing. A collection had been recently made, but it is believed that about $12 was taken.

It was Joseph Cadmus, one of the proprietors of the drug store, who furnished the police with the description of the thief. Mr. Cadmus was in the store, he said, the man entered the booth, and the robbery was effected "under his very nose." According to Mr. Cadmus, the thief is a man about 35 years of age, 5 feet 8 inches in height, and weighing about 160 pounds. He has a dark mustache and yesterday wore a brown suit and stiff brimmed straw hat. He entered the drug store at about 3 o'clock, and throwing down a black satchel he carried, entered the telephone booth. Mr. Cadmus heard no ring of the coin register, and the man seemed to be having trouble with the instrument. In a few minutes he came out of the booth, and seemed impatient.

"That call comes in from New York," he said to Mr. Cadmus, "just say 'never mind.' I can't wait here all day." And he picked up the satchel and went away.

After the thief had left the store, Mr. Cadmus called up "Central" and reported trouble with the line, using the booth 'phone. The police believe that in order to avoid the ratte of pouring coins from the metal till drawer, the thief merely covered the open drawer with a soft cloth and transferred the entire drawer to his pocket. An investigation showed that no other pay stations had been robbed, although the telephone company announces that they have been rifled within the past week in Dover, Paterson and Elizabeth.

TROLLEY LINE TO BOONTON.

It looks now as though Boonton soon will be connected with the trolley line at Denville, and as there is only three miles of road to be built to accomplish this, residents are hopeful of seeing the cars running there this fall.

Mr. Gring, the president of the trolley company, on Thursday night met a special committee composed of a committee from the Business Men's Association and members of the Common Council, together with a number of citizens, and was so well pleased with the results attained by this committee in securing the right of way between these two places, that he decided to commence work at once.

Plainfield A. C. Win 7 to 5.

The Plainfield A. C. defeated the Warren A. C. Saturday afternoon by a score of 7 to 5. Johnston and Mooney were in the points for the winning team and Montross and Mosher did the battery work for the opposing aggregation. Johnston pitched a fine game, securing ten strike outs and giving but one free pass. Montross struck out eight and held his opponents in good style. Lohman had a fine batting day, securing four singles out of four times at the bat. Hanson slammed out a home run and the fielding of Moran was a feature. Both scored good work. The score by innings:

Plainfield A. C.	1	0	1	2	1	0	1	1	0	—7

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Martine's Boom.

It will not greatly surprise the voters and other residents of New Jersey to learn that Farmer Orator James E. Martine, of Cedar Brook Farm, does not seek the Democratic nomination for Governor, but that if his party "deems it proper and fitting he will accept the nomination and will make a determined fight to win." These words are authoritative. They were uttered by the Cedar Brook statesman himself at the quite recent Union County Democratic outing at Witzel's Point Grove.

And, again, it will startle nobody to learn that at the outing of the Joel Parker Association of Essex county, at Port-au-Peck, the politicians present lauded the gubernatorial boom of Mayor Otto Wittpenn, of Jersey City. It is claimed for the latter that his proposed nomination has the hearty approval of the members of the Democratic State committee, and that it is encouraged by James R. Nugent and former United States Senator James Smith, Jr.

As between these two eminent Democrats there is wide room for choice. In the first place the very fact that Wittpenn, the supreme machine boss of the Democratic party are in favor of Wittpenn taints his proposed nomination with suspicion. In the second place, the "new idea" Republican platform makers in Hudson county have openly charged that Mayor Wittpenn's administration of the affairs of Jersey City has been a wasteful of the public funds, in effectual in the enforcement of the laws, and that the progress made by Mayor Fagan has been lost though Wittpenn's politics. If these assertions can be proved, they would tend to show that a man who cannot successfully govern a city is not a fit man to govern a State.

Mr. Martine has not the indorsement of Smith and Nugent. So much in his favor, as a man if not as a candidate. Furthermore, Mr. Martine's name is signed—and Mr. Wittpenn's is not—to a document declaring that for many years "New Jersey has been the battle ground after battle have been occupied by agents and attorneys of railroad and other corporations;" that the Democratic party machine has "too much power," that the party has been dishonored in its counsels, betrayed in the legislative executive, chained to the wheels of unbridled monopoly; its principles trampled under foot, its leadership completely dominated by corporation influences, its honor bartered for corporation pelf, and its banner trailed in the filth of political corruption. And the same leaders are in power today that were portrayed when Mr. Martine signed the memorable paper.

It is too early to say who is going to be either the Democratic or the Republican nominee for Governor one year from now, but as between a man indorsed by leaders of the character described and one who has had the courage to denounce them roundly then, there is opportunity for citizens of independent minds to make decided choice. But before the Gubernatorial campaign is on, there may be other candidates to consider.—Newark Evening News.

Rev. Dr. Eaton at Wilson Memorial.

Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton preached yesterday morning at the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel at Watchung before the largest congregation ever gathered in the little edifice. The seats were all filled and many were compelled to stand through the service. Dr. Eaton preached a splendid sermon on the "Art of Trouble," drawing many helpful lessons for those who bring their troubles are the hardest to bear. Faith and a sure grip on the Master are the remdies in all troubles, either great or small, and believe, have the comforting assurance that Christ suffers with them and thus His sympathy alleviates the poignant bereavement and bodily suffering.

Treat for the Babies.

The weekly treat of ice cream and cake for the children and mothers at the Baby Camp on the mountain, was furnished last Saturday afternoon by the Daughters of the Cross Circle. Several representatives from this circle visited the camp and became greatly interested in the work being carried on. A number of people from Plainfield and vicinity visited the camp on Saturday, dividing the time between playing games with the children and enjoying the magnificent view which this attractive spot affords.

Test of Financial Recovery.

The noteworthy increase in customs receipts for the year ending June, 1909, over the last fiscal year affords a proof of the rapidity with which the United States recovered from its financial depression. The receipts for the last year were $201,-204,583, against $256,112,131. This is all the more remarkable when it is remembered that for the first six months of the year we were still suffering frome panic conditions. —World's Finance in Nu Norden Magazine.

Absent All Around.

The absent-minded professor returned home one evening, and, after ringing his front door bell for some time to no effect, heard the maid's voice from the second-story window: "The professor is not in."

"All right," quietly answered the professor; "I'll call again." And he bobbed down the stone steps.—Lippincott's.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

"The Florist Shop," Henry W. Savage's first essay into the field of pure farce, is proving a veritable "laughing earthquake" at the Liberty Theatre, New York. The play is a free adaptation by the witty and adroit Oliver Herford from the farce that has been for months past the laughing hit of Berlin and Vienna, "Glueck bei Frauen," by Julius Horst and Alexander Engel. But it has been thoroughly Americanized and brought up to the prevailing taste of metropolitan playgoers, with the result that it has scored the best laughing success Gotham has known since the days of "Charley's Aunt." Mr. Savage has staged the piece very handsomely and has provided a cast of great merit, marked personal hits being scored by Lionel Walsh, Marion Lorne, Nina Morris, Louise Drew, Richard F. Freeman, John Thomas, Richard Sterling, Adelaide Orton, Nelly Roland and Anna L. Bates—to mention but a few in the large company. "The Florist Shop" of the title is a unique enterprise where where lovelorn swains may order blossoms for their inamorates, but which actually sends not roses but lingerie. The complications that follow when a basket of roses accords American beauties and sends in a box a card indicating how pleased he would be "to see these worn this evening," may be imagined. Another of Mr. Herford's amusing conceits is to have two women choose for them Whippens to match, the hues of the latter becoming the fidelity to fact of his characters—a point frequently missed by writers of this form of entertainment—with the consequence that the fun is never forced and the interest of the specimen is held continuously in the story.

MONROE A. C. WINS FAST GAME, 2-0

The Plainfield and Monroe A. C. teams played a fast game Saturday afternoon, the latter club winning by a score of 2 to 0. The Monroe boys gave an exhibition of fielding that would be hard to excel. They had many difficult chances and accepted them all without an error. Slocum was in the box for the Plainfield A. C. and he struck out fifteen batsmen, allowed three hits and gave one base on balls. Hallard, who opposed him, fanned four, but only two hits were scored off his delivery.

The runs were scored as follows: Howe was given a pass, Hallard next up, fanned and the ball clipped Catcher Mooney's glove. He thinking it was a foul tip walked after the ball. Howe scored on the play. The second tally was made on Bayrd's fine two-bagger, Nugent's corking single a moment later bringing him home. The teams will meet again Labor Day morning. The score:

A. E. FORCE AND FAMILY RETURN FROM TOUR.

A. E. Force and Mrs. Force with their children returned from their automobile tour Saturday evening, arriving in Plainfield at about 7 o'clock. They visited in Montreal and return Mr. Force motored 958 miles. His route was Plainfield to Suffern, to Newburgh, to Albany, to Saratoga, to Glens Falls, to Schroon Lake, through the Adirondacks to Elizabethtown, Keeseville, Plattsburg, to Rouse's Point, to Montreal.

The return trip was by way of Lake Champlain, ferry to Isle La Motte, thence to Burlington, Vt., Montpelier, Bellows Falls, Brattleboro, Greenfield, Springfield, Hartford, New Haven, Stamford, New Rochelle and the Bronx and ferry to Fort Lee. The only tire trouble during the whole journey was one chafed inner tube. The party was gone fourteen days.

CHIEF DOANE RETURNS

Back from Convention, He Talks About Auto Fire Apparatus.

NEED HERE FOR BIG STEAMER.

Automobile Combination Chemical and Hose Wagon Very Efficient, He Says.

Chief T. O. Doane returned late last night from Grand Rapids, Mich., where he has been attending the thirty-seventh annual convention of the International Association of Fire Engineers, of which he is a member. He made the trip both ways with Chief O'Neill, head of the Ridgewood department. Automobile fire apparatus was considered carefully by the 600 firemen delegates from all over the country, and the local chief has been impressed with the advantages of auto fire protection.

"We ought to have a combination auto chemical and hose wagon here in Plainfield," said Chief Doane, in speaking about the exhibits of auto apparatus. "The auto engine and hose wagon, like the one they have in Trenton, is an automobile steamer, and it doesn't seem to be powerful enough to take the place of the heaviest type of horse drawn fire engine. It is endorsed as a "skirmish engine," to check big fires until the heavy horse-drawn apparatus arrives.

"We have fire houses enough in Plainfield now to cover the city for many, many years," said the chief in speaking about the local situation, "but we ought to have a big steamer for the right kind of apparatus for the department. There ought to be a big steamer for the big fires. The one we've got now isn't powerful enough for a real 'big' fire. Such a steamer probably wouldn't be used more than once in ten years, but on that one occasion it would pay for itself a hundred times over.

"The auto combination chemical and hose wagon is a very efficient piece of apparatus, and there ought to be at least one of them in town. The hose wagons we've got at present in the department ought to be replaced by these auto combination chemicals."

NETHERWOOD GUESTS HEAR REV. DR. EATON

Every conceivable sort of seat was brought into the pavilion at The Netherwood Fresh Air Home yesterday afternoon, and even then the immense crowd could not be accommodated. The fact that Rev. D. Charles A. Eaton, the famous Cleveland preacher, was to speak to the children drew the largest attendance of the season filling the big pavilion to overflowing; many being compelled to stand outside on the lawn.

Besides the special speaker music was furnished by John Wolf, violinist, and duets by Mrs. Vincent and Mrs. Van Brackle, of Fanwood; and a splendidly sung chorus, "God Will Take Care of You," by the children of the camp. The meeting was in charge of James Parker and, owing to the trouble in seating the people, it did not begin until 4:15 o'clock.

Dr. Eaton did not confine his remarks to the children in the beginning of his talk, but brought to bear on the mothers and fathers present the lesson taught by Paul's advent at Rome. "Paul left his home and all of the olden time left their offspring out on the mountains to die of hunger and exposure, and how after the Gospel had had its introduction and Christ's influence began to tell, how the change was wrought in the customs of barbarism. The cry of the child became greater than the tramp of the Roman armies. The Roman slave then found his condition ameliorated by the intervening power of Jesus Christ.

Turning to the children, who by this time had become absorbed in the Doctor's story, he said: "Perhaps you think of God as far away in the sky; as a powerful being away from anywhere, whom you cannot see and whom you feel. But I tell you that God is so near to you that He is right in your hearts and is speaking to you every minute of the day. He made our hearts for his dwelling place. Money, education and social position do not make you better. It is what you think about God and how you obey Him that moulds and forms and perfects you.

"You ought to be encouraged by the thought of God's love for you. He loves you enough to sacrifice everything for you and has promised to carry you in his arms and hold you for His Kingdom."

Dr. Eaton told two little stories illustrative of his meaning and showed how God goes with His love every where and with everybody, even the little children. "He loves every one of you and will take care of you if only you trust Him," he said. He also expressed his joy at the work being carried on by Miss Curry and her assistants at the camp.

MR. FRELINGHUYSEN IN GOVERNOR'S CHAIR

Governor Fort, accompanied by Mrs. Fort, left Spring Lake last Saturday for an automobile trip to the Adirondacks, where they will remain about two weeks in a cottage near the one occupied by Governor Hughes, of New York.

Dispatches from Saranac Lake say the two governors have planned an important conference on a subject not yet divulged.

Before leaving his seashore home Governor Fort was asked concerning his trip, but he was non-committal, stating that so far as possible, he desired to have complete freedom from all State cares while away and would not divulge his exact locations unless absolutely necessary, but he expected at all times to be within easy telegraphic communication with the executive offices in this city.

He further stated that he had worked rather strenuously since his inauguration as governor, and had not taken any prolonged vacation, and that he thought this present time presented an ideal opportunity to get a little rest before the activities of the fall and winter arrived. Concerning his present trip, Governor Fort stated it would be taken in a liesurely manner and he anticipated a pleasant and profitable vacation.

The governor expects to return to Spring Lake about September 6 and will continue to reside there during the remaining portion of that month. Spring Lake, however, will continue to be the summer capital, since President of the Senate Frelinghuysen, who will be acting governor during the absence of Governor Fort, attending to all routine matters, has a summer residence there.

It is likely that Senator Frelinghuysen will visit the executive office each Tuesday while Governor Fort is away, and that he will do so more frequently if his presence is required.

A Prayer.

Give me, O Lord, that quietness of heart which makes the most of labor and of rest. Save me from passionate excitement, petulant fretfulness and idle fear, keeping me ever in the restful presence of Thy love. Teach me to be alert and wise in all responsibilities without hurry and without neglect. Take away from me and rule my tongue, that I may not transgress Thy law of love. When others censure, may I seek Thine image in each fellow man, judging with charity as one who shall be judged. Banish from my thoughts and hatred from my life. Help me to be content, amid the strife of tongues, with my unspoken thought. When anxious cares threaten my peace, help me to run to Thee, that I may find my rest and be made strong for my Lord. Amen.—Christian Endeavor World and Evangelist.

SERVICE AT BABY CAMP

Mr. Korff Tells the Little Ones About the Good Shepherd.

PROVIDES MUSICAL PROGRAM.

George E. Hall, in Charge of Meeting, Explains How the Worthy Institution Is Conducted.

With perfect weather and an attractive program, the attendance at the four o'clock service yesterday afternoon at the King's Daughters' Baby Camp was even larger than that of the preceding Sunday, and a marked interest was shown in the meeting. George E. Hall was in charge of the service, assisted by Martin A. Korff, who talked to the children in his pleasing way about the Good Shepherd. Mr. Korff based his remarks upon the tenth chapter of St. John, and likened the shepherd who loves his sheep, to the kind friends who are caring for these children at the camp. He drew word pictures of two sheepfolds—one where the sheep and little helpless lambs are tenderly cared for by a shepherd who loves them, and who would willingly protect his sheep from the wolves and other dangers, by the sacrifice of his own life if necessary; the other, where the shepherd is a mere hireling who, in order to protect his own life, would leave the sheep to suffer any fate that might befall them. The subject was one that appealed to adults as well as the children, and the speaker enjoyed the close attention of his audience.

A decidely attractive feature of the service was the musical program in charge of Mr. Korff, including the following selections by an orchestra of eight pieces: "Flower Song," "Schubert's Serenade," "Simple Acen" and "Angels' Serenade." The orchestra also accompanied all the hymns, and in both choruses work and solo parts rendered a program of music that was decidedly pleasing. These musicians assisted: Martin A. Korff, Miss Arline Brown, Miss Marjorie Brown, George Spier, Charles T. Fisher, violins; Whitney Pearce and Ed. H. Guest, cornets. Edward Spier presided at the piano.

Mr. Hall stated that next Sunday's service, which will be the last one of the season, is to be in charge of Rev. Arthur Sherburne Hobbs, of the Swedish church, of this city, who, with several members of his congregation, will render a program of vocal and instrumental music. Mr. Engaland will also address the meeting, and a most unusually interesting service is anticipated.

In reply to inquiries Mr. Hall said that this work is supported entirely by voluntary contributions, that donations of any amount will always be thankfully received and may be handed to Mrs. Bird, matron of the Day Nursery and summer camp, or sent to Mrs. Anna M. Most, of Myrtle avenue. As the result of this announcement a neat sum was received at the close of the service.

These meetings have become a most attractive feature of camp life on the mountain, and have grown more popular with the people of Plainfield and vicinity, with each succeeding Sunday. An hour spent on this cool retreat, on the beautiful mountain, surrounded on every side by picturesque scenery and magnificent views, is sufficient inducement for any lover of nature; but add to this the influence of a religious service that is full of interest and helpfulness, and we can then understand why so many avail themselves of this privilege, willing, if necessary, to walk up the mountain and return, in order to attend these Sunday afternoon services.

The large stage and two automobiles that have been provided all summer by George E. Hall for the purpose of carrying passengers from the trolley to the camp and return, have been taxed to their utmost capacity each Sunday; and this manifestation of interest on the part of Plainfield and nearby towns, is most gratifying to those who are endeavoring to carry on the work of the King's Daughters' Baby Camp.

Royal Arcanum Enjoy Outing.

Members of the Royal Arcanum from Union and Middlesex counties, and their friends, to the number of about 600, enjoyed an excursion to Bellwood Park Saturday. A train of seven cars, well filled, left the Picton station of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, with the Westfield, Rahway and Plainfield lodgemen and to this was added three cars from Perth Amboy at South Plainfield.

Approaching Wedding.

Miss Ethel Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James G. Moore, of Cranford, and Chester M. Briggs, of this city, will be married at the home of the bride's parents on Tuesday night, September 7. Miss Moore was formerly soprano soloist at Trinity Reformed church, and both she and Mr. Briggs have a host of friends here.

Albert Lederer has sold the Jeffrey building on Park avenue, owned by Marcus Silbert, to Joseph Gneisman, of North Plainfield. The building was erected by the late Freeholder John Tier and later came into the possession of Mr. Silbert, who

COMPETITION KEEN AT THE PARK GOLF CLUB

The ideal weather on Saturday brought out a large field at the Park Golf Club to take part in the weekly competition for the President's and Golf Club cups. The recent rains proved beneficial to the course, and it was in the best of condition, especially the putting greens.

Charles B. Morse won first honors for the President's cup with a net score of 78, while Mr. R. Faber and Dr. H. K. Carroll divided the remaining points. For the club cup, scratch, Dr. Carroll, Mr. Morse and R. B. Titsworth divided the points. The leading scores follow:

JERSEY PATROLMEN TO MEET AT PATERSON.

The members of the Paterson Patrolmen's Benevolent Association are busy preparing for the State convention of their organization. It will take place in that city on Thursday, September 9. The convention is expected to be the biggest affair of the kind ever held in the State, as over 1,200 police officers from various cities of New Jersey will be in attendance.

The Newark association had sent notice that 400 men will turn out and that Mayor Haussling will come with them as their guest. Jersey City will be but little behind them, with 300 men going to Paterson with Mayor Witpenn and Congressman Kincaid as their guests.

The convention will begin at 10 o'clock in the morning, at St. Boniface Hall, on Main, above Slater street, and in the afternoon at 2:30 o'clock there will be a banquet at Baum's Park. Preceding the dinner there will be a parade, in which all of the officers and their guests will take part. The line of march for the parade has not yet been completed.

Falling about thirty feet from a scaffold, Ulysses Matthews, twenty-nine years old, of 731 Sycamore street, was believed to have been dangerously injured at the plant of the Campbell Preserving Company, in Camden, but at Cooper Hospital physicians found the man had escaped with sprains of the arms and right wrist.

After a vitriolic quarrel in Atlantic City Council last night between Councilman Riddle, of Chelsea, and Chairman Walter Busby, of the Street Board, the Chelsea councilman, withdrew all offers he had made looking to the sale of the Knife and Fork Inn, at Pacific and Albany avenues, to the city for $30,000, in connection with the Albany avenue boulevard enterprise. During the debate Council was charged with rank extravagance in recent bituliithic paving awards.

MATINEE RACES DREW BIG CROWD

The Plainfield Driving Club held a most successful matinee race meet at the driving park, Saturday afternoon. There was a large crowd and while the entry list was not large every one of the four events was closely contested, furnishing fine sport. "The Rector," owned by H. W. Evans, of Westfield, won the first race, 2:25 pace, taking three straight heats, after finishing second in the first one.

In the second race, C. S. Smith's "Ithyn" finished first, winning the first heat, finishing second in the next one and then taking the next two. A. C. Blair's "Aron B." ran a pretty race in the free-for-all, against Nelson M. Giles' "The Minister." The Plainfield horse won in good time. Michael Quinn's "Whisper" won the last race in straight heats.

The judges were Nate Robbins and Dr. C. M. F. Egel, the timers N. M. Giles and Dr. Butler, while John Feely was the starter. The summaries:

MAKE ARRANGEMENTS FOR SPECIAL ELECTION

The Union County Board of Registration and Elections at a meeting in its rooms at the court house, Elizabeth, yesterday afternoon, filled vacancies on various district election boards and also arranged for the publication of notice of the special election next month. At that election the proposed amendments to the State Constitution will be submitted to the voters for their approval or rejection. The amendments in question effect the organization of the courts. The election is scheduled for Tuesday, September 14.

On motion of Ralph L. Morrow, publication of notice of the special election was ordered in the Elizabeth Daily Journal, the Plainfield Daily Press and the Cranford Citizen, and on motion of Robert J. McAdams notice will also be published in the Elizabeth Times, the Summit Record and the Rahway Progress. John Neagle and Theodore LaRue were approved as election officers in the first district of the Third ward and James E. Johnson and Charles G. Elliott for Fanwood. Vacancies in the second district of the Fourth ward will be filled at a meeting tomorrow when te certificates will be issued to all district election officers.

DUNELLEN BUILDING BOOM; DEMAND EXCEEDS SUPPLY.

Dunellen is experiencing a boom which is provoking widespread comment. During the four months from March 15 to July 15 no less than thirty-eight houses have been built and are occupied. Today there are more demands for houses than can be met. Inquiries for dwelling houses are daily occurrence.

Houses have been recently completed on Prospect avenue for Charles Wrage, P. J. Quinn and Frank Smalley. On Washington avenue Paul Schneider and John P. Feltner have built houses. The Watchung Investment Co. have built two on Third street and the Dunellen Home and Investment Co. one on Dunellen avenue. Professor A. A. Titsworth has bought from Henry Wrage a plot at the corner of Walnut street and Whittier avenue, on which buildings will shortly be erected.

A Pleasant Outlook.

A butcher of a certain village being a devout Christian, whenever he sent a business note invariably accompanied it with a text.

A certain lady, wishing him to kill some of her pigs, sent him a letter to notify him of the fact, to which he sent the following reply:

"Dear Madam: I will call on Friday to kill your hogs, without fail. Yours,

"M. B."

"N. B.—Be ye also ready."—Tit-Bits.

Finding and Losing.

In the newspaper, my children, are eleven advertisements of something lost as against one lonely advertisement of something found. What does it signify? That finding is a dozen times rarer than losing, to be sure. Certainly, after two thousand years of the Sermon on the Mount, it isn't possible that people who find are so much less anxious to rush into print than are people whose lose.—Puck.

PENNINGTON'S GOOD WORK.

Six Errors Each for the Two Nines —Chauncey Murphey's Good Work Saves the Plainfield Aggregation.

Crippled by the fact that only two of the regular men were playing, the local Y. M. C. A. fell down to defeat before the Rahway Y. M. L. Saturday afternoon on the local diamond by the score of 8 to 2., Pennington was a mystery to the local batsmen, and they could not hit him.

But for the work of Chauncey Murphey at third base the locals would have lost more heavily than they did. He was fast and corralled a lot of hot grounders that came his way.

Smith, the right fielder of the Rahway team, in attempting to evade what he thought was a high ball, dodged and his bat struck the ball, which rolled fair to the pitcher's box. The latter picked up the leather and tossed it to first, putting out the batsman. Errors, coupled with a pair of singles, were responsible for the three runs in the first inning by the visitors. HE WANTS $25,000 FOR LOSS OF EYE

Frank Glaser, son of Theodore Glaser, of Elizabeth and nephew of Theodore Glaser, Jr., of Alton, has started suit for $25,000 damages against Frederick Bauer, Jr., son of Frederick Bauer, proprietor of the road house on Rahway avenue, near Elizabeth, who on June 7 last accidentally shot him in the face with a shot gun. Glaser claims damages for the loss of his left eye.

The suit has been started in the Supreme Court and papers were filed on Saturday in the office of County Clerk James C. Calvert, by A. A. Stein, counsel for Glaser. A capias against Frederick Bauer, Jr., son of Frederick Bauer, proprietor of the road house on Rahway avenue, near Elizabeth, who on June 7 last accidentally shot him in the face with a shot gun. Glaser claims damages for the loss of his left eye.

The suit has been started in the Supreme Court and papers were filed on Saturday in the office of County Clerk James C. Calvert, by A. A. Stein, counsel for Glaser. A capias against Frederick Bauer, Jr., son of Deputy Sheriff Wright, and an order calling for the holding of Bauer under $1,500 has been filed.

The shooting occurred in the rear of the roadhouse. The two men had started for a place where they proposed to shoot, Glaser being in the lead. The latter had gone some distance from the door of the road-house, when Bauer, who had just stepped out, called to his companion to turn around. Bauer was pointing his gun at his companion and as the latter turned, he pressed the trigger.

There was a loud report, and Glaser fell to the ground, his face, neck and shoulders riddled with shot. Glaser was taken to the General Hospital, Elizabeth, where an examination showed that he would lose the sight of one eye. Bauer claims he did not know the gun was loaded.

One of the signs of the waning summer is the presence of weakfish up Toms River in the partly brackish water.

Samuel Garwood, of Paulsboro, who was severely bitten by a dog last week, has endured much agony from the wounds, but it is expected that he will recover.

For expectorating upon women who refused to buy his goods, George Smith, a shoestring peddler, from Philadelphia, was committed for twenty days to the Burlington county jail from Mt. Holly.

The oyster catching season will open in Maurice River Cove on September 1. Oystermen are procuring permits from Superintendent Bacon to "try" their beds before the opening. The bivalves are reported to be in excellent condition.

MAC LAUGHLIN'S CURVES TOO MUCH FOR RAHWAY

"Warry" MacLaughlin's fine pitching was too much for Rahway, on Saturday, and the South Plainfield team won one of the best contests of the season by a score of 1 to 0. The game was played at Rahway and was witnessed by an unusually large crowd. Errors by Armstrong and Freeman materially assisted the Plains to tally the one run. The former's misplay gave Allen a life on first, and the latter's failure to stop Albert's throw to the plate, permitting him to cross the rubber.

During six of the nine innings not a Plains man reached third base, Clark being practically invincible. He and MacLaughlin both allowed five hits. The score:

FORT MAY ATTEND THE TAX CONFERENCE

Governor Fort has promised, if his official duties will permit, to attend the third international conference on State and local taxation to be held in Louisville, Ky., from September 21 to 24, under the auspices of the International Tax association. Vigorous opposition to the new federal corporation tax will be a feature of the conference.

These conferences are usually attended by delegates representing universities and colleges that maintain a special course in public finance, or at which that subject receives special attention in a general course of economics, and others who have developed a special interest in the subject of State and local taxation, as well as the governors of the States and territories, and three delegates from each.

It is said that at the coming conference Allen Ripley Foote, president of the association, will offer a resolution that will precipitate a lively debate. It will condemn the new corporation income tax, which President Taft is said to have drafted.

President Foote, who has investigated the feeling in various sections of the country, says the new federal tax scheme is condemned everywhere, as nobody knows what in come it will produce, for there is no way to learn the number of live corporations in the country, to say nothing of those that are earning a profit.

At the first conference of the association, held in Columbus and Toronto last year, a resolution was adopted demanding that inheritance taxes should be preserved as sources of State income without federal interference. This stand has been indorsed by the governors of seventeen States, while nine State Legislatures have adopted resolutions taking a similar stand.

Chimney Rock Outing.

Guests of Mrs. E. V. Waldorf, of East Seventh street, enjoyed a picnic outing to Chimney Rock Saturday, when luncheon was served at the Waterfall in the glen. There were twenty-nine in the party. The trip was made in a large stage, starting at 10 o'clock in the morning. A bountiful luncheon was served at about noon, and the return was made in the late afternoon.

Cranford Canoe Reports.

The Cranford Canoe Club have arranged for a big regatta to be held on Labor Day on the Rahway river, at that place. Water sports will be held in the morning with entries free for all, followed by racing in the afternoon. Entries from several out of town clubs have already been received and these races should prove to be fast as the best paddlers in the State can make them.

Leaning out an engine cab window, Gerald Westcott, twenty-seven years old, of 1537 North Opal street, Philadelphia, a fireman on the Atlantic City Railroad, had his scalp badly lacerated when his head came into contact with a shed cornice.

In collision with a trolley car in King street, Gloucester City, Annie Leonard, six years old, of 415 Hudson street, was hurried to Cooper Hospital, Camden, where it was found that the little one had sustained bad body bruises and is probably injured internally.

DUNELLEN PROVED EASY

Plainfield Stole Thirteen Bases and Won by Score of Eighteen to Four.

WAS A ONE-SIDED CONTEST.

A New York Battery Is Imported by the Middlesex Borough Team.

Dunellen was outplayed and outclassed Saturday afternoon when it fell down to defeat at the hands of the Plainfield club on the Dunellen diamond by the score of 18 to 4.

The Dunellen team especially imported a New York battery composed of Brill and LaVigne. The Frenchman behind the bat did good work, but the Irishman in the pitcher's box was hit sixteen times for clean singles. Brill, however, struck out ten men and let but three walk.

In the matter of base stealing Plainfield had things their own way and tallied thirteen stolen bases with ease. The game started off well, but the Plainfielders so easily outclassed the Dunellen youngsters that it resolved itself into a one-sided contest, in which the Dunellenites scored just enough runs to prevent the game becoming entirely listless. "UNCLE DAN" HOST OF CORRESPONDENTS

Daniel S. Voorhees, State treasurer, and known more familiarly to the newspaper men as "Uncle Dan," issued invitations to the members of the New Jersey Legislative Correspondents' club to visit him next Saturday at Lake Hopatcong, where he has plans for a day on the lake which will live in the memories of the lucky guests. He was busily engaged yesterday arranging to get as much fun in the day as could well be crammed in, and the plans include a ride on one of the finest lakes in the country.

"Uncle Dan" said today that he had arranged for the weather to be moderate, not too cool nor too warm, just right for all of the fun which is to be crowded in the day.

"I owe much to the gentlemen of the Jersey press," he said. "They have always been exceedingly kind to me, and I take this little way of showing some small appreciation for their many kindnesses. Come up to Lake Hopatcong and see God's country."

There is to be no politics in the trip, simply a social time for the gentlemen of the press.

Ray Brown, thirteen years old, while playing in the vicinity of his home, 969 East Twenty-third street, Paterson, was bitten on the left thigh by a dog. He walked to the General Hospital and had the wound cauterized.

The first glass-melting fire of the season was placed under the tank at the Millville Bottle Works, and the blowers and tending boys have been notified to be ready for work on September 7, when the entire plant will hum with industry.

An attempt to derail the Mantua trolley car, on the Public Service line, at Millville Bottle Works, on the rail was placed across the tracks at the foot of Cooper Hill. The car was loaded with passengers, but the motorman spied the obstruction in time to avert a calamity. An investigation is being made.

Mrs. Horace Ely, of Trenton, narrowly escaped death at her summer camp on the Delaware River, near Yardley, Sunday, when a bullet tore through the tent in which she was standing and passed within a few inches of her head. The missile also tore the canvas of an adjoining tent and narrowly missed Mrs. Leigh's young daughter. Efforts were made to ascertain by whom the bullet was fired, but without result.

BOTH BIBLE AND FLAG FOR WASHINGTON SCHOOL

The members of Franklin, Somerset, Benevolent and Plainfield Councils, Jr. O. U. A. M., are planning to present a handsome Bible and an American flag when the new Washington Public School is formally accepted and taken possession of. The lodge men are now in communication with Henry M. Maxson, superintendent of schools, and he will inform them of the time when the building is to be accepted.

The local Juniors have presented American flags to the various public schools of the borough and city, in accordance with the principles of the order that an American flag be displayed from every public school. It is the intention of the Juniors to have the presentations made by two prominent men of the State, whose names will be announced later.

VEHICLES IN CAPE COLONY.

Great Decrease in the Value of Imports.

Consul R. B. Mosher, of Port Elizabeth, furnishes the following information concerning the trade in carts and carriages in Cape Colony:

The foreign trade of Cape Colony in carts and carriages for 1908 amounted to $88,000, as against $152,000 for 1907 and $260,000 for 1906, showing a loss in 1908 of 57 per cent. from 1907. The United States supplied $75,000 of the $152,000 imported in 1907, or 49 per cent. and the United Kingdom $40,000, or 26 per cent. Although in 1908 the total imports fell off 57 per cent., the share of the United States in the total rise from 49 per cent. to 55 per cent., and that of the United Kingdom fell from 26 per cent. to 16 per cent., each country losing the same amount in value.

The causes which have led to the heavy decline in the imports of vehicles are depression in trade and the high customs July of 25 per cent. ad valorem. American lightweight, low-priced carts and traps have practically no competitors, and give great satisfaction. British competition is only to be met in higher and more expensive class of carriages, and colonial competition only to heavy wagons.

An official report of Lord Roberts after the Boer war gave this testimonial to certain Indiana wagons:

"Wagons were imported for trial from the United States, and these proved to be superior to any other make of either Cape or English manufacture. The wheels were of hickory or some kind of steel. They were built by a great vehicle factory in Indiana. The superiority of these vehicles are doubtless due to the fact that such wagons are largely used in the United States for the carriage of goods as well as for military transport. The manufacturers have therefore learned by practical experience what is the best type of wagon and what are the most suitable materials to employ in building it. It may be added that the wagons in question cost considerably less than the British-pattern wagon.

The customs duty on carriages, carts, coaches and wagons (not including motor cars or cycles) and finished parts thereof is 25 per cent. ad valorem, with a 3 per cent. ad valorem rebate on those of British manufacture. (The names of two firms that might be interested in this class of goods are on file in the bureau of manufacturers).—Consular Reports.

For a Change.

"Isn't that Mr. Huggins at the front door, dear?" said the mother.

"Yes," replied the daughter.

"He always makes the same noise when he comes in, doesn't he?"

"Yes, mamma; I wish to gracious for once he'd make a noise like a pound of chocolate creams!"—Yonkers Statesman.

Announce Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Ryder, of 905 South Second street, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Emily N. Ryder, to Harry A. Wierenga, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Wierenga, of this city.

Wilson J. Purvis' horse Noble is dead at the age of thirty-five years, and the children of Rosenhayn are talking of saving their pennies for a monument to his memory. This old animal was distinguished for his love for children. For years the horse was allowed to roam the streets in the evening to take his head down and allow the children to crawl up over his back. His back while other boys would climb up by the tail route, then he would walk around until all had a good ride.

The Paterson police were notified last night that a child was being neglected at the house at 16 Broadway, and Captain Taylor sent Colonel Shelby and Mrs. McCann, the matron at the police station, to investigate. They found a seven-month-old baby, barely clothed, on a porch with a couple of women. They were told that the child belonged to Mrs. Eliza Beattie, and that she lived there. The child was brought to the police station, and later Mrs. McCann took it to the almshouse where it will be cared for. Later Mrs. Beattie called at police headquarters and asked about the child. Captain Taylor gave her a lecture and decided to hold her on a complaint of neglecting her child.

OYSTER BEDS A FAILURE.

Oyster dealers in New York give it as their opinion that New Yorkers will be compelled for some years to rely, as they have relied in past years, upon the Chespeake Bay and its tributaries for their supply of the highest grade of oysters. The oyster "set" in Narraganett Bay, as well as that in Long Island Bound, is an admitted failure this year. Every year the oyster farmers of Long Island and Narraganett plant millions of oysters to set or spawn.

The setting was a failure and the oyster planters looked for a harvest this year. Gales and bad weather, however, ruined their plans, and the reports received from all the oyster beds in this vicinity are that the spawning is the smallest ever known.

The importation of Chespeake Bay oysters this fall and winter into New York city promises to be enormous, if not record breaking.

CURIOSITIES OF THE SAVAGE MIND.

Miss F. Klickmann, assistant literary superintendent of the British and Foreign Bible Society in London, is necessarily in close touch with missionary work all over the world, especially in connection with the dissemination of the Scriptures, and has many opportunities of observing the strange mental attitude of natives.

Some of the curiosities of the savage mind," she writes, "are shown very strikingly in connection with the distribution of the Bible. In many parts of the world the natives are considerably affected by the appearance of anything that is given or sold to them. Certain vivid colors appear to possess for them peculiar fascination. I believe that traders who seek to do business among natives frequently wrap the goods they have to sell in paper of a particular color most appreciated by the natives of the district.

"This love of vivid colors is particularly strong in India, and the Gospels which we send out for sale in the bazars are protected by bindings of brightly colored paper. Each Gospel has its particular color, and these are selected according to the length of the Gospel. The native of India likes to get as much as possible for his money. He will buy a bulky Gospel merely for its bulk, independently of what color it is bound in, but in order to make him purchase the shorter Gospels these have to be bound in which ever of the bright, crude colors are know to take his fancy most. Very large quantities of brightly colored binding papers—green, red, yellow and blue—are sent out from time to time to various depots in India. Quite recently, for instance, twenty tons of it were dispatched in a single week to one depot in Calcutta."—The Strand.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Unbleached calico shrinks in the wash. Allow an extra inch to each yard in making it up, to allow for this.

To clean coat collars, which often show white inside after a little wear, use a little ammonia in which enough salt has been put to make a soft mixture. This, used as a cleaner, will remove discolorations.

An obstinately fixed glass stopper which not only resists force, but also the usually prescribed hot cloths, should be treated with sweet oil. Place a few drops of oil round the rim of the bottle, where it will settle round the stopper. Let it stand a short time, and then you will find the stopper can be withdrawn quite easily.

To clean white canvas shoes dissolve a quarter of a teaspoonful of oxalic acid in half a cupful of water. When cool enough to touch, dip into this a blue bag and squeeze it three or four times, then stir in a couple of teaspoonfuls of pipe clay. The mixture must be made quite smooth. Wipe the shoes over twice with a sponge dipped in it, and when dry you will find they look like new, and the white will not rub off.

Fringed cloths are often quite ruined in appearance at the laundry. They may be made to look like new for an indefinite period if, when they are starched, a little care be taken not to starch the fringe. Fold each cloth in four like a handkerchief, and then gather the fringe of each cloth into the hand and hold it firmly while you dip the middle, only into the starch. When the cloth is dry shake the fringe well and comb it with a specially kept toilet comb, and it will fall as softly and prettily as when new.

WILLIAM LOEB, JR.

Shortly after William Loeb, Jr., was inducted into office as collector of the port of New York the whole service took on a new aspect, the force became more alert and through their vigilance some pretty flagrant instances of smuggling came to light. A trunk had been mysteriously spirited from a liner to its pier. One of the two inspectors watching the vessel and her pier spotted it and immediately reported it to their superiors, who sent it to the custom room. Then followed the indictment and arrest of the owners of the trunk, a dressmaking firm in Baltimore. Meanwhile the five so-called "sleeper" trunks filled with expensive dressmaking finery were seized. Their appraised value was $52,000. A lawyer representing the gang engaged in these smuggling operations promptly called on the collector with all the assurance in the world that an offer of $250,000, covering duties and penalties, would be accepted in settlement and the smugglers granted immunity from criminal prosecution. "Compromise with criminals! Not much," said Mr. Loeb, "I am going to stop this smuggling game, and the most effective way to do it is to send those who engage in it to prison. If you have got anything to say in behalf of these smugglers, you should see the United States District Attorney, in whose hands is the prosecution of the matter."—Robert Sloss in Van Norden Magazine.

GRAY HAIR MADE BLACK BY X-RAYS.

Does your gray hair become you, or do you desire to have it dark?

If the latter, there seems to be some chance that your wish may be fulfilled by applying the X-ray.

So at least declares Jubert, the French scientist, who, since 1896, has made many experiments with the somewhat unknown quantity.

Owing to these experiments Jubert's hair and beard, which were almost wholly white, have gradually become darker than they were when at their darkest. While the change was taking place the progress of the pigmentation, though so gradual, was preceptive to the most careless observer. It is unquestionable that the action of the rays darken the hair, whether it is naturally light or whitened by age or by illness.

Jubert, who is a very prudent man, did not give his opinion of his discovery until he was sure of its value. Jubert had applied the rays in the case of a man 55 years of age for lupus of the left cheek. As, for special reasons, the subject did not use a limiting screen on the surface of the flesh beyond the localization of the lupus, the rays acted on the hair around the ear, covering several centimetres of surface. Wherever the surface was affected the hair fell out; not long after a new growth appeared, and the new hair was a good deal darker than the original hair had been when the subject was in the prime of manhood. Near the ear the color of the new hair is almost black. The pigmentation varies in measure as the surface was near or far from the action of the rays, but wherever there is a new growth it is darker than the original hair.

The left side of the mustache, which, as it was not the side farthest away, was more exposed to the rays, is darker than the right side, which was not as near the centre of the rays' mission. The different degrees of color are so distinct that they are seen clearly in the photographic proofs sent to the Academy of Medicine by Jubert.

Since the pigmentation was first observed the hair has been cut repeatedly, and many months have passed since the skin was subjected to the rays, yet the new growths have all been of the same dark color. That proves, says Jubert, that under some circumstances, at least) the rays have a durable effect unlike the well known passing effect of the X-ray upon the skin.

DRAPED TURBAN RETURNS.

And now some fashion prophet, or, indeed, perchance a prophetess, foretells the turban as a feature of the millinery for the late season. The fact that this smart-looking close hat has already graced a race meeting in France seems sufficient guarantee to the prophet that it will win out.

Is this turban, with its twisted drapery, is now an English favorite, as we have been informed, it was of East Indian origin, and long ago it was distinctly Greek and comes not without a pedigree—its past history is assured. A long popularity was enjoyed by it during the Madame de Sael days, when it was both street hat and evening headdress. We know of it pulled quite far down over the head, disclosing only some ringlets that escaped its bounds, and we well remember Princess Mary's dowagers, whose plumes bobbed in unison with their turbaned heads and their indignation.

The plume has given way before the more saucy looking aigrette as a trimming for the present turban, although in its main attraction is the covering, which is wrapped, rolled, folded or twisted to suit the face beneath it. A fitted straw hat is the body of the up-to-date turban, something so close to the head as to be almost indistinguishable. The less extreme turban is a sewn tagal straw of white or blue; which shows through the drapery; some of them, indeed, covered with folds of straw and foulard held on by a straw cabochon. These make excellent traveling hats. Others are swathed with white marquisette or liberty crepe, held in place by an ornamental hatpin; and, again, we are shown the white or dyed lace veil used as a covering for the straw, or a chiffon scarf or veil with a yard of its extreme length falling over the shoulders—just as a touch of grace.

The swathed turban is most convenient and attractive for long journeys. The veil may be removed, pressed and replaced to gain the needed freshness, and is a boon to the clever woman who can adapt one hat to a half dozen gowns, be their colors as varied as Joseph's coat. We can picture the economical, resourceful woman wrapping her hat by turns in some harmonious foulard, a hand-run lace veil, three yards of automobile chiffon hemstitched at the ends or some scarf of iridescent gauze.

Believer in Reciprocity.

Little Harold is famed in his own household for his clever sayings. The other day he approached his mother and asked:

"Mamma, haven't I been a good boy since I began going to Sunday school?"

"Yes, dear, you have," answered the fond mother.

"And you trust me now, don't you, ma?"

"Why, of course I do."

"Then why do you keep the pies locked up in the pantry just the same as ever?"

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 29, 1909.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic—Home missions; our cosmopolitan population—Luke xiii, 29-30.

One of the great factors in home mission work today is that of the population of our great cities, many of whom have no abiding place, but wander about from place to place, and hundreds of thousands of whom are strangers from strange lands and consequently unfamiliar with our national customs and institutions and religion. The supreme court of the United States has decided that Christianity is our national religion, yet they know little or nothing about it, and many of them care less. Yet there need be no despair and no fear concerning the large number of foreigners in our large cities. Many classes of them are of course undesirable—illiterate, anarchistic and irreligious. But the public schools will take care of the illiteracy. In the section of our cities where these foreigners congregate the children attend large public schools. They are taught, of course, in the English language, and it is remarkable what progress they make both in education and in patterning after American customs and habits. Take the Italian, whose so many people dread. In Philadelphia one section of the city contains 90,000 Italians. The changes made in the young people and children in a few years must be seen to be fully comprehended. Many are handsome, with their dark skin and intensely black eyes, and when properly cleaned and nicely dressed they are a class of young people of whom any nation might be proud. But they are apt to learn, and in a two or three generations, through intermarrying, which is sure to increase, as it has already begun, we shall not be able to recognize them as immigrants from southern Italy. Many of the boys and girls and young men and women are employed in large department stores and in various kinds of factories. Their fathers may be "dagos" and their mothers keepers of small shops, but the children will never be. Education in the public schools and association with American children will change all this in one generation.

The undesirable populations if they attempt or do wrong will be cared for by the police department and of our great cities. But, after all, they are not, in general, classes of criminals. Many of them must have their beer and other drinks, but they usually get them Saturday nights and take them to their homes, where they have what they call "a good time." In drink they may be quarrelsome, but only among themselves. Few Americans if they attend to their own business will be disturbed by foreigners. Though they may look forward to the time of the end of the kind of work they do, they are remarkably inoffensive. They respect womanhood. They work steadily at the hardest kind of work—build our railroads, mine our coal and other ores. The Italians are exceedingly temperate and hesitate a minute to kill any one who interferes with their love affairs or casts any reflection upon their daughters or wives. There is no menace to the nation even to the millions of foreigners within our boundaries. They will soon learn to love Old Glory and shout as the rest of us, though we, too, are of foreign descent unless we are Indians.

When it comes to their religion the church must take care of them. Christ preached in the streets of towns and cities, and we must do likewise. They will not come to us, so we must go to them, and that means to begin in the streets or in temporary places amid them. Street preaching is unpopular today. We are all getting used to it, and it may have been providentially arranged for such a time as this and such a work. Our Italian mission was established in a large city of our state in a room over a machine shop. Then followed a tent, next a tabernacle of iron, and today they worship in a fine stone church building capable of seating 1,700 people. A daily kindergarten is provided for and carried on. The church has only 500 active members and a great following. Another work was begun among foreigners by the formation of a Sunday class for them. Today a mission has been organized, and preparations are being made for the erection of a church building. "All things are possible with God." Get in religious touch with the foreigners about you, whether they be one or two families in a small hamlet or hundreds of thousands in a large city.

A Fundamental Thought.

Again and again we need to come back to this fundamental thought: The Christian Endeavor movement can prosper only as Christ is in the members and its members are in Christ.—Rev. Francis E. Clark, D. D.

The Christian Endeavor Pledge.

Relying on Jesus my strength to supply,
I vow that to please Him in all things
I'll try.
The rule of my life I will make it each day
My Bible to read and in secret to pray.
The church both my presence and help shall receive,
Or conscience a reason to Jesus must give.
Throughout my whole life, just as far as I know,
I'll firmly endeavor the Christ life to show.
As an active Endeavorer I vow to be true
And answer to Jesus for what I should do
To speak, read or pray and each service attend
And, if hindered from roll call, some token to send.

—Australian Roll Call.

CREDITOR HAD BEEN WORRIED.

Over-Sensitive About a Debtor Who Took His Time to Pay Up.

"Well, thank goodness, there's one man I can meet now without feeling uncomfortable," the man said.

"How's that?" asked his companion. "Did you owe him money and settle up?"

"Just the other way around," said the first speaker. "He owed me a small sum of money for more than a year.

"I met him a great deal, and several times he dunned himself about the money, but he never paid. After awhile I got so I didn't like to meet him, because I felt all the time he was going to say to himself: 'I owe this man money and he knows I ought to pay and still he doesn't like to remind me.'

"Absolutely it got so I would go blocks out of the way to avoid him. I felt that he felt he never could mention spending money for anything when he was in my presence without my feeling that the money ought to have gone to pay the debt he owed me.

"Maybe he didn't feel that way about it at all, but I felt that way, and now that he has paid up, so that is this detail at least I am comfortable in my mind."

SNAKE SCARED THE EMPLOYES.

Poisonous Reptile Among the Archives of Portugal's Peers.

Some time ago it was reported in the press that while workmen were searching for certain documents in the archives of the house of peers several snakes appeared from among the dust-covered volumes.

The panic-stricken employes immediately fled, and absolutely refused to return to such a dangerous occupation.

The presence of the snakes has never been accounted for.

Recently, however, all the documents were carted to the underground archives of the ministry of the interior.

Recently it was reported in the press that while the documents were being sorted out a flat-headed snake suddenly wriggled out, biting the employe on the lip. It then disappeared among the piles of documents. Half an hour later the man died in terrible agony. His body turned black and was horribly swollen.

Notwithstanding the government officials' entreaties, all the employes refuse to descend to the archives.

Busyness the Refuge of Small Souls.

Extreme busyness is a symptom of decided shallowness; while a faculty for idleness implies a catholic appetite and a strong sense of personal identity. There are dead-alive, hackneyed people about, who are scarcely conscious of living except in the exercise of some conventional occupation. Bring these fellows into the country or set them aboard ship, and you will see how they pine for their desk or their study. They cannot be idle. Their nature is not generous enough, and cannot pass from one form of work to hours which are not dedicated to furious moiling in the gold mill. When they do not require to go to the office, when they are not hungry and have no mind to drink, the whole breathing world is a blank to them. This does not appear to me as being success in life.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Fled from Hoodoo Cat.

Deserted by her crew at the very moment of sailing for the north, the fishing schooner Idyle, due to have at two o'clock Friday afternoon, still lies at her moorings and all because of a cross-eyed black cat. Friday the crew was making final arrangements to sail, when a yell resounded out of the hold. A sailor, thought the black cat, had scrambled over the side and made off before anyone could stop him.

While the others were gazing after his retreating form a yowl came from the darkness below and a black cat appeared upon deck. One look at the snub-nailed, green-eyed feline was enough. Every man of the crew picked up his bundle and silently departed, nor can the captain by any means lure any of them back on board.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Melba and the Sick Child.

Mme. Melba once told a pretty story about a sick child who lived on the same floor that she did at the Savoy hotel. Mme. Melba used to practice every now and then, though it may be remarked parenthetically, that she rehearsed not practice half as much as small ones, and the little one lying in her cot used to listen to the Australian nightingale with the liveliest pleasure. When the little girl got well, and was running about the corridors, she saw Mme. Melba entering the room whence had come the music. The child rushed up to Mme. Melba and said: "O, please take me in and let me see the bird that sings so prettily." — Beau Broadway, in New York Telegraph.

Seeing the Show.

Sam Shubert used to tell this: "A rustic came to Buffalo and bought a ticket for the theater. Through blundering about the doors he found himself in the adjoining billiard saloon. Seeing a novel performance going on, with a big crowd witnessing the same, he settled himself in a chair and patiently watched the play for an hour or two. Having satisfied his appetite he left the room, and, going out on the street, was asked if the show was over. 'Over? Oh, no,' he replied; 'it's a-goin' on yet. They are knockin' away like all the world in that.'"

AMPLE MEASURE OF REVENGE.

Time That Pat Got Gloriously Even with the Doctor.

Pat had had trouble with his eyes, and a friend having advised him to consult an oculist, he went a few days ago to see Dr. W——, a distinguished specialist, for relief. On his arrival at the doctor's office he found the usual large number of patients in the anteroom awaiting attention, and though he was in a great hurry he was forced to wait several dreary hours before his turn came. He lost and regained his temper several times in the interim, but when he was over and he found himself out upon the street with the half day spent, indignation over the loss of valuable time was the predominant note in his feelings.

"But Oi had me revinge!" he ejaculated with a broad smile, as he told his friend Mike about it afterward. "Oi don't believe he knows yit what struck 'im!"—Harper's Weekly.

KITTY WANTED TO BE ALONE.

Story Well Illustrates the Workings of the Childish Mind.

When little Catherine first began to lisp she was voluntarily instructed by her mother in religion. The omnipresence and the omniscience of God were explained to her in words of primer length. All this religious training evidently impressed her profoundly, but she kept her meditations to herself until the other evening.

The four-year-old had been tucked into bed after saying her prayers, and as her mother stooped to kiss her good night the child asked eagerly:

"Is mamma going downstairs now?"

"Yes, dear."

"An' is God going to stay in dis room?"

"Yes, yes, dear."

"Well, Cath'in wants mamma to tell God to go downstairs, too, 'cause she wants to wear dat pretty dress to-morrow—de one dat's on de chair—an' if God sits down in dat chair he'll muss dat dress all up. An' God can see de candy in de drawer dat I'm saving to eat in de night if he might eat it all up in de night if he feels hungry. So Cath'in wants mamma to take God downstairs to play bridge."

Sneezing Superstitions.

Sneezing has an extensive folklore in many countries. Sometimes the act is considered ominous of good and sometimes of evil. Among the Jews it has always been regarded, at an appropriate moment, such as the conclusion of a bargain, as propitious. A belief still lingers in many parts of the country that the regular habit of sneezing, particularly after meals, is conducive to longevity and a precaution again fevers. The old English custom of saying "God bless you" when a person sneezed, so as to avoid evil consequences, has its counterpart in many far-distant parts of the globe. The early settlers in Brazil found the sneezer saluted with "God preserve you." while in Fiji it was customary to retort: "May you live." In superstitious Suffolk there is a sneezing tariff—once a wish, twice a kiss, thrice a letter and four times a disappointment.

One of the Remarkable Cases.

He began after the usual form, to wit:

"I have a little boy at home who—"

They interrupted him after much the usual form, to-wit:

"Pardon me, old man, I must be going along at once. I can't wait, but I'm due at the office."

"Just a minute," he urged, buttonholing the two nearest. "It won't take me a minute."

They sighed and resigned themselves.

"All I want to say," he went on, "is that I have a little boy at home who never said a bright thing in his life."

They grasped his hands with a thankfulness that could find no expression in words, and then he added: "He's too small. He can't talk yet."

The Somewhat Educated.

The somewhat educated girl, known as a "young lady," looks upon cooking not as an art but merely as the "menial" work of the cook or person.

The lady stenographer, telegrapher, saleslady, private secretary, department store employe, etc., look at cooking "from above downward," not to mention the dainty college-bred "society girl."

If cooking were made a regular study in all our public schools as well as in our girls' colleges this senseless disdain for doing what keeps us all alive would certainly disappear in the course of time.—The National Food Magazine.

Easy Money.

Grift—You look prosperous, old man.

Grafton—Yes, I suppose you read about Nuritch's ambition to be a senator?

Grift—Well, yes; I see by the paper that he says he's in the hands of his friends—

Grafton—That's it. I'm one of his friends.—Catholic Standard and Times.

TRADING IN SENEGAL.

West Africa's Most Important Colony.

Consul Solomon Berliner, of Tenerife, Canary Islands, transmits the following information concerning Senegal, it, being a copy of a communication to him from the director-general of an American oil company who is establishing depots on the west cost of Africa for the sale of kerosene:

Senegal consists of four communes; St. Louis, the capital; Dakar, the military headquarters; Rufisque, the chief commercial town, and Goree, a good communal town. The total area is 438 square miles, and the total population 108,000.

St. Louis is a poor port, and vessels drawing over twelve feet of water cannot cross the bar. Rufisque and Dakar, one hour apart, are the chief ports and commercial centres of Senegal. From these St. Louis, the capital, with a population of 24,000, receives most of its supplies by rail. Owing to the fact that with the Sahara is also conducted through these ports. The railroad from Rufisque and Dakar passes through St. Louis to the Senegal river, the latter being used for about eight hundred miles for transportation, and then connects with a railway in Upper Senegal, at Medine. The Senegal river is closed to foreign flags. The foreign trade of Senegal in 1906 was as follows: Imports, $12,160,000; exports, $6,360,000.

A fine harbor, which will accommodate vessels of any draft, has been built at Dakar. The port has also a fine dry dock, but this belongs to the naval department, as the four ports are heavily fortified. Senegal has 1,200 miles of telegraph and 287 miles of telephone lines. A direct cable connects Dakar with Drest and another with Teneriffe. Four French lines of steamships, two English lines, one German and one Belgian call regularly at Dakar. Senegal is the most important colony on the west coast of Africa.

FENCING SHIRT AS A BLOUSE.

Women have a propensity for usurping the uniforms of various professions and of converting them temporarily into fashions for themselves. Quite as if, my dear, they were not supplied by the tailor with the hose for their form! With enough in fact, to drive them distracted if they allowed it to get the better of them.

They long ago affected the military for their tailored trimmings; they took the sweet of the sailor trappings for their yachting clothes; they positively laid siege to the mildy blouse, which they wear for athletics and for shcool. A man's sweater isn't his own any more, since Yvonne Yvelet is sleeping and shoulder line to the exclusively womanish sweater, and women now are veering over to the fencing shirt as a daily blouse.

It is a very sheer, full and beautiful little garment that has somehow escaped undue popularity, perhaps because it belongs to a peculiar type of woman who, while she may be slender, has unusual breadth across the shoulders. The woman using the fencing shirt should measure about six inches on the shoulder from collar line to top of sleeve, because the requisite amount of bloused material necessary at the waist line for fencing is not balanced by the fulness across the shoulders and bust.

The fencing shirt usually is made of sheer, soft batiste. It never is starched and it is cut invariably over the same pattern.

The yoke front and the back of the shirt are cut a little fuller than a perfectly plain shirtwaist. They are felled together on the shoulder and under the arm and then sewn into a neckband with a few gathers stroked in at the back of the neck (as in a workman's blouse) and at each side of the front neckband. A casing run with white silk elastic and finished to fit the waist measurement blouses the garment over exactly like a child's sailor blouse.

The sleeve is cut for a two-inch bishop's wristband at the hand and with only a few gathers at the armhole. The top line of the sleeve shows very little rise, being cut high underneath to admit of raising the arm. The cuffbands and the front hem are then opened for the insertion of a five-inch hemstitched frill, which falls over the hands and cascades down the front.

The fencing shirt is worn with a stiff linen collar and a Windsor tie, and has a distinctive style most becoming to the mannish girl in spite of its frills.

RENOVATING A PARASOL.

If you have a parasol that is too good to throw away, yet not quite nice enough to carry, cover the top with a close design in soutache braiding. This is a decided fancy for such parasols this season, and the braiding can be used with advantage on either silk or linen tops. The work is easy, after the design has been carefully stamped.

Select a pattern that is continuous, as the hard part of braiding is to finish off the ends. Therefore there should be as few as possible.

An easy way to do this braiding is to open the parasol, fix it firmly in a block or hold of some sort and work with both hands. Take tiny stitches on the right side and not too large on the wrong, as they will be unsightly if the parasol is not relined.

LOSE THEIR HOMES IN TROLLEY EXTENSION.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has issued notices to the tenants of the nine houses in Main street, between the Episcopal chapel and the railroad bridge, South Amboy, to quit the premises in thirty days. Most of these families have occupied the same houses for many years, and some have lived in the same house all their lives.

The houses are all to be torn down at the first step in the preparation for the laying of the new track of the Jersey Central Traction Company's extension of their road through this city to Perth Amboy.

The traction company has an application before the City Council for a franchise proposing to change the course of a route already secured. The former franchise was over a course along the northerly part of Stevens avenue and through the "Hole in Wall." The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has not shown any disposition to change that bridge in obedience to the order of the court, but has conceded to the traction company a private right of way over its property, whereby they may reach Perth Amboy without passing through that tunnel. It is in the furtherance of this project that the railroad's buildings are to be torn down. As this move is being made before the application has been considered by the council, it is taken as an assurance that the road will be pushed through with all possible haste, regardless as to whether the application is granted by the Council or not. Should it so happen that the action of the Council is unfavorable to the present change of course then it seems certain that in conjunction with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the Public Service Corporation they will annex themselves of the facilities offered by both these lines, and go over a route for which no franchise would be required. It is not their intention to do this unless they are compelled by opposition.

EMBROIDERED PARASOL.

Many women utilize their old parasol frames when they wish to embroider a new one. While this is an economical plan, it is rather foolish unless necessary.

Shapes change in parasols as in everything else, and it seems foolish to put handsome work on a parasol that shows itself distinctly out of date in shape.

The parasols of this season, for instance, are wide, flat-topped affairs, with from fifteen to twenty ribs; they also have long handles. While not affording so much shade, this shape is very adroitly to the embroidery or rather to showing off the finished work.

The top can be embroidered as a whole, with graceful bow-knot effects, caught with bunches of day flowers; or, better still, a good looking parasol of biscuit colored moire has a pattern of dull rose ribbon outlined in gold, with baskets worked in yellow filo outlined in gold and filled with forget-me-nots, white violets and small primroses.

These baskets were in alternate panels and the flowers were done in natural tints in ribbon work.

Smart parasols have Japanese motifs worked in each panel. These are especially appropriate, as the flat shape is decidedly Oriental. Dragoons, storks, cranes, roses and butterflies in skillful combination with scroll-like curves all are effective and not difficult to work.

The embroidery is usually done on a heavy silk, but cheaper parasols can be made from ponges or heavy art linen, either tinted or natural colors. Be careful in electing harmonious colors in the design to be embroidered. Too many amateurs in attempting Oriental colorings get loud and garish effects.

In all a white parasol is most serviceable for the woman who does not have a variety of parasols. It cleans well, and if worked on linen will last for years. The Japanese motives developed entirely in white are surprisingly effective.

Such a parasol with a crane handle would be very stylish. The handle might be one of the new enameled kind, though, as a rule, the white linen parasols look best with a natural handle.

BIDS SUBMITTED FOR TWO BIG DREADNAUGHTS.

Two more American Dreadnaughts the Wyoming and the Arkansas, authorized by Congress, the first shape at the Navy Department Wednesday, when bids for their construction were opened in the presence of numerous representatives of shipbuilding firms anxious to obtain the contracts. They vessels are to cost $6,000,000 each, exlusive of their armor and Navy Department. They are to make a high rate of speed and are to be equipped throughout with the latest improvements in naval development.

The vessels are to be of 26,000 tons each, the largest ever undertaken by the American naval establishment, the increase in tonnage in this class of vessels being from 20,000, the size of the original American Dreadnoughts, the Delaware and the North Dakota. The Utah, now under construction by the New York Shipbuilding Company, and the Florida, now being built at the New York Navy Yard, are the two remaining Dreadnoughts, the tonnage being 22,000.

PICTURES OF "THE UNSPOKEN FAREWELL"

Proofs of the moving pictures taken at the Smalley stone crusher last month, in which several prominent Plainfielders were actors, were delivered here Friday by the American Vitagraph Company.

The scene on the mountain included a big blast and represented the killing of two managers. This part of the moving pictures was especially good, as was also the part where the mob rushed forward after the blast to find the dead man. The features of Chief of Police Kiely and of former Mayor Newton B. Smalley of the borough were clearly distinguishable. Other Plainfielders could be easily recognized as well.

The proofs were delivered to Newton B. Smalley. He was enthusiastic over them and showed them to his friends. Unfortunately they took them into the open air, with the result that they faded inside of fifteen minutes. The pictures will be presented at Proctor's theatre when completed, under the name of "The Unspoken Farewell."

MARRIED IN PRISON; ALESSI WEDS WIDOW

A romance of unusual interest has developed at the Union county jail in Elizabeth from a tragedy enacted in that city two years ago. Uberto Alessi, who is being held for the grand jury on a charge of murdering two fellow countrymen was married Saturday to the widow, who, it is alleged, is the cause of all the trouble, Mrs. Angelina Romano, the widow, were sweethearts in Italy years ago, but she married another and came to this country. A few months ago Alessi heard that his former sweetheart was a widow, and he determined to come to this country and renew the old flame, she had professed for him in their home. Alessi was favored by the widow's smiles and from all the many suitors he was selected for a husband. Mrs. Romano is considered to be wealthy, having, it is said, amassed a fortune amounting to $150,000 in the hotel business in Elizabeth.

The two men whom Alessi shot, as he says, in self defense, were also suitors for the widow's hand and fortune, and out of this rivalry grew the tragedy and from the grim surroundings of impending fate comes the romantic love affair. Mrs. Romano said last night that she looked forward to the wedding with Alessi with more pleasure than another bride could and her love and her fortune is at the disposal of Alessi in his defense.

Alessi says that he, too, will be happy now that the words are said this will make him the husband of the woman whom he has traveled so far to seek.

MISS DICKINSON GIVES A HOUSE PARTY AND DANCE.

Miss Mary Dickinson, of 723 Central avenue, gave a house dance, preceded by a house party, at her home Friday night. There were about twenty-five guests at the house party, including young people from this city, New York, Brooklyn, New Brunswick and other nearby towns. The barn was elaborately decorated for the dance with college banners and Japanese lanterns. Music for dancing was furnished by a large phonograph. During the evening refreshments were served.

Those at the house party included Theodore Parmley, of New Brunswick; Remsen French and Miss Lillian Conover, of Middletown; Miss Nan McLean, of Eatonlown and Miss Elizabeth Hawthorne, of New Market.

GAVE A CONCERT FOR THE BENEFIT OF SAILORS' FUND.

I. W. Travell, who has just returned from an extended tour of England and Scotland, was chairman of a committee that gave a concert on the ocean liner Haverford on July 4. The entertainment was of a high order and included grand opera music by Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Conly of operatic fame.

The entertainment was enjoyed by all of the passengers on board, and the proceeds from the sale of programs for the affair were given to the Sailors' Benefit Fund. Mr. Travell will move to this city on September 1 to take up his new duties as superintendent of the schools there.

JAMES BELLIS AN HEIR TO A $100,000 ESTATE.

Since last May James Bellis, of Vine street, the borough, a tool maker at the Pond Machine Tool Works, has been receiving interest on real estate in Jenkintown, Pa., which will become his property in nine more months. The fortune is worth a little over $100,000 and is left by James B. Smith, an uncle, who died in Jenkintown last May.

The settlement will be made between the three direct relatives, William Bellis, of Pennington, Mrs. Wesley Pope, of Brooklyn, and James Bellis, of this city. Other indirect relatives will receive a small share of the fortune.

GREAT IRRIGATION PLAN

President Taft to Open Gates of Gunnison Tunnel September 23.

WATERWAY IS SIX MILES LONG.

Some Facts About the Gigantic Engineering Feat—150,000 Acres To Be Saved.

The great Gunnison Tunnel, the first project undertaken by the United States Government Reclamation Service, work on which has been progressing steadily for four and one half years, is now completed, and on September 23 President Taft will visit the Uncompahgre Valley and personally open the gates of the tunnel, turning the flow of the Gunnison River into the magnificently constructed bore, main and distributing canals of this enormous project, which will irrigate 150,000 acres of choices land now semi-arid.

The Gunnison Tunnel is located in Montrose county, in the Uncompahgre Valley, in Colorado, the two gangs of men boring the tunnel met at 5:45 p. m., July 6, 1909, at a point 10,812 from the intake on the Gunnison river.

The tunnel is 20,600 feet (six miles) long, 11½ feet inside measurement, and lined throughout with cement. The main canal is 30 feet wide at the bottom, 83 feet wide at the top, and the average depth of water is 10 feet. The capelty is 1,300 cubic feet of water per second.

The cost of the tunnel and distributing canals when completed will be over $5,000,000, and perpetual water rights will be sold to actual settlers at approximately $35 per acre, being based upon the actual cost of the tunnel. Ten years' time will be allowed for payment, without interest.

The lands to be irrigated are suitable for fruit-growing and the raising of all kinds of farm crops. The water, after it leaves the tunnel, will have 372 feet fall which can be used to generate electric power sufficient to light every town and every farmhouse in the Uncompahgre Valley and provide power for all kinds of commercial and industrial purposes.

The lands under this project will afford homes for all time to come for a population of at least 25,000 American citizens. Already there are three modern, enterprising and progressive towns, viz.: Montrose, Olathe and Delta, located in the valley, and with the development of this vast area other towns will undoubtedly come into existence to meet the requirements of the rapidly growing population.

MAX KAHN RETURNS FROM TRIP TO GERMANY.

Max Kahn, of East Sixth street, returned home Saturday from an extended stay abroad. Mr. Kahn left for the continent early this summer, and it was his first visit to Germany, his native land, in thirty-two years. In honor of the event that relatives across the water prepared a large bower of flowers with the lettering, "Welcome," neatly woven in. This was put over the door of the house and was a pleasant surprise to Mr. Kahn.

He spent the entire summer in Germany as the guest of his relatives, and found much to occupy his time in renewing old acquaintances. He found many of his old school friends still alive. These for the most part he met without difficulty in recognizing him.

BRYAN ON THE WATER WAGON.

Bryan now announces his intention to make war on the liquor interests in order to keep the Democratic party from being controlled by them. This sudden change of attitude, novel for a Northern Democrat, has not greatly surprised the American people. Reading the signs of the times, Mr. Bryan recognizes the fact that the great leaders of his party, who have followed him thrice to defeat, are not eager to place him on the standard in his hand again. Mr. Bryan being nothing if not resourceful, his stand for virtual prohibition can have but one meaning. He realizes the absurdity of announcing that he will take a nomination from the Democratic party at the present time and lead it once more to disaster. But as he feels that he must have another try for the Presidency, he is casting about to get the nomination from the rapidly growing Prohibition party.

Those who may doubt that Mr. Bryan is willing to tie up with the Prohibitionists should remember that it is not hope of the Presidency that attacts him and keeps him active in political affairs as much as the profitable publicity which he enjoys from posing as a candidate. It was his remarkable gift of gaining publicity which lifted Mr. Bryan from poverty and obscurity into national prominence and made him one of the best known men in the State. His capacity for securing free advertising drives the ablest press agent to despair. By means of it Mr. Bryan is enabled to derive from his speeches, his lectures and his contributions to the press an income of about $100,000 a year—much more than the salary of the President of the United States.—Leslie's Weekly.

FOWLER ATTACKS CANNON

Fifth District Representative, Smarting from Defeat, Issues a Tirade.

DIGS UP SOME MUSTY RECORDS.

He Accuses Speaker Cannon of "Contemptible Trickery and Traitorous Treachery."

Characterizing the conduct of Joseph G. Cannon, Speaker of the House of Representatives, in the extraordinary session of Congress, when the tariff bill was under consideration, as "contemptible trickery and traitorous treachery," Charles N. Fowler, Representative in Congress from this district, in a public letter addressed to Mr. Cannon and made public last night, denounces the Speaker in severe terms and declares the most important question before the American people today is "Cannonism."

Smarting from the humiliation of being deposed from the chairmanship of the House Committee on Banking and Currency, Mr. Fowler has made a thorough search of the pages of the Congressional Record since Mr. Cannon first entered Congress, and in his letter he has laid bare what he terms the Speaker's "record of false pretenses."

Referring to the financial depression of 1907 and the causes leading up to the panic, Mr. Fowler says to Speaker Cannon:

"You literally hooted the idea of a panic, and inquired, 'What in h—— does this howling in Wall street amount to. The country don't care what happens to those d—d speculators. Everything is all right out West and around Danville. The country don't need any legislation. Then, I don't take any stock in your d—d asset currency.' As usual your ignorance and prejudice were all sufficient then."

After reviewing the bill which had been prepared, he said, by representative bankers and known as the "Bankers' bill," Mr. Fowler declares if the proposed statute had been enacted into law there would have been no general suspension of banks throughout the country. He places the responsibility for failure to retrieve the financial stress in the fall of 1907, when the entire country was looking to Congress for assistance, at the door of Speaker Cannon and Senator Aldrich, of Rhode Island.

"I appealed to you," Mr. Fowler writes, "for the privilege of bringing the bill up before the House for discussion, but you vouchsafe your contemptuous refusal with the added information: 'You will get the Aldrich bill or nothing.'"

After reciting every action of the Speaker during the period when the question of financial legislation was taken before the sixtieth Congress, Mr. Fowler in his letter tells the Speaker:

"This is your record upon our financial and currency legislation. I challenge you to find a single living man with so rotten a one. It is a record of ignorance or political cowardice or a disgraceful hybrid of the two. And yet, sir, you assume to dictate the financial and currency legislation of a civilized country."

Referring to Cannon's boast that was because of "the terrific consequences resulting from the crisis of 1907, because of your ignorance and prejudice and absolutely unchallenged power as Speaker of the House of Representatives," that he (Mr. Fowler) announced his candidacy for Speaker at the beginning of the sixty-first Congress, the New Jersey Representative says now his action was only for the purpose of taking from the Speaker his absolute control of the House of Representatives.

"As a result of that movement," continues the letter, "we now have a calendar day when all self-respecting members may call up bills in their own right, and will not hereafter be compelled to crawl on their bellies like crawling lizards to crave the indulgence of a recognition of the Speaker, which being granted, calls for gratitude and carries with it an obligation, an appreciation of which must be shown, of course, at the proper time, or the recipient is written down as an ingrate."

Declaring that he fully realised what the penalty would be when he announced his candidacy for Speaker, Mr. Fowler continues:

"You yet suppose that I was not aware of your ignorance, prejudice, inordinate conceit, favoritism, patrid preferences—and like all such characters possessing absolute power, malice is the mainspring of your every action under such circumstances? Do I not foresee that my course now is plain sight of your political guillotine and the political carcasses of those you had decapitated; but that it had no terrors for me.

"Has it occurred to you at any time recently that you are so intoxicated with your power and so blinded by your conceit that you have to all intents and purposes come to consider it a divine right founded on the motto of despotism, 'The King can do no wrong?' Do you not believe that every member who impugns against you or the rules commits treason in your sight and must be unceremoniously shot?"

Then the New Jersey member proceeds to take up the question of Mr. Cannon's lack of party loyalty. He makes the direct charge that the Speaker has been guilty of plotting against the Ways and Means Committee of the House and against President Taft. Charging the Speaker with entering into a conspiracy with Senator Aldrich to defeat the Payne tariff bill, Mr. Fowler asks the Speaker:

"Did you not enter into a conspiracy with Mr. Aldrich to pack the conferees on the part of the House for the purpose of adopting the Senate bill so far as possible instead of the House bill, with a few exceptions, when you were honor bound to do everything in your power to secure the adoption of the House bill?"

Speaker Cannon is asked to take the American people into his confidence and tell them "whether he has not already entered into another conspiracy involving our financial and currency legislation."

"Have you already determined," asks Mr. Fowler, " to bind American commerce hand and foot and throw her to the wolves of speculation, there to remain until, because of some overwhelming financial cataclysm, the people shall rise in their might and set her free, clothed and in her right mind, by wise and just financial and currency legislation?"

THE KENNEDYS REHASH WORD FIGHT IN COURT

Mrs. Josephine Kennedy, wife of Michael J. Kennedy, of West Second street, and sister-in-law of John W. Kennedy, of Central avenue, had "Poor John" brought to the city court this morning to answer for alleged abuse, physical and vocal, when her fifteen-year-old son John was threatened with a whipping last Thursday night. The hearing developed the fact that there is little love manifested between the principals, and that each and every one has a vocabulary which just bristles with jagged, dark blue words and phrases whenever they speak of or to each other.

Judge Runyon listened to the "merits" of the case for an hour this morning, during which most of the testimony was "what he said" or "what she said," and therefore unprintable. When it was all over, Martin B. Stutsman, Mrs. Kennedy's attorney, and Robert Newton Crane, who represented "Poor John," each tried to show the court how grievously his client had been sinned against. The magistrate finally ruled that the Michael Kennedys and the John Kennedys keep away from each other. And each counsel said that was all his client wished.

John Kennedy, the younger, who helps his father by driving a cab, and is in the habit of getting home late on this account, has asked his uncle to "see him home" nights, because he once found some "bums" asleep in the stable, and was frightened. Last Thursday night, uncle and boy went into a lunch wagon and had food and drink before going home. While there, an argument arose about a bag of tobacco, said to belong to Uncle John. Words were exchanged and finally the boy started for home. The uncle followed, and threatened to give the boy a beating for talking to him the way he said he did in the lunch wagon. And the lad roared for help.

Mother and father came to his rescue, and John's wife also came out and hung around the suburbs, attracted by the glare of vile language snapping the air.

At the hearing today each of the principals got pretty well worked up over the case, counsel, who didn't come to court. The uncle couldn't stop giving testimony, even after he left the witness stand, and Mrs. Josephine started to give more testimony after Judge Runyon had announced his decision.

Pat Cronin and the Foretellin' Lady

BY ELLIS PARKER BUTLER

(Copyright, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

Once there lived in Ireland, when all of us was young, a lady that had the gift of foretellin' what would come to pass, and the knowledge of all kinds of magic, both black and white and mixed; but trade was poor with her, for she could foretell only the unlucky things, and not the good ones, and that is a poor way to build up a foretellin' business, as many told her.

But over behind the hill lived one man that was not afraid of the worst she could foretell, for he was married to Maggie Murphy, and it was a saying in that part of the country that any one that dared to marry Maggie Murphy would be afraid of nothing whatever, and that whatever happened he would be glad of it.

So Pat Cronin—and that was the poor fellow's name—went to the foretellin' lady to find out what she could foretell, him having been married to Maggie Murphy going on a month and feeling that a foretell of sudden death would be the best news she could foretell to him, sudden death being quicker than the kind he was getting at the end of a broom.

The foretellin' lady, trade being so poor with her, was glad to see him, and gave him the best seat she had, which was all the same as the worst, there being only one, and took his hand and immediate began to weep tears as big as chestnuts.

"Wurroo!" she cries. "I see be th' lines of yer palm ye are Maggie Murphy's man, and 'tis bad luck ye have this morning to answer for allaged abuse, physical and vocal, when her fifteen-year-old son John was threatened with a whipping last Thursday night. The hearing developed the fact that there is little love manifested between the principals, and that each and every one has a vocabulary which just bristles with jagged, dark blue words and phrases whenever they speak of or to each other.

"I had an intimation of th' same mesilf, ma'am," says Pat, no bit scared; "go on, ma'am, and tell me the truth of it."

"Well, then," says the fortellin' lady, "I see by the lines of yer palm that ye will have as many children as ye have fingers and toes."

At that Pat Cronin fell into a dead faint, and it was twenty-four hours before he came to himself.

When Pat, with the tears streaming down his face, told Maggie the words of the foretellin' lady, she was glad, for she was that fond of children!

"Praise be!" she said. "'Twill be a grand family we will be havin', Pat, wid as many as ye have fingers and toes, for ye have five fingers on one hand and five on the next, and five toes on each foot, and, whether ye add or multiply or divide, 'tis twinty it makes."

"I was always the unlucky creature," says Pat, who liked children no better than a pig likes a ring in its nose.

"'Twill be a grand thing t' have twinty sons and darters t' care for me when I'm old," says Maggie. "Th' first would likely be a thumb, and a boy, and th' name fer him will be Patrick, for I will have him christened nothin' else but his father."

"Bad cess t' him!" says Pat.

"And th' next would be a girrl, belike," says Maggie, "and she will be christened Mary, after me mother."

"Say no more," said Pat hopelessly; "mebby th' foretell will not come true."

"And th' next will be Larry," says Maggie, "afther me own dad, bless his soul."

"I was born on a Friday," says Pat, "and th' bad luck follies me."

"Don't ye think Bridget w'u'd be a fine name for th' next girl?" asks Maggie, quite cheerful.

"Ten fingers I have," says Pat, with a sigh, "and not a duck in th' worrld that can't say! And ten toes I have, and a horse has but one on each foot!"

"That's four," says Maggie—meaning the children she had found names for, and not the number of toes a horse has—"and five more to come counting them off on her fingers, "will be Michael, and six will be Anne, and seven will be Terry, and eight will be Maggie, and nine will be Dennis, and tin will be Lizzie, and that's all th' fingers."

"'Tis plinty," says Pat, "and any man that wants more is a born fool."

"And for the toes," says Maggie, as pleased as a boy in pig-killing time, "elivin will be Garry, and twilve will be Gerry, and thirrteen will be John—"

"Thirrteen is an unlucky number," says Pat, "but twinty is worse."

"And fourteen will be Susan," says Maggie, "and fifteen will be James, and sixteen will be Dora, and sivinteen will be Mark, and eighteen will be Cora, and nineteen will be Luke, and twinty will be Maria, and——"

"Stop!" says Pat. "Thank th' saints I have more toes, and 'tis temptin' me to murder ye will be if ye beyant twinty!"

It was plain to see he was not pleased with the foretell the foretellin' lady had foretold for him, but Maggie gave him no peace, for she always saying over the names lest she forget them. She would sit on the three-legged stool at the door of the hut any time of day in her bare feet, as is the way in that county, counting off the names on her fingers and toes lest she forget them or how they went in order.

The hate of it was so to Pat that he came to the pass where he could not bear to see his fingers and toes, and took no wearing shoes in midsummer, which was a thing unheard of in that part, and at last he wore his mittens all the time and slept in his brogans, lest he should awaken in the night and see his toes. He had lost all affection for his fingers and toes, because of the bad luck they were going to bring to him, and that is a sad state to be in, as any one knows, and cruel hard on the fingers and toes, which work hard all day for one and ask nothing but a bit of affection now and then.

So one day the thumb of his left hand got tired of the way things were going, and spoke to the four fingers that stood alongside of it, and the first chance they got they got underneath the saw that Pat was using and got sawed off.

"'Twill serve him right," they said; but they did not know the true feelings of Pat Cronin, for when he saw his hand he gave one great shout and began to dance a jig.

"Hooroo!" he shouted. "Th' luck has turned, and 'tis a glad day for Pat Cronin! There goes Anne and Terry and little Maggie and Dennis and Lizzie, and there be but fifteen left!" and with that he ran off home to tell the news to Maggie, knowing it would disappoint her.

It was sad news indeed to Maggie, and she that fond of children! And she wept for five days, so that folks came over the hill to see her weep; but as for Pat Cronin, he was wild with joy, and quit being a carpenter, and went to work for Phelim Casey, who had a saw-mill, with a buzz-saw in it.

"Tis wonderful what bad luck some folks can have around a saw-mill! 'Twas full a year before Pat Cronin was successful in getting his right foot in the saw, but 'twas a beautiful job the saw did when he got it there, and he had no complaint to make, for it deducted Garry and Gerty and John and Susan and James as clean and nice as if they had never been.

She would hear no more of his going back to the saw-mill after that, and kept him about the hut every minute of the day, so that she could keep an eye on all that was left of the children that the foretellin' lady had foretold, from little Patrick, who was a thumb, to little Maria, who was the little toe on his left foot, and she cherished them as if she was a manicure lady with only one customer and no chance of another. Day by day she made him sit down, and as she went about the cottage, with his one good hand laid out flat on the table and his one good foot propped up on a stool in plain view. It was not hard work except that the temper it aroused in her to see him sitting there doing nothing, while she did not dare to let him out of her sight, but every day her temper got worse and more of it, and at last she gave it a little ease by throwing a flat-iron at him, which would have done him no harm but for his not having been upset by her anger, so that she missed his head and the iron came down and mashed little Patrick and Mary and Larry and Bridget and Micael.

Sure, that was one joke Pat had on Maggie, and 'twould have done you good to have heard him laugh when the surgeon came and cut off his fingers and his thumb, one at a time.

Then times got worse for Pat Cronin and Maggie, for a man with no fingers and only five toes in his name is not such a good worker as one with more, so they packed up everything they owned but the pig and started for America.

"We will take no more chances," said Maggie, "and I have been a-busy to nail up your foot in, so that it may go safe to Ameriky, and no harrm come to little Dora and Mark and Cora and Luke and Maria;" and with that she brought forth a fine box just large enough to suit his foot, and made him put his foot in it, and she nailed the lid on, but when she saw him smiling she knew there was something wrong, and she pried the lid off, and, behold you, in nailing it on she had spoiled two more toes, so that the surgeon had to come and amputate little Luke and Maria.

As soon as they reached New York Pat set up in business' as a public man and applied for a job as a milling, and, being of a fine character-way, and all seemed going well, and Maggie was number four hundred and one in the Four Hundred, and had the offer of the first vacant place in the three hundreds, when one day she came running to him, and says:

"Pat," says she, "and do you remember the foretell the foretellin' woman foretold to you?"

"Sure I do," he says. "Could I forget it?"

"Well," she says, "how many fingers and toes have ye got left?"

"I dunno," he says; "for I have forgot, I have been so busy."

"Count them," she says, "for 'tis important I sh'u'd know."

"Wan—two—three—I counted" and that is all I have left."

At that Mrs. Cronin looked pained and shocked, and shook her head sadly.

"Alas!" she said, "'twill never do at all. 'Tis children is an outrageous large family, and not at all what folks in Amerrky has. W'u'd ye be havin' ov'ry was think we are but ignorant foreigners, Pat?"

"I would not," says he; "I would do as th' Americans do, and be as th' Americans do, and be as you w'u'd be havin' me do, Marguerite?"

"T' save th' honor and glory of th' family," says she, "and t' prevint ridicule fallin' upon us, ye must remove was of ye toes, Pat."

"For why?" says he.

"Because of the foretell as foretold by th' foretellin' lady," says she, "that says ye will have as many children as ye have fingers and toes."

"But I will have but two left," says he sadly.

"It seems t' be th' custom," says she.

And with that Pat got the carving knife, and then there were only little Mark and little Cora left of all his twenty fingers and toes.

COULDN'T TEAR HIMSELF AWAY.

Really Excellent Reason for Reportorial Persistency.

Once a reporter went around to a certain residence in New York to get details about the master of the house, who had just died, in order that an obituary notice might appear in the newspaper which he represented. Such details, as a rule, are easy to get, as few people have objections to giving them out for publication. The reporter, therefore, was intensely surprised when the widow of the deceased, with scarcely a word, slammed the door in his face.

She retired into the house. Presently the doorbell rang furiously. She refused to stir. Again the doorbell rang, more furiously than before. Still the lady of the house would not stir.

"I had told him that I don't want to say anything about my husband," she thought to herself, "and he has no right to be so persistent."

So she sat still, while the doorbell rang again and again and again.

At last she could stand it no longer. So, opening a window over the front door, she poked her head out and remarked, severely:

"Young man, I do not desire to say anything to you. Kindly do not disturb me any more. Go away, young man."

"I can't!" roared the reporter, beside himself with exasperation. "You've shut my coat tails in the door!"

VALUE OF THE PRECIOUS STONES

Price Put Upon Them Can Be Nothing But Artificial.

The London Chronicle says that diamonds are getting on the public nerve with the cutting of the great Cullinan. They have split it, and are making two stones of it, and, when all is done, it seems that we must calculate the value in carats. It is a matter of so much a carat. And the Cullinan stone at its biggest will be worth less than four million pounds, while its little brother will be only half as valuable. And this is nothing to the "Pasha," which weighs 1,680 carats. In its present state, and is worth, according to the expert, more than £58,000,000. This is—we may say it bluntly—not true. You cannot eat a diamond, or drink it, or sleep in it, or make any use of it but to win a woman's smile. As a matter of economy, it may be asserted that there is no man on earth who would give £58,000,000 for a diamond. Because there is no man on earth that will buy a thing at the price he cannot use it. Now, is there a man who will buy a diamond for fifty-eight millions on the chance of another man's wanting another woman's smile?—The Argonaut.

A Little Chaw.

One of our abler industrial captains is always crowing the cud, as they say in the country, and for so far he is concerned, in reality. Lots of financiers chew gum, but this one in particular who never tasted chicle or rubber-elastic, as the boys call it, chews a bit of Biltong. "Biltong" is a term for South American bull-beef (the runs) dried in the sun. It is as tough as rawhide, and will make a man who can digest it as strong as a bull kubu. Our industrial captain always carries a small shaving in his vest pocket, and when getting into a hard deal he takes a bite. It is just about as good as a piece of walrus hide, or the sole of an old shoe, but "it makes spit," and saliva is the soul of good digestion.

Wrecking the Typewriter.

"We sold one of our machines to Mrs. Nan Rensaleer for her boy," said the typewriter agent when he had fixed the machine so it would write: 'The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog,' all right. 'He was ten years old. It was Christmas time. She bought it for one of his Christmas presents. Then she came always to our office for days after Christmas she 'phoned me to come up and see about the machine. I wish you could have seen it. The boy had taken it all to pieces. He hadn't left two little pieces of it together any more. He had it in a soap box. It was the worst wreck of a machine you ever saw. It took me two days to put it together again. I have great hopes for that boy."

Machine-Cured Sleeplessness.

A unique machine has just been put on the market which claims to cure sleeplessness. The machine resembles an electric fan, save that the wings of the fan being studded with small round mirrors. It is based on the principle that most insomniacs can sleep at the window of an express train. The sight of the landscape rushing by them invariably brings on a refreshing nap. The machine with its whirl and glitter of revolving mirrors acts on the eye and brain in the same soothing manner and sends the patient off into a deep slumber.

On Being Mean.

The question arises, can one be economical without being mean? A man who is naturally mean will always be economical. If a man who is not economical attempts to become so he will learn that the easiest way is first to learn to be mean. If he has a generous impulse he must curb it. Then the first part of our lives we should be as mean as we can. When we have accumulated more than we need we should devote the last part to cultivating our generous impulses. No successful man is a philanthropist before he is 60.—Life.

POEMS WORTH PERUSING.

Age.

To watch the returning spring and summer;
If, missing those who greatly love such days,
The spring could ever be so gay and green
As when they walked the lilac-budded ways.

To sigh o'er winters, strangely bleak and cold,
And see, in smoldering fires that char
The fancy love to-day a colder thing
Than this great love you cherish to the last.

To keep the friends grown faithfully old as young,
Refusing, when new hands knock at your door,
To open; and it opening, withhold
The gift of which you once gave all and more.

To dream in solitude with pipes and books
Born old and sweet and good; to ask
They do not sing; to find your happiness
A homely grace that in your soul belongs.

To seek again some calm, forgiving God
You scoffed at lightly in your other youth;
Content to leave the mysteries of life
To mysteries of death—and wait the truth.

—Emery Pottle, in Craftsman.

A Sprig of Heather.

Lest you forget, I send a sprig of heather,
Reminding you of happy days together;
Though parted now, and severed we may be,
Look at each little flower and think of me.

The happy thoughts of days, that now are o'er,
The words of passion, that you did outpour;
Thou love of loves, with happy souls united,
Think but of me, and my love is requited.

Oh, joy of joys, when we two are standing,
Hand clasped in hand, no more to part in twain.
Hearts beat together now in unison keeping,
No more great shadows sent to rent

So, love, when sorrow comes, just at your door,
Think just the loving thoughts you did of yore;
Waste not one moment more in vain regret,
Think of the future, love, that is yours yet.

From a "Madrigal."

Love at a touch will falter,
Love at a nod may go,
But scorn can not alter
One hair-breadth of his way.

He trembles at a rose-leaf,
And rushes on a spear.
A thorn-prick and he shows grief,
But death he can not fear.

He follows shadow faces
Into the graveyards and wares,
He reaps in sterile places,
And brings home sheaves of tares.

One tear will heal his anger;
He will wait and watch all day;
He stands and stares at danger,
His last crust gives away.

He will strip off his raiment
To make his dear one gay,
And will laugh at any payment,
Having given all away.

When care his heart engages,
And the sorrow of others gray,
He will claim a kiss for wages,
And demand a smile for pay.

A Last Word.

Let us go hence; the night is now at hand;
The day is overworn, the birds all flown;
And we have reaped the crops the gods have sown;
Despair and death; deep darkness o'er the land,
Broods like an owl; we can not understand
Laughter or tears, for we have only known
Surpassing vanity: vain things alone
Have driven our perverse and aimless band.
Let us go hence, somewhither strange and cold,
To Hollow Lands, where just men and unjust
Find end of labor, where's rest for the old,
Freedom to all from love and fear and lust.
Twine our torn hands, O pray the earth enfold
Our life-sick hearts and turn them into dust.

SECRETARY PARKER RETURNS.

Spent Time of Vacation at Silver Bay—First Conference of Christian Laymen.

Herbert E. Parker, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., returned from Silver Bay yesterday, where he has been attending the conferences for Christian laymen besides taking a two weeks' course at the Secretarial Institution. Mr. Parker has returned brim full of enthusiasm for the coming winter's work and says that many fine talks are in store for the young men during the next few months.

He attended the first conference of the Christian laymen ever held at the lake, where the great Christian movements of the day were thoroughly discussed. Among the speakers heard at that conference were Hubert Carleton, secretary of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew; Judge Selden Spencer, of St. Louis, Mo.; C. F. Nesbit, of Washington, D. C.; J. Campbell White, general secretary of the laymen's missionary movement; Marion Lawrance, general secretary of the International Sunday School Association, and Governor Charles E. Hughes, of New York.

Governor Hughes gave the conference a splendid talk on the "Centuries' Opportunities," in which he made a strong appeal for unselfish living among men of whatever occupation, bringing out the point that by unselfishness the world may be made better for all those who live according to the live and let live plan. At the conclusion of his address Governor Hughes was given a song from each of the seven institutes represented at the conference. The Governor in reply to the greeting from the men said that they were exhibiting an enthusiasm which would undoubtedly bring success to every one of their plans by the betterment of camp and their social conditions and thanked each one of the men for the hearty hand shake given to the accompaniment of the song sung in his honor by the assembled delegates.

MISS KAHRMANN BRIDE OF WILLIAM TAYLOR

Miss Theresa Kahrmann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Kahrmann, of 314 Jackson avenue, became the bride of William Taylor, of East Orange, today as the clock was striking the noon hour. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Morgan Ashley, of St. Stephen's church, Netherwood, who cut short his vacation one day in order to perform the service.

Only the immediate members of the two families witnessed the ceremony and accompanied the bridal party to the home of the bride's parents where a reception was held, followed by a collation. After a honeymoon the couple will reside at 229 Netherwood avenue and will be at home after October 1.

The bridesmaid was Miss Laura Christensen, of Woodlawn avenue, and the best man Percy Hand, of East Orange. The bride was attired in a Princess gown of white silk, entrain with veil, and a wreath of orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid wore a pink silk Suzeraine gown and carried pink roses. Miss Lillian Brinker presided at the organ and played Mendelssohn's wedding march.

The newly married couple left on an afternoon train for northern Pennsylvania, where they will spend the next two weeks with friends of the groom. Mr. Taylor is an accountant in the office of the Singer Manufacturing Company in New York city. Many handsome and useful gifts of cut glass, silver and furniture were received by the bride.

Sues to Recover Price of Coat.

Vincent W. Carroll, a fireman in the local city department, has brought suit against Charles Rogoff, a tailor, through his counsel, J. H. Crane, to recover the value of a fireman's coat, which was destroyed by fire in Mr. Rogoff's shop on West Second street, July 9, 1908. He places the value of his coat at $28. The case will be heard in the District court tomorrow morning.

The announcement will doubtless result in many candidates being mentioned for the office. Among those already talked of are James K. Arnold, a former member of the Borough Council; Newton B. Smalley, who was Mayor for several terms, and L. B. Woolston, who is now a member of the Council. It is said that the Republicans will name a strict party man and will not join with the Democrats in supporting an independent candidate. W. J. Conroy has been mentioned as a possible candidate on the Democratic ticket.

COMMITTEE FAVORS PUBLIC PARK PLAN

The Councilmanic Public Affairs' committee met last night and informally discussed the question of establishing a city park and playgrounds. Nothing definite was done and the matter practically stands as it did early in the summer. It is believed that a majority of the members of the Common Council favor a park and playgrounds, but there are certain features about it that must be overcome before a unanimous vote can be secured.

One of the provisions in the present proposition calls for North road to be opened from the city into the borough, in the West End. The greater part of this thoroughfare would be in the borough, and some of the city fathers do not favor the idea of the city paying for the work of opening this street, even though the borough would pay its proportionate share for maintenance afterwards. Albert street would be opened by the city and this bridge built. Only one member of the public affairs' committee is opposed to the plan.

In conversation with an official of the borough, a reporter for The Daily Press learned that the Borough Council is growing rather indifferent to the proposition. The official intimated that there is plenty of land within the borough limits suitable for park purposes and it is not without reason to believe that this may be used, if the present proposition fails through.

There was no discussion of the joint sewer subject last night.

To Wed This Evening.

Miss Anna Coriell Randall, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth M. Randall, will become the bride of William Young Bellerjeau, of Trenton, this evening at 7 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Randall, 241 Somerset street, North Plainfield. The ceremony will be performed by Rev. Albert J. Nelley, pastor of the Third Presbyterian church, of Trenton.

BODINE FAMILY REUNION

Plainfielders to Attend Gathering Near Easton Early This Month.

A TWO DAY CELEBRATION.

Reception Planned on Wednesday, September 8—Organization to Be Held on Thursday, September 9.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. C. Bodine, T. C. Bodine, L. B. Bodine, David Bodine, John M. Bodine and William Bodine, of this city and the borough, will attend a reunion of the Bodine family to be held at Island Park, near Easton, Pa., on Wednesday and Thursday, September 8 and 9. Mainly through the efforts of the Rev. John V. Bodine, of Tallman, N. Y., who has spent several months in investigating the records and looking up the surviving members and representatives of the family, a general desire for a reunion has been brought about.

More than five hundred persons claiming descent from the common Bodine ancestry or connected with it by marriage, have been found in the States of Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey in addition to those scattered throughout the Western States.

The Rev. John V. Bodine has been assisted in the work by the following committee: Henry P. Bodine, Flemington; Isaac P. Bodine, Lodi, Seneca, N. Y.; John A. Bodine, M. D., 151 West 72d street, New York city; Professor John R. Bodine, Catawissa, Pa.; B. Frank Bodine, Doylestown, Pa.; Miss Caroline W. Bodine, Stockton; Miss Mattie C. Bodine, Belvidere.

The first day of the meeting will be given up to a reception and maxing acquaintances and on the second day they will organize, elect officers and the history of the family will be read.

OLIVER IS CONVINCED TIME WAITS FOR NO MAN

Because his fellow workmen wanted to keep close watch of the flight of time as they hammered and sawed, Oliver Hulmer, a carpenter whose home is at 314 East Second street, hung his watch, which he values at $22, on a nail at the new house he is employed on at Dixie lane. Noting subsequently that it was time to quit, Hulmer went home, but forgot to take the watch with him.

After he got to his house, he remembered that he had left the timepiece, and he went back for it. But it wasn't there.

At police headquarters shortly afterwards, the carpenter told the story of his loss, and furnished the police with a description of the watch. Unless somebody brought an alarm clock to work this afternoon, the carpenters may work overtime tonight.

"TOBY'S" CONTRIBUTION TO THE POLICE BLOTTER

Fired on twice by Patrolman Nolan as he ran from the policeman on West End avenue late last night, an unknown man escaped into North Plainfield. The patrolman can give no description of the man, but says he was rather short.

Nolan spied the man loitering in the vicinity of West Front street and West End avenue at about 10:45 o'clock. As he approached him, the man turned up West End avenue toward the borough. The policeman shouted to him to stop, but he broke into a run. Still pursuing him, Nolan drew his revolver and fired twice. Apparently neither shot took effect, for the man only ran faster and escaped across the county line into the darkness.

PRINCIPAL B. J. PHELPS WEDS IN CONNECTICUT.

Miss Clarissa Halliday, daughter of William Halliday, of West Suffield, Connecticut, became the wife of Principal Benjamin J. Phelps, of the North Plainfield High School at her home today. Following the ceremony, which concluded with a wedding collation, the couple left for a honeymoon sojourn at Nova Scotia.

Mr. Phelps will bring his bride to this city in about two weeks, when the borough schools open for the fall term, and the couple will reside in North Plainfield.

TRUCKMAN HELD FOR "MOVING DAY" ROBBERY

In the shuffle and confusion of moving from his apartments in the rear of the Woodhull & Martin Company's building on East Front street last Thursday, John Mackey was a victim of robbery. Today he swore out a warrant against Napoleon Wyatt, colored, of South Second street, who was one of the "moving men." Wyatt has been arrested by Detective Sergeant Flynn, and the case will be brought before Judge Runyon for a hearing tomorrow morning.

Mr. Mackey's daughter, Mrs. Wilson, of Brooklyn, is said to have been victimized by Wyatt to the amount of $18, when her pocketbook was taken during the moving. An axe and a big can of tobacco were also taken from the old home and not deliver at the new.

Wyatt was arraigned today before Judge Runyon and at his own request was given a hearing. Mackey told the court of the reasons for his suspicions of the man, but his story was largely on hearsay, and Judge Runyon stopped the hearing and postponed it until tomorrow, when Mr. Mackay says he will have his wife and daughter in court.

PROPOSED BUILDING CODE DRAFT IS PREPARED

Lengthy consideration was given the proposed new building ordinance at a meeting of the Councilmanic buildings committee at Mayor Fisk's office last night. Chairman Duncan W. Taylor presented a rough draft of the suggested ordinance. The voluminous document was carefully gone over but no material changes were made in the wording or intent of the proposed law.

It is hardly likely that the matter will be brought up at the Common Council meeting on Monday night inasmuch as the committee desires to go over its recommendations carefully again. H. W. Barlow, of New York, an expert on building codes, who was engaged by the Common Council for a fee of $500, to draft the proposed ordinance, was present last night and answered many questions put to him by the committeemen.

Miss Nellie Higgins and T. J. Ferrell, both of this city, will be married at St. Mary's church at 5 o'clock this afternoon, by Father B. M. Bogan. The prospective bride and groom, accompanied by a few relatives and friends, received early communion at the church this morning.

SUNDAY GOLF IS SAME AS DISORDERLY HOUSE

The opinion expressed by Craig A. Marsh during the recent debate at the Casino on the Sunday golf question, that the habitual playing of golf on Sunday on the Country Club grounds would constitute the keeping of a disorderly house, seems to be abundantly sustained by a decision of the highest court in the State, mentioned in the August number of the New Jersey Law Journal. In that case the manager of the Loan Company of Trenton was indicted for keeping a disorderly house because the Loan Company habitually took "usurious interest on its loans." The manager was convicted, and was fined $1,000 by Judge Reilstab, now U. S. District Court Judge. The case was appealed to the Supreme Court, and then to the Court of Errors and Appeals. To quote from the extract in the Law Journal:

"In both of these courts it was argued that the habitual taking of usurious interests for loans could not make a place a disorderly house, but the Court of Errors held, following the views of both lower courts, that 'it must be accepted that any place in which illegal practices are habitually carried on is a disorderly house.'"

MRS. LILLIAN S. RUNK PASSED AWAY TODAY

Mrs. Lillian S. Runk, widow of Charles Runk, died this morning at her home, 110 East Fifth street, following an illness from pleuro-pneumonia and Bright's disease, with which she had been a sufferer for sometime. She is survived by a daughter, Miss Ethel Runk, and a brother, Theodore Randolph, who was a former resident of this city.

Mrs. Runk was the second daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Daniel F. Randolph, who lived for a great many years at West Seventh and Liberty streets. A rather unusual thing recalled by her death is that her mother and sister both died of pleuro-pneumonia and at that time Mrs. Runk was critically ill with the same disease and it was not thought possible that she could recover. She did, however, but her mother and sister died within a short time of each other.

Mrs. Runk, as well as her parents and sister, was a faithful member of the First Baptist church. For many years her father was an honored deacon. He was one of the pioneer shoe merchants, his store being on West Front street, where George Finger is now located. He and his wife were among the oldest residents of the city and the family had a large circle of acquaintances and friends.

TO PENSION THE POLICE

By Resolution, Common Council Will Submit Scheme to the Voters.

HALF PAY IN OLD AGE.

Disabled Men Will Also Be Benefitted—Up to the People in November.

To provide in their old age or during illness for those who spend their best years in the service of the people, the Councilmanic police committee is planning to have brought before the voters for their approval, the police pension law. An act passed by the Legislature in 1906 permits cities and towns to pension police officers and policemen and provides how such a benefit shall be conducted.

Chairman Frank W. Randolph and the other members of the police committee are favorably impressed with the idea and it is expected that they will bring the matter to the attention of the Common Council with a favorable recommendation. It is not improbable that the scheme will be discussed by the city fathers on Monday night inasmuch as it is planned, if possible, to take advantage of the referendum in November.

The Act in question gives authority to a city or town to pension members of the police force after twenty years honorable service when they reach the age of sixty years as well as those who have served twenty-five years as soon as they reach the age of fifty-five years. It also allows pensions to policeman disabled by injury or disease contracted during service. This applies to both temporary and permanent disability. The amount of pension allowed will be equal to half pay of the candidate for pension.

Authority is given by the Act for the Councilmanic finance committee to borrow a sum sufficient for the purpose during the remainder of the fiscal year during which the law is adopted, but if Plainfield approves of the statute for local purposes it would not be necessary probably to take advantage of this provision for it would go into effect on January 1. From the time the Act takes effect the city deducts one per cent of the salary of each member of the police force at each payment. To provide revenues, in addition to this, in every annual tax levy a sum equal to at least four per cent of the salaries in aggregate paid to the police force is laid aside as a fund out of which such pensions are paid.

The money received from the city taxes in this way, the law provides, must be invested in city interest-paying bonds to be kept for the purposes of the fund. The police committee is empowered to take charge of this matter and also to arrange for proper regulations. Provision is made for the Common Council to have the adoption or rejection of this law decided upon by the people at a general election. This is done by resolution of the city fathers.

When asked today about the matter, Chairman Randolph would say nothing definite beyond the fact that he favors the adoption of the law's provisions and would work hard for it. He said he thought the majority of the councilmen felt the way he does about the matter.

SOUTH END GARDENS RAVAGED BY BOYS.

With vegetable gardens and fruit trees in their prime, commuter farmers are having all sorts of trouble with garden thieves, who shake their fruit trees by night, and passing through the vegetable patch, pick and carry away the beans, corn, tomatoes and other "sass." Complaints about such nightly depradations come to the police frequently, and in a majority of the cases, small boys seem to be the offenders.

A property owner at West Eighth street and Clinton avenue, who raises vegetables, complained yesterday that he had undertaken that Italians and small boys living in the vicinity have been visiting the gardes patch and getting food supplies. The house is outside the city limits, so the police can do nothing.

Frank James McGrail, of Central avenue, telephoned a similar complaint to the police yesterday and a policeman will keep his eye on the vegetables. Other South End commuters have suffered similar depradations and have complained to the police before this.

ACCUSED BY GALLAGHER

Marshal Sliney, of Dunellen, "Intoxicated While on Duty" Lost Revolver and "Billy."

"WAS CARRIED ON TRUCK."

Mayor Swackhamer and Common Council Told of Officer's Conduct in Formal Complaint.

What is said to have been a matter of common comment for some time came to a head last night when Michael A. Gallagher filed charges of conduct unbecoming an officer against Marshal William Sliney, of Dunellen. The charges of drunkenness and other offences, which are printed below, are self-explanatory and coincide with reports of recent occurrences in that borough.

It is alleged that the recent arrest and imprisonment of a young man who found the marshal's revolver and "billy" in an out-house was the result of a condition bordering on inebriety of Marshal Sliney.

In an interview this morning, Mr. Gallagher said that by advice of counsel he took a witness when he served the complaint with Mayor Swackhamer and when he called upon Firman H. Joyce to accompany him the latter consented. After Mr. Gallagher had served the papers, Councilman Joyce informed the Mayor that if those charges were true Sliney was no fit man for the position of marshal.

Furthermore, Mr. Joyce informed Mayor Swackhamer in the presence of Mr. Gallagher that a citizen and taxpayer of Dunellen, whose name he withheld, came personally to him and informed him if anyone wanted to know anything about Sliney all that was necessary for him to do was to go to the Lincoln Hotel and observe Sliney's conduct there.

Dunellen, N. J., Aug. 25, 1909.

To the Honorable Mayor and Common Council of Dunellen, N. J.

Gentlemen—As a citizen and taxpayer of this borough, I demand to prefer charges against Marshal William Sliney, upon the charges of conduct unbecoming an officer. The said charges consist of being drunk and disorderly, both in and off duty. The proof of charges I will furnish you upon application. A further charge I can and do make is that he has made it his business to personally interview a number of the residents of your borough, and making remarks detrimental to my good name and business. At the time of his appointment a citizen and a taxpayer protested against his appointment and gave his reasons which I deem good and sufficient grounds at that time why he should not have been appointed marshal. I will call your attention to one charge in particular, to one that was common talk at the time, I refer you to the corners of Chestnut street and North avenue that Marshal Sliney was in such a state of intoxication that he fell down three times after being helped up several times by a man whose name is in his company and named Conkling, and that man was assisted by a man named John Keene, who was coming home from work. When a lady living in the neighborhood went out in the street and informed James Benson that Sliney had more than he wanted and for him to go to him, and James Benson, who was driving Councilman Huff's truck went to where Marshal Sliney lay on the ground, Benson, Conkling and Keene loaded him on Councilman George Huff's truck, and he was driven to Dewey Park woods, where he was unloaded from the truck. This was about 5 o'clock in the afternoon as the factory whistle had just blown, fog quitting time. Every effort was made not to let the factory hands see him. He, Marshal Sliney, was loaded on the truck while women of the neighborhood were looking on. Now, Marshal Sliney was left in the woods in the shade of a tree until about 7 o'clock, when the party returned to Dewey Park to take him home to the borough to do police duty, which he was paid for by the taxpayers of the borough. In the condition at that hour was such that the party returned to the borough without him, and returned sometime later during the night when he was brought to the borough on a trolley car. Now the borough had no police protection for which the taxpayers are paying, that for which you wished to raise Marshal Sliney's salary to sixty-five dollars a month.

Trusting in the interests of the taxpayers of the borough that you will investigate these charges immediately.

Respectfully,

MICHAEL A. GALLAGHER.

"I don't know of any such alarm clocks as that, ma'am," said the man. "We keep just the ordinary kind—the kind that will wake the whole family without disturbing the girl."—Chicago Record-Herald.

GERMAN SYNOD MEETS AT NEW BRUNSWICK

The beautiful edifice of the German Reformed church at New Brunswick will be the scene next month, from September 8 to the 14, of the annual session of the Eastern Synod of the German Reformed church in America, and Rev. M. H. Qual, the pastor, and his congregation are busily working on the reception of the ministers.

The Eastern division includes all the German Reformed churches in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York State and New England States, and some eighty odd clergymen will attend the sessions.

It will be one of the most notable gatherings in New Brunswick in some time, and Rev. Mr. Qual is to be congratulated upon securing the session for that city.

Sessions will be held morning, afternoon and night during the conference. The ministers will arrive there on Friday and will be directed to the home of members of the church and others who have kindly consented to take them. The first session will be held on Friday afternoon in the church and officers will be elected and business transacted.

The Ladies' Aid Society is busy planning entertainments for the clergy and they will also provide dinner and supper, to be served in the basement of the church, during their stay.

On Sunday, September 10, holy communion services will be held, at which several of the ministers will take part.

The ladies will also give the ministers an outing, the nature of which has not yet been made known.

On Saturday evening an alumni banquet will be served and speeches made.

LIVERYMEN WARNED TO WATCH FOR GLANDERS

Assistant Health Officer John O'Brien, Jr., visited all the local livery stables today and urged that the proprietors of the various "horse hotels" examine each and every "transient" horse for symptoms of glanders, the disease which is dangerously epidemic in Newark and this section of the State. This warning to the liverymen is a precautionary move on the part of the local health board in the campaign against the disease here, and is in conjunction with the action of shutting off the local drinking troughs temporarily.

"Glanders is the most dangerous of the diseases of the horse," said Mr. O'Brien this morning. "It is fatal unless treated promptly in the incipient stage, and it spreads with alarming rapidity. Should a few cases of it develop in this city, the horse owners will be subject to loss, and a disastrous plague might result.

"The disease is transmitted by the saliva of the affected horse, and for this reason special care must be taken when an animal is given a drink. Germ laden saliva floating on a water trough is practically certain to infect every horse that drinks there. And with water pails it is the same way. It is perfectly safe to protect his animal, each horse owner should carry his own water pail and should take care that it is washed out in nothing but the purest water.

"Danger lurks on the corner post and tree, upon which a affected horse licking the surface of a post or tree leaves the germ of the disease for the infection of the next horse. The board fully appreciates the danger, and is taking every precaution to prevent it. I have described the symptoms of glanders to the liverymen, and any horse which seems to be affected will be reported at once and examined by a veterinarian."

BERKELEY HEIGHTS TICKET.

The Berkeley Lyceum at Berkeley Heights was crowded Thursday evening on the occasion of a special meeting of the Township Improvement Society to consider names to be voted on at the coming election.

A petition was prepared containing seventy signatures out of the eighty-two Republican voters, which is a very strong nomination for members of the Union Republican Committee.

A complete ticket was arranged, with the exception of three offices, which will be taken up later. The proposed candidates for the other officers on the Republican ticket are as follows: Collector of taxes, Augustus M. Layat; township committee, Frank C. County Board Makes Appointments for Constitutional Election.

SOLVE A LOCAL MUDDLE.

City Clerk Must Furnish Books for Newly Created District Here.

The Union County Board of Registration and Elections at a meeting at the Court House, Elizabeth, yesterday afternoon announced the complete list of district election officers for the special constitutional election to be held on Tuesday, September 14. A number of vacancies were filled on the district boards and arrangements were made to enable the local boards to make their registry. For this purpose, the county board will lend its registry books of the last general election to the district boards and will have the use of the county clerk's books for this election.

Related formal notification on the party of the city clerk of Plainfield to the county clerk of a change in the election districts in the Second ward since the last election, has left the new third district without any new registry books. Before the county clerk had received notice, the Secretary of State had supplied to him all the material for the election boards. As a result the County Board has informed the local city clerk to provide the needed books for that district.

These are the newly appointed local election officers:

Leek, D., Daniel Dugan, D.; third district, Robert Guttridge, R., Charles W. Hall, R., James J. Scott, D., Charles Case, D.

Third ward—First district: John Neagle, R., Theodore LaRue, R., James J. McCarthy, D., Joseph Sheppard, D.; Second district, John H. Cose, R., Frank Whittley, R., John Moran, D., William Connolly, D.

Burke, D., Clarence H. Walsh, D.; third district, Garret T. Dunham, R., Edwin E. Brown, R., A. D. Newman, D., J. C. McCarthy, D.

William Lidgate, R., John Farley, R., Edwin H. Carter, D., H. H. Knight, D.

Fanwood township:

The Board will hold a meeting on Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 1, and will sit all day on Sept. 11 and 14 to enroll voters whose names have been omitted by the local boards.

LILIES IN GENERAL.

While we find lily ponds in almost every park or public garden of any kind, it is a matter of comment that they seldom are found in private grounds. This is strange, too, when it is considered that they are much less trouble to start and maintain than the ordinary dry land flower bed. It is equally true that there are few more pleasing decorations to any estate.

Aquatic plants for the home garden are for grown as much as they should be. Amateurs who hesitate for fear of failure are wrong, for water lilies require far less care than tender bedding plants and are less expensive.

Any swampy or boggy ground can easily be converted into an aquatic garden. Flowering shrubs, trees and ferns will grow luxuriously near a pond. When you decide upon the location of your pond, which should be at the lowest point of the garden, dig out the soil from eighteen inches to three feet deep, depending on the severity of the winters in your locality. The lilies must be planted deep enough to prevent them frosting.

An inexpensive way to make your pond hold water is to line it with common clay. Cover the bottom and sides of the pond with this clay three or four inches thick and beat firmly until solid and even.

The best method is to plant your water lilies in boxes or tubs. Use very rich soil, as coarse as possible. Rough pieces of sod and lumps of earth should be mixed in. Boxes holding five or six cubic feet will accommodate strong growing plants and others holding half that much will be large enough for the weaker growing plants.

If the pond is large, the soil may be placed on the bottom and the plants set in it, but in smaller ponds under this method the roots or the stronger plants will quickly cover the bottom, crowding out the weaker.

Adventure of a Sunfish

Jonah's Experience with the Whale Duplicated

"The aggravating independence of the black bass in Sand pond up our way," said Hon. Thomas James Ham, editor of the Citizen at H——, "is exceeded only by the cool impudence of the pickerel in those waters, unless it may be by the tenacity of life of this sunfish. Judging from a little Jonah and the whale sort of play by one of those pickerel and a Sand pond sunfish that I witnessed, I don't know but what the sunfish is entitled to ranking place.

"In company with a friend, I had gone to Sand pond with the intention of coming home with a few of those aggravatingly independent black bass. We depended on catching our live bait from the schools of minnows in the outlet of the pond.

"Fishing with tiny minnow hooks tied to black linen thread for lines, we had nearly filled our pail with bait when my companion hooked a sunfish. As he was drawing it slowly in a large pickerel darted out from somewhere among the thick weeds at the margin of the outlet and made a vicious strike at the sunfish just as it was pulled out.

"The agility of the big fish's tail as it turned after its unsuccessful strike threw the water almost into the boat. The sunfish was quickly dropped back into the pond, we both being curious to see if the pickerel would have the audacity to make another rush for it.

"The little fish had gone scarcely two feet from the boat, with the hook in its upper jaw, when the pickerel promptly showed that it had all its impudence with it. It shot from its lair among the tiny pads, where it had disappeared, and seized the sunfish.

"The momentum of this second dash carried the pickerel ahead with the sunfish in its jaw three or four feet. There it stopped in plain sight of us and deliberately made its preparations for gorging its prey, giving us purposely, I verily believe, an exhibition of its prowess as well as of its utter disregard for our presence.

"The pickerel had seized the sunfish tail first, but by a series of quick, jerky movements of its big jaws it turned the sunfish until its head was where its tail had been. Then the pickerel gave a gulp or two, and the sunfish disappeared somewhere in the depths of the big and impudent fish.

"The sunfish seemed to be about three inches long, and following its prey the pickerel remained motionless a few seconds, as if gloating over its captive and illustrating its contempt for our presence. Then it turned and started for deep water.

"The hook caught in the sunfish, and the sunfish was a foot or so down in the pickerel's interior, and we could see no way in which the pickerel could reach the point it had started for unless it gave back the hook and the fish, took them and the boat along with it, or gave itself up to the fisherman. The first we believed quite impossible. The second we had our doubts about. The third we hoped for.

"When the line drew taut the pickerel seemed to be for the first time aware that it had got itself into a situation that might make trouble for it, and for a time it seemed that the big and now disturbed fish had some intention of taking the boat and us along with it after all. The linen line was small, but very stout, but as wire snells are not regarded as any too dependable tackle for bass next to a pickerel when he takes the hook, the prospects for the line holding out against that big fellow until he was captured were by no means assuring.

"My friend and I understood pretty well the handling of light tackle, and if the pickerel had persisted in retaining the sunfish and in his efforts to kidnap the boat and us he certainly would have been given more than two or three minutes the big, strong fish was so handled that the slight minnow line defied his attempts to snap it in two, and he was hauled from the water and almost landed.

"At that critical moment in the pickerel's fight he must have, concluded that it was better for him to give up his breakfast rather than lose forever the opportunity for getting another, for he sets his internal arrangements to work disgorging the sunfish, dropped back into the water, and went his way.

"The sunfish, still fast on the hook, had run the gauntlet of the pickerel's spiked jaws and had been a good while in its stomach. Such an experience, it would seem, should have been enough to satisfy the ambition of any ordinary fish. So we thought at any rate when we released it from the hook and tossed into the water, as we supposed, dead.

"Well, this fish wasn't an ordinary fish. It was a Sand pond fish, and wasn't so easily satisfied as all that. It lay on the water stiff and motionless and we scared for a few seconds, and then began to shiver and wriggle about. Presently it dived beneath the surface, swimming strong, but like a cripple. It was quickly surrounded by scores of full grown sunfish, which escorted the wounded little fellow tenderly away until they were hidden among the rushes.

"We got quite a few of those aggravatingly independent black bass, before we left the pond."

WELCOME FATHER BOGAN

St. Mary's Sodality Gives Reception in Returning Priest's Honor.

TALKS OF HIS ENJOYABLE TRIP.

Following an Informal Program, A Dance is Enjoyed by the Young Women.

The Sodality of St. Mary's church, composed of young women of the parish, gave a delightful reception to Father B. M. Bogan, the pastor, in the commercial hall of the church, last night, it being in the nature of a welcome to the popular priest upon his return home from a three months' trip abroad.

The hall was attractively decorated with flowers and Chinese lanterns and a feature was the absence of formality. During the evening there was a program of instrumental music, including a piano and violin duet by Miss Elizabeth Brown and Miss Mary Murray; violin solos by Miss Alice Quinn, accompanied by Miss Mary Smith, and piano selections by Miss Smith. Miss Meaney delivered an interesting address of welcome to Father Bogan, and the latter's response was full of wit. He briefly described his trip abroad, telling something of each country visited and relating a few of the many interesting incidents experienced by him.

After the informal program, dancing was enjoyed until a late hour. The committee in charge of the reception comprised Miss Mary Smith, Miss Meaney, Miss Elizabeth Brown and Miss Mary Murray.

STATE CERTIFICATES MUST BE HONORED

Every school teacher in New Jersey is affected by the decision of State Superintendent of Public Instruction Charles O. Baxter, that a State certificate is a valid license to teach in any district in this commonwealth, which, being interpreted, means that the local board must recognize a diploma from the State Normal School by examining the holder, unless the certificate does not cover some specific requisite of the place to which appointment is being sought.

Mr. Baxter, in a letter to City Superintendent Addison B. Poland, of Newark, says:

"Complaint has been made to this office by the holder of a State certificate that she is refused an appointment in Newark unless she takes an examination in theory and practice of teaching, drawing and music. A State certificate is a valid license to teach in any district in the State, but section 31 of the school law authorizes a city school district to require 'other and further examinations' to teach than shall have been prescribed by the rules and regulations of the State Board of Education.'

"It is quite probable that the third grade State certificates held by the teacher does not cover music, but it certainly does cover theory and practice of teaching and drawing. It does not seem, therefore that these subjects are included in the 'other and further qualifications' as prescribed in the section above quoted.

"It is not the desire of this department to in any way hamper your board in testing the qualifications of the teachers it proposes to employ, but the language of the act is so clear that I feel compelled to render a decision, as I am in this case, I would seem to be necessary to decide that the city board has no authority to require a re-examination in the subjects covered by the State certificate held. Before giving the decision, however, I should be very glad to hear from you in relation to the matter."

HELD WITHOUT BAIL ON DAUGHTER'S CHARGE.

After hearing a story of several attempted assaults from her sixteen-year-old daughter Julia, Mrs. Charles Crocia, of 423 Elmer street, Trenton, Wednesday caused the arrest of her husband, after which he was arraigned before Squire Lee Elsner, who committed him to the county jail, without bail, to await the action of the next grand jury. Crocia pleaded not guilty.

The meeting of the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A., which was to have been held Thursday, September 2, has been postponed one week, to September 9, owing to the absence out of town of several of the members.

Watchung Avenues Won.

Scoring five runs in the ninth, the Watchung Avenue baseball club trimmed the North avenue A. C., nine in a fast game at Crescent Oval this morning, when the final score was 10-9. The winners used John Johnson and William Murphy in the box, and Fred Meisener at the receiving end, and made the final stick session a regular swatfest. Richard Biddle and Harry Blackford were in the points for the North Avenue A. C.

HARVEY FISK & SONS IN AUTO TRACK SCHEME

Harvey Fisk & Sons, who are heavily interested in the Newark Meadows Company, are to have a financial interest in the proposed automobile race track and aviation park to be built on the Hackensack meadows. A syndicate of metropolitan real estate men and automobile racers, among whom is George Robertson, winner of the last Vanderbilt cup race, has obtained from the Newark Meadows Company an option on 460 acres of land on the Hackensack meadows, lying between the Newark Plank road and the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks. The proposed automobile racetrack will be five miles long, and will cost about $1,000,000.

Worthington M. Jacobus, a Newark civil engineer, has prepared plans for the park, and the track itself will be built upon suggestions by Robertson. It will consist of an elliptical two-mile track for speed racing, surrounded by a three-mile course, which with the former, will be used for road racing. On the outer track, directly opposite the grandstand, will be a series of hills and curves, including a "Dip-Up" turn. One of the proposed hills will be 120 feet high, with a 12 to 18 per cent. grade. Those who have seen the plans say that a speed of 100 miles an hour can be attained on the course. The entire track will be within view of the grandstand, and stands will accommodate 100,00 spectators.

HEIRS ORGANIZE TO GET A BIG ESTATE

The Drake heirs met at the residence of Mrs. Joseph Ross, 145 West Front street yesterday afternoon with Mrs. Dunn, who started the movement to recover for the living heirs of Sir Francis Drake, the estate which is held in chancery in London. There were about thirty descendants of Sir Francis present at the meeting several of whom came from Philadelphia and other cities.

Mrs. Dunn read a lengthy manuscript, giving details of the property and the possible amounts to be recovered in case the claims of the American heirs are proven. A permanent organization was formed with David Drake, of North Plainfield, as president. It was suggested that Mrs. Dunn become leading officer of the organization, but Mrs. Dunn declined in favor of Mr. Drake Eugene M. Laing was chairman of the meeting and Samuel S. Swackhamer was chosen secretary.

It is the intention of the heirs who compose the present organization to make formal claim for the part of the immense estate which, they say, belongs to them and its final settlement will require a long course of legal procedure. While many of the heirs are sceptical of the ultimate result there are those who are optimistic of the outcome.

In A MEXICAN JUNGLE.

For four or five miles our road passed through a marsh, and for a mile our horses splashed stirrup deep in water, writes Dillon Wallace in Outing. Then we reached the first rise of the foothills, and a tropical growth, dense and high, closed in upon us and shut out the last breath of air that in the open marsh below had fanned our cheeks and in some degree made tolerable the burning intensity of the noonday sun.

Stately palms and gigantic ferns, with a luxuriant tropical undergrowth, made impenetrable the jungle that lined our road. Marvelous flowering vines of every kind festooned themselves in the forest trees, blooming shrubs with here and there beautiful orchids, and masses of wild honeysuckle, gave a setting of gorgeous color and charged the atmosphere with delicious perfume.

Brilliant plumaged parrots and parakeets screamed overhead, ugly looking lizards scurried out of our path, a gress-green snake coiled around the naked trunk of a tree, high up in air, swayed his head back and forth in defiance, and an unseen animal crashed away into the jungle as we approached. It was very wonderful to me and I experienced a strange sensation of having lived through all this before in some far away time, the last beyond any positive remembrance. It was like a dream that one tries vainly to recall—"a sleep and a forgetting." Perhaps it was only the impression made upon my mind by pictures that I had seen in early childhood.

Neither Randall nor I had been in a saddle for over twenty years, and we hailed with joy the Indian village of Libertad, the first settlement that we had reached, when we rode into it at two o'clock in the afternoon. Before there it was decided that we should rest ourselves and our horses for an hour and eat some luncheon. Naked children ran into the houses when we appeared, not because they were ashamed of their nakedness, for they had never worn clothing any more than the pigs and donkeys that shared the houses with them; but because they were startled at the sudden appearance of so many strange Americanos.

MR. CUNNINGHAM LEAVES

Popular Local Theatrical Man to Join Joe Weber's Forces.

HAS A HOST OF FRIENDS HERE.

"The Man Who Never Kicks"—Treasurer of Plainfield Theatre Since Its Opening.

Samuel W. Cunningham, who has been the treasurer of the Plainfield Theatre for the past four years, leaves Monday to assume the duties of his new position with Joe Weber, as manager of one of Mr. Weber's road companies. He takes with him the best wishes of the host of friends he has made during his stay in this city, who have come to know Mr. Cunningham as "the man who never kicks," and as a man with a constant smile and of quiet demeanor. His uniformly courteous treatment of those with whom he had business deals has become a by-word among his friends and his kindly ways and all around good nature are things he will leave as a pleasant memory among his acquaintances.

Mr. Cunningham entered the theatrical business at the age of sixteen, having been engaged as office boy at the Wall Street theatre in Philadelphia, where he was born. After spending four years on this job he assumed the duties of assistant treasurer and bookkeeper at the old Empire Theatre in Philadelphia, which was afterwards torn down to make room for the new Walton Hotel. From the Empire his where-abouts-fulness was transferred to the Grand Opera House, where he remained until the outbreak of the war with Spain. While with the Grand Opera House he combined the office of treasurer with that of press agent and immediately stepped into the favorable notice of the profession.

After the war was over Mr. Cunningham joined the forces of Henry W. Savage and remained in the employ of that impresario until he accepted the position with Manager Counihan, of the Plainfield Theatre. Mr. Cunningham's new associates will find him to be a man of sterling character and one whom it is possible to admire without flattery.

MR. FROST TO BUILD HOME FOR "COURIER."

George H. Frost, of Watchung avenue, president of the Engineering News Publishing Company, has placed a contract with Frank B. Gilbreth, of 60 Broadway, New York, for the construction of a brick and reinforced concrete building on Park avenue, adjoining the Stirling building, to be used as a publishing house and particularly as a home for the Courier News. The building will be strictly fireproof and modern in every respect. It will be faced with brick and limestone. Frederick A. Waldron, of 37 Wall street, New York, has been retained as architect and industrial engineer in charge of the mechanical layout of the plant.

William C. Douglass Goes to Denver.

William Crawford Douglass, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Douglass, of West Eighth street, has gone to Denver, where he is a student in the Colorado School of Mines. Mr. Douglass was the Yale Cup winner in the Plainfield High School, class of '07, and was the most popular member of the class. He will remain in Denver until next spring.

DEMENTED MAN ACCUSED OF BEING INCENDIARY.

The large barn on the Charles Eldridge farm, two miles from Shiloh, containing three horses, outbuildings, farming implements and harvested crops, was totally destroyed by fire about 11 o'clock Wednesday night.

The farm was occupied by Robert Spence, son-in-law of Mr. Eldridge. The loss is over $3,000. The fire was of incendiary origin and had been set at different parts of the barn. A partially demented colored man who has been loitering in the neighborhood is suspected.

NEW MODERN HOTEL HERE

To Occupy Site of Iroquois at Park Avenue and East Second Street.

NEW YORK PARTIES TO BUILD.

Grill Room, Elevators and Every Up-to-Date Convenience—Finest in the State.

What will probably be an innovation which will please not only Plainfield people but those hundreds of visitors who annually come here to attend the horse and dog shows and who are numerous, too, during the social season and at other times, will be the new hotel which will some day not very far hence be erected on the present site of the Iroquois.

From reliable sources The Daily Press received information this morning that a modern hotel of fire proof structure will replace the Iroquois now occupying the corner of Park avenue and Second street. This hostelry has been known under the name of the Roselle Hotel, Park avenue Hotel, City Hotel and others and was bought from Charles H. Maltbie by John Albert Staats five years ago.

When the present lease expires New York parties who have long desired to find a suitable site for a modern hotel building in this city will build one, and the expiring lease of the Iroquois presents an exceptional opportunity and an ideal location. The three story brick structure which now adorns the corner will be razed to the ground and a modern one will replace it.

It is proposed to have everything strictly up to date in every department including a grill room, elevators, and the best cuisine that money can procure. From the present plans which are nearly complete it is believed that the new hotel will be the finest in the State, without exception. All the ground now occupied by the Iroquois will be used as well as the 158 feet on East Second street, which will admit of a first-class ten-story structure being erected.

It has been the custom for years for people desiring first class hotel accomodations to take the short trip to New York city, preferring the journey to putting up with mediocre service and accommodations.

The new hotel will have every conceivable convenience that will conduce to the comfort of its patrons. Nothing will be omitted that care and a desire to satisfy will procure. When Mr. Staats was seen this morning he preferred not to say who the prospective builders are, but he would go so far as to say that the hotel is an assured fact and Plainfield will soon see a modern, up to the minute hotel in the most central location in this city.

METEORITE FALLS HERE

Mass of Metal Dug Up After Cooling Off in Eight Feet of Earth.

WEIGHS NEARLY 30 POUNDS.

First Body from Space to Lodge in Plainfield—Now at Somerset School.

A meteorite which fell on the farm of Frank Smith on August 10 was dug up yesterday from a depth of eight feet and was found cool enough to handle. It contains about eight cubic inches of iron, carbon and silicate and weighs 29¾ pounds. It has been placed in the museum of the North Plainfield school. When it fell the molten mass described a wide curve through the air and illuminated the whole neighborhood and narrowly missed striking Mr. Smith's house.

The mass of mineral is uneven and has several protuberances resembling stones with ragged edges, but a file in the hands of an expert revealed the substances to be iron in various degrees of hardness. Carbon and coke are found on the surface of the meteorite and it is a curiosity from the fact that it is the first visitor from the heavens known to have fallen in this vicinity.

It will no doubt, form an interesting topic for the discussion of the pupils of the higher grades in the Somerset school and parts of the heavenly visitor will probably be analyzed to ascertain the exact chemical and mineral formation. Its density of composition is responsible for the great weight of the small mass. The meteorite was given to Mr. MacDonald, janitor of the school.

UNUSUAL NEWSPAPER; G. M. MURRAY EDITOR

George Mosher Murray, a nephew of Roger Murray, of Madison avenue, is combining his pleasure while spending his vacation at the Twitchell Lake Inn, Big Moose, N. Y., with the editing of a most unusual newspaper, thus giving full swing to his ambition to become an editor. The paper is a two-page sheet, printed by hand with pen and ink and represents hours of patient labor. It is called "The Twitchell News," and it is newsy.

Master Murray shows his partiality for the gentler sex by devoting some of the most valuable space on the front page to the exploits of some of the fair ones who are in the colony of vacationists at this popular resort. For instance, the paper states that "not many women are real fishers, but Mrs. Stockdale sticks to it with a will, and has caught several large ones, right in this lake during the past week."

In another part of the sheet he says: "What is a better out door recreation for women? A woman can't walk and camp as some men do, but it is within the reach of all the feminine gender, who can get as far as Twitchell to go out on the lake and fish. A woman doesn't need to be a dreamy eyed summer hotel porcher, complaining of nothing to do; she can affix on 'any old thing,' and go and make the masculine anglers jealous."

Referring to an advertisement in a New York paper which calls attention to their roof garden, with Adirondack environments, Master Murray has this to say: "We could enjoy the show, but is smoke laden atmosphere like the air we are inhaling here?"

Fishing on the Sabbath is evidently not an acceptable pastime for the guests of the hotel, because "we are sorry that a Sunday fisherman has corrupted our little lake." Speaking of the desecration of the Sabbath the editor says: "We have no Sunday school, but we used to have a decent Sunday, which was a little different from the other days of the week. Will this be taken away from us, or shall we start a fight to preserve at least one day in seven from the youthful week days?" We hope not, Mr. Murray.

In the editorial column is found the following information: "The Twitchell News, edited by G. Murray, at Big Moose, every once in a while, subscription books are open to all time of week days." Price given on the first page is one cent.

A social item which will interest Plainfield people, especially those who attended the commencement exercises of the North Plainfield High School in June, reads: "Dr. E. A. Noble, who has a camp at the further end of the lake, has returned to the presidential chair of the Woman's College at Baltimore."

There is no manner of doubt that Editor Murray earns every dollar he gets from the publication of his newsy little paper. It would be impossible for any one person to print it in less than two or three hours, but perhaps the fact that the young man is the editor repays him for the trouble of getting it out. We hope so, anyway. He deserves to own a printing press, a pair of shears and a paste pot.

TO RAISE REGISTRY RATE TO 10 CENTS

Postmaster Elias H. Bird has received a bulletin from the postoffice department at Washington, announcing the raising of the rates for letter registration from 8 to 10 cents. The date for the proposed change has not been set, but it is understood that the plan will meet with general favor from post office officials throughout the country, as the trouble in delivering registered letters safely is very great and the profit small.

The decision of Postmaster General Hitchcock to increase the registry fee followed an extended inquiry into the registry system by a special committee appointed by him. Mr. Hitchcock and the members of the committee had a long conference at Washington. It was decided to call in a score of registry officials of ripe experience and ability from various parts of the country for a more general meeting with the postmaster general next Monday.

It is understood to be Mr. Hitchcock's purpose to take up the registry system first in considering all branches of the postal service for reorganization wherever greater efficiency and less expenditure may be effected. It is thought that the service may be placed on a more business-like basis without working undue hardship or imposing unreasonable burden on the public.

In his talk with a number of the delegates who attended the recent annual convention of the National Association of First Class Postmasters at Toledo, Mr. Hitchcock learned they were almost unanimously of the opinion that an increase in the registry fee from 8 to 10 cents would not be opposed, when it was understood that the government was losing several million dollars through the present system of operation.

By law the postmaster general is authorized to make the registry fee as high as 20 cents. In 1874 it was reduced from 15 to 8 cents, but increased to 10 cents in 1875. It was reduced from 10 to 8 cents in 1892.

The registered service is the most expensive of any rendered by the department, owing to the precaution taken to insure correct delivery and absolute safety in the transmission of registered articles.

MY LADY OF THE ROSES

By Richard King

"Bewitching." Yes, that was the word which best expressed her. "Bewitching. Absolutely bewitching."

Waving masses of nut-brown hair held together Grecian fashion in bands of gold and arranged becomingly with all that apparent carelessness which bespoke a first-rate coiffeur; pretty, piquant, somewhat indefinite, features set in a face whose contour was a perfect oval; the dearest little rosebud mouth, all pouts and infectious laughter.

As it so happened, the table where she and her companion were seated stood in close proximity to our own, though from where I was sitting I had an absolutely uninterrupted view of them both, while Shiela, who was with me, was faced with her back turned towards them—which, after all, was just as it should be, seeing women never can understand these things.

So, you see, I was wise in not telling Shiela anything about the lovely creature sitting opposite me. For one thing, because she would not have understood, and for another thing, the fair stranger and myself had carried on our language-of-the-eye love affair so well that in spite of the distance between us, and a huge bowl of crimson and white roses placed upon her table nearly hiding her from my sight, when she raised her glass of champagne to her lips she looked at me lovingly over the brim and deliberately smiled.

The note I scribbled to my lovely vis-a-vis was the absurdest thing in the world. Yet now, as I look back upon the incident, it strikes me as being wonderfully clever for a man whose friends imagine his whole life to be made up of blunders.

"In the dead of night," I wrote, "the world is full of ghosts—restless beings seeking happiness and repose. Should there be hope for one of these to-night, take from the bowl of roses in front of you a crimson rose; if, however, there is no hope, then take a white one."

I saw the waiter slip the note into her lap, saw her unfold it under shadow of the table, and I saw her read it and double it up, slipping it quickly into the jeweled satchel at her side; and then, all on the tiptoe of excitement, I waited impatiently for her to do what I desired. Yet, for a long time, she did absolutely nothing at all but look about her, and I was in despair lest some wording of my letter should have given offense. Then, suddenly, in a supremely quiet way, as if the most natural thing in the world, she stretched out her hand towards the roses in front of her. She must have known that my eyes were upon her, devouring her every movement; she must have heard, too, the shouting of her lover for the fair stranger to choose, first with a white rose and then with a red one, until I could have almost cried out in the agony of suspense. At last, just as the tension was becoming well-nigh unbearable, she suddenly, from out the crimson depths of the red roses and fastened it carelessly to the front of her corsage over her heart.

Then, indeed, I was happy. Then, indeed, I felt at last that life was worth living, and that in this world was not exactly as happy as heaven, it at least had moments that all the pleasures of paradise could not surpass.

In the middle of my perplexity I saw my lady of the roses and her companion rise from their seats. I observed, too, the covert looks of admiration that she excited among the onlookers by all the graceful suppleness of her superb figure.

Then, as I watched her, I staggered under the sudden blow of the realization that I had fallen desperately in love with the fair stranger, and that in this world I

MT. BETHEL PLEASURE CIRCLE SURPRISE MRS. GILLEM.

The members of the Mt. Bethel Pleasure Circle surprised their fellow member and friend, Mrs. Wilhelmina Gillem, of South Stirling, Thursday evening last, it being the anniversary of her birthday.

Mrs. Gillem was in ignorance of the plan until the guests walked up the path singing to her a birthday greeting. Nearly every one was masked, and a most enjoyable time was spent while Mrs. Gillem guessed who each individual was. Music, phonograph, singing and dancing, and a general round of fun made the evening thoroughly enjoyable. Refreshments were served about 11 o'clock—one of the features of evening was the presentation of a birthday cake with sixty lighted candles.

Mrs. Adam Sachs, as a sailor girl, and Mrs. Glogger as a little girl, were very good, as were also Mrs. Duderstadt as grandma and Robert Angster as grandpa. Guy D. Peck and Andrew Haye as Chinamen, Mrs. Matter and Mrs. Andrew Haye, Japanese, Miss Papen Red Cross nurse, Mrs. Angster, fashionable dressmaker and milliner, Miss Angster, Sis Hopkins, Mrs. Jacob Reinmann, Mrs. Steffen and Jacob Reinmann as colored folks were very good, as were Mrs. Stockdorfer as Mary, Mrs. Guy Peck as a baby and Mr. Duderstadt as a farmer. There were also several milk-maids, and a number of friends were unmasked.

HAMMERSTEIN PRESENTS MEYERBEER'S "PROPHET."

Mr. Hammerstein's first effort at educational opera brought together a great crowd of music lovers to the Manhattan Opera House in New York last night. Meyerbeer's "Prophet" was the medium by means advanced for the benefit of the people. From all accounts this opera, which nearly all the impressarios have sidetracked because of fear of results, had as fine a representation as was ever given in the big city. The critics give credit to Mr. Hammerstein for the inaugural success of his scheme to educate the taste for classic music among people who cannot afford to pay the enormous prices that are demanded for seats during the regular season.

The "Prophet" was a great undertaking, but the newly imported singers were in every case equal to the demands made upon their voices and individually scored successes. The chorus, too, came in for hearty words of approval. With so commendable a first effort ever with there is every reason to believe that the future performances at the Manhattan will jump into immediate favor.

No Moore Money Yet.

Because of the fact that so few heirs turned out, the committee chosen some time ago to investigate the $60,000,000 land legacy owned by Benjamin, Thomas and William Moore, who died in England about a hundred years ago, no action was taken at the meeting of the Moore heirs with Mrs. Julia Downing, of East Fifth street Saturday night. The Moore, Pope, Hand and Giles families, of this city, are said to be direct descendants of the three Moore brothers, and an effort is being made to establish their claim to the estate.

Milk Wagon Smashed.

A horse attached to B. H. Waldron's milk wagon ran away Saturday night and managed to wreck the wagon without injuring himself. The horse was standing in Mr. Waldron's yard waiting for Mr. Waldron to drive after his supply of milk and became frightened at something dashed down the runway into Codington avenue, from there to Somerset street, where the wagon turned turtle, breaking the top and one wheel.

Surprised Miss Florence Johns.

A surprise party was tendered to Miss Florence Johns, daughter of Mrs. H. M. Johns, of Duer street, Saturday night. The affair was arranged by Miss Irma Codington. Music and games were enjoyed and this helped to pass a pleasant evening. Among those present were the Misses Irma Codington, Hazel Patrick, Elsie Bodine, Edna Stewart, Ida and Edith Wheeler, Florence Johns, Aletta Johns, Anna Smith, of Newark; Russell Hann, Ralph Martin, Clifford Cole, Ernest Stevens, Arthur Stewart, Harold Storr, Chester Johns, Fred Burgess, of Bonnenhurst.

Auto 'Bus Station.

Arrangements are now being made to establish an auto 'bus line station at Brantingham's Hotel on Park avenue, near Avon Park. Officials of the company held a conference with Mr. Brantingham last night, when details were discussed. Mr. Brantingham suggested placing a red light at the corner of the entrance to his place, and this will be illuminated whenever there is anyone at his hotel wishing to go either to Plainfield or Metuchen, thus giving the 'bus driver a signal to stop.

FREDERICK WENZEL DEAD: ILL SINCE LAST MAY

Frederick Wenzel, a veteran of the Civil War and a member of Winfield Scott Post No. 72 G. A. R., died at his home, 1314 West Front street, Saturday afternoon after a long illness, in his sixty-sixth year. He was junior vice-commander of Winfield Scott Post, having held that office for the past three years. He enlisted when the company was recruited to the minimum and although slightly under the required age was passed by the recruiting officers because of his size. His record during the service in the army was an honorable one and Mr. Wenzel was held in high esteem by all who knew him. He was of a modest and retiring disposition and universally liked.

Mr. Wenzel was born in Germany and came to this country when four years old. He was a contractor and built a home in Plainfield for the past forty years. He leaves a brother William Wenzel, of Trenton, and a sister, Mrs. Philip Dahmer, of New York city.

HOPE'S TRIBUTE TO IRA WINTHROP TRAVELL

Resolutions of regret over the resignation of Assistant Superintendent Ira W. Travell, and appreciation of his work as a teacher and officer of the Sunday-school for the past sixteen years have been engrossed in a handsome Morocco leather bound book and signed by officers, teachers and pupils of Hope Chapel Sunday-school, about six hundred in number. The book was presented to Mr. Travell by Superintendent G. H. Condict at the conclusion of the Sunday-school session Sunday afternoon, when a farewell reception was tendered the retiring officer, who will shortly move to Morristown to take up his duties as superintendent of public schools there.

A handsome copy of Moulton's Readers' Bible, bound in leather, was also presented to Mr. Travell by Mr. Condict, in behalf of the officers, teachers and pupils of the school. Mr. Travell spoke his thanks after the presentations and in the course of his remarks referred to the gratifying growth of the Sunday-school during the sixteen years he has been connected there, and in connection with his appreciation of the gifts and farewell, wished success and growth to the school and a continuation of the loyalty which has marked its life.

The book of resolutions is about ten by twelve inches in size, and a handsome specimen of the loose-leaf book-making. It is elaborately bound in Morocco leather, limp. The first page contains the resolutions, beautifully engrossed, and on the pages following are the signatures. These are headed by the names of Rev. J. S. Zeller, pastor of the Crescent Avenue church, and Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor of Hope chapel, and following are the names of the officers and the members of each class of the Sunday-school, headed by the teacher of the class. The Readers' Bible is the literary revision of the Old and New testaments, and is handsomely bound in leather and suitably inscribed.

REV. DR. DICKINSON HERE

Rochester Divine Addresses Four Congregations at First Baptist.

THE FINAL UNION SERVICE.

He Preaches For Rev. Dr. Chamblin In the Morning—His Text "Not Doubting."

Rev. Dr. John Taylor Dickinson, of Rochester, N. Y., occupied the pulpit of the First Baptist church, Sunday morning and evening, preaching to large congregations. The evening service was attended by the congregations of the Trinity Reformed, First Presbyterian, First M. E. and First baptist churches, it being the last union meeting for the season.

Dr. Dickinson's discourse treated with the discouragements in life, citing those experienced by Moses when he tried to lead his people in the right path toward God. He said that some people get the idea that God does not want them to work for Him, that He can get along without their aid. This, the preacher said, was not so. On the contrary God wants everyone to do all they can for Him and His cause and thus upbuild the Kingdom of God.

The preacher also referred to the fact that there comes a time in the life of everyone when they must decide between accepting or rejecting Christ, and he impressed upon his hearers the importance of making the right decision. When Moses was discouraged over the way his people acted, God gave him encouragement which proved a great source of help and strength.

In the morning Dr. Dickinson delivered an interesting discourse on the topic of "Not Doubting." He urged all to serve God faithfully and to put implicit faith in Him, not doubting but that everything would come out all right. He made a special point of friendship and said that when one finds a real true friend they should cling to them. Other points of the discourse were to be earnest in serving God and to constantly pray for His Spirit.

HOLY NAME SOCIETIES TO HOLD DEMONSTRATION

As director of the Union County Union of the Holy Name Society, Father B. M. Bogan, has called a meeting to be held at the Lyceum, Elizabeth, Sunday afternoon, when final arrangements will be made for the annual demonstration of the county organization. This demonstration will be held in that city on Sunday, October 10. There will be present at the preliminary meeting representatives from all the societies in the county.

Similar demonstrations will be held by the Holy Name Societies on October 10 at Newark, Jersey City, Morristown, Union Hill and Paterson, and the day is usually made one of the most important of any by those connected with the societies. At Elizabeth there will be a parade from Elizabethport to Elizabeth, and appropriate exercises will be held in front of the hospital on South Broad street, that city, with speeches by several persons prominent in the church.

STATUE OF LINCOLN FOR EAST ORANGE.

F. Edwin Elwell, formerly curator of sculpture at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, has just finished the model of an heroic statue of Lincoln. It will be sent to the bronze foundry today and will be erected next spring in the parkway of East Orange.

Lincoln is depicted making an address, having removed his hat with his right hand, which hangs awkwardly by his side. The sculptor has sought to convey an impression of the sadness of Lincoln's eyes and the strength of character shown in his face. Lincoln is represented in his prime.

One of the friends of the early youth of Lincoln, who was a boy when Lincoln was a young man, and who is now eighty-five years old, said yesterday while looking at the statue in the sculptor's studio in Weehawken:

"It is the best portrait of Lincoln I have ever seen. It is the man himself."

PLAINFIELDERS WINNERS AT WESTCHESTER COUNTY.

Plainfield dogs again made a fine showing on Saturday at the annual beach show on the Gedney Farms, Westchester county, N. Y. The Boreas Kennel wolfhounds won in those classes throughout. Boreas Draco took a first, Mrs. H. Van-Courtland's Boreas Isegram a second, and the other entries from the kennel were awarded third and fourth.

E. H. MacKenzie, with the entries from his Midlothian Kennel, won in all the classes in which they were entered and the same was true with A. G. Hooley's fine setters.

YOUNG POLISH GIRL IS A VICTIM OF TETANUS

Miss Annie Krotchy, the seventeen-year-old Polish girl, who was ill at Muhlenberg Hospital with tetanus, died at the institution on Saturday, following the most intense agony. Her condition was such that from the time she was admitted to the hospital the physicians agreed that she could not recover. The girl ran a splinter in her foot two weeks ago, but the injury healed quickly and nothing more was thought of the matter until she was suddenly seized with tetanus.

At the hospital everything possible was done for the patient with the hope of baffling the dread disease. Miss Krotchy was employed as a servant in the family of N. W. French, of West Fourth street, and the family did all that was possible for the girl. The funeral service was held at 10 o'clock a. m. Monday from the home of friends at 457 South Second street, with Father B. M. Bogan, of St. Mary's church, officiating. The burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

ALLEGED JOY RIDERS' HEARING POSTPONED

O. H. Osgoodby, of Somerville, who failed to put in an appearance at the city court Saturday morning for a hearing, was arraigned by Patrolman O'Keefe on a police warrant Saturday afternoon, when he came to this city to get his automobile from a local garage. His arrest Friday night with two friends terminated an alleged wild "joy ride," of which the police have not yet learned all the particulars. Taken to police headquarters, Osgoodby, who owns the automobile, was released on his own recognizance for a hearing the following day.

On the advice of his counsel, John Freck, of Somerville, Osgoodby has secured an adjournment of his hearing, and will be arraigned before Judge William N. Runyon Friday morning on a charge of reckless driving on Park avenue. Sentence was suspended on John D. Hall, a companion of Osgoodby in the machine, when he was arraigned before Judge Runyon on a charge of intoxication Saturday morning. Osgoodby and Hall both have stated that they did not know the name of the third man with the party.

The police have learned additional facts about the "joy ride" which started from Somerville at about 8 o'clock Friday night. Osgoodby says he will have witnesses in court Friday to show that there was nothing wrong about the trip. It is reported that the machine was run on the sidewalk for part of the way up Park avenue, which led to the arrest of the party, and it is possible that a dispute about non-payment for several rounds of drinks at a local hotel will be aired at the hearing.

Osgoodby, who is a prominent real estate man in Somerville, was an opponent of Congressman Fowler in a recent election. At that time he was a resident of Cranford, and since then had been a resident of West Eighth street, this city, before removing to Somerville.

ST. PETER AND THE UMPIRE.

An umpire stood
At Peter's gate
Waiting in dread
To hear his fate.

"You were a bad,
Hard man, said Peter
"Your wife complains
You used to beat her.
You oft were cross,
Unfair, severe,
You hit the booze
A lot I hear.
You used to break
The furniture,
You scorned the church
And robbed the poor;
You led a life
Of sin, and so
I'll have to send
You down below"
The umpire wept.
To his fate,
And he pleaded thus
At Peter's gate:
"Nay, send me not
Below to dwell,
For, back on earth
I've had my hell"—
His face was bathed
In briny tears—
"I was an ump
For three long years."

Then from the wall
The saint took down
A golden harp,
A jeweled crown;
And kind he spoke,
In angels can:
"You've had enough—
Come in, old man."

Miss Wadsworth's Wedding.

Miss Mary Tilney Wadsworth, daughter of William R. Wadsworth, of West Eighth street, whose engagement to William A. Bowers, Jr., of New York, was recently announced, will be married at her home on October 2. The wedding will be a small one one account of the death of her mother last November. Miss Wadsworth has just returned with her father from a tour of Spain, erGmany, Norway and Sweden.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Frederic Thompson's production of "Polly of the Circus" begins a week's engagement at Springer's Grand Opera House tonight. Miss Edith Taliaferro then makes her debut in New York as a leading woman in a "grown up" part. At the head of her own company, Miss Taliaferro appeared as Polly last season in many of the larger cities of the country, and the manner of her reception precludes any doubt as to her achievement of an emphatic success here. All of the most important members of the original "Polly of the Circus" company are in the cast which supports Miss Taliaferro. These include John Findlay, Joseph Brennan, Earl Brown, James Cherry, Mattie Ferguson and J. B. Hollis. Following out his idea of always improving where improvement is possible, Mr. Thompson has added to the roster of circus acts which appear in the third act of the play, the Barlowe troupe of performing dogs and ponies. With this addition the circus ring features are sufficient in number and in variety to rank as a first class "tent show."

In giving "Arsene Lupin" its first performance in English dress at the Lyceum theatre, New York, on Thursday, August 26, the same night he produced it in London, Charles Frohman at one stroke afforded the English speaking world what may be safely called the most absorbingly interesting detective-thief play the modern stage has yet seen. William Courtenay, Sidney Herbert and Doris Keane have the chief parts on a cast that numbers over thirty persons—a rather plentiful number for a play that is a combination of straight drama and straight comedy. All the elements that are generally supposed to constitute the "joy" and "grip" are cleverly woven in "Arsene Lupin" that the career of this comedy will probably be one of indefinite length and the organizations playing it will doubtless be multiplied without end by Mr. Frohman. "Arsene Lupin" is in three acts and four scenes, by Francis De Croisset and Maurice Leblanc, and is at present the great vogue in Paris. Its story begins at the palatial home of Gounay-Martin, a plebian grown tremendously rich.

Springer's "Grand Opera House" began the season with "The Girl from Rectors" as the attraction, which begins its second week at that popular house on Monday night. This successful comedy of Paul M. Potter's has enjoyed a run of nearly one whole year at Weber's theatre. The original cast will be seen here during its presentation. The ensuing season marks Mr. Springer's tenth as manager of this beautiful playhouse. Manager Springer has many novelties in store for his patrons, and promises them that the season of 1909-1910 will be an epoch making one in the history of the "Grand." Among the Broadway successes to be seen there during the month of October are "The Girl" and "Polly of the Circus," George M. Cohan in "The Yankee Prince," Joe Weber in "The Merry Widow and the Devil" and "The Thief."

"The Love Cure" at the New Amsterdam theatre on Wednesday night will tell a romantic story of life of the playhouse, the chief figures being players and much of the action taking place on the stage of the "Novelty theatre." Very briefly told, the love affairs of Nellie Vaughn, star of the company playing at the theatre, Torelli, her leading man, worships her, but because of the difference in their ages will not declare his passion. Alfred Blake, son of a wealthy New York society man, also adoores the charming cantarice, but is also too respectful to intrude. The elder Blake discovers his son's infatuation and appeals to Nellie to "cure" the youth. When the "cure" is about to be made, however, Nellie discovers that Alfred is the young man whose almost impersonal devotion has made so great an impression upon her. Nevertheless she undertakes the task she has promised to fulfill, and endeavors to disgust Alfred with all stage folk, including herself. In this she is aided by Torelli. It is not until the final moment of the action that the climax is reached, the spectator's interest, according to the up-State critics, being held unfailingly until the final impressive dramatic scene.

The utmost surprise is occasioned at Trenton by the arrest in Pittsburg Sunday night of RaiWway Mail Clerk Frank T. Magowan, on a charge of robbing the mails. He is an active Democratic politician in that place, who for many years opposed the supremacy of Charles H. Gallagher, the latter the Democratic State Committeeman from Trenton.

BIKE TAYLOR STOLE SOLD IN BOUND BROOK

Through information furnished by Charles Wuelling, of Harris Lane, Beechwood Heights, the police have learned that two bicycles, stolen about two years ago by Lucius Taylor, the big colored jail-breaker, who is now in the Elizabeth county jail awaiting the action of the grand jury for larceny, were sold to Bound Brook people. One of the wheels, a man's, colored, with wide handlebars and an old-fashioned spring saddle was bought by William Brown, a neighbor of Wuelling, of $4, and is still in his possession. Taylor also sold a new Cleveland bicycle to a Bound Brook man at about the same time, but the purchaser has since moved away.

Two summers ago Taylor was employed by Wuelling, who is a cooper, at Beechwood Heights, but he knew nothing of the colored man's record until the end of his arrest here. Learning that Taylor was accused of stealing the bicycle belonging to William Murphy, of North avenue, Wuelling remembered that he had tried to sell bicycles to Bound Brook people while in his employ, and investigated the case he knew of. Detective Sergeant Flynn is making an effort to find the owner of the bicycle sold to Brown.

Speaking of Taylor as an employee, Wuelling said that the colored man was a wonderful mysterious worker, after he was once waked up. His only trouble, Wuelling says, is his desire to sleep late mornings, and in the Beechwood Heights man told the police of his troubles in getting the big colored man out of bed and going to work. "Once started, though," said the cooper, "that man could do the work of three."

RULES FOR BANK CUSTOMERS

The following rules are recommended to the attention of those who do business at the banks. They will be the means of saving a great deal of time and annoyance—by not following them.

1. If you have any business with a bank put it off until 2 o'clock, or, if possible, a little later, as it looks more business like to rush in as the bank is closing.

2. In depositing money try and get it upside down and wrong end foremost, so that the teller may have a little exercise in straightening it up before counting it.

3. It is best not to take your bank book with you, but call at another time and have it entered. You can thus make two trips to the bank where one would answer.

4. If a check is made payable to your order, be careful not to indorse it before handing it to the teller, but let him return it to you and wait while you indorse it; this helps to pass the time, and is a pleasure and relief to the teller.

5. You can generally save time when making a deposit by counting down your money to the teller, as you can nearly always count more speedily and correctly than he can.

6. If you make a deposit of $100 and give a check for $50, it is a good thing to call frequently at the bank and ask how your account stands, as it impresses the officers favorably with your business qualifications.

7. Never keep any record when your notes fall due, and then, if they are protested, censure the bank for not giving you notice.

8. Always date your checks ahead, it is a never-failing sign that you keep a good account at bank; or, if you do not wish it generally known that you are doing a good business, do not deposit your money until about the time you expect your check will be in.

9. Depositing money never make out a deposit ticket. The teller has the blanks in his case for that purpose, and expects to fill them out himself. It annoys him to have you offer to do it; besides, if others are waiting, it gives them a chance to exercise patience, which is a great virtue.

10. In receiving money from a teller, never say in advance how you want it, but hand back each note separately and ask him to break it.

A strict observance of the foregoing rules will make your account desirable for any bank, and make you a general favorite with all the bank officers.

Somerset School Ready.

Among the many visitors to the Somerset school was a professor from one of the colleges in Massachusetts who was interested in the meteorite now in the possession of Janitor Marshall. The school itself is in spick span shape for the reception of pupils when the sessions begin. The desks look like new and the floor are in splendid condition having been oiled and polished until not a speck of dirt is visible. 150 tons of coal have been laid in as part of the winter supply and everything is in readiness for the opening.

Acting Governor Frelinghuysen Saturday made requisition on Governor Stuart, of Pennsylvania, for the extradition from Philadelphia to Cumberland county, of Rose Fauth, who is charged with aiding her brother, Harry Jordan, in an attempt to escape from county jail, at Bridgeton, where he is confined on the charge of robbing a postoffice.

SPROULL MAKES APPEAL

Urges Endeavorers to Increase Membership Twenty-five Per Cent.

PLANS FOR THE CONVENTION.

Nominating Committee For Annual Session To Be Held Here Next Month.

The president of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union, John T. Sproull, has issued a letter which was read at the local meetings last night.

Speaking of the work for the coming year, he says:

"You are probably aware that through the courtesy and help of the business interests of Atlantic City, New Jersey was enabled to present an invitation for the holding of the next International Convention of Christian Endeavor (to be held in 1911), to the Board of Trustees of the United Society at the convention in St. Paul, and it was unanimously accepted.

"Vacation season is nearly at end and our State convention is near at hand. What are your arrangements for a large attendance at Plainfield, October 6 to 8? The program will be one of special interest to every Endeavorer and the convention committee of Plainfield is preparing for a large attendance, and what will it profit if you are not there? Begin at once to plan for a large delegation from your society and see to it that you, yourself, go.

"As previously advised, unless our State secretary, Miss Ida B. Stephens, of Hackettstown, shall receive prior to October 5 application for at least 500 copies of a report of the proceedings and addresses of the Plainfield convention the same will not be published.

"The special work laid upon all the Christian Endeavor Societies for the next two years by Dr. Clark, in his address at St. Paul, was as follows: A 25 per cent. increase in the membership of all existing societies and an increase of 3,000 new junior, 2,000 new intermediate, 3,000 new young people's and 2,000 new senior societies, or an aggregate of 10,000 new societies, with 1,000,000 new members, all to be secured between now and the convention of 1911. New Jersey has pledged herself to gain her proportion of this increase, and in order to bring about you for the fulfilling of this pledge made in your behalf at the St. Paul convention. Every locality in our State must be thoroughly and intelligently canvassed for the organizing of new societies and to awaken the interest and membership of those already existing. Will you take this matter up immediately in your society and go to work in your village, town or city?

"You will find below the names of the nominating committee, which will present at the coming convention in Plainfield nominees for the following officers for the coming year, namely, president, three vice-presidents, secretary, associate secretary and treasurer, and also for an advisory committee consisting of nine members, and the nominating committee will be very glad to receive any suggestions from you."

Mr. Sproull has appointed the following committee to nominate officers, to be chosen at the Plainfield convention: The Rev. Dr. P. T. Pockman, chairman, New Brunswiek, N. J.; Mrs. L. Ida Dukes, 518 North Fifth street, Camden: the Rev. Dr. F. W. Johnson, Washington; J. K. Harriman, president Hudson County Local Union; Jersey City; H. A. Schultz, president Mercer County Local Union, Trenton.

THEY GET THEIR MAIL UNDER FICTITIOUS NAMES

One of the results of the recent annual convention of postmasters at Toledo is that several officials have recently issued orders to hold all mail addressed under fictitious names to young girls and boys. The order has been in force in the local postoffice for several years. Postmaster Bird says he has not been troubled so much with boys and girls as with married men and women, who frequently request him to hold certain mail. There is no ruling that gives Mr. Bird the right to refuse in the case of adults, but he has repeatedly declined to hold mail for young people.

"It has been a custom for girls to get mail at the general delivery window without the knowledge of their parents," said Mr. Bird today. "Where the clerks know that the girls are getting letters under fictitious names they will hold up the mail and stamping it 'fictitious' forward to the dead letter office in Washington. Some experience of general delivery letter clerks have a pretty good memory of faces and names and in this way the practice is reduced to a minimum.

Police to Hold a Dance.

The members of the Plainfield Patrolmen's Benevolent Association are planning to hold a dance on Thursday night, November 18, the place to be decided upon later.

GOOD GOVERNMENT TALK

Warren Township's Men Get Some Points from "The Bungalow Man."

WAS A HEART-TO-HEART TALK.

Speaker Tells What Has Been Accomplished In New Providence Township.

At a large and enthusiastic meeting of the citizens of Warren Township, held in the schoolhouse at Mount Bethel on Saturday evening, William Jeffery, of Berkeley Heights, "made good," as usual. At the opening of the meeting, William Henry Rogers, former committeeman of the township of Warren, was elected temporary chairman.

Mr. Jeffery spoke for one hour and made some telling points and aroused the audience at intervals to prolonged applause. In part he said that all citizens of whatever party or creed should band themselves together to promote the best interests of the township, that is what has been done, is being done and will be done in the future in the Townships of New Providence. He declared that Republicans should strive to make the Republican party better and Democrats to make the Democratic party better and the way to do it is to secure the best men from the respective parties for offices; all this for county, state and federal elections but that for township elections, party lines should be ignored and cast aside and the township should come first and the party second, thereby enabling men of no pronounced political creed but who may possess sterling qualities and ability, to accept public office in the township. That the people of Warren Township should look well to it that they do not secure old-time politicians but to infuse new life and give the younger men a chance to help the township.

"This will serve three purposes or more," said Mr. Jeffery. "It will get a wiggle on the old ones, educate the young ones who may become elected to office and set up an example for the children to follow. It will give the younger element something to think about and help them out of the crog shops. It will centralize the attention of the citizens of Warren on the people of Warren instead of on themselves individually. It will help to eliminate the awful spirit of selfishness which makes it hard for people to see any good in others. It will ennoble the children, make them breath the air of love and peace which must follow the life of usefulness to others. It will stimulate the mothers of the township to better things and to help the fathers stand up for better government. I see a grand future for the township of Warren if the men who are here assembled continue their interest for good government. It is an inspiration to see so many kindly, honest faces and strong bodies, evidences of the toil you men undergo every day. You, the farmers and workingmen of Warren Township and all other townships and of the country, are the salt of the earth and God's chosen people. Fear nothing or no one.

"Proceed with your work for home and family.

"If those who impede the march of progress in your township, get in your way, remove them gently but firmly, not because you hate them but because you love them. As a learned friend of mine writes, 'My dog tried to bite me. I liked the dog so I kicked him lovingly in the jaw.' He understood that argument. My grocer tried to cheat me. I liked the grocer. I would not kick him in the jaw but I told him lovingly that I would not deal with him again. He understood that argument. My baby tried to slap me. I liked the baby but I would not kick her in the jaw or even cease to play with her. I kissed her lovingly on the cheek. She understood that argument. There are thousands of laws in the State of New Jersey calculated to make us honest and to love one another. Now won't you be good? Do your duty in order to secure to yourself better government in the township of Warren, is obvious and you must metaphorically kick the undesirable office-holders in the jaw or in other words, kick the dear rascals out of them out of office gently, but firmly.

"We accomplished wonderful results in the township of New Providence." Here Mr. Jeffery enumerated the improvements to the citizens of that township. "But the thing which we have secured above all others in our township, is a larger measure of love for one another. The spirit of being willing to help the other fellow carry his load to relieve paid and suffering, to make life more cheerful to those who do not see a cheerful as we do."

A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Jeffery and he will again address the citizens of Warren on Tuesday, September 7, in the hall room of Bintz's Hotel at Mount Bethel and will also address the ladies on the same day on "Good Government and Good Schools." Two very large meetings are anticipated.

MR. TRAINOR'S NEPHEW CURED OF LOCKJAW

Worked over by Dr. William H. Burke and trained nurses from New York city for the past three weeks, James McAloon, Jr., aged 11 years, who is the nephew of John Trainor, of Grant avenue, is now declared to be out of danger from tenanus, with which he was stricken on August 11. The remarkable work of the physician is attracting considerable attention by the physicians in the vicinity of Middletown, N. Y., where the boy is a patient at his father's home.

Visited by Mrs. Trainor several days ago, the boy seemed fatally stricken with the idiopathic form of the disease. The jaws were set, and it was impossible for him to take nourishment for a time. The physician and his assistants never gave up the fight, however, and today the boy is resting comfortably and the tense maxillary muscles have become normally relaxed. Physicians declare that the boy will recover.

DESERTED DOVER, N. J., WIFE LOCATES SPOUSE

After appealing to the authorities in her home town to assist her in bringing her husband, Ernest Colutchie, to account, Mrs. Sarah Colutchie was furnished with railroad fare for herself and three small children from Dover, N. J., to Baltimore by the chief of police there, and, arriving at Baltimore Saturday afternoon, appeared before Justice Llewellyn, at the Northeastern Police Station, and swore out a warrant for his arrest for non-support. Within half an hour after the warrant was sworn out Colutchie was arraigned before the magistrate to answer the charge.

Colutchie told Justice Llewellyn that he refused to live with his wife, but was willing to take care of the children. He was told that he must pay her $7 a week, which he agreed to. He could offer no security for this amount, which the magistrate placed at $500, and is being held at the stationhouse.

Mrs. Colutchie was given food for herself and the children by Justice Llewellyn and a place to sleep for the night at the stationhouse.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF DR. WILLIAM F. SWALM.

The funeral service of Dr. William F. Swalm, brother of Albertus Swalm, of this city, was held Sunday from the Church of Our Father, Grand avenue and Leffets place, Brooklyn. He was a prominent physician of Brooklyn and died last Thursday night at Shelter Island, where he had been spending the summer. He had been ill for several months with paralysis. He was in his seventy-third year.

Dr. Swalm was a veteran of the Civil War with rank of Brigadier-General, a member of the Loyal Legion, King's County Medical Society, War Veterans' Association, of the 14th Regiment, of which he was a surgeon. He served from 1861-62, from '62 to '65 he was made inspector of hospital by the United States Sanitary Commission with headquarters at City Point, Va. He is survived by a wife and one sister and two brothers, Mrs. Pascal C. Burke, Everett S. Swalm and Albertus Swalm, the last named of this city.

"THE DISTRICT SCHOOL" AT NETHERWOOD CAMP.

A delightful entertainment was given to the children of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home Saturday night by a company of young people who gave a very fair imitation of a district school in full operation. The costuming was screamingly funny and the mad entrance of the schoolmaster put the children on edge for what was to follow.

The entertainment was arranged for in a very short time, but the performance did not smack of unpreparedness. The old songs, the spelling bee and the finale, an impromptu set of verses, laudatory of Netherwood Camp, sung to the tune of "Good Night Ladies," were hugely enjoyed by the youngsters.

Those who took part were Miss Bock, Mr. and Mrs. George, Mr. and Mrs. Henry, Mrs. Raynor, Miss Marcom, Mrs. Benjamin Hadley, Miss Iva Hadley, Mrs. William Hadley, Miss Annie Smith, Miss Dorothy Smith, Miss Ollie Jones, Richard Harrigan, Miss Harrigan, Joseph and Theodore Lugford and Miss Florence Strubel.

FOR LABOR DAY RACES. DOVER IS PLANNING

The North Jersey Driving Association of Dover is making final arrangements for the races at the Dover Driving Park for the afternoon of Labor Day. There will be three classes, as follows: 2:35 trot for purse, $100; 2:20 trot or pace, purse $125; free-for-all trot or pace, $125. It is expected that one or more match races will be pulled off, as both drivers are entered to start.

The entries closed Saturday night, and the list comprises some of the best horses in the Eastern circuit. Every race this year has been interesting, and racing men are coming to regard Dover as one of the best racing centers in New Jersey. It is expected that the usual large attendance will be at the tracks.

SERVICE AT BABY CAMP

Rev. Theodore Englund Talks to the Little Ones at the Mountain Camp.

GEORGE E. HALL GIVES TALK.

Music Is Provided and Contributions Are Received at the Season's Final Meeting.

Despite the threatening weather, the largest audience of the summer gathered at the Baby Camp on the mountain Sunday afternoon to enjoy the last service of the season.

Over 200 people were present, and the stage provided by George E. Hall for transportation to and from the camp, was taxed to its utmost capacity to accommodate passengers. In addition to this, his two automobiles made several trips up the mountain and return, but even then a number of people walked from the trolley to the camp.

The meeting, which was in charge of Mr. Hall, was unusually interesting, and included a program of vocal and instrumental music rendered in a highly pleasing manner by the choir and orchestra of the Swedish church, of this city. A choir of nine voices sang sweetly, "Shall you, shall I?" and "When the roll is called up yonder, I'll be there." The orchestra, consisting of a zither, two guitars and two violins, rendered the selections, "Throw out the life line," and "Saved through Jesus' Blood." In addition to these numbers, the choir sang one piece in Swedish, accompanied by the orchestra.

The speaker of the meeting was the pastor of the Swedish church, Rev. Theodore Englund, who talked so earnestly and with such marked sympathy and helpfulness, as to enjoy the unabated interest of his entire audience from beginning to end of his address.

"The Old Time Religion" might be called the theme upon which he spoke, and taking the Twenty-third Psalm as the text and certain parts of Scripture as the basis of h's remarks, he told how the Swedish people in their own country are brought up to love God's Word and to live a Christian life; and how, when they come to this country they are in danger of losing sight of the teachings of their childhood, because of the attractions of a newer world that offer such sore temptations. With marked tenderness he spoke of the simple childlike faith of the Swedish people, who are taught to lean upon God in all their troubles and darker experiences of life. Mr. Englund told his audience how deeply interested he is in any work that has for its object the betterment and welfare of little children; and by way of emphasis cited an instance of child life in New York city that was most pathetic.

Both the words of the speaker and the musical portion of the program appealed to the audience with particular helpfulness, and Mr. Hall voiced the feelings of every one present when he said that Mr. Englund need offer no apology for his imperfect use of the English language, for he had spoken in the language of the heart, which is understood by us all, whether natives of Sweden, America or any other land.

Mr. Hall spoke of the splendid work that has been carried on at the camp under the management of the matron, Mrs. Bird, and that although no collections have been taken at the meetings this summer, voluntary contributions are always very acceptable, and are made to go as far as possible in helping on the work of the summer camp. At the close of the meeting a number from the audience handed in their contributions, aggregating a considerable sum. Seventeen hundred children and mothers have been cared for this summer. Some of this number have been given a new lease of life because of the days spent on this mountain, and every one who has had any share at all in this beautiful work, has been made to feel it a privilege to minister to the wants of the sick, to the comfort and well-earned rest of tired and overworked mothers, and to the happiness of the little children. Speakers, singers and musicians have been especially kind in giving their services at these meetings, which have grown more and more popular with each succeeding Sunday.

Through the kindness of Mr. Hall, who, throughout the summer has furnished transportation for all who have attended the Sunday afternoon services, the people of Plainfield and adjoining towns have had the privilege of spending an hour in this delightful spot, surrounded by influences that have been helpful and inspiring. This four o'clock service has now become a recognized phase of camp life on the mountain, and next summer will no doubt see these meetings continued on even a larger scale.

DUNELLEN FIELD CLUB DEFEAT THE ST. MARY'S

The Dunellen Field Club defeated the St. Mary Baseball club, of this city, at Dunellen, Saturday afternoon, by a score of 10 to 5, in a most interesting contest. Lloyd held the Plainfield boys to six hits, while Dunellen gathered ten off of the delivery of Conover and Squires, who alternated in the box. Perhaps, the six errors by Plainfield helped more than anything to lose the game. The score:

GREENPOINT BRANCH DEFEATED BY Y.M.C.A.

The local Y. M. C. A. team went to the city of churches Saturday afternoon and took a game from the Greenpoint Branch of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A., in an exciting contest before a large crowd. Miller pitched a telling game, only two hits being registered by his opponents during the nine innings. Evans and Peacock, Y. M. C. A. men, came up and strengthened the team. Evans, who had a broken hand, showed no ill-results from his lay off. Fritts captained the team and played a fine game at short, accepting seven chances without an error, in fact the whole team played in splendid tactful game and backed up the battery in professional style. UNUSUAL FIELD AT THE PARK GOLF CLUB

There was a large field out at the Park Golf Club Saturday, and the competition for the President's and Golf Club cups was very keen. The course was in fine condition. While there were many players on the links, but a limited few posted their scores. R. B. Titsworth, C. B. Morse and R. W. Gardner won points for the President's club cups, the latter a scratch event. The scores:

R. B. Titsworth, 94,-21-37; C. B. Morse, 93, 12-31; R. V. Carpenter, 106, 23-83; Samuel Townsend, 113, 18-95; J. H. Howell, 115, 20-95.

May Petition Council.

There are so many complaints about the dusty condition of West End avenue in the borough, that it is likely a petition will be sent to the Borough Council soon, unless something is done to relieve the situation. There is almost constant auto and carriage travel over that thoroughfare and the dust is raised in clouds at such times. The fact that there are no dwellings along that particular section of the avenue does not alter the nuisance in the opinion of people who use the avenue so much.

SCORED A SHUT OUT

BREWER AND SEERY THE STARS

Plainfield's Machine-like Work Takes Starch out of Visitors—The Score is Six to Nothing.

Plainfield played up to league form Saturday afternoon and put up the best game they have played this season, barring a low throw by Emery and a fumble by Carlstrom, the team worked like a well oiled piece of machinery, and shut the 'Plains men out, only one of their number getting as far as third base.

The credit of the victory is due in a large measure to the splendid battery work of Brewer and Seery, the latter making a couple of catches of the sensational order, while the former pitched masterly ball all the way. Another whose work stands out as of league calibre was that of Barnes at first base. Eleven put outs, two of them difficult unassisted, plays made the fans roar with approval.

The story of the game is soon told. In the first and fifth innings Plainfield did all the scoring that was done. Boyd, the first man up in the first was given a life by Emery and immediately stole second and third, capping the climax by stealing home on a short passed ball. This daring playing put the rest of the team on their mettle. Emery batted safely and came all the way around on passed balls. Martin went out, McLoughlin to Ortlieb. Barnes whipped a single to right and came home when McLoughlin made a heave that went far out beyond the right foul line. Carlstrom, who had hit the ball, taking second on the misplay. Seery flied out to Baldwin, Carlstrom taking third on the throw in. On Brewer's hit to right center Carlstrom walked in so slowly that Brewer being tagged stealing second was out before Carlstrom crossed the rubber and umpire Paine refused to allow the run to count.

In the fifth session Boyd singled to right, Emery bunted safely and Fromz sacrificed, Martin to Emery, filling the bases. Boyd scored on Barnes' sacrifice. Emery and Martin came home on Stanton's hit to right. This ended the scoring.

The summary and box score tell the tale of what Plainfield could not do with Brewer's offerings. It was said that several of the 'Plains rooters had to walk home, but this could not be verified. Ortlieb, Plainfield's former artist, played a fairly good game at first for 'Plains and Fromz's game at second was weird.

ELIZABETH DEFEATS PLAINFIELD'S TEAM

Johnson Brewer, the new boxman for the Plainfield B. B. C., met his first defeat at Elizabeth, Sunday, when the Betsyton ballplayers banged his delivery for a total of eleven hits and scored six runs. Although the Plainfielders got eight hits, they scored but a single tally, and that came in the fifth stick session.

Brewer was opposed by Ortlieb, an ex-twirler for the local nine, who quit the local uniform about two weeks ago. He kept the eight hits scored off his delivery pretty well scattered and was given errorless support. A big delegation of local fans saw the game, which was played at the Atlantic League grounds.

The Elizabeth nine started the run getting in the first, when three batsmen scored. A long line of zeros was broken in the eighth, when three more runs were hammered in. Bunched hits brought the lone run for the locals in the fifth.

Smith twirled for South Plainfield and although he was absent himself any he had the visitors guessing at all stages of the contest. Errors in the outfield allowed Netherwood to secure nearly all of their runs. Captain Mullin caught his usual fine game and made a remarkable running catch of a high foul that got considerable applause. Moran on first accepted every chance without an error and Hanson and W. Mullin on second and third played their positions in fine style. Hann and McDonough both got two bagers. The lineup:

MOTHER IN HOSPITAL IS UNDER SUSPICION.

Hattie Huyck, a girl of sixteen, gave birth to a child Sunday at 159 Catherine street, Elizabeth. The child is dead and its body is in a morgue, while the mother is in the Elizabeth General Hospital in a serious condition. The police suspect that she can explain the death of the infant, and the matter is being investigated.

Her father is working in New York, where he went a week ago, and called to police headquarters. Meanwhile, pending the investigation, the police and the hospital authorities are withholding all information. County Physician Westcott will make an investigation and probably will order an autopsy to determine just what caused the child's death.

Borough Fire Laddies Win.

The North Plainfield Fire Department baseball team defeated the Jackson Field Club, Saturday, by a score of 4 to 3. The rubber will be played next week.

FARMER NOT TO BE TRAPPED.

This One Was Taking No Chances on a Possible $300 Fine.

The government weather bureau supplies daily thermometer readings, quantity of rainfall and the forecast for the ensuing 24 hours to farmers along rural routes who apply for tehm. The data are stamped with rubber type upon one of the franked government cards and dropped in the rural mail box by the rural carriers each day.

On a western route a farmer had applied for the forecasts, and they were dropped regularly in his mail box each morning, but he failed to take them out, and the accumulation of cards became so great it nearly filled the box.

An inspector, going over the route, dropped in at the farmhouse.

"Why don't you make use of the weather forecasts?" he inquired.

"Didn't you apply for them?"

For reply the patron of the rural route led him out to the mail box and put his finger on the corner of one of the cards, where was printed:

OFFICIAL BUSINESS.
PENALTY FOR PRIVATE USE, $300.

"You fellows ain't going to soak no $300 into me," he declared, putting the card back into the box.

And the inspector had some difficulty in explaining that no penalty would attach to the removal of the card.

HAD DONE WORK THOROUGHLY.

Corporal Literally Obeyed Orders of Post Commandant.

Gen. Clarence Edwards, chief of the insular bureau of the war department, tells how an Irish corporal got even with an unpopular post commander in Cuba. This post commander, though an excellent soldier, was something of a crank. He had two hobbies. One was that the liberal use of whitewash was the best possible preventive of disease, and the other was a pet flamingo, an ill-natured bird that was disliked heartily by the enlisted men because it never overlooked an opportunity to nip one of them.

One day the post commander had to go to Havana, but he could not endure the thought that anyone should be idle in his absence. It had been fully a week since any whitewashing had been done, so he issued an order that "all articles pertaining to the camp not sheltered from the weather" should be whitewashed. The Irish corporal was intrusted with the execution of the order.

The post commander returned next day, and pretty soon the air was fairly blue with his cursing. The soldiers heard the noise, but they were not curious. They knew what it was all about. The post commander's brilliant flamingo was white as a snowy heron.

Pronged.

"I have good reason," said the head of the establishment, addressing the cashier, according to the Chicago Record-Herald, "for believing that you are living beyond your means."

"You are mistaken sir. I am willing to have a thorough inspection of my accounts at any time."

"How does it happen, then, that you are able to have a big automobile?"

"Oh! Ha, ha, ha! That comes of having a wife who can write poootry."

"Poetry! Bah! Who ever heard of anybody earning enough writing poetry to have an automobile?"

"That's all right. She won it in a Limerick contest."

Good in Either Event.

Gen. Dabney H. Maury tells in his "Recollections of a Virginian" of an old lady in Fredericksburg who was reduced to taking in boarders in order to make both ends meet. On one occasion of peculiar stress, the larder was so empty that the good lady took to her bed and summoned her servant. "Nancy," she said, "there's nothing in the house for my boarders to eat except mush. But give them that. If they are Christians, they will accept it in resignation and thankfulness. And if they are not Christians, it is a deal too good for them."

Went Too Far.

Elderly Suitor—I offer you an honorable name, a large fortune and the utmost devotion.

Mabel (joyously)—Oh, Mr. Grayhed, how kind of you!—

Elderly Suitor—In addition, I can say that I am in the best of health and that I come of an extremely long-lived family.

Mabel (coldly)—No, I can never be yours. Please don't mention the subject again.

One Was Enough.

"Dad," said the white-faced lad, "how many cigars does it take to hurt a boy?"

"How many have you smoked?"

"One."

"That's the number," said dad, and taking down the strap from behind the door he soon convinced the boy that he was right.

How the Ruins Go.

"I thought," said the American who was seeing Europe for the first time, "that you people had a lot of interesting old ruins over here."

"Once we had such things," the native apologized, "but your heiresses have come over and had most of them put in good repair."—Pittsburg Observer.

The BOYNTON Square Fire-Pot Furnace develops every atom of heat energy possible, by complete combustion, and leaves no clinkers and no waste.

The square pot burns less fuel and it thoroughly consumes all it takes—a double economy. All your earnings don't go into the fire when you run a BOYNTON.

For cleanliness and the trifling care necessary to run it the BOYNTON is easily the first choice of every man who takes the trouble to get acquainted with it. Look up the BOYNTON dealer in your town. The price is not prohibitive.

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for Steam or Hot Water. Also Ranges.

AN INCONSISTENT RISER.

My dear young wife so soundly sleeps,
I cannot make her hear;
Although I shout: "It's breakfast time!"
And talk right in her ear,
She only pulls the covers up,
And sighs, and that is all;
But when the telephone is heard,
She skips right down the hall!

Of course I know she needs the rest,
She has so many cares;
She slept right through the racket once,
When baby fell downstairs.
She only pulled the pillow down,
And sighed, and that was all;
But when the postman rang the bell,
She skipped right down the hall!

For that is human nature's way,
And we are all inclined
To sleep right through unpleasant things
And get them off our mind.
We only look the other way,
And wink, and that is all;
But when a pleasant sound is heard,
We skip right down the hall!

—Judge.

What?

She—They say a man is generally heaviest in his fortieth year. I wonder if that rule applies to woman?

He—Oh, well, a woman never gets as heavy as that.—Yonkers Statesman.

"Well, what is it now?"

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Sept. 5, 1909.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic—Life lessons for me from the book of Romans.—Rom. xii, 1-3. (Consecration meeting.)

The epistle of Paul to the Romans is the superior of anything to be found in epistolary literature. Paul was a master in letter writing, and his letters written to some of the churches which he had organized and some of which he had visited afterward form a most important part in New Testament writings. Paul was to Christ what Plato was to Socrates. The gospel writers assume the attitude toward Christ that Xenophon did to Socrates. Xenophon was the historian of Socrates. The evangelists in the gospels tell the history of Christ. But Plato and Paul occupy the higher positions. Plato was the interpreter of Socrates' philosophy; Paul was the interpreter of the doctrines of Christ. Interpreters occupy much higher ground than mere historians. So that Paul as the interpreter of Christ's doctrines occupied the supreme attitude toward Him. By him the life and teachings of Christ were formulated into the great doctrines which are the foundations of the beliefs of the various Christian denominations. Indeed, Paul and his writings have been so thoroughly preached that some have claimed that Christ has been overshadowed by the great apostle. But not so. To preach Paul is to preach Christ, for no disciple was ever more devoted to his Master than Paul to Christ. He preached not himself, but "Christ and Him crucified." His glory was in the cross. "God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of Christ" was his guiding star.

Great as all the epistles of Paul are, the greatest is the book of Romans, in which he sets forth so forcibly the doctrine of justification by faith, which doctrine, revolutionized by Martin Luther, revolutionized the formality and deadness of the Catholic church and led to the reformation and the institution of Protestantism. Romans had had a tremendous influence. By striking at the Jewish dependence on works as the since called Roman Catholic church demands. The result was the Protestant church. Luther's commentary on Romans led to the conversion of John Wesley, who in his struggles against sinful nature, although in the Church of England to those in the time of Luther in the Catholic church founded the Methodist Episcopal church, which has been and is still a great evangelical force in the world. The Presbyterian and all the evangelical churches base their doctrines upon Paul's interpretations of the life and teachings of Christ. Protestantism almost entirely still stands firmly upon them, and under the blessings of God they have been the mighty progressive and successful in their work.

No one was better qualified to write this epistle than Paul. It is no local letter, but one for the world. Jews and gentiles alike are shown in it how to be saved, and there is no difference in the sin nature of the two. Paul, as the apostle proves, must be saved, if at all, through faith in Christ and His death. Only Paul was really adapted to write such a book for such a purpose. His father was a Jew who had been made a citizen of Tarsus. His mother was a Greek, which bound him to the gentiles. He was thus related to the three great empires of his day—Judea, Greece and Rome. Related to all, he could naturally appeal to all. He was raised a strict Jew and educated in the highest Jewish schools. Yet, his mother being a gentile, he would understand the gentiles better than Jews alone. What better equipment for a world-wide influence? He belongs to all nations and all the members of all nations into his Master's kingdom. He was a great thinker, a master of philosophy and of logic, and the logic of the doctrinal system has never been successfully refuted or disputed.

The book of Romans is readily divided. It consists of two parts, the doctrinal and practical. The doctrinal part is found in chapters 1, 16, to xi, 36. The practical part includes chapter xii, 16, to Rom. x, 18, to the text of the doctrinal part. In chapter xii, 1, the text for the practical part is found. Every Endeavorer should commit to memory these two verses.

Life lessons for me:

1. A living and not a dead consecration to God (xii, 1).

2. Nonconformation to the world, but transformation by the spirit of God (xii, 2).

3. My duties toward other disciples of Christ (xii, 9-16).

4. My duties toward enemies (xii, 17-21).

BIBLE READINGS.

Rom. i, 1-7; xiv, 21; iii, 19-31; iv, 1-12; v, 17-21; viii, 1-5; xxvii, 39; x, 1-4; xi, 33-36; xiv, 1-12.

Frances E. Willard's Tributs.

The Christian Endeavor societies have come to the rescue of the churches out of formality and inaction, to warm them with the young life blood without which they would ere long become torpid and to correlate them with the blessed everyday activities of humanitarian age, nor will it prove a small part of the good work which I believe these young people are to accomplish that they illustrate to their elders that not only has God set the earth in families, but the church also, and that in the household of faith man and woman are to stand side by side as priest and priestess, equal in power and equally commissioned to preach the glad tidings of the gospel of peace.—Frances E. Willard.

MINUTES OF THE FREEHOLDERS LAST MEETING.

Regular meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, N. J., held on Thursday, August 19, 1909, at 2:30 p. m.

Roll call showed the following members present: Director King, Freeholders Adams, Cady, Cladek, Crane, Darby, Dean, Gardner, Harland, Jensen, Jones, Krouse, Martin, Meisel, Perry, Robison, Smith, Stephan, Swain and Wilbur—20.

On motion of Freeholder Cady it was ordered that the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting be dispensed with and that the same be approved as per printed copies on the member's desks.

Communications.

From Miss Emily E. Hornblower, expressing "many thanks for your kind sympathy" on the death of her aunt, Mrs. Emily E. Williamson, which was received and placed on file.

The following invitation was presented and read:

July 19, 1909.

Major Benjamin King, Director Board of Chosen Freeholders.

Sir—We have the honor to extend to yourself, your honorable board, and the ex-members thereof, a most cordial invitation to attend the annual encampment of the Second Regiment, N. G. N. J., on Wednesday, August 11, as the guests of the Union county officers.

Very respectfully,

CONRAD HALL,
Captain Company I.
H. B. KITCHELL,
Captain Company K.
ROBERT A. MONTGOMERY,
Captain Company C.

On motion of Freeholder Cady received and accepted with thanks.

From the Town Clerk of Westfield as follows:

July 7, 1909.

Honorable Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county.

Gentlemen—At a meeting of the Council of the Town of Westfield held last evening the clerk was directed to call your attention to the conditions of the county road known as Westfield avenue, between South avenue and North avenue, particularly under the railroad bridge, and to request that you have the road improved.

Yours very truly,
LLOYD THOMPSON,
Town Clerk.

On motion of Freeholder Cady received and referred to the County Road Committee.

From J. P. Kelly:

July 29, 1909.

Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

Gentlemen—On June 12, 1908, Charles Bahr who resides at 730 Monroe avenue, this city, and who carries on business as a milkman in the building along Neck Lane, which is, I understand, a county road. Without any warning the front wheels of his wagon slipped through a cavity in the road, which was in very bad condition. Mr. Bahr was thrown out head foremost and landed on his head and shoulders, with the left arm beneath. He broke three fingers of his left hand and was severely shaken up and bruised. He has been more or less crippled up to the present time and it is a question now whether he will be ever able to gain the full use of his hand.

Mr. Bahr desires to call this matter to your attention and is satisfied that after your board makes such investigation as it may deem proper, it will make such amendment as that Mr. Bahr as will to some extent repay him for what he has been compelled to expend for medical service and hospital attendance, and for loss of time and injury to his business.

Will you kindly give this matter your attention and advise me of the result of your investigation? Mr. Bahr does not desire any litigation and would much prefer some reasonable settlement as in the judgment of your board is proper.

Very truly yours,
J. P. KELLY.

On motion of Freeholder Cady received and referred to the County Attorney and the freeholders from City of Elizabeth.

From George B. Vanderpool, Summit:

July 17, 1909.

Honorable Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

Gentlemen—I desire to thank the board very earnestly for the application of road oil made in front of my property on the Morris turnpike, Short Hills, and also in the First ward in the City of Summit.

It has been a matter of great interest to me to observe the effect of that oil upon the roadway, and I find that it is far superior to any other material that I have seen used for that purpose. The increased comfort to all persons driving, whether on foot or passing along it, owing to the absence of dust, is additional cause for gratitude to your honorable board.

I am in a position to know that the frequent use of this oil will save the county all of its cost in the preservation and maintenance of the roads owning through Millburn. Modern conditions demand a road binder and preservative of this nature, and I am satisfied that your oil is unsurpassed as a road builder—binding and holding the macadam in place, resisting the action of water and the great wear and tear of the rapidly moving automobile.

Will you kindly send me the name of all of the parties by whom it is made? I am thinking of buying some for my own use.

Very truly yours,
GEORGE B. VANDERPOOL.

Received, filed and request granted.

From William Jeffery:

July 10, 1909.

Union County Board of Freeholders:

Gentlemen—Not by any complaint, but suggestion only, the bridge over the mill race on the Scotch Plains road leading to Berkley Heights, right at the Harmsworth Woolen Mills, there is an old wooden bridge, and as I passed over it today I thought my automobile would go through it, but I got out to examine it and found that it had sagged a great deal and that the boards are badly worn and the bridge needs to be reconstructed. I do not know whether it is a county line bridge or not, so take the precaution of notifying the Somerset County Board of Freeholders and the Township Committee of North Plainfield Township. It would be a good thing to have an iron bridge at that point if it is compatible with the performance of your duties. Believe me to be

Yours truly,
WILLIAM JEFFERY.

On motion of Freeholder Cady received and placed on file.

From William H. Hoover, Jr., as follows:

July 24, 1909.

Honorable Board of Freeholders of Union county:

Gentlemen—Those rattletrap ferryboats plying between Staten Island and New Jersey crossing, the Arthur and Kill Von Kull, piratically holding up the people by wasting their time, charging an excess of fare, and endangering their lives and otherwise trying to put out of business as soon as possible.

The people have an undoubted right of free passage to and from Staten Island, and it is up to your honorable body to provide a temporary bridge at once.

The petty municipalities of Staten Island and Bayonne, together with the boards of trade and other interests have proven themselves utterly incompetent and unfit to deal practically with this subject by the past fifty years or more.

It makes no difference whether the bridge is located at Elizabethport or at Tremley Point, or any other point which you may deem proper. A temporary structure can be improvised and placed in operation at once, and will discount all opposition.

A common wooden bridge built of spruce piles and cheap planking and having a simple draw might possibly be constructed within a month complete. Build it, and let objectors howl as much as they like.

Yours very truly,
WILLIAM H. HOOVER, JR.

On motion of Freeholder Cady received and placed on file.

Plainfield, July 28, 1909.

Board of Freeholders:

Gentlemen—I am requested to notify you that you have a bridge on Jackson street, Netherwood, that is on my ground about twenty-two years, talking about that much of our lot in the front, and we would like to have that ground just as soon as we can have it, as we have parties objecting to buy it, and we would like to have the ground our deeds call for and this is delaying us from selling it. Hoping you will do something at once.

Respectfully,
CHARLES P. DALEY.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders:

Gentlemen—Your committee appointed to examine the Surrogate's accounts would respectfully report that they have examined the books and vouchers of the Surrogate for the month of July and find them correct and that the net receipts for the month are $812.94, which amount has been turned over to the County Collector.

Elizabeth, June 20, 1909.

Board of Chosen Freeholders of County of Union.

Gentlemen—The following applications for monuments to mark the graves of dead soldiers in Union county, investigated by Mr. Bahr does not desire any litigation and would much prefer some reasonable settlement as in the judgment of your board is proper.

Very truly yours,
J. P. KELLY.

From George B. Vanderpool, Summit:

July 17, 1909.

Honorable Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

Gentlemen—I desire to thank the board very earnestly for the application of road oil made in front of my property on the Morris turnpike, Short Hills, and also in the First ward in the City of Summit.

It has been a matter of great interest to me to observe the effect of that oil upon the roadway, and I find that it is far superior to any other material that I have seen used for that purpose. The increased comfort to all persons driving, whether on foot or passing along it, owing to the absence of dust, is additional cause for gratitude to your honorable board.

I am in a position to know that the frequent use of this oil will save the county all of its cost in the preservation and maintenance of the roads owning through Millburn. Modern conditions demand a road binder and preservative of this nature, and I am satisfied that your oil is unsurpassed as a road builder—binding and holding the macadam in place, resisting the action of water and the great wear and tear of the rapidly moving automobile.

Will you kindly send me the name of all of the parties by whom it is made? I am thinking of buying some for my own use.

Very truly yours,
GEORGE B. VANDERPOOL.

Received, filed and request granted.

In Memoriam Mrs. Emily E. Williamson.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

Your committee appointed by the Director of Freeholders to report at this meeting what action should be taken by the board in regard to the death of Mrs. Emily E. Williamson, late probation officer of the County of Union, respectfully recommends that the following minute be adopted and entered in full in the minutes of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

The Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union desire to place on record a tribute to the memory of Mrs. Emily E. Williamson, late probation officer of the County of Union, who died on the thirteenth day of July, one thousand nine hundred and nine. As probation officer of the County of Union since February, 1902, at which time she was first appointed by Hon. Garret D. Ten Broeck, Benjamin A. Vail, and until the day of her death, having been reappointed by His Honor, Judge Edward Atwater, Mrs. Williamson faithfully and zealously attended to the duties with which she became entrusted; ever, as probation officer of the County of Union, her attention has been unstinted to all matters pertaining to the office and to the general welfare of the people of the County of Union. Her keen intellect supreme tact and profound sympathy were valuable assets to the people of this county, and especially those whom she was called upon to watch over, guide, and raise anew to the latter she was an adviser and a friend rather than a probation officer and one who always ready and glad to aid them, even at her own loss. To those of the board and its officers who were brought into association with her from time to time, her friendship will be a pleasant memory and her course of conduct a stimulating example.

Recognizing the wealth of sterling qualities of Mrs. Emily E. Williamson, the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county hereby desire to pay tribute to the memory of a former officer of this county and to express to the many who sorrow at her death its deep appreciation of her services while in said office; that this memoriam be recorded in the book of minutes and an engrossed copy of this report be placed in a suitable frame and hung in the probation office.

By Committee on Chatham Bridge. To the Union County Board of Freeholders.

Gentlemen—Your committee appointed to examine and report upon the conditions of the line bridge over Passaic River, from Morris turnpike, Summit, would respectfully report: We have examined this bridge in Morris county. We find the bridge nearly worn out and in a dangerous condition. We would therefore recommend that a new arch bridge be built of reinforced concrete at an expense to Union county not to exceed $6,500.

JOHN N. CADY,
PETER H. MEISEL,
WILLIAM H. GARRISON,
Committee.

Freeholder Swain moved that the report be received and the recommendations adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by an unanimous vote.

By Committee on Pine Grove Avenue Bridge, Summit:

To the Board of Freeholders of Union County.

Gentlemen—Your committee appointed to meet and consider the matter of the raising of the grade of Pine Grove avenue bridge, Summit, respectfully report that they have met a committee of the Common Council of Summit, and would recommend that the grade of the bridge be raised by the construction of a new wall on the west side, in order to allow for city sewer pipes and provide a sidewalk to meet the proposed widening of the avenue at an expense not to exceed the sum of $2,500.

JOHN N. CADY,
CHARLES A. SMITH,
W. H. SWAIN,
Committee.

Freeholder Garrison moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by a unanimous vote.

By the Committee on North Avenue Bridge, Cranford.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

Gentlemen—Your committee to whom was referred the matter of preparing plans and receiving proposals for the construction of a bridge over the Rahway River on North avenue, Cranford, would report that they have had plans prepared by the County Engineers for a plate girder type of bridge and also for a riveted truss type, both bridges to be arranged for a permanent floor system of reinforced concrete, and have received bids for the same on July 30 last, as follows:

Arthur E. Smith, Plainfield, plate girder, $7,945; truss, $7,841; extra concrete per cu. yard, $6.00.

W. E. Warren, Mt. Vernon, N. Y., plate girder, $7,792; truss, $8,045; extra concrete per cu. yard, $8.00.

Snare & Triest, 100 Church street, New York (no check), plate girder, $9,960; truss, $9,490; extra concrete, per cu. yard, $12.00; rein, $11.00.

Wormser Goodman Construction Co., 2 Rector street, New York, plate girder, $8,891; truss, $8,740; extra concrete per cu. yard, $7.50.

A. E. Sandford Co., foot Fourth avenue, Newark, plate girder, $9,275; truss, $9,475; extra concrete per cu. yard, $6.00.

Schwiers & Sutton Co., 90 West St., New York, plate girder, $10,820; truss, $11,150; extra concrete per cu. yard, $7.00.

Union County Const. Co., Cranford, plate girder, $8,935; truss, $8,870.

Eastern Steel Co., Broadway, New York, plate girder, $8,950; truss, $8,950.

The bid of W. E. Warren, Mt. Vernon, N. Y., being the lowest for the plate girder type at $7,792, and the bid of Arthur E. Smith, Plainfield, being the lowest of the pony truss type at $7,841.

After consultation your committee has decided that the plate girder type of bridge is the best suited for the location proposed, but they are entirely unacquainted with Mr. Warren or his ability to do the work, and we therefore recommend that the bridge be constructed in accordance with the plans and specifications for the plate girder type of bridge, and that the contract be awarded to Mr. Arthur E. Smith, Plainfield, at his bid of $7,792 (being the lowest proposal received for this work), providing Mr. Warren shall submit satisfactory evidence to this committee of his financial standing and his ability to construct this work in a workmanlike manner, to be evidenced by similar work which he has done.

E. K. ADAMS,
GEORGE B. CLADEK,
WILLIAM H. GARRISON,
CHARLES A. SMITH,
PETER H. MEISEL,
Committee.

Freeholder Cladek moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by an unanimous vote.

REGAN IS FINED AGAIN

North Plainfield Milkman Mulcted $5. for Disorderly Conduct.

GIRLS PRISONERS AT GATE.

Mrs. Regan Claims Trouble Is Result of Persecution Because of Land Purchase.

The case of Patrick Regan, who was summoned to the borough court on charge of disorderly conduct, brought by Mrs. Fannie Goldstein, of North Plainfield, was called before Borough Recorder C. M. Dolliver Tuesday and Regan was fined $5.

For a long time bad blood has existed between the Regan family and the Goldstein's and Regan has been in court before on complaint of Louis Goldstein. Regan is now under bonds to appear before the September grand jury on a charge of alleged felonious assault on one of the Goldstein children. In the complaint it is alleged that Regan fired two shots from a revolver at Goldstein's daughter on July 14 last. On this occasion Regan was fined ten dollars for breach of the peace and later was put under bonds on the more serious charge.

Tuesday morning's witnesses appeared against Regan and convinced Recorder Dolliver that Regan had taken the law into his own hands and had created a disturbance for which he was amenable to the law. It was charged that Regan found some children, among whom was Goldstein's daughter Bertha, picking mushrooms in his lot. He led them to a gate and held them up until his wife had summoned Marshal Pope as a witness of the trespass. As a result of this detention the Goldstein girl was made ill and is still under the care of a physician.

Regan claimed that he had a right to act as he did because the children were on property belonging to him, when as a matter of fact the pasture belongs to Colonel J. F. Wilson, and is only leased by Regan. Regan claimed that the children had broken the fence in several places but when Marshal Pope asked to be shown where the fence had been broken Regan told him that he had no time to show him the broken fence.

Mr. Schoonmaker, who represented Regan in his address to the court claimed that Regan had not violated any ordinance and that the charge of disorderly conduct had not been proved. Judge William Newcorn, representing Goldstein said that Regan, in his opinion, was not a law abiding citizen. He played a mean trick on the children when he led them to the gate and refused to let them depart and furthermore caused a crowd to collect which was against the law. Judge Newcorn asked the court to impose a heavy sentence in order to teach Regan that he must respect the law. Regan was found guilty and fined.

When Regan left the court a crowd of women and children followed him to his milk wagon on the opposite side of Somerset street and guyed him until, it is alleged, he picked up a milk bottle as if to throw it at his tormentors. In court, after sentence had been pronounced Regan wanted Recorder Dolliver's permission to cross examine Judge Newcorn to endeavor to prove that the judge was himself not a law abiding citizen, but Regan was persuaded to keep quiet.

Mrs. Regan claims that the whole set of proceedings against her husband is purely persecution and is the result of Regan's purchase of a plot of land in the rear of his home that the boys of the neighborhood wanted to use as a baseball field. They had no trouble until the Goldstein family moved into the neighborhood, she says.

NEW POWER HOUSE FOR SPICER FACTORY.

The Spicer Universal Joint Mfg. Co. is building a new power house in the rear of their factory on property recently bought of Dr. M. L. Clawson. An artesian well is being driven for the plant at the southeast corner of the new building which will supply all the water needed for the factory. The well is being driven by C. Lewis of Scotch Plains. It has now reached a depth of 48 feet but the work is held up owing to the failure of piping to arrive on time.

The new power house will be about thirty-eight feet square and one story high and ought to be completed by the end of September. The Spicer company is working two shifts, the night force working the same number of hours as the day gang, 54. A member of the firm said this morning that business was greatly on the increase and they were rushed with orders.

Do Not Fear the Sun.

There are housekeepers who keep their houses shut from the first of May until the first of October. Perhaps the windows are opened in the evening for an hour or so, but not a chance does the sun have to get in its healing, purifying work. They call it "keeping cool." Better dub it "courting ill health." Remember, few of the beautiful things of life grow in darkness.

INDEPENDENT G. O. P. LEADERS TO MEET

Within the course of a few days, the independent Republican leaders of the city will meet for an informal conference. The purpose will be to discuss freely and fully what position they will take during the coming campaign. A definite policy, it is expected, will be decided upon as has been the custom since the movement started here several years ago.

Beyond the mere fact that this meeting will be held nothing could be learned today for none of those approached felt authorized to say anything about the matter. In a day or two, several of the more prominent leaders will be back from their vacations and this will permit of a full representation. It was learned today that the discussion would have to do, in all probability, solely concerning the county and city situations.

HIS CURE FOR CRAMPS CAUSED DRUNKENNESS.

In the course of a whiskey and Jamaica ginger treatment for cramps Monday, the supply of ginger used by Henry Jost, of West Fourth street, ran short. Henry continued with the treatment, however, without this ingredient. The result was that he was found helplessly drunk on Madison avenue, near West Front street, late in the afternoon by Patrolman Myers.

In an effort to put a cheerful outlook on the matter at his arraignment before Judge Runyon this morning, Henry giggled while trying to explain the case to the court, and this led the magistrate to ask if he had taken "laughing gas chasers" with his treatment. The defendant kept a straight face long enough to say that he never got drunk any more, and Judge Runyon suspended sentence.

GOVERNOR TO TAKE STUMP.

Fort Said to Be Planning Campaign to Boom Amendments.

Governor Fort is planning a campaign in favor of the proposed constitutional amendments providing for a reorganization of the courts, extension of the terms of State officers and increased pay for the members of the Legislature.

As Governor will return from his vacation in the Adirondacks on September 4, and five days later will begin a speechmaking tour in behalf of the amendments. He is to speak in Jersey City on September 9 and in Paterson on September 10, with other addresses in different parts of the State until September 14, the date of the special election.

CRACK SHOT-PUTTER TO BECOME A FARMER.

Russell Lawrence, of this city, who has made a phenomenal record as a shot-putter, and who has been representing the New York Athletic Club, notably at the athletic games held at Seattle, recently, will enter Cornell in the fall, and not Princeton as at first supposed. He will take an agricultural course at Ithaca as he intends to become an expert farmer.

Berrie Wefers, the trainer for the New York A. C., speaks in the highest praise of Lawrence and says he appears to have a fine future. The latter first came into prominence when a student at John Leal's school for boys, and later at the Y. M. C. A., where he took part in numerous athletic contests under the auspices of the association. His latest achievement at Seattle was worthy for the fact that he finished second to Ralph Rose, who holds the world's record for shot-putting.

Defeated New Brunswick 2 to 0.

The baseball fans of Bound Brook are greatly elated over their team's victory on Saturday in the game with New Brunswick. The Middlesex county boys were defeated by a score of 2 to 0. Langstaff pitched for Bound Brook, and was opposed by Jimmy Clinton. Both twirlers were in fine form. It is said that New Brunswick claims to have been "robbed" of a victory. That appears to be the usual cry of the former when defeated.

Mint Cup—A Novelty.

I was but recently served to a mint cup, which suited y taste to perfection. Extract the juice from five lemons, using a glass or earthen lemon squeezer. Add the leaves from three-fourths of a bunch of fresh mint, one cup and one-half cupful of sugar and one-half cupful of water. Just before serving pour into a pitcher, over a large piece of ice, and add three bottles of chilled ginger ale. Put a small bunch of mint leaves in the top of the pitcher for a garnish. If you have not an appropriate pitcher with cup glasses serve this beverage from a punch bowl in punch or frappe glasses.—Woman's Home Companion.

No Labor Day Meet Here.

The Plainfield Driving club did not meet at the Hotel Iroquois Tuesnight, owing to a lack of a quorum. There will be no race meet here on Labor Day, as all of the Plainfield horses will take part in the one to be held at Westfield, where an exceptionally attractive card will be presented by the club of that place. It has not been decided when the next meet will be held here.

BUYING FOOP WOMAN'S SMILE.

Homely Mr. Gwilkintoss Accomplishes This at Very Little Cost.

"Can a woman's smile be bought? Well, yes," said Mr. Gwilkintoss, "sometimes, and it may be for little money."

"Here is a woman who for weeks has been sitting on a downtown doorstep selling shoestrings. This is a disused door and so she interferes with nobody and nobody interferes with her, and so she sits there, with her stock spread over the greater part of the step, while she sits at the other end, holding on her arm an infant.

"And it always seemed to me that trade must be dull with her, because it never saw anybody buy of her; and finally I thought it was up to me to buy something and sort of help trade along a little. Because, you see, while the profit on shoestrings is very large, still you don't make anything at all unless you sell some.

"So I thought I'd buy a pair, which was easy to do, for the reason that she had a good stock. Not a skimpy little mess thrown down there on the doorstep, but a large assortment to buy and the child, but a real assortment to choose from; and it wouldn't be any charity to buy of her.

"So I stopped and looked the stock over and selected strings of the exact length I wanted, and I found these there with tips of the particular kind I like best, she looking on while I was making my selection; and when I handed over the nickel she looked up a little at her customer and signified by a smile that it pleased little smile, for every nickel counted, and I am afraid that business had been dull with her."

PLATES WORTH SMALL FORTUNE.

Have the Valuable Peculiarity of Constantly Growing.

"If you could eat your dinner off a service like this, now!" said a collector of porcelain, tasting a strong bright plate from a cabinet. "Why, such a service would be worth $100,000 or more."

The plate's surface was covered with an irregular and glittering crystalline growth like a thicket of bright, beautiful crystals, in their graceful outline suggesting quaint pagodas and gnarled trees, rose up everywhere from the porcelain pattern.

"It is," said the collector, "a growing plate. It is one of those plates whose clay, containing aluminum and magnesium, causes an outgrowth of crystals under the enamel. Such plates are very rare. I paid $2,000 for this one.

"Only a half-dozen growing plates are known. One, that belongs to a Boston collector, is valued at $4,500. Another, that had belonged to a poor New York woman who attached no value to it, sold at auction in '91 for $3,700.

"It is interesting to have a growing plate in your collection. This specimen here has put forth three crystals under that little blue mountain design since it came into my hands."—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

Appearances.

"One day down in Texas," said a civil engineer, "I was sitting on the porch of my hotel with a fresh youngster from the north. On his right sat a plain old man, smoking a cob pipe with the kernels left on it.

"'Te goda,' said my friend; 'what do you think of that for nerve. Sitting right up against a gentleman and puffing his old dope right in his face. Here, you, clear out with that pipe. Move clear over on the other side so the smoke won't blow this way. You are making a nuisance of yourself.'

"'All right,' said the old man, meekly. 'I'll move.'

"He did so. 'John,' said I, 'do you know who that old gentleman is you talked to like that?'

"'Nope, don't know and don't care.'

"'That is the governor of Texas.' It really was."

Electricity from Human Body.

That electricity, heat and other are one and the same fluid is the assertion of Frederick Hayrendon of London, who also claims that every person exhales electricity from the finger tips and that he can take moving pictures of the process. To do this he fills a square glass box with cigarette smoke, mixed with air. The experimenter thrusts a finger through a hole in the bottom of the glass box and a powerful arc lamp is turned on. The ether or electricity is immediately seen issuing from the finger tips and photographed.—Popular Mechanics.

Pleasant Morning Chat.

Overheard in Broadway:

"When I scuffle with him, just before I strangle him, you rush forward, knock the bottle of poison from my hand, and say: 'Fair play, fair play.' Then grab the two pistols from the window, left center, and yell: 'Stand back! I shoot to kill!' That's the signal for the cabin to be blown up by dynamite, and I fall on top of Bunco Bill's body, the knife streaming from my mouth. You tear the papers from his bosom, and as the roof falls on you, shout: 'The girl is mine!'"

A Study in Natural History.

Three-year-old Roger had seen a mouse before, but never one in a trap. Going into the kitchen the other morning, he discovered a strange-looking contrivance on the floor, with a tiny mouse caught fast in it. For a minute he looked at the thing in puzzled silence. Then he observed, thoughtfully:

"Well, I didn't know there was a mouse in our house with a red thing like that on him!"

FOOTBALL TRICK SAVES LIVES.

Ralph O'Sullivan Snatches Child and Nurse from in Front of Flying Auto.

Ralph O'Sullivan, one of the managers for the New York Life Insurance Company, who played football before he had to earn his own living, showed at the railroad station at Summit that courage, the ability to think and act quickly, and the physical training that taught him the trick of throwing himself headlong at a given mark and then rolling to one side, stood him in good stead when he saved one, and probably two, lives and performed the act without more than slightly bruising himself and ruining a good suit of clothes.

O'Sullivan saved the life of a baby and prevented a nurse who inadvertently got in the way of an automobile from being crushed. He was in his way from his home to catch the 8:09 train for New York. As he reached Morris and Springfield avenues, near the Summit station, he saw a two-year-old baby break away from the nurse in charge and step directly in the path of a swiftly moving automobile. Without hesitation, O'Sullivan, who was on the other side of the street, lunged forward, as he would have done in the old football days, and, with none of his accuracy of eye lost, caught the child as his left shoulder hit the ground. Gripping the child in his arms, he rolled clear of the front wheels, and, breathing against the frantic nurse, who had followed the child, threw her also out of the way.

The baby was absolutely unhurt, and the maid was only shaken up. O'Sullivan himself was only bruised. With their breath taken from mouths the autoists made sure that no harm had been done, then passed on. The names of neither the autoosts nor the nurse and child were obtained by witnesses. O'Sullivan went to New York on a later train.

FATHER, LONG MISSING, DEAD.

Daughter's Search for Him Ends at His Grave—Killed 19 Years Ago.

After nineteen years' neglect, not knowing what had become of him, the grave of R. Grosstein in Evergreen Cemetery, New Brunswick, will be adorned by a tombstone. Grosstein, while employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad, was struck by a train in 1890 and instantly killed. All efforts to find his family failed. The officials of the road gave him a decent burial, but ever since the grave has been forsaken.

It is now learned that his wife in New York awaited his return for many months and finally died of a broken heart, leaving two little girls. Through friends the children were taken care of and fairly well educated. They were Yetta and Rebeca Grosstein. After they became old enough they inquired about their past history, and learned that their father had been employed on the Pennsylvania Railroad, and after years of searching found he had been killed in this city.

Accompanied by their guardian, Samuel Kopf, of 224 East Fortieth street, New York, they went to New Brunswick last week and saw Louis Cohn, president of the Temple Arsha Emeth. Mr. Cohn promised he would do all he could to learn where their father's grave was, and he consulted with the officials of Evergreen Cemetery. The records were examined and Mr. Grosstein's name found and the spot of his grave.

Word was sent to the daughters, and they have announced their intention of erecting a monument to their father's memory.

MAY MERGE JERSEY GAS CORPORATIONS.

With the return of former Governor Edward C. Stokes Sunday from a good will tour in England, it was admitted that his mission abroad was to secure the signature of Henry C. Kelsey and a few other holders of local gas securities to an agreement to form a public service gas company on similar lines to those on which the Public Service Railway Company was made part of the Public Service Corporation two years ago.

This, it is understood, is a step preliminary to the first issue of $50,000,000 bonds which the Public Service is authorized to issue. A few months ago an arrangement was entered into between President Thos. N. McCarter, of the P. S. C., and the house of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., for the underwriting of a part of the proposed issue.

The ceremony will be performed Tuesday night, September 7, at the home of the bride in Cranford and will be attended only by the relatives and a few intimate friends. Mrs. Foulk has many friends here, where she is a frequent visitor.

Mr. Richardson has extensive mining interests at Durango, Mexico, and following his marriage to Mrs. Foulk the couple will leave at once for that place, where they will make their future home.

Miss Marie Carty, of Orchard place, has returned home after spending two weeks at Atlantic City.

COUNCIL WON'T AID MULCTED POLICE HEAD.

Chief of Police Snyder, of Roselle Park, has learned by the lamp of experience that his police powers do not allow him to shoot a dog, even though the animal is suffering and it would be humane to dispatch its life. It has cost the chief money to learn this lesson, for he has been notified by the Borough Council that the borough will not pay the amount of his judgment found against him by Judge Whittemore, in the District Court, Elizabeth, as the result of a suit brought against him by Arthur Lounsbury, for killing a valuable bulldog.

Lounsbury's dog had been run over by a trolley car and Snyder to end its suffering shot it. The owner of the animal sued the chief for $500 damage. A peculiar decision was handed down by the court in giving judgment. Judge Whittemore decided that the police officer had no right under the law to shoot the dog without the permission of a police magistrate or agent for the S. P. C. A., on the theory that the dog was valued at $5 before he was struck by the car, but two days after or when he was shot by Snyder he was worth one-half that amount. Judge Whittemore found judgment against the chief for $2.50.

The latter asked the borough to pay the judgment and the cost of suit. The matter was considered by the Council at several meetings and yesterday the chief was informed that he must stand the expense himself.

A MAGNIFICENT FIGURE.

Reginald McKenna, Kid-Gloved, Represents Labor Constituency.

Reginald McKenna is certainly a magnificent figure with an oar, and while triumphs on the water in one's undergraduate days at Cambridge count for much in English politics than they did before John Burns got into the Cabinet, they do count still. Moreover, as the London Post somewhat dubiously concedes, Reginald McKenna is "so nice."

To complete the aroma of his position in official life, he represents a distinctively labor constituency of miners and iron workers, who roared mercilessly at every allusion to his kid gloves and his spats at the last election.

Reginald McKenna is an extremely elegant looking person at all times, what might be called fashionable. His strolling air, the inconsequentiality of his expression, a deprecating and even timid way in conversation and his mind, which meets every adverse criticism that can be leveled against him, confirm the impression conveyed by those who insist that he is destitute of talent.

"He has a head for figures," the Prime Minister is said to have said to one amazed politician who expostulated at the selection of Reginald McKenna for the Treasury when the Asquith ministery was formed. Into the mouth of Prime Minister Asquith has been put the verdict that Reginald McKenna is a sage, mingling a little folly with his wisdom.

"Reginald McKenna has been a strong man, with that strength which never allows the silken glove to fall from the iron hand." Thus his chief, who bestows higher praise yet: "A rapid worker, quick to grasp guiding principles, as well as the minutest details. He is an administrator, above all."—Current Literature.

CHEAP GAS IN ENGLAND.

Low Rates Produced Large Profits Abroad.

Consul Albert Halstead reports that for the year ended March 31 the Birmingham municipal gas department has been able to contribute $347,754 to the reduction of city taxation, the details of which follow:

This is an increase of $49,375 over last year, and is the greatest profit that this British city has ever made on its gas undertaking. In addition, the gas department contributed $20,000 direct to the city treasurer and $75,000 worth of gas in aid of public lighting within and without the city. The profit was made after a large allowance for depreciation of plant and a contribution to the reserve fund of almost as much as the profit, and with the plant being kept at the highest maximum of efficiency. It is also of interest to note that the last contribution to reduce taxation has been possible despite the considerable reduction in the price of gas, which is half of the year. The rate of gas, showing reduction made, follows:

For lighting and heating purposes in one premises: Under 50,000 cubic feet, from 61 to 57 cents; between 50,000 and 250,000 cubic feet, from 55 to 53 cents; between 250,000 and 1,000,000 cubic feet, from 49 to 46 cents; from 1,000,000 cubic feet and upward, from 44 to 42 cents. For motive power purposes: Under 100,000 cubic feet, from 41 to 41 cents; 100,000 cubic feet and upward, from 38 to 36 cents. All the foregoing rates are subject to 5 per cent. discount for prompt payment.

For supplies of gas through proper meters: With gas fittings and cookers free, from 26 to 24 cubic feet per two cents; with cookers free from 31 to 33 cubic feet per two cents.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph O'Keefe, of East Seventh street, have returned home after spending two months at Asbury Park.

FOWLER NOT AN AGENT OF THE "PLUNDERBUND."

La Follette's Magazine, in its leading article this week discusses Speaker Cannon's revenge in demoting insurgent Republicans from committee positions. Following is in part:

"Cannon's revenge in demoting the insurgent Republicans of the House from their committee positions is of double aspect. It looks both to the past and the future. The case of Fowler, of New Jersey, is a good illustration. Fowler was chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency. He was a student and a recognized authority on banking and currency. He had some scruples, too, which would not permit him to run his committee as a mere legislative agency of the 'plunderbund.'

"Relations between Fowler and the Cannon regime, for a long time strained, came to an open breach during the days of the pitching of the so-called 'emergency currency' legislation in the spring of 1908.

"The fact that he was one of the progressives who voted against the readoption of the old Cannon rules at the beginning of the present Congress is only incidental. But, even these circumstances would not warrant Cannon in stirring up a storm of criticism just to get even. It would not matter much who was chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee if the system did not have work for it to do.

"But it was some work to be done which is in the regular jurisdiction of this committee. Read a Wall street paper, or the circulars sent out over the country every day by Wall street institutions, and you will be advised that the time is at hand now that the tariff is out of the way for a reorganization of our banking and currency system."

PLANS FOR CONVENTION OF GERMAN CATHOLICS.

The fifteenth annual convention of the State Federation of German Catholic Societies of New Jersey will be held Sunday and Monday next in St. Nicholas parish, Jersey City. The delegates will assemble at 9 o'clock Sunday morning, and at 10:30 o'clock will attend pontifical high mass in a body in St. Nicholas church. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. Bernard Gerail, pastor of St. Benedict's church, Newark. Sunday afternoon will be devoted to a meeting of the executive committee, and to the work of the several committees.

A mass meeting will be held in the hall Sunday evening at 8 o'clock, at which it is expected Bishop John J. O'Connor will be present. Joseph J. Lambrecht, president of the federation, will deliver the address of welcome. The principal speakers at this meeting will be Rev. Polycarp Scherer, pastor of St. Mary's church, Newark, and Joseph Mielich, of Brooklyn, former president of the New York State federation.

The business meeting will be opened Monday morning at 10 o'clock. Reports by the State officers and individual societies will be received, officers elected, and the next convention city designated. In the afternoon members of St. Nicholas parish will tender a reception to the visiting delebates and their friends.

THE JUDICIARY AMENDMENT.

Former Supreme Court Justice Van Syckel, in his letter concerning the proposed judiciary amendment, has met in clear and straightforward fashion the decision of the State Federation of Labor to oppose the pending amendments. If it were recalling that the Federation's attitude is directly adverse to the advice given by the Federation's special counsel, who advised that any specific objections that might be urged against the amendments were more than offset by the advantages to be secured.

Justice Van Syckel points out the saving in time and money for the litigant to be effected under the judiciary amendments, and that if the amendment is adopted the responsibility for delay and expense in the trial of causes will be put squarely upon the judiciary, with which responsibility will go to the power for the courts to remedy defects in procedure. Speedy justice will thus be insured.

But in spite of all these obvious benefits the Federation of Labor, through its various branches, proposes to defeat this and the other amendments on the ground that they do not include jury trial in cases of contempt of court where the contempt has not been committed in the presence of the court.

Clearly the laboring man is standing in his own light by opposing the judiciary amendments. There is every commonsense reason why he should enthusiastically support it. Win or lose, the Constitution cannot be amended again for five years. To refuse for that long to enjoy the privileges and benefits so offered also is unwise, particularly when there will be just as much chance five years from now of making further changes by accepting present advantages as there will be by refusing them.—Jersey City Journal.

J. J. CAREY, JR. MURDERED

Killed by "Sailor Jack" Allen, Notorious Bad Man, During Quarrel.

THE ASSAILANT IS CAPTURED.

Victim Was the Son of Assistant Warden of the Union County Court House.

James J. Carey, Jr., of 559 Livingston street, Elizabeth, was stabbed and mortally wounded last Monday afternoon by John Allen, known as "Sailor Jack," at Magnolia avenue and Division street in that city. Carey died in the ambulance summoned from the Alexian Brothers' Hospital in Elizabeth.

Allen was driving a wagon along Magnolia avenue, when Carey and his brother William got into conversation with him, and later the three began quarreling. Carey says Allen whipped out a jack-knife, with a six or seven inch blade, and made a lunge at James Carey. The blade pierced the latter's chest above the collar bone and sank up to the hilt. The wound was about six inches deep. One of the important arteries was severed, and Carey was dying when the ambulance arrived.

Bystanders rushed to the aid of Carey as soon as the serious nature of the quarrel became apparent and probably saved him further from being stabbed also. Allen was captured and held until the arrival of the police.

A telephone message was sent to police headquarters from the Jenkinson Lumber Company nearby and Patrolmen Leonard and Special Officer Wind were sent to the scene. They took Allen to police headquarters.

Slayer Goes to Sleep.

After an examination by Chief George C. Tenney, Allen was locked up in the prisoners' cell before Lieut. Mahon tomorrow on a charge of murder. He caused a disturbance at police headquarters for a time, but later quieted down and went to sleep in his cell.

Allen is a notorious "bad man" in the downtown district. He has a police record and has served time for horse stealing. Carey was known as "Skit" Carey and was shot about ten years ago by a Chinaman.

Carey was a son of James J. Carey, Sr., who is the assistant warden at the county courthouse. He was 28 years old, and is survived by three brothers, Thomas, a constable; Frank and William Carey, and one sister, Mrs. Michael Donahue, all of this city. He was a communicant of the Holy Rosary church.

County Physician Westcott was notified of the homicide and authorized the removal of the body from the hospital to the undertaking establishment of James J. Higgins.

LIDLESS BOXES FOR AMENDMENT BALLOTS.

Because of the fact that Hudson county election officers have found that the ballots to be used at the constitutional amendment election cannot be folded so as to be placed in the regular ballot boxes through the usual slits, the question has been raised as to what shall be done in the matter of boxes that will receive these unusually large ballots.

Assistant Attorney-General Nelson B. Gaskill has advised the Secretary of State that if these ballots will not go through the slits in the ballot-boxes the lids of the boxes may be left undone and the ballots deposited in the boxes through the open top.

The act providing for the constitutional election provides that the voting shall be done in conformity with the general election laws as far as practicable. Assistant Attorney-General Gaskill holds the view that if the ballots will not go through the slit in the boxes then an impracticable situation arises which may be overcome by making the boxes practicable by using the entire top opening for depositing purposes.

He also holds that the absence of a box which has been adopted by custom for voting purposes cannot defeat the constitutional right of legal voters to cast their ballots, and is inclined to think that any kind of a box in the absence of the usually used one would be a legal receiving receptacle.

It is not likely that complications of a serious nature will arise from the fact that the slits in the boxes will not receive the constitutional ballots, because all election districts are provided with the generally used boxes, and all that is necessary to comply with the ruling of the attorney-general is to use the entire top opening back of the slit for the reception of ballots.

Caring for the Hair.

In plaiting a child's hair at night never pull it back too tight from the face, as it tends to raise its forehead unbecomingly. The head should be brushed well, for there is any tendency to dandruff it should be taken in hand at once. The early care of the hair, like the complexion counts for much in after years. Many women's hair lacks a look of life and gloss, simply because enough time has not been devoted daily to this important duty.

CHIEF KIELY'S REPORT

Dept. Head Informs City Fathers of Police Convention Proceedings.

READ A PAPER AT MEETING.

Local Chief in Speaking Before Convention Deplored Outside Interference.

Chief of Police P. S. Kiely, who attended the annual convention of police chiefs at Buffalo, June 15-19, for which the Common Council appropriated $100, presented a detailed report of that convention; also an itemized statement of his expenses at the September meeting of the Common Council last night. It will be remembered that the appropriation was made for Chief Kiely's trip with the understanding that he should make this report.

The itemized bill of expenses follow: Railroad ticket to and from Buffalo, $16; expenses on train, $10; hotel expenses, $50; dues, $5; assessment, $5; tips, $4; miscellaneous expenses, $15; total, $105.

The report of the police convention was very minute as to details. It described each of the five days' session, telling of the automobile trips, those by boat, a visit to Niagara Falls, and then told of the detailed work of the convention, including the presentation of various papers on police topics presented by the heads of departments throughout the country.

The chief told of the suggestion offered that a world congress be held to discuss ways and means for handling the "Black Hand" organizations. It was the general sense of the convention that the best policeman is one who handles his prisoner with the least show of authority.

Chief Kiely presented a paper at the convention, a copy of which accompanied his report. In the absence of an assigned topic, he selected one, "whether it is advantageous to send a chief to police conventions." In this paper Chief Kiely argued that it does. He stated that the convention endorsed Former Police Commissioner Theodore A. Bingham regarding the taking of pictures of prisoners. It was decided to hold the next convention in Chicago.

Chief Kiely said that he first attended a police convention nine years ago and had not missed one since that time. He added that he has been connected with the local department twenty years and for ten years has been its head. In his paper before the recent convention he deplored outside interference with police affairs, explaining that this always proved a serious handicap to efficient work.

The chief's report and bill of expenses were filed.

PATROLMEN RESTORED TO THEIR FORMER RANK.

Patrolmen John Payne and Nicholas Myers, who sometime ago were reduced in rank from Class A to C for certain infractions of police rules, were re-instated to Class A at the regular meeting of the Common Council, last night, upon the recommendation of Mayor C. J. Fisk.

The two patrolmen were found guilty of violations of rules and upon the recommendation of the police board were reduced from the highest to the lowest class, with the result that their salary was reduced in proportion. For good behavior and meritorious service, Mayor Fisk recommended that the two men be restored to their former standing, which has been done.

TRAIN CREW PROUD OF THIS RECORD RUN.

Engineer J. J. Costello, of Elizabethport, Fireman William H. Apgar, of this city, and Conductor C. F. Berkheimer, of Jersey City, are justly proud of their feat of last Thursday night, when they ran freight engine 176 from Bound Brook Junction to Jersey City, a distance of 32 miles in 45 minutes and 30 seconds. The train was composed of 42 cars, the run being made under ordinary conditions, the train being no lighter nor had they any special right of way.

As the ordinary time for this run is about 1 hour and 20 minutes, the accomplishment is something to be remembered.

GEROME PACK IS DEAD

Widely Known Resident Succumbs to Heart Failure in Ninetieth Year.

HAD FORTUNE AND FRIENDS.

Oldest Member of First Baptist Church—In Business for Forty-four Years.

Gerome Pack, one of the oldest citizens of this city and one of the most widely known and respected, died yesterday afternoon of heart failure. The end was not unexpected. Mr. Pack had not been well for some time. His death was due to a general breaking down owing to his advanced age.

He was born at Scotch Plains eighty-nine years ago and came to Plainfield when but four years old. When about eighteen years old he learned the butters' trade with John Simpson at the corner of Second and Washington streets. This occupation he followed for twelve years afterwards, opening a livery stable on Park avenue, near Front street.

This livery he conducted for a number of years, or until he opened an oyster house on the opposite side of the street where there is now a cigar store.

In 1856 Mr. Pack opened a restaurant in the old Central Railroad station, which became known far and wide as one of the best eating places along the line. It was patronized by many famous men whose frequent trips to and from Philadelphia made acquaintance with the lunch man, an honor looked forward to by them, and his fame spread accordingly. When the restaurant was discontinued Mr. Pack opened a confectionary store on the site of his late residence and here again he became famous for the quality of the "taffy" he made. There are many Plainfielders living today who as boys spent their pennies for the square lumps of sweetness dispensed at Mr. Pack's sweetmeat emporium. This store he conducted for forty-four years, amassing a fortune and making countless friends. In all the various ventures of his busy life he was successful.

Mr. Pack was the oldest member of the First Baptist church and had occupied the same pew and was a faithful attendant at the services ever since the present edifice was erected. He was also a charter member of Plainfield Lodge, I. O. O. F., and was in good standing when he died. He is survived by one son, Edmund W. Pack, a clerk in R. W. Barnes' grocery, and a grandson, John H. Van Winkle, a lawyer of Dunellen, North Plainfield. His wife died twenty years ago as did his daughter, who was Miss Adella Pack, afterward the wife of John H. Van Winkle. The funeral services will be held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock at his late residence, 217 Park avenue, and will be conducted by Rev. John A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church.

ASK WILSON FOR OPINION

Republican City Committee Wants to Know How to Elect Its Members.

UP TO THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

The Act of 1909 is Capable of Two Interpretations the Committeemen Find.

Disagreeing on the interpretation of the law, the members of the Republican City Committee last night resolved to ask Attorney General Wilson for an opinion on the Act of 1909, Chapter 196, which provides for the manner of choosing members of the city and county committees. According to City Chairman Angleman, the opinion will be of State wide interest for he says that many other political committees find themselves in the difficulty encountered here.

The act in question provides that members of city and county committees to be voted for at the respective party primaries "shall be elected by election districts at such primary in the manner provided in this act for the selection of party candidates to be voted for by the voters of a single ward, etc." Howard Tracy, chairman of the New Idea Central Committee, and a lawyer, took the position that the meaning of the act was that the candidates should be residents of the district. City Chairman Angleman, a lawyer, argued that they need only be residents of the ward and not necessarily of the given district, provided they be voted for in each district of the ward, because the latter part of the same act provides that the number to be elected shall be as provided by the constitution or the committee. The representation on the city committee is given wards here by the constitution of the committees themselves are not divisable so that they could be distinct representation equitably from all districts in a given ward.

The constitution of the city committee provides, for instance, that "this committee shall consist of three members each from the First, Second and Third and four from the Fourth ward, who shall be elected at the regular annual primaries held for the purpose of electing delegates to the city and county conventions and in compliance with the general election law." As there are two districts in the First ward, for example, and three members to be elected, the law, if interpreted according to Mr. Tracy's idea, would compel the selection of two of these from one district and these would have to be residents of the given district. Mr. Angleman's theory is that the three members can be residents of any part of the ward or all three one part, but that the names of the same three must be voted for in each district.

The committee decided to meet on Thursday night, Sept. 16 when it is expected to have Attorney General Wilson's opinion.

HARRY COHN'S THREAT COST HIM THREE DOLLARS.

It cost Harry Cohn, of 532 West Third street, just $3 for threatening to kill Samuel Taub, of Somerset street, off the roof of the latter's home. Cohn claimed in court that Taub had engaged him to repair his roof and had refused to pay him the sum agreed upon after he had completed the work.

Taub told Recorder Dolliver that he had engaged Cohn to fix his roof, but that Cohn had done it in such a way that he was forced to call in another tinsmith to finish the job. Cohn, he says, then came for his money and when he refused to pay him the entire amount he had threatened to throw him off the roof.

TAYLOR IS FOUND GUILTY

Big Negro Sentenced to Two Years in State's Prison for Theft.

SCOTT GOES TO REFORMATORY.

One Forger and One Embezzler Given Light Sentences by Judge Atwater.

In the county court this morning in Elizabeth, Lucius Taylor, colored, the bicycle thief, was sentenced to serve two years in State's prison on the charge of stealing bicycles. Taylor's criminal record was against him and he received the limit.

Nathaniel Scott, the young colored man, who knifed Joseph Pritchard in a poolroom scrap on the night of August 16, was sentenced to the reform school this morning by Judge Atwater.

Celia Winston, the servant girl who forged the name of her employer, Rev. J. S. Zelie, was found guilty this morning and as Mr. Zelie pleaded for leniency in her case Judge Atwater made the sentence a light one—three months in the county jail.

Theodore Lagerkrantz, of Bound Brook, who pleaded guilty to the embezzlement of $88 from Isaac Van Zanten was given sixty days in jail for his offense. Mr. Van Zanten did want to press the charge against his old employes hence the light sentence.

Taylor will be remembered as the giant negro who tried to escape from the local police headquarters by jumping through the window of the judge's room and was caught by Sergeant Flynn near the corner of Arlington avenue and Fifth street. Scott, the young man who will be taught better manners at the State school was the aggressor in a fight brought on by a dispute over the payment of a bet on the game of pool played in a Madison avenue poolroom, Pritchard was severely cut with a penknife in the hands of Scott. The Winston woman pleaded not guilty to the charge of forgery when arraigned before Judge Runyon in the city court and was remanded to await the action of the grand jury.

MRS. P. A. FAULK BRIDE OF EDWARD RICHARDSON

PENSIONS FOR POLICEMEN

Patrolmen Request Common Council to Consent to a Referendum.

CITY FATHERS FAVOR PLAN.

Expected that Voters Will Be Asked to Decide Question in November.

In response to a petition received from the Patrolmen's Benefit Association, of this city, and signed by all the members, Councilman Frank DeWitt Randolph, chairman of the police board, introduced the question of police pensions at the September meeting of the Common Council, last night. The provisions of an act which the patrolmen would like to have the city take advantage of, was read for information and copies were ordered for each member of the Council. The question must be put to a vote of the people at a general election, and the patrolmen are anxious to have it submitted at the November election.

The act provides for pensioning police officers who have attained the age of fifty-five and sixty years of age and who have honorably performed service for twenty or twenty-five years. They can be retired if afflicted with disease or injury as a result of service and be given half-pay during temporary disability.

Under the act the city has the authority to borrow a sufficient sum of money to cover necessary expenses, and it further provides that one per cent of the salary of the police officers shall be deducted and the city shall contribute four per cent of the police appropriation to be devoted to a pension fund. The act further provides that the money in this fund be invested in interest bearing bonds.

The Common Council may by resolution submit the question to a vote of the people at a general election and in case of non-acceptance, it may against be submitted for a vote three years later.

The majority of the Common Council are inclined to favor the proposition of submitting the question to a vote of the people and many have expressed themselves favorable to the act.

The Council will doubtless arrange to submit the question at the next general election in November.

CHESTER H. BRIGGS WEDS

Miss Ethel May Moore, of Cranford, Plainfielder's Bride.

REV. DR. GREENE OFFICIATES.

Miss Elizabeth Moore Maid of Honor —William Briggs Best Man— A Reception Follows.

Miss Ethel May Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James G. Moore, of Central avenue, Cranford, and Chester Harris Briggs, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Noble H. Briggs, of Albert street, this city, were married last night at the home of the bride's parents in the presence of about one hundred friends from this city, Cranford and Westfield. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. G. F. Greene, pastor of the Cranford Presbyterian church.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Elizabeth Moore, as maid-of-honor, and the Misses Hazel and Gladys Marien, of Cranford, nieces, as ribbon-bearers. The best man was William Briggs, brother of the groom. The bride was gowned in white messaline with pearl trimmings. She wore a veil and carried a large shower bouquet of bride roses.

The house was lavishly decorated for the affair, the chief colors being yellow and white. The ceremony was performed beneath a large bower of golden rod, hydrangeas and palms. The wedding march was played on the piano by Miss Shetford, of Cranford. A reception followed, during which supper was served.

The bride was formerly soprano soloist in the quartet choir at Trinity Reformed church, and she also took a leading part in several amateur operatic productions given both here and at Cranford. The groom is also well known here. He has just completed the building of a handsome new house on Berkeley place, Cranford.

The couple will spend their honeymoon in the Thousand Islands.

DEBATE ON AMENDMENTS

Judge Seufert and "Farmer Orator" Martine Discuss Issues.

BEFORE DEMOCRATIC CLUB.

City Chairman Angleman and Former Assemblyman Swackhamer Also Join in Talk.

The question as to the desirability of amending certain sections of the constitution was discussed last night very thoroughly at the meeting of the Democratic club in Coward's hall before an audience composed of nearly equal numbers of Republicans and Democrats. Seventy-five is a liberal estimate of the number present. Leroy J. Ellis, president of the club, introduced the speakers of the evening and presented Judge William M. Seufert, of Englewood, as the first speaker. JJudge Seufert was appointed yesterday by Governor Fort, judge of the First District court of Bergen county to succeed Prosecutor Wendell J. Wright. Judge Seuffert is a Democrat and great wonder has been expressed at his appointment by a Republican Governor. But coming fresh from a happy knowledge of his appointment to the pudgeship he was imbued with a spirit of power which resulted in prolonged applause at the conclusion of his speech.

Mr. Martine, who took the negative side of the debate appealed strongly to the patriotism of his hearers and urged them to vote against the proposed amendments.

Judge Seufert said in part: "This question of amendments is of vital interest to every man in this State. It must be thoroughly understood before it is voted upon and if you think it is to the best interests of the State to favor the amendments after you have heard the two sides of the question, do so. I do not come here to scrap with my friend Martine but to discuss the question with him.

"Usually very little interest is taken in subjects of this kind, but I tell you plainly that we are trying to amend the very fundamental bulwarks of our constitution and make an improvement on what has been practically useless since 1844. If I can show you that the amendments will make an improvement, vote for them; if otherwise, vote against them. The constitution was drawn from Magna Charta and the constitu*tion of every State is an embodiment* of the unwritten constitution of England. It is the great basic law and guarantees the life and liberty of us all.

"In the proposed amendments only one affects the judiciary, but that one I consider of the most vital importance. Why has it been found necessary to remodel the constitution? Because the adoption of changes in 1844 will not answer today's conditions. Cases are tied up in the court of chancery for years awaiting decision. There is too much delay in the administration of the law because of overcrowding of the calendars. Many Supreme Court cases are delegated to the circuit court justices and even to the police court judges, because of lack of time to try them in the higher courts. In fact there is scarcely time to carry on the work of the court of errors and appeals.

"This is a business age and we want to put our laws on a business basis. We must keep abreast of the times. We have a reputation for Jersey justice in criminal cases but not in plain litigated cases. The amendments would confine business to the limits of each justice's department and the result will be better justice, better law administration and better men in the justices' chairs. You cannot get the best men to assume the duties of the courts now. We claim the amendments will give us an up-to-date administration of justice and we want a judiciary system of 1909, not of 1844."

Judge Seufert touched rather lightly on the questions of raising the salaries of assemblymen although he favored that move as well as all the others under discussion and gave his reasons as being from the viewpoint of "home rule," and said it was a question for individual men to decide in their own way.

Mr. Martine then took the floor and gave a dignified and eloquent view of his opinions on the subject. *He said: "I cannot discuss this ques*tion as a lawyer, but according to what I have just heard the courts are even worse than I thought they were. If we must change the Constitution why ought we not change the Bible also in order to bring it up-to-date. There would be just as much sense in that. Who asked for these changes, anyway? Why, the legal fraternity, of course. And why? Do we want our sacred constitution tinkered by the lawyers and then presented to the people for their acceptance? I guess not.

"Is there a widespread demand for

Plainfield in .... The Olden Days.

Re-printed from The Weekly Constitutionalist

January 19, 1871.

Those who have not supplied themselves with winter dress goods, underclothing and woolen goods generally will do well to call at the store of Isaac Lederer, corner Somerset and Emily streets, North Plainfield.

We learn that the Central Railroad intend commencing work soon at the proposed straightening of their road from this city to a point near the residence of James Ritchie, Esq., Westfield. This will enhance the value of property throughout that section.

Our worthy friend John Wilson is engaged in removing the row of handsome maple trees, which line the sidewalk on Third street, opposite that grand and massive structure the "Depot," and transplanting them to the line of the new street opened by the Railroad Company. It is quite an undertaking but "Johnny" is equal to the emergency.

A correspondent of the Rahway Democrat says—"Plainfield has a plentiful stock of old fogies, who persist in walking in the same old ruts that their grandfathers trod in."

John W. Laing, Esq., lost his valuable mare "Dinah" Monday morning last, death being occasioned by an injury to one of her feet a short time since, baffling the efforts of doctors to discover the cause. "Dinah" has been a faithful servitor to Mr. Laing for some seven years.

Rome—Thursday evening next, at the 2nd Presbyterian church, the Rev. S. D. Burchard will deliver a lecture entitled "Ancient and Modern Rome," which is based upon the personal observations of the Dr. during his travels in Europe.

We hear general complaint all over our city of the scarcity of water in the wells. Some wells that have never known to fail before are now giving out. The heavy rain Sunday night last may be the means of supplying the springs and filling the wells. The brooks were considerably swelled by the rains.

A "GAY" FUNERAL.

A few weeks ago there died in Paris a man named Chauchard, who had gained an enormous fortune from the famous Louvre store. When his will was read it was found that he had left comparatively little to charity and to his thousands of employes, while the bulk of his fortune, amounting to about eight million dollars, was bequeathed to a woman who had been his friend for many years. M. Chauchard had planned his funeral on a luxurious, even royal, scale. The most celebrate voices in France sang in the chorus, the hearse was drawn by six black horses, caparisoned in the trappings of mourning and a squadron of cuirassiers, several battalions of infantry, and three thousand employes followed the body to the grave.

It was what the French call a "gay" funeral and half a million Parisians stopped in their work to see the "parade." But instead of regarding it reverently, as the French usually do, the crowd hissed, and laughted, and cracked coarse jests, and a mob of hoodlums pelted the official mourners, robbed the bier of its flowers, and tossed them about. Even the serious-minded felt that the funeral was a foolish bit of ostentation, and would have liked it better had the late M. Chauchard been more modest in his leaving of the world.

A few years ago, Madame Boucicault, the owner of a rival store, bequeathed her fortune of $20,000,000 to her faithful employes and to religious and charitable institutions. She did not have a "gay" funeral. She did not need one.—Success Magazine.

Wealthy Men's Suspicions.

Wealthy men, if not guilty of trickery, are often abnormally suspicious of tricks. The celebrated author, the late Charles Reade, was one of this kind. He always imagined he was being robbed, and set traps to catch the thieves. When he became lessee of the old Queen's theatre he suspected that his ticket office cheated him by letting in the public for anything they could get and keeping the money. So Reade called up his collar of his overcoat, pulled his hat down over his eyes, and shuffling up to the box office as the people were going in, he shoved a half crown into the box office keeper's hand, and whispered:

"It's all right—that's for you—I don't want a ticket. Just pass me through."

The clerk ran out, seized Reade by his coat collar, and was passing him roughly into the street, when he recognized his "chief."—From the "Light Side of Finance" in the Strand.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Home Newspaper a Necessity.

A prominent writer inquires: "If a member of your family died would you print the resolutions on a billboard?" If your wife entertained, would you send an account of it to the theatre program man? If you were going to enlarge your business would you advertise it in a hotel register? If you were going to have a wedding in your family, would you get out handbills? You would send such items to a newspaper, would you not? Then why don't you put your advertisements in a newspaper? Every man who uses a billboard is adding to nature faking. The newspaper builds your town. Why not help build up the newspaper? There is no better advertisement in the world for a town than a good newspaper. A newspaper is the barometer of the town's industry. Show us a good newspaper full of advertising and we will show you a good town full of live merchants. Billboards are an eyesore; handbills are a nuisance, theatre programs are worthless; hotel registers, from an advertising standpoint, are ridiculous. Newspapers are town builders, town advertisers, fortune makers, news disseminators, sermon deliverers, prosperity forcasters. They are a necessity, not a luxury. They must be maintained. Without them we would revert back to the medieval days. Don't patronize them from a charitable standpoint. Patronize them because they deliver the goods, that is, if they are the right kind. Cut out the foolishness and work for the upbuilding of your town and State by up-building your newspapers."—Bound Brook State-Centre Record.

Help the Editor.

Don't think because the editor sees you getting on or off the train that he ought to know who you are and where you are going, or if he sees you greet some friends that he knows who they are and where they are from. We aim to get the news, but you may be the one we don't happen to know. We try to become familiar with names and faces if possible, but during the years past we have been to church and failed to see you there. We have hung around the postoffice, but some of you weren't there. We have loafed on the streets. We've even risked our reputation by back streets on a dark night, but you weren't all there. And we'll be hanged if we know where to find you all. So if you are going or coming, know anybody cutting up queer capers, let us know try we will do the rest.—The Fort Covington Sun.

PATIENCE.

How smooth the sea beach pebbles are!
But—do you know
The ocean worked a hundred years
To make them so?

And I once saw a little girl
Sit down and cry
Because she could not cure a fault
With one small "try."
—Woman's Journal.

Strong Buttonholes.

When making buttonholes in the back of a lace dress or yoke it is hard to get them strong enough. Even when they do not fray they pull and stretch in an ugly way.

The next time you have them to make try sewing the fine net or chiffon as wide as the facing inside the hem where buttonholes are to be worked. This makes three thicknesses to be worked through and is carefully inserted the inner lining will not show.

Another way is to cut a double strip of fine lawn the size of lace, hem and baste it firmly in place. Cut the buttonholes through it, work closely and later cut away close to the work. There is no possibility of showing with this latter method.

The Famous Kumiss.

Kumiss is a valuable beverege for use in the sick-room. Heat one quart of milk to 75 degrees Fahrenheit, add one and one-half tablespoonfuls of sugar, and one-fourth of a yeast-cake dissolved in one tablespoonful of lukewarm water. Fill sterilized bottles to within one and one-half inches of the top, cork, and shake. Place the bottles inverted, where they may remain at a temperature of 70 degrees Fahrenheit for ten hours; then put in the icebox or a cold place, and let stand forty-eight hours, shaking occasionally, to prevent the cream from clogging mouth of the bottle. It is refreshing and nourishing.—Woman's Home Companion.

Creamed Chicken.

Melt half a cup of butter, in it cook half a cup of flour, half a teaspoonful of paprika and a teaspoonful of salt; add one quart of rich milk (preferably part cream), and continually until the sauce is smooth and boiling, then add five cups of cooked chicken cut in half-inch cubes. A plump four-pound chicken will furnish the required quantity. This recipe will serve eight or ten individuals. Chicken Bechamel is considered better than creamed chicken. In this use chicken broth as half or three-fourths of the liquid and cream as the rest.

AMERICA'S NATIONAL PARKS.

The nation that leads the world in feverish business activity requires playgrounds as well as workshops. If we aspire to maintain industrial supremacy we must perforce think of conserving not only minerals but men. Arguments for scenic preservation need not be limited to aesthetic or sentimental postulates; the playgrounds of the nation are essential to its very life. Nor can the materialist turn aside from this demand of the times, for no greater value can be won from mountain slopes and rushing rivers than through the utilization of natural scenery in the development of citizens.

John Muir has justly termed the mountain parks fountains of life. Here can be had the recreation that makes for increased and maintained efficiency. The appreciation of the beautiful in nature should become more and more an American characteristic, and in these days of national stock-taking we do well to inventory the nation's wealth in wild scenery.

The national policy of preserving the best of America for present and future enjoyment is well fixed. Since 1872 twelve national parks have been established, including public domain within as many different States, with an aggregate area of 3,500,000 acres. In addition to these reservations there have been created since June, 1906, eighteen national monuments in nine States, with a total area of over 1,500,000 acres. The Grand Canyon and the Petrified Forest, in Arizona, and the Natural Bridges in Utah are the most notable of the national monuments; of the national parks the Yellowstone, the Yosemite and the Mount Rainier are the best known. The Secretary of the Interior is the federal officer charged with the administration of these national reservations and Congress makes annual appropriations for their maintenance, those for the current year amounting to $175,000. The present policy is to make the utilization of these resources for recreation available to the greatest number of people by building roads and trails, issuing maps and safe-guarding the health and comfort of visitors through sanitary improvements and supervision of the transportation and hotel concessions.

The Northwest is rich in the possession of a large share of these playgrounds of the nation, so that the visitors to the exposition at Seattle this year have an abundance from which to choose. Many will tarry within the Yellowstone Park; others may prefer to retire to a quiet camp on the slopes of Mount Rainier, and then may return southward through Oregon and California, turning aside to visit Crater Lake or the Yosemite Valley and later taking another side trip to the Grand Canyon in Arizona. If a northern route is thought preferable our sister country, Canada, has no less inviting retreats, and the traveler whose ticket reads via the Canadian Pacific should stop off in midsummer at Banff or Glacier, where the grandeur of ice-clad mountains both refreshes and inspires.—American Review of Reviews.

CLEAN EMBROIDERY HOOPS.

If one uses hoops in embroidering at least be particular to keep them clean. Women presumably neat are often seen using hoops of a blackness that is disgraceful. This must be from laziness, as the expense of recovering them is little or nothing.

Any thin muslin cut in narrow strips can be used to cover the wooden rings, but a much better covering is a thin tape about an inch wide, wrapped so that the edge just barely laps over the other. The ends should be sewed firmly, as otherwise the wrapping loosens and slips out of place.

There are various kinds of hoops—bone, wooden, silver and even gold. The last two are luxuries in every sense of the term; unwrapped they require constant care not to tarnish the material, and wrapped might such better be wooden ones at a cost of 5 or 10 cents.

There is now the oblong embroidery hoop that is very practical, particularly when working a scallop or anything that has a long outline. It is in two parts, one fitting over the other, as are the better known round ones.

The fitting of hoops is also important. They should push on rather stiffly. If the material sags it will draw when finished much more than if worked over the fingers.

No Pleasure.

"Do you never indulge in the pleasure of getting out and turning up the fresh earth?"

"It's no pleasure to me," answered the novice at golf. "Every time I go to the club I get nothing but harsh looks for my activities in that direction."—Washington Star.

Why He Led.

The angel was making up the list. "I never asked my fellowman if it was hot enough for him," remarked Abou Ben Adhem.

And, for this one came in under the wire first.—New York Sun.

LICENSES FOR HUNTERS

Residents of the State Must Pay $1.15 for the Privilege of Gunning.

NON-RESIDENTS PAY $10.50.

Permits Can Be Obtained at the Office of City Clerk James T. MacMurray.

According to the new game laws, all hunters in the State are required to take out a license, which amounts to $1.15 which includes the fee for issuing the license. In Plainfield these licenses are issued at the office of City Clerk James T. MacMurray. The law provides that both resident and non-resident hunters shall secure a license, which has not been the case heretofore.

There is no prohibition against granting a license to a minor; nor is there any prohibition against his hunting in a lawful manner. A resident or non-resident license is not transferable, and gives no right to trespass, and is good for the entire State. An alien is compelled to show his naturalization papers or produce other proofs to show that he is entitled to a resident hunting license.

Unnaturalized, foreign-born residents are not permitted to hunt without a license. To obtain such license the applicant should fill out a blank application to be furnished by the Board of Fish and Game Commissioners of the State on the application of any clerk of any county, city, town or township, or other municipality. The cost for such license is $10, together with a fee of fifty cents to the clerk.

Non-residents are not permitted to hunt without a license. The fact that an applicant owns property in this State, or that he has a summer residence in the State, does not entitle him to take out a resident hunting license, if he has not lived in the State one year preceding the application for a license. Only county clerks are authorized to issue licenses to non-residents, the cost of which is $10.50.

When a hunting license has been lost a duplicate or certificate cannot be issued. A new license must be obtained at the original cost. When a resident hunting license has accidentally been spoiled at the time of making it out, in order to obtain credit for the same it must be attached to the report of the month of issue, and forwarded with the regular returns from the county clerk to the State treasurer. No explanation can be accepted unaccompanied by the damaged license. Licenses represent cash. For each license issued the clerk must return either the license itself or the proceeds or the value. A license which has once been issued to a hunter cannot be returned as a spoiled license, neither can a spoiled license be returned at a later date than the first Tuesday of each month following the month of issue.

No citizen of this State shall at any time hunt, pursue or kill with a gun, or any firearm, any game birds, which are protected during any part of the year, without first securing a license, except that the owner or occupant of any farm shall be permitted to hunt game on said farm. This does not include any employe or tenant of said occupant. All licenses are void after December 31 next succeeding the issuance of the same. Any citizen who shall alter or change in manner, or loan or transfer to another any license issued as aforesaid, or give false information, under a penalty of $20, and if a person is convicted of a violation of any of the game laws said license shall be revoked and no new license shall be issued during the year for which it was originally granted.

In the case of non-resident hunters they may remove from the State in any one day birds to the numbers not exceeding fifteen and rabbits to a number not exceeding ten; provided, however, that no removal shall be made except the birds or rabbits exposed to view. For violations of this a fine of $20 may be imposed.

The New Jersey Board of Fish and Game Commissioners are President R. C. Kuser, Trenton; Treasurer W. A. Logue, of Bridgeton; Percival Chrystie, of High Bridge; Simeon H. Rollinson, of West Orange. Walter H. Fell, of Trenton, is secretary.

Funeral of Mrs. L. S. Runk.

The funeral service of Mrs. Lillian S. Runk was held from the late residence, 110 East Fifth street, at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, of which Mrs. Runk was a life-long member and active worker, conducted the service, reading appropriate Scripture selections and offering prayer. The interment was at Bound Brook and the pall-bearers were Percy McVoy, Millard Fillmore Diderton, L. L. Manning and A. T. Runyon.

A NEW SCHEME FOR THE U. S. MAIL BOXES

A new time card for use on mail boxes has been invented by William W. Day, assistant chief of the supply office of the Washington, D. C., postoffice, and has been placed in various parts of Washington for test purposes. This time card is a great improvement over those now in use. Heretofore when changes were made in time of mail collections there was no way of making a change in the time on the card. Mr. Day's card is fitted with slides containing the time of collection. When changes are made in the schedules the postman is given a slide with the new time, and substitutes it for the old one.

Under the present system there is nothing definite about the information printed on the cards, except that "within an hour and a half after the stated time of collection the mail will be delivered at the postoffice." This statement may cover a whole route, so that the mail in the first box reached by the carrier may be taken up an hour before the mail from the last box on this route, there being no individual markings of the time. Under the improved card system every box will be marked differently, so that persons using a particular box may know that within ten minutes after a certain time there will be a collection from that box. This will enable persons to know exactly what time a letter will reach the postoffice after being deposited in the box, and they can calculate what train it will catch and the time of its receipt in the city to which it is destined.

Another advantage of the new scheme is that it is a perfect check on the letter carrier. With the individual cards in operation it will be impossible for a carrier to fail to visit a box without running a great risk of discovery of his neglect of duty.

MAYOR WON'T RUN AGAIN.

Charles B. Holmes, of Rahway, to Quit.

Mayor Charles B. Holmes, of Rahway, announces in an open letter that, under no circumstances, will he consent to become the nominee for Mayor again this year, alleging poor health as the main reason, his eyesight having been failing rapidly within the past six months. Mayor Holmes has held the office several times during the past fifteen years, and had been a member of the Common Council. He feels that he can not afford to sacrifice more of his time for what brings no remuneration, only hard work and some enemies. As a Republican, the Mayor was considered by his party as the best man in sight for renomination, and would have indorsed him at the primaries. It had been expected to start his campaign at the Republican dinner next Thursday night. There, the Mayor says, he will make known the platform virtually the same announcement contained in his letter.

HOTEL RIOTERS IN JAIL.

The colored prisoners arrested in New Brunswick Thursday, charged with locking William E. Smock and his wife in a room in their hotel at East Millstone and then robbing the cash drawer of $35, were taken to New Brunswick jail yesterday. They were Ollie and Charles Duval. Each is charged with assault and battery and robbery.

The men attended a barn at home, and during the night went to the hotel, where they played pool. A quarrel arose, and when Bartender Dunn tried to interfere the couple beat him. The proprietor investigated and was locked in a room at the point of a revolver, while Oram Dixon, of Middlebush, was badly beaten.

FAMILY OF 3,000 SMITHS ASSEMBLED AT SEATTLE.

Three thousand Smiths slept late yesterday recovering from the effects of the big family reunion at the Seattle Exposition grounds at Seattle, Wash., on Thursday. There were red, white and yellow Smiths in evidence—Americans, Esquimax and Indians—and every one of the 3,000 wore a big badge emblazoned "I'm Smith. Are You?"

Representative Smiths from every State and Territory in the Union were on hand and all gathered in the big auditorium in the fair grounds to listen to an address by the Rev. Edward Lincoln Smith, pastor of the Pilgrim church, Seattle.

The Men's Shop Removed.

The Men's Shop has removed from East Front street to the Stirling building on Park avenue, adjoining The Plainfield Trust Company, where a larger store permits a much better display of goods. The store is equipped with all modern conveniences.

BOROUGH FATHERS' WORK

Minor Matters Only Take Up Time of North Plainfield's Council.

RESOLUTIONS AND PETITIONS.

Month's Expenses Are $2,234.00, Ordered Paid—Tax Collector Brown Makes Report.

There was little business of importance considered at the September meeting of the Borough Council, Friday night. There was just a quorum, Mayor Townsend and Councilmen W. L. Smalley, Jr., B. R. Waldron and Julius J. Stahl. Most of the time was taken up with the reception of the monthly reports.

Councilman Stahl reported concerning applications for two permits for buildings, one being from C. W. McCutchen for a small building, 12x8 feet on the north side of Rockview avenue, to be used as a garage. Mr. Stahl said that he gave instructions that the work could be proceeded with, and the other members agreed that it would be all right.

The other request for a permit came from DeLoysett, a wholesale junk dealer from Newark. He wants to build a shed 20x100 on Maple avenue, but as it requires five votes to pass on the permit, the matter will be held up until the next meeting. The Mayor thought it should be investigated still further, and ascertain to what use the man wants to put the building. He said that he might want to use it for a tenement. Mr. Stahl gave as his opinion that it is to be used for the storage of junk. As the borough ordinance restricts building from a fire standpoint, it is doubtful whether this permit can be denied. Besides it is such a distance outside the borough proper, it is considered that there would little or no danger.

Regarding a recent resolution adopted, providing for sidewalks on Greenbrook road, the Mayor said that he had learned that this territory is outside that covered by the ordinance, and at his request the resolution can be re-considered and then tabled. Mr. Townsend said that the borough is pursuing an expensive system in the matter of establishing sidewalk grades. The old system had been followed, that of ascertaining the grade at the middle of the street, whereas the modern and only safe way is to determine it from the curb which does not change. He said that he had asked the borough engineers to give an estimate on a new sidewalk.

A petition was received and favorably acted upon, urging that sidewalks be laid on Mountain avenue, between Westervelt and Watchung avenues. Eleven walks were requested and later Mr. Waldron offered a resolution, which was adopted, authorizing the clerk to notify the property-owners to comply with the ordinance in this respect.

The report from the committee on police and lights was presented by Mr. Stahl, showing expenses for the past month to be $267.57 for police and $481.79 for lights. He also presented the report for the committee on fire and water, the month's expenses being $219.56. Recorder Clark's $5 police court monthly report showed that there were nineteen arrests and $45 received in fines.

Councilman W. L. Smalley, Jr., offered a resolution, which was adopted, authorizing the payment of bills

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Over at the Hippodrome everything is bustle and excitement in preparation for the opening of the big playhouse on this evening when Messrs. Shubert and Anderson will inaugurate the season with a brand new series of spectacles, which they assert under the triple title: "A Trip to Japan, 'Tro' the Centre of the Earth" and "The Ballet of Jewels." This promises to be the most dazzling of all the splendid Hippodrome productions. The first of the three pageants, "A Trip to Japan" has been woven about a dramatic story, having to do with the attempt of an adventurer to smuggle into Japan the plans for an American submarine. A complete cast is indicated, while the part of the entertainment and this will include within itself absolutely new arenic acts, which will be seen for the first time in America. Miss Nannette Flack, the Hippodrome's prima donna, will have the leading role, and Marceline Hill, of course, be one of the lively features of the play as well as of the circus. The second part of the programme which is called "Thro' the Centre of the Earth" will take in the Antipodes and will present some of the strange races on the other side of the globe in realistic scenes from their home life and pursuits.

Klaw & Erlanger have obtained for McIntyre and Heath a very amusing and entertaining production in "McIntyre & Heath in Hayti." John J. McNally wrote the book and lyrics and Jerome D. Schwartz, the music. Mr. McNally takes his characters from French Lick to Hayti, where they become the central figures in a lively revolution. In the cast are Julian Rose, Mabel Seabury, Toby Lyons, Marion Stanley, Jane Burby, Adela Rowland, Alfred Fisher, John H. Pratt, Carl McCullough and Fletcher Norton. McIntyre and Heath will be surrounded by a large and effective chorus of singers and dancers. Scenic settings and costumes will be elaborate and tasteful. The first performance will be given August 23, in the Euclid Avenue Opera House. This is the first time Klaw & Erlanger have ever had the leading house in Cleveland, although it is the home town of Mr. A. L. Erlanger.

Charles Frohman has fixed upon Monday at the Knickerbocker theatre, New York, for the first metropolitan performance of the far-famed Continental success, the musical play, "The Dollar Princess." With a noteworthy cast headed by Donald Brian, Will West, E. J. Connolly, Valli Valli, Adrienne Augarde and Ethel Johnson, the new production, which Berlin and Vienna unanimously proclaimed a worthy successor to "The Merry Widow," skilfully blends an American and English story. Its music is rich in languorous waltzes, delightful lyrics of love, gayety and wit. Charles Frohman has spared neither expense nor pains to bring to "The Dollar Princess" the most tastefully gorgeous staging of any musical piece that has ever borne the Frohman imprint. Mr. Frohman has fine-tooth-combed the musical comedy field of England and America for a group of favorites who are as certain to sweep "The Dollar Princess" as gally forward to epic making success as they have ever been with any musical vehicle with which their names have been associated. The cast of "The Dollar Princess" will be headed by Donald Brian, who is remembered from one end of the country in the role of the superb Danilo in "The Merry Widow."

NARROW ESCAPE OF PLAINFIELD AUTOMOBILISTS.

Owing to the fact that the machine was going only about five miles an hour a party of Plainfielders are not nursing broken bones and perhaps worse injuries today. Edward Steurwald, Mrs. Steurwald, her sister, Miss Minnie Imbleswick, of Long Island City, Thomas Timbo and John Powers while enjoying an automobile trip over the big triangle coming home by way of Bound Brook and on the outskirts of that town ran into a tree in turning an abrupt curve on a thirty foot embankment.

All the occupants of the car were thrown out and although more or less bruised none were seriously injured. The party was brought back to Plainfield in automobiles of fellow motists and the injured attended by Dr. N. H. Probasco. The two women were the greatest sufferers being severely bruised. No bones were broken and they will be well in a few days. The damage to the machine was about ten dollars.

SAY, JUST HOW OLD IS YOUR FAVORITE ACTOR?

There is always an interest on the part of the public in the age of popular favorites of the theatres, and the nationality of the players is scarcely less interesting. This is especially true nowadays when there is a constant exchange of artists between one country and another, and when, as at present, many of the favorites ordinarily regarded as Americans are in reality of foreign origin. A TRAVELER'S POCKET.

Perhaps the most necessary possession of the woman who travels is a stout pocket attached to her corset or worn on a belt beneath her skirt.

The prettiest of white linen envelopes, daintily embroidered and worn with ribbon, may be recommended for a short journey in weather that is not unbearably hot, but when even a neck ribbon cannot be endured the envelope may be sewn to the corset.

There was once a woman (this is a true story) who put her jewel case to her gauze undervest, and, meaning to arrive on the other side of the ocean with only clean clothes and whole ones, she cast into the ocean all those half-worn garments in which she started on her journey. Perhaps you will be nearly as glad as she was to learn that she almost, but not quite, cast the linen pocket into the briny deep. In reality she remembered to unpin it and then momentarily forgot her caution. It is far safer, where notes, jewels and valuable papers are to be carried, to make the bag of suede leather or heavy drill, pocketed anr with flaps that button down, and to wear it in the waist, suspended from a belt fastened with an actual buckle. There is no more useful present for the traveler-to-be. A home-made bag, firmly made on the sewing machine, will prove the best. If this be removed from the beautiful to appeal to you as a presentable gift, why not give with it the embroidered linen envelope? For your traveling friend will, I feel sure, have use for both.

Virginia Beets.

Carefully peel boiled beets and with a sharp knife cut them into very thin and even slices, laying them in layers into a heated vegetable dish; when a layer has been made over the bottom, dot it well with butter, season lightly with salt and sprinkle with one tablespoonful of granulated sugar; then arrange another layer of beets with butter, salt and sugar and proceed in this way until the dish is filled. The work should be done near the fire in order that the beets may not cool, as the dish should be served very hot. If, however, the beets have cooled in preparation, set them in a hot oven for a few minutes and turn them with a spoon in the dish before serving in order that they may be juicy.

LITERARY

In the Atlantic Monthly for September, J. O. Fagan attacks the difficult problem which confronts the Pennsylvania Railroad on account of its refusal to meet the demands of the railroad brotherhoods for an increased share in the management of the road. The Pennsylvania is the last of the personally managed roads, and this struggle gives Mr. Fagan a concrete instance of immense importance to demonstrate what he believes to be the necessity of authority in railroad management.

Having rounded out its first five hundred months of existence with the August number, Lippincott's Magazine starts out with September as though it could see a far longer vista of months and years of life ahead of it. And there is no reason why it shouldn't, so long as its present high quality is sustained.

A story by Henry M. Hyde that is most timely concerned as it is with a love adventure of a young American in Morocco is the leading fiction feature of The Red Book Magazine for September.

Beginning with the cover design, a setter pup in full colors, Recreation for September, now for sale by all newsdealers, is page for page the most interesting and most sumptuously illustrated number this magazine has ever published. The leading feature of the September issue is an article on hunting the white-tailed, or Virginia, deer, by T. S. Van Dyke, author of "The Still-Hunter," who has long been a favorite writer among the million hunters of America.

"Hill against Harriman—The Story of the Two Years' Struggle for the Railroad Supremacy of the West" is the leading feature of the September American Magazine. It's author, George H. Cushing, says: "Hill has worked in the tomorrow of things. Harriman today. Hill has won by projecting an idea ahead of him and working up to it. Harriman thinks in present profit and crashes through opposition with the weight of his financial support. Hill's is the success of brain; Harriman's of money and organization."

The September number of "Success Magazine" begins with an article by H. Addington Bruce entitled "Marvelous Master Sidis," which reveals the wonderful educational heights reached by a boy of eleven. In "Double-Crossing the Ear" Harris Dickson shows how prohibition is a paying proposition in the South. Eugene Wood tells us why and how we laugh in an article called "Why is the Laugh." The editorial for the month is "The Passion for Achievement," by Orison Swett Marden.

Under the present "system," which, during by incumbency in office I have persistent efforts to break down, police officials are supposed to pay to rtheir positions by daily political service, writes general Theodore A. Bingham, in an account of "The New York Police in Politics," in the September Century. When no election is imminent, the district leaders are scheming for the next campaign. If a police captain or inspector honestly enforces the law, this hurts the ward heelers, the saloon and dive keepers, the gamblers, the pawnbrokers, and all others who live by breaking the law; so this police officer must be suppressed or be transferred. To accomplish this a visit to the Commissioner, or even a letter from some one identified with the party, should be sufficient.

NEW BRUNSWICK DEFEATS SCOTCH PLAINS' TEAM

"Dave" Driscoll's New Brunswick team defeated Scotch Plains at New Brunswick, Saturday afternoon, by a score of 4 to 3. Costly errors and MacLaughlin's wildness at critical test for the 'Plains, the Plainfield twirler walking nine men, three in one inning. He was touched for seven hits, while he fanned seven batsmen. The 'Plains found Smith for seven bingles, while nine of them struck out. The score by innings:

New Brunswick..0 3 4 2 0 0 0 0 x—9
Scotch Plains ...1 1 0 0 1 0 1 0 0—4

PLAINFIELD DEFEAT NEWARK F. C. AT SOCCER.

The Association football season was ushered in Saturday when the Plainfield Club met the Newark team. E. C. Westcott kicked the first ball. The game started at 4:15 and in three minutes Newark had scored their first and last goal. In the first half the Plainfield boys settled down to work and when a neat pass from Sutton was caught by Hoale and sent through like a shot, but it could not get by McNeice, who was making splendid saves all the time.

After some more strenuous play the game ended in a win for Plainfield by 2 goals to 1. Great credit is due the local boys for their splendid showing as they were up against a strong pack.

James C. Keegan, of New York city, has returned home after spending a few days with relatives in the borough.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Sept. 12, 1909.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Temperance in all things.—1 Cor. ix, 23-27.

The word "temperance" is usually limited to sobriety—temperance in alcoholic drinks. But it has a much broader meaning than that. Temperance is moderation. It is antagonistic to anything that forms of excess. Therefore, it not only applies to sobriety, but to every phase of life where harm may come through excess, no matter how harmless, yea, even beneficial, the thing may be if used in moderation.

Paul here speaks of the necessity of "temperance in all things" in living a successful Christian life that will result in the salvation of the soul. He speaks of the Christian life as a fight or a contest and also a race, in each of which temperance and moderation are an absolute necessity. No runner could have been successful in the Olympic games unless he had prepared himself for the race, especially by exercising temperance in everything that would hinder him in doing his very best. Each contestant must be watchword of him who would win the crown of victory. Besides moderation in eating and drinking, he would need even to be moderate in training. Excessive training has lost many a race and many a life has been ruined. The leading feature of the September issue is an article on hunting the white-tailed, or Virginia, deer, by T. S. Van Dyke, author of "The Still-Hunter," who has long been a favorite writer among the million hunters of America.

"Hill against Harriman—The Story of the Two Years' Struggle for the Railroad Supremacy of the West" is the leading feature of the September American Magazine. It's author, George H. DEBATE ON AMENDMENTS

these changes? Almost ninety per cent of the legal fraternity, mostly corporation attorneys, are demanding the amendments to the constitution; not the people. The "bosses" may control this State, but I am my own boss, and I cannot be made to swallow this pill of insolent usurpation of the power of the people."

Mr. Martine quoted from some newspaper clippings in which Vice-Chancellor Pitney was quoted as favoring the proposed amendments, and turned to the audience and asked them if they would stand for the fastening of the English system of jurisprudence on the free people of the State of New Jersey. To abolish the court of chancery would be a disaster.

Mr. Martine called by name all the great judges of the court of chancery for several decades back and referred to their records as proof that the abolishment of the court would be a catastrophe. He *quoted a judge, whose name is with*held, who said: "I can clean my calendar and am against the amendments, but in my position I cannot openly oppose them. With the lawyers interested in the amendments, he said: "their love of pelf is greater than that of country. The reason some men have refused judgships was because the salary was not commensurate with the labor involved."

Mr. Martine objected to increasing the salaries of the assemblymen because their work does not warrant it and as for increasing their term of service some of them have been there too long, when they have spent one year in the service of their constituents. "If a man is a good legislator he will be sent back with bells on," he said, "but if he is no good one year would be too much for him to serve. Do you want a handful of men to do your thinking for you?

"I believe the fifth amendment to be unconstitutional because it involves the voting on two questions which is specifically provided against by law. What do we want direct primaries for? Why, to get close to the people. These amendments are of no use to the common people, but are made purely in the interests of corporation lawyers. You ought to vote against everyone of these amendments. If we need another constitution let it be made in convention not by the legal fraternity or the bosses." Mr. Martine ended his peroration with a poem.

President Ellis invited others to speak and Samuel S. Swackhamer was persuaded to say a few words in which he remarked that he did not think a man should discuss a subject unless he thoroughly familiar with it and as that was his case he decided it would be both unbecoming and unwise to express an opinion on the subject."

Winfield S. Angleman was not ironsided in any way and spoke freely against the amendments. Mr. Angleman said that too much hocus-pocus had been published in the newspapers on the subject and that the constitution should be revised by the Constitutional Committee. He said that not a newspaper in the speaker has yet shown where the proposed amendments will expedite the administration of justice. "There is not a State in the country whose courts are so free from delay as the courts of the State of New Jersey," he said, "and there is not a fault in our judiciary system which cannot be corrected by a rule of court. The calendars sometimes become congested because the courts do not meet often enough—only thrice a year. There are ways in which the cases can be handled without overmuch delay."

The meeting was over at 10 o'clock and adjourned to meet in the club rooms next Wednesday evening, September 15, at the regular hour.

Hummer Family Reunion.

At the fifth annual reunion of the Hummer family held Labor Day at the home of Charles Hummer, Jr., on Linden avenue, four generations were represented by Mrs. Ann Hummer, of Annandale; Lewis A. Hummer, Louis M. Hummer and Norman Hummer, all of East Fifth street, this city. There were twenty-four present from various parts of the State.

Election Officers Had Easy Time.

The local boards of registry and election had a comparatively idleness yesterday, when they met at the various polling places to register names of voters. In every district the officers had practically nothing to do between the hours of 1 and 9 o'clock.

—The choice and fancy white and yellow peaches placed on sale by Neuman Brothers today is the best fruit obtainable. There are 200 baskets at low prices.

Henry Bodenheimer Broke Pledge.

Henry Bodenheimer, of Somerset street, who a month ago, "took the pledge" before Recorder Dolliver in the borough court, "broke out again' last night, and upon the complaint of his wife, he was arrested and taken before Recorder Dolliver, who sentenced him to three days in the borough lockup.

Auto Company Transfer.

The Morris Auto Company, of East Fourth street, has sold its business to Clarence B. Brokaw, of De Lacey avenue. George R. Morris, the manager of the old company, leaves the city in a few days for Colorado Springs for a rest.

MISS CURRY EULOGIZED

Many Tributes Paid to the Matron of Netherwood Fresh Air Home.

A FINE MUSICAL PROGRAM.

James F. Parker, J. D. Loizeaux, George A. Chapman and Miss Curry Speak to Large Audience.

The pavilion at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home was filled to its utmost capacity Sunday afternoon when the last service of the season took place. The platform was handsomely decorated with flags and flowers and presented a pretty picture. The services were in charge of J. D. Loizeaux, president of the association, and several speakers made short addresses. Music was furnished by a quartet from the Park Avenue Baptist church composed of Mrs. R. E. Hampton, Mrs. Hadley, Mr. Hadley and D. M. Runyon, assisted by Martin A. Korff with the violin. Mr. Humpston presided at the organ. It was a meeting eulogizing Miss Sara Curry, the matron.

After the singing of a hymn by the entire audience, the children of the camp sang their favorite "God Will Take Care of You." This was followed by a quartet selection entitled, "Nearer, Still Nearer." The scripture was read by Mr. Loizeaux and prayer offered by L. W. Randolph. Mrs. Humpston then sang with much expression "When the Mists Have Cleared Away."

James F. Parker was the first speaker of the afternoon and he gave an eloquent short address on "The Lost Sheep," making the lesson plain to the youngest of his audience. In explaining the meaning of "lost" Mr. Parker made use of the illustration of the finding of the North Pole, which never had been lost, although it has recently been discovered. Everyone knew that the pole was there, but it is not so with the lost sheep, they stray from place to place and without a leader are lost, and have only scant synpathy for the lost souls of men. Mr. Parker eulogized Miss Curry and spoke of her work as being the most self-sacrificing and beautiful in character that he had ever known.

Mr. Loizeaux gave a short address in which he said that this marked the closing of a most successful season and on the part of the children he thanked those who had in any way contributed to the maintenance of the work. Ethel and Lena Steinfeld, two of the youngest in the city sang a duet, impressive in its simplicity. It is safe to say that the "City Four Square" never had a more sincere rendering.

George A. Chapman spoke briefly of his association with Miss Curry and said that he regarded it as one of the greatest privileges he had ever enjoyed to have known her. He said that no one could be with her very long without becoming better. Her work and its influence extends far beyond the confines of Netherwood," he said, "and she is litterally following Christ. Her faith in the power of prayer and the power of God, as shown in the life of Christ is beautiful."

Martin Korff played the "Flower Song" and followed that up by giving a very clear illustration of the meaning of faith, using a peanut and one of the little boys of the camp. This was much appreciated. Dr. Ralston, of New York city, addressed the audience and told of his long and profitable association with Miss Curry. He said that Miss Curry exhibited an interest in her charges which was a most uncommon thing, even among those whose financial condition enabled them to have every comfort that money can buy. He, like Mr. Chapman, believed that Miss Curry's faith and prayer sustained her with a strength which is beyond human comprehension.

Miss Curry was persuaded to say a word and her remarks were very brief and in part as follows: "God bless you all. We have had a wonderful summer. We started in fear and trembling, but we have been mightily blessed by the Giver of good gifts. I shall be a summer we will all of us remember. All you who are here and have helped in this work, as well as those who are not here, but has helped, will never know how much and what has have done until we meet up yonder. God bless you all."

The children accompanied by most of the mothers and helpers at the home left the camp this morning for New York city, where the children will soon take up their studies in the public schools.

A farewell meeting at which goodgoodbys will be tendered to Miss Curry is expected to be held Saturday evening next in the auditorium of the camp, when reports of the year's work will be read. A notice of this meeting will be given out during the week.

John J. Kenney, of East Second street, entertained a party of friends from out of town over Labor Day.

Mrs. H. C. La Man, of the Bronx, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. G. P. Randolph, of 206 East Front street.

Thomas Kenney and son, of Indianapolis, are visiting relatives in this city.

CAPT. PHILLIPS' FUNERAL

Skipper, Whose Ship Was Captured by the Alabama, is Dead.

BURIAL AT CAMBRIDGE, MASS.

Services at His Late Home Today Conducted by Rev. George A. Warner.

Captain George M. Phillips, an old resident of this city, who resided at 1122 West Front street, died Saturday noon of heart failure after an illness of four weeks. During the last week of his illness Captain Phillips was unconscious. He had celebrated his seventy-ninth birthday in August and, while ailing managed to keep around until the fatal attack seized him.

Captain Phillips had been a sailor from the time he was sixteen years old, retiring a few years ago with a competence. He commanded several of the old clipper ships plying between San Francisco and Hong Kong, China, as well as ships whose home port was Liverpool. It was on one of these, the Dictator, he was skipper when she was seized and burned by the rebel cruiser Alabama during the Civil War, while on the way from Liverpool to San Francisco.

The rebel captain relieved Captain Phillips of everything he possessed including his uniform and cap afterwards landing him at a point on the English coast from which he made his way to Liverpool. He was a life member of the New York Maritime Society and was a well known man in shipping circles all over the globe. He is survived by a widow and an adopted daughter.

Funeral services, conducted by Rev. George Warner, rector of Holy Cross church, were held Tuesday at 4:30 o'clock at his late residence and were attended by a delegation from the Maritime Society and Exchange from New York. The interment will be at Cambridge, Mass., at the convenience of the family.

HELD 'OPEN HOUSE' AT PARK GOLF CLUB

The Park Golf Club held an "at home" at the club, Monday, when the members invited their friends to enjoy the hospitality to be offered at the clubhouse and on the course. It was a gala day for the popular borough organization. There was a record breaking attendance and an unusual number of automobile parties. The course was crowded all day, while many enjoyed themselves playing tennis.

At the clubhouse there were many social features. During the afternoon the women members received and tea was served. In the evening a number remained for dinner. The day marked the resumption of fall activities and it was an auspicious occasion.

The chief event on the course was a 36-hole medal play handicap for a cup. There was a large field. The leading scores:

R. V. Carpenter, 207, 46-161; J. H. Howell, 205, 40-165; Samuel Townsend, 204, 36-168; R. B. Titsworth, 200, 32-168; Charles B. Morse, 194, 24-170; W. R. Faber, 201, 26-175; W. E. Lough, 211, 32-179.

At 5 o'clock in the afternoon there was an approaching and putting competition open to all. This was won by Dr. and Mrs. William Rankins, of New York, with a score of 9, after being tied with two other couples with the same score. Miss Ella TenEyck and J. W. Hegeman and Miss Rocap and R. V. Carpenter tied with the winning couple, but on the play-off, Dr. and Mrs. Rankins won out.

There was an unusually large field out at the Park Golf club, Saturday, when the weekly competition for the President's and golf club cups was the event of interest. The leading scores returned for the day were as follows:

R. V. Carpenter, 196, 22-82; J. H. Howell, 104, 20-84; Samuel Townsend, 102, 18-84; W. R. Faber, 97, 13-84; Dr. H. K. Carroll, 95, 7-88; W. V. Hyard, 102, 14-88; Frank Sill, 117, 30-87.

OUTDOOR SPORTS AT MT. BETHEL MONDAY.

The annual Labor Day picnic and athletic games held at Mt. Bethel, Monday, were a great success, being largely attended by people from all parts of the metropolitan district as well as New Jersey. There was a baseball game between Mt. Bethel and a club made of New Yorkers. The home team won by a score of 10 to 6.

The two mile bicycle race was won by Thomas Smith, of Plainfield, in 4:40, the prize being a Marlow fruit dish. Dan Hoffmann, of New York, won the 150-yard dash in 15½ seconds, the prize being a silver cup. J. Gunther won the mile foot race in six minutes and twenty-one seconds, the prize being a watch. Charles V. Wicht, of the Clarkhurst Farms, acted as referee for the games.

JOHNNY CAMPBELL'S BOWLING ALLEYS OPEN

Notwithstanding their long vacation, local pin knights were in a high scoring mood at the opening of Johnny Campbell's alleys on Saturday night.

The first two hundred score was made by Frank Willett, who in his second game rolled 225. Charlie Eller came in from Scotch Plains and after rolling a few games made a new record for the season, reaching 247.

Members of Watchung Council, K. of C., will roll the first match game of the season on Thursday night when teams captained by Arthur Canon and Dave Doyle will battle for supremacy.

The alleys have been thoroughly renovated and are now in excellent shape.

FINE GOLF SCORES AT COUNTRY GOLF CLUB

There was a large holiday crowd at the Plainfield Country Club, Monday, and all thoroughly enjoyed the delightful weather on the course. The social features at the clubhouse included the serving of tea in the afternoon and a dinner-dance in the evening. There was an unusually large attendance, especially at night.

The event on the course was a 36-hole, medal play, handicap, classes A and B for cups presented by Alexander Gilbert and Henry D. Hibbard. The latter won the Class A cup, with a score of 152, while Gerald F. Earl won the Class B cup with a score of 138. The best scores for the day:

Classs A—Henry D. Hibbard, 170, 18-152; R. G. Morse, 183, 18-165.

Class B—Gerald F. Earl, 188, 50-138; H. G. Lapsley, 182, 40-142; J. R. Greason, Jr., 187, 42-145; George E. Cathcart, 182, 32-150; Edward J. Patterson, 201, 50-151; Hugh F. Fox, 200, 48-152; H. A. G. Taylor, 195, 40-155; Dr. F. E. DuBois, 209, 54-155; B. F. Kraffert, 206, 50-156.

Golf activities were resumed at the Plainfield Country Club Saturday, with the initial play for the Fall Handicap cups, weekly competition, to be continued until October 24. There was a large field out. The leading scores in Classes A and B were as follows:

Class A—R. G. Morse, 85, 13-72, Henry D. Hibbard, 88, 9-79; Julius E. Erickson, 94, 14-80.

Class B—Gerald F. Earl, 94, 25-69; Dr. F. E. DuBois, 102, 27-75; E. P. Goodwin, 96, 15-81; George E. Cathcart, 105, 16-89.

JOE ALBERTS INJURED IN GAME AT RAHWAY

Joe Alberts, who has been playing with Rahway for several weeks, was injured by being hit in the stomach with a batted ball, while covering third base in the game at Rahway, Monday afternoon. Dr. F. Worrell was called to attend the player, who was unconscious for some time. It was feared that he was injured internally.

Alberts has been playing baseball for a number of teams in this section and is popular with the fans. Several years ago he was hit in the head with a pitched ball and was unable to play for a long time. At the time it was thought his skull was fractured, but he came around all right.

TOWNSHIP SCHOOL BOARD RESOLUTION REVOKED.

A short while ago an attempt was made to incorporate a resolution in the rules of the Board of Education of New Providence township to prohibit unofficial visitors of the school from addressing the pupils. It was quite clear to his friends that the resolution was directed at Mr. Jeffery Carter, practically the only unofficial visitor that addressed the pupils last year. He stated at a meeting of the board held recently that he never addressed the children except by permission of the teachers in charge; that the resolution was effective and unnecessary, that he had written to twenty boards of education in the vicinity of the township with the result that not one of them employes such a rule.

A letter was read from Dr. Savitz, of Westfield, the county superintendent that he thinks such a resolution proper and that the time had gone when visitors to the schools addressed the children.

Notwithstanding this, the majority of the board favored Mr. Jeffery's attitude and voted to rescind and strike off the books the proposed resolution. Those who thus voted were: Louis A. Burgmiller, Robert G. Rogers, Thomas P. Rogers, William F. Lutz, Jr., and Angelo Delduco. Those who wanted the resolution and who voted for it were: Willis Fletcher Johnson, W. C. Johnson and Henry S. Fullerton.

Herman Berkhan, of Watchung avenue, who has been seriously ill, is improving.

RAHWAY SUCCUMBS AT LAST TO PLAINFIELD

The Plainfield Baseball club at last got revenge when on Saturday, it defeated the Rahway team on it's home grounds by a score of 13 to 8. It was the first victory for the Plainfielders over the Rahwegians this season, and it was accomplished by a lot of satisfaction. The home team, while admitting that it was outplayed for the most part, explains that the Plainfielders were materially assisted in their victory by two decisions of the umpire in calling a hit in each of two inning fair, which many believed was foul.

There was no question, however, in the minds of a majority of the crowd, but that Plainfield won the game fairly. Brewer held his opponents safe throughout, allowing but nine hits, while fourteen bingles were gathered off the delivery of the hitherto mysterious Clarke. Rahway transgressed on the matters of recording eight misplays, quite unusual, but Plainfield had them going and decided to make it a signal victory while in the humor. Brit. Martin's stick work was a feature of the contest, while the entire Plainfield aggregation put up its usual snappy game. The score by innings:

Rahway ..3 0 1 0 2 0 0 0 2— 8 9 8

Batteries—Brewer and Seery; Clark and Freeman.

WESTFIELD'S RACES ATTRACTS A CROWD

About 2,500 spectators enjoyed the Labor Day meet of the Westfield Driving and Riding Club, held at the Fair Acres half-mile circle at Westfield Monday afternoon. There were enough starters in each event to make the program interesting. The track was in excellent condition on the day ideal. Horses from Rahway, Irvington, Jersey City, Far Hills, Trenton, Plainfield, High Bridge, Fanwood, Westfield and Morrisville, Pa., were entered.

Aaron B., a chestnut gelding owned by Adam C. Blair, of this city, won the 2:14 trot and 2:17 pace in straight heats. J. A. Hartman, jr's chestnut gelding Foot Prince won the 2:21 trot and 2:25 pace in like manner. Barona, a brown mare owned by B. E. Carpenter, of Rahway, won the 2:20 trot and pace by taking the three last heats. The sulkies of Ithyn, bay gelding, owned by C. B. Smith, of Westfield, and of Queen, a black mare, owned by R. W. French, of Westfield, broke down in the third heat of the 2:25 trot. They got together, however, and came to the line in time for the final heat, which was won by Ithyn.

GARWOOD TAKEN INTO CAMP AT THE PLAINS

The Scotch Plains team defeated the Garwoods at the Plains Sunday by a score of 12 to 4, in a rather uninteresting contest. Manager Watts seemed determined to down the Plains and picked what looked like a strong aggregation. When it came to a show down the visitors were not in it. Montross was in the box for Garwood against his old team-mates. Jimmy got a warm reception, being touched for fifteen hits. MacLaughlin allowed but six hits, but was inclined to wildness, walking six men. The score by innings:

FORFEITED THE GAME

'Plains Team Refuses to Play After Disputed Decision by Umpire Waters.

WRANGLED FOR 50 MINUTES.

A Fine Game Marred by Unpleasant Ending—Will Play Again Next Week.

Deciding that umpire Waters had no right to reverse a decision he had made fifty minutes before, the Scotch Plains baseball team left the field Monday afternoon, forfeiting the game to Plainfield by a score of 9 to 6. Up to the time that the dispute arose as to whether Boyd was out, the game was an exciting one and twelve hundred spectators were rooting for their respective favorites with all their might. It was an unfortunate ending to an otherwise good game.

The dispute arose in this way: Barnes had slipped over a neat two-bagger and was resting on third when Dodge sent a sizzling single to left. Barnes scored on the hit and Boyd, who was on second tried to get home by exiting third. Umpire Waters called Boyd out for not touching third and immediately there was a howl. According to the rules Boyd should have been "played" out at third and as he ran back to the base before that play was made he was safe.

Manager Frentz, of the 'Plains team could not see that umpire Waters had any right to change his decision for to Boyd's being out and after wrangling for nearly an hour he refused to proceed with the game.

Perhaps the fact that Plainfield had begun to find Miller the 'Plains pitcher had something to do with Manager Frentz's action. The fact that up to this inning—the eighth—Miller had been an enigma to the locals seemed to warrant this belief for the four men who faced Miller up to the game was stopped hit the ball hard.

As for the rest of the game it was all 'Plains until the eighth owing to Miller's good pitching. Plainfield put up a fine fielding game which kept the score down. In the first inning 'Plains got a couple of runs across on some free hitting and an error, but after that Brewer held them safe at all stages. Some remarkably clever playing by Crosby, a Rahway man, who covered short for Plainfield, was the feature and it was Crosby's knowledge of the rules that made it possible for Boyd to get back to third at the time of the dispute.

It was announced yesterday that Plainfield will play 'Plains a game in their home ballwick next Sunday. If this game comes off there will be something doing. Manager Dorflinger regrets the manner in which the game terminated but abided by the final decision of the umpire.

HOUSEHOLD JOTTINGS.

Never put thin glassware into hot water bottom first, as it is apt to crack from sudden expansion. Slip it in edgewise.

Have you ever tried adding a teaspoonful of paraffine to every gallon of water when boiling white clothes. It is said to be excellent for removing stains.

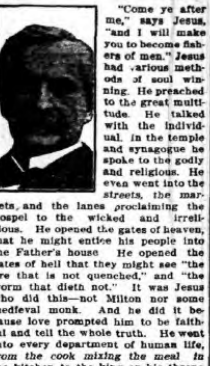
Remember, good tools make rapid work. If you do not own a good knife sharpener, which you can use to improve your steel knives, not guns then, as in the usual amateur sharpener's method, make arrangements for your knives to be sharpened by a professional every two weeks.

Do not wash colored clothes in the same water with all white ones. This especially holds good if one happens to have table linen with colored borders.

Dish cloths cannot be kept clean without daily boiling. They should not only be washed out thoroughly after each meal and hung in sun to dry, but once a day, or without fail every other day, should be boiled in water to which has been added washing soda or a tablespoon of kerosene.

Methods of Fishing for Men

By REV. A. C. DIXON, D. D., Pastor of the Chicago Ave. Church, Chicago.



"Come ye after me," says Jesus, "and I will make you to become fishers of men." Jesus had various methods of soul winning. He preached to the great multitude. He talked with the individual, in the temple and synagogue he spoke to the godly and religious. He even went into the streets, the markets, and the lanes proclaiming the Gospel to the wicked and irreligious. He opened the gates of heaven that he might entice his people into the Father's house. He opened the gates of hell that they might see "the fire that is not quenched," and "the worm that dieth not." It was Jesus who did this—not Milton or any medieval monk. And he did it because love prompted him to be faithful and tell the whole truth. He went into every department of human life, from the cook shining the meat in the kitchen to the king on the throne inviting to his son's marriage, that he might get an illustration, a handle by which the people might take hold of the truth. Let us come after Jesus in his methods.

In fishing there must be skillful adaptation. There are fish that you cannot catch singly. They go in schools. They do not bite hooks. If you ever catch a fish of that kind you have to draw the seine around the whole school. There are people like these fish. They are fond of crowds. They go together. They will come to the great assembly, and when they hear witnesses testify for Christ they will believe the testimony. When they see people go into the after-meeting they will go with them; when they hear them confess Christ they will be encouraged to confess. You can reach that class of people only through the crowd. They are social beings and you must touch them in their social nature.

There are other fish that do not go in schools. Like the brook trout, they hide in out-of-the-way places. They are timid and wary. A fly out of season has no attraction for them. The fisherman must keep out of their sight, and if he breaks a stick he has lost his chance of catching that fish. There are men of this kind. They hate the crowd. They are timid. They do not like the personal approach. If you go in the open you will frighten them away. We need the wisdom of God in tactful approach, that we may say just the right word to just the right subject or topic. Nicodemus could hardly have been won in a crowd—that meditative, thoughtful, inquisitive mind. He wanted the quiet of the midnight hour, and a whisper in the quiet was more to him than a thunder peal in the turmoil. He could not have won the woman at the well in a crowd. If Jesus had spoken to her in the presence of others she would have been embarrassed and perhaps embittered. The truth had been in the crowd in Jerusalem. He had doubtless heard the apostles preach, but it took the quiet chariot ride with Deacon Philip at his side, talking in conversational tone, to win him to the Lord.

There are others that you must win in more heroic fashion. Saul of Tarsus could never have been won in a quiet way. To have mentioned the fact that you wished him to become a Christian would have led to your arrest. It took the light from heaven, the flash from God; it took the blinding and the dark to bring him to consider and make him pray.

Edward Payson, with his tones of tender love, put people to sleep. What they needed was a Jonathan Edwards with a thunderbolt against sin in every paragraph. "Gipsy" Smith, with his fascinating gypsiness that has in it the fragrance of the wild flowers and the sweetness of the bird's song in the woods, is very attractive to some, and they are glad to hear the Gospel as he preaches it.

You do not fish for trout as you do for sturgeon. Try your trout bait on sturgeon and you will get no fish; try your sturgeon bait on trout and you will not fill your basket. So do not criticise the trout fisher because he refuses to use the sturgeon method, and do not criticise the sturgeon fisher because he refuses to use the trout method. "By all means save some."

A word as to process. "Come ye after me and I will make you to become fishers of men." No man can be a soul winner Christ can make you one. Just transfer the experience of your business to the spiritual realm and see how it works. You are a merchant? "Come ye after me," says Jesus, "and I will make you a merchant of men. I will help you to deal in goods that do not perish with the using—in merchandise better than gold." Are you a carpenter? "Come ye after me and I will make you a carpenter of men, building structures of character that will outlast marble and granite." Are you a sculptor? "Come ye after me and I will make you a sculptor of men, chiseling into shape that will stand after the marble of Phidias has crumbled into dust." Whatever your occupation, let your experiences in that occupation be projected into the fishing for men.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

Whoever works silently and preparedly works by God's plan.—Rev. Dr. S. Edward Young, Presbyterian, Brooklyn.

Joy of Giving.

Giving imparts more joy than receiving, because giving includes receiving.—Rev. Dr. A. C. Dixon, Baptist, Chicago.

Unity.

When the bishops, clergy and people unite there is no such word as fail, for they form a triple'cord which cannot be easily broken.—Cardinal Gibbons, Roman Catholic, Baltimore.

Worship.

Worship is the means by which the empty soul approaches God to be filled with his fullness and that it may then go out to live for him in the strength thus received.—Rev. Dr. John H. Prugh, Reformed, Pittsburg.

Tainted Love.

A man ought to be a Christian regardless entirely of considerations of gain. It is a tainted love that loves or pretends to love God for a consideration.—Rev. John Flagg, Presbyterian, New York.

The Life Eternal.

Eternal life is a beginning, not a completion. It is a process and a growth. It is a summer of growing grain, but not an autumn with its ripened harvest. It is a life of conscious fellowship with God.—Rev. W. Jasper Howell, Baptist, Brooklyn.

Strong Gifts to Fight Sin with.

Nothing is strong enough to resist infinite power. Nothing is perplexing enough to foil infinite wisdom. And when these gifts have behind them infinite love there can be but one issue in the fight with sin.—Rev. W. H. Morrison, Universalist, Brockton, Mass.

Antidote of Pessimism.

The numerous blind and undefiled people of today is a prophecy of what humanity will come to. It will be a harvest of souls. The antidote of modern pessimism is found in the house of God, and the gospel will be universally diffused.—Rev. C. F. Aked, Baptist, New York.

Christ's Power.

Christ had marvelous power to inspire people to a holy enthusiasm. His sweet spirit, holy example, pure life, were inspiring, soul stirring. Something flashed from his eye, rang from his voice, flowed from his emotions, which made him irresistible.—Rev. Dr. William A. Hunter, Presbyterian, Los Angeles, Cal.

Cure For Sin and Doubt.

The cure for doubt on all Christian essentials is not more evidence to the mind, but the cure of the sin principle in the heart, so that desire may run parallel to judgment and reason. Men do not necessarily sin because they doubt, but they do naturally doubt because they sin. And the cure for sin is the cure for doubt.—Rev. Frank W. Luce, Methodist, Cleveland, O.

We Reap What We Sow.

Who shall even guess all that immortality may mean? No description has ever furnished a hint of what we shall be. Analogy suggests that the future is clear. Heaven and hell will be the answers to what we are. Not even God can put heaven into an unheavenly heart, and not all demons can prevail to keep a heavenly spirit out of heaven. Sow as we will we reap.—Rev. Dr. George Clarke Peck, Methodist Episcopal, New York.

True Friendship.

The tremendous pressure upon the Christian church is not to give the world a new theology—that is easy; not to create a new organization, that is too simple; not to multiply in numbers, for that may be misleading. But its supreme task is to create a constituency of those who have direct access to God, and to help them to think about the same, are earnest enough to test the faith in real service and then in the bond of a vital brotherhood, knit together by love and guided by the Holy Spirit, give to the world a demonstration of what here is true friendship. Paul found Cephas.—Rev. Dr. Robert W. McLaughlin, Congregationalist, Brooklyn.

Cure of Crime.

What is the true method of curing crime? We have inherited many things from the past. One of the worst is our tribe of criminals; the other is the false and inhuman way of dealing with them. If men easily consigned heretics to an endless hell, so they condemn criminals here to a hell on earth, for until these latest days all penal institutions were hells in sober fact. We are becoming more humane; we are also wiser. Punishment does not cure crime. What does? Creating a new will. Only God can do this. He alone can do it. Put industry in place of idleness, justice in place of greed, integrity in place of dishonesty—in short, by the "reformatory" plan.—Rev. A. B. Beresford, Universalist, Baltimore.

Man's Price.

While every man has his price, it is not true that every man has his price. It is a foul libel on our common humanity to say so. There are men in every station in life not purchasable. Gold and place cannot buy them. The offer of a crown could not swerve Washington from the path of duty. However, there is a sense in which a man may have his price. Ambition may inspire him. The rewards of ambition offered for the price with which he is to be purchased. If he is seeking fame, the pains, research, adventure and toils which accompany that seeking stand for his price. Then he must pay the price for the attainment of virtue by which to attain the consciousness of serving God, a price beyond any arithmetical value.—Bishop Samuel Fallows, Reformed Episcopalian, Chicago.

A NEW SUPPER PARTY.

Hostesses are now serving a fruit omelet made by the following formula:

Chop raisins, currants, candied peels, citron, oranges and lemons, figs and French prunes or any similar fruits until you have a scant half-cupful when mixed. They can be put through the meat cutter, using a coarse knife and having about equal parts of the different fruits.

When the fruits are mixed add just a dash of powdered cinnamon. Put the mixture in a double boiler with the juice of an orange and allow it to cook for thirty minutes.

To make the omelet itself break four eggs into a dish and beat them lightly and quickly, but merely enough to mix the yolks and whites together. Add a tablespoonful of powdered sugar and a teaspoonful of butter. Melt a second teaspoonful of butter in the chafing dish. Get it hot, but without allowing it to brown; then turn in the eggs. Shake the pan so that they will not set. Let them brown until the egg is well cooked, lifting the edges as this is formed to allow the raw to run upon the hot pan.

The moment the omelet is well set pour in the hot fruit, folding over quickly and turn on a plate. Sprinkle it with powdered sugar and serve immediately.

GOOD BARGAINS IN ANTIQUE FURNITURE.

This particular season of the year is ideal for a woman with money who wants to buy old furniture, for auction shops and antique dealers sell at lower prices than in winter, when business is brighter and many a bargain is secured now.

When searching for old chairs, bedsteads, etc., one must remember that a marked characteristic of real antiques is their softness. Just as embroideries tone and mellow with times, so does mahogany, and nothing has yet been found to imitate this effect of years. Much so-called mahogany which is sold to the unsuspecting is cherry, by wood much used at one time, and some beautiful pieces, in the same designs as mahogany tables, etc., were turned out in this red wood. It, too, mellows and becomes richer with age, and in its best condition there is little choice between the two, but it denotes a woeful lack of knowledge when cherry is put forth by a purchaser as mahogany.

In some of the older bureaus, or those made at a certain period, the two woods are combined. When new no attempt was made to disguise the fact, but a different method is now sometimes pursued, and because a drawer may be mahogany it by no means follows that the rest of the piece is of the same wood, but if the furniture is hauled into a bright light there will be no difficulty in detecting the difference between the two colors. Cherry is valuable, but less expensive than the collector's point of view, than the brown wood, unless the former has carving or special work to give it particular value.

The difference between veneer and solid mahogany is that only in the veneer can the exquisite pattern of the grain be made to match perfectly. As it is a thin coating of wood, pressed to a solid foundation. It is naturally less durable than the solid, and so is liable to chip. Nevertheless, it can be repaired always at small cost, and many persons prefer it because of its greater beauty.

Drawers, tables or buffet tops, or such plain surfaces, are most apt to be veneered. The work is sometimes done on solid mahogany, and the other parts of the piece are finished on the natural surface. Such are valuable, but like cherry, should be bought understandingly.

Modern reproductions can be told, as a rule, because the two shades used in the finish are almost distinctly brown and red, instead of the two blending into one. Yet the better the finish the less separate are the two colors, and I know of no way in which an amateur may be certain that she is getting what she wishes. One who knows the difference sees them as plainly as the average individual would the difference between satsen and velvet, for the same reason—one has depth and softness while the other is shiny.

THINKING IT OUT.

Keep your thoughts on your work! You will never make yourself over into a successful dressmaker, although you may be the neatest of seamstresses, if you cannot put some mind into your garment.

This thoughtful attitude of mind may not be one of your gifts, but it may be cultivated by the persistent worker who is willing to master the real secret of putting this and that together. "This" may be a deep skirt yoke or a jersey or fitted cuirass, and "that" may be a pleated lower section, depending from it.

Now let us suppose, for the time being, that the lower skirt, which you have pleated mechanically, according to the notches, proves too large to fit into the hip piece—just what do you intend to do? Nine-tenths of the thoughtless, who make their clothes without once sharpening their wits upon them as they sew, will cut off the extra pleat or two, and thus fit in the pleating successfully. But one woman out of a given ten will keep the skirt exactly the width the pattern allowed and will use her mind to evolve the theory that a certain width is required for walking purposes, and that therefore the springing in or the top of each pleat will produce the desired shortening of the whole without a sacrifice of the lower width.

This is but a single instance of the necessity for staying wide awake to the task. Each season's models vary to such an extent that there can be no royal road to dress manufacture. Certain basic principles alone can be taught, just as it is possible to teach only the main points of pattern cutting.

Peculiar styles bring, each one, its own curious lines, which the expert will readily follow, but which the novice will grasp more slowly and by applying herself to the task, by going back mentally to the a b c of cutting and by thinking in advance of her work. Those who blunder along will do more ripping than sewing. They will, moreover, sew the last part first, which is death to a beautiful result. The gown "with a soul" has never been evolved by a mindless woman.

A HEALTHY PERSONS NEEDS A GOOD BREAKFAST.

Dr. Woods Hutchinson, iconoclast-inordinary to the medical profession, as usual upsets our previous ideas of bodily health in an article in Woman's Home Companion. Doctor Hutchinson has a faculty for restoring to us our self-respect, and assuring us that, left alone, we are not such idiots, after all. In this particular article, for instance, he points out that the idea of eating little in the summer-time is a fallacy. Of breakfast, for instance, he says.

"It is customary to make the first meal of the day slightly and lightest and distinctly the plainest and simplest of the three. If there be any deficiency of the appetite, breakfast is the meal at which this is most likely to show itself. But this lack of appetite is in nine cases out of ten clearly traceable to sleeping in an unventilated room or to late hours in foul air the night before or to insufficient exercise the preceding day, and is no indication that the body really requires less food at this time. Perfectly healthy men who sleep with their windows open and go to bed at a reasonable hour will tell you that they enjoy their breakfast as well as any other meal of the day, and many even call it their best meal.

"Another popular delusion in regard to the lightness and unimportance of the breakfast is that wide-spread subterfuge, the 'sentimental breakfast,' consisting of a cup of coffee and some fruit or a single roll. This is a very pretty breakfast, as far as it goes, but it doesn't go far, and the sole basis for its adoption on the continent is that it is only intended as a temporary tide-over, until the real breakfast, of meat, eggs, fish, with beer or wine, which is taken at about 10 or 11 o'clock, like a very early luncheon. If you haven't got a good appetite for breakfast, make it your business to go and get one, instead of allowing yourself to be blinded by this morbid state of affairs and deciding that all you really need is a cup of coffee and a roll or an orange or a puff of breakfast bran."

THE WRONG MAN.

Brown is going around with a variegated eye. This is the story that he is telling his friends:

"It was such a pretty thing that the more I thought of it the madder I got.

"The milkman leaves my milk before the sun is up. It is somewhat later when I feel called upon to leave my bed, and during the time that the milk remains on the back porch someone has been making a practise to steal it. It is more than provoking to find when breakfast is ready that you have no milk for your coffee.

"I set all manner of traps to catch the thief, without success. Then I hired one of the neighbor's boys to sit up and keep watch. But the next morning I found the milk gone and the boy asleep.

"The other morning I chanced to be awake just before sunrise, and I heard someone fumbling with the milk can on the back porch. Hastily throwing on my dressing gown, I stepped softly to the door and threw it open suddenly.

"In the dim light I could see a man bending over the can, and without stopping to see if he was a bigger man than I, I sprang at him with blood in my eye. The shock threw him off the porch, and we rolled down the steps together, fighting like a couple of wildcats.

"We must have made an awful racket, for I heard the windows going up all around me, and someone was blowing a police whistle, while my wife was wringing her hands upon the porch.

"I got my man down at last and sat upon him. We were both a sight, being covered with milk from head to foot.

"It had grown a little lighter by this time, and my wife, taking in the situation, gasped:

"'John, that's the milkman that you are sitting on!'

"It was, for a fact, and explanations were in order.

"I understand that this milkman is going around exhibiting his wounds and saying that I made a defenseless man and increasing the amount of damages he is going to sue me for at every telling.

"Meanwhile someone is stealing my milk."

IF YOU RESIGN, WHO CARES?

Whoever you are who may read these words, this question is one that you should ask yourself most seriously.

If I were to resign, would I be re-elected.

This is the kind of question which it does you good to ask and answer with unsparing frankness. It is one of the questions which make you search your heart, look into all the secrets of your life, and bring you face to face with what is real—perhaps most brutally real.

Whatever talent you may have, whatever gifts you may possess—these have not been the only factors in your advancement. They have helped you much or little, as the case may be; yet what you are and what you have, you owe very largely to the good will and the good opinion of others. They have accepted you, smoothed your path.

But if you were to resign, would they do the same thing over again?

Would your wife choose you again?

Examine yourself closely and see whether you are still the lover, striving to please, thinking of all the little things that go to make up a woman's happiness. If you have made your wife dread and fear you, so that she shudders at your very touch, would she again select you, if once the legal bond between you could be severed?

Put, then, this question sharply to yourself in all the relations of your life. It is a grim task, but nothing is better for you as a man than to ask yourself this question, and answer it with perfect frankness:

If I resigned, would I be re-elected?—Munsey's Magazine.

QUAKER MEDITATIONS.

Many a family tree is of abnormally rapid growth.

Some people are so tireless that they positively become tiresome.

Never put off till tomorrow what you can have done for you today.

To cultivate some acquaintances it is necessary to irrigate constantly.

It's the things we don't get that we should sometimes be most thankful for.

What a man regards as firmness in himself he is apt to consider obstinacy in others.

If we had our lives to live over again most of us would want to skip at least half.

If it's lucky to have a rabbit's foot the rabbit should be extremely lucky, for he has four.

About the only man who doesn't mind being called a liar is the enthusiastic fisherman.

"Sir, I am a man of few words," boasted the pompous individual. "So is a parrot," remarked the other, with more regard for repartee than animal distinction.

Wigg—What do you consider the most remarkable thing about Scribler's new novel?

Wagg—There is an English butler in it whose name isn't James.

"Can't I sell you a talking machine?" asked the agent, persuasively.

"Not on your life," answered the good deacon. "My wife's sewing circle meets here three evenings a week."—Philadelphia Record.

HINTS FOR THE COOK.

Meat for roasting should not be washed, but wiped with a dry cloth.

Bacon rinds should me scalded and used for flavoring stocks and stews.

Sausages should heat gradually when cooking to prevent the skins bursting.

To keep milk sweet add a teaspoonful of fine salt to every quart of milk.

Acid fruits are decidedly better in color and flavor when cooked in earthenware pots.

Do not salt stock till it has been thoroughly skimmed, as the salt prevents the scum from rising.

Mix pastry several hours before it is required, and much labor is saved. Always stand it in a cool place.

If fat catches fire throw salt on it at once to prevent a disagreeable smell.

Before broiling a steak dust it with salt and pepper and rub it with salad oil. This will greatly improve it.

A SENSIBLE BREAKFAST.

The staple, or what the French call the piece de resistance, of a breakfast should consist of some form of meat, fish, egg or milk, or its equivalent in a starch or sugar, like bread, toast or cakes, says Dr. Woods Hutchinson in Woman's Home Companion, for August. These may be supplemented by hot breads, gems or biscuits, with the proper modicum of fat in the shape of two or three pats of butter, sugar and the alkaline salts in the shape of some fruit or preserves or syrup upon cakes, and an accessory or appetiser in the form of tea, coffee or cocoa.

The so-called cereals and breakfast foods ought not to be made the mainstay of the breakfast. As accessories before or after they are admirable and useful, but they lack seriously in steaming power, in proportion to their weight, bulk and power of satisfying the appetite.

The Husband—Well, say what you will, my dear, you'll find worse men than me in the world.

The Wife—Oh, Tom, how can you be so bitter.—Sketch.

RAILROADS IN CHILE INCREASING WAGES.

Consul Alfred A. Winslow writes from Valparaiso that the railroad development of Chile has been very marked during the past four years. During 1908 there were 648 miles of new railway constructed for the Chilean government at a total cost of $10,254,284 United States gold, of which 166 miles were built under contract and the remainder by governmental forces. Of this 174 miles were added to the main line or "longitudinal," as it is known here, since it follows the Andes lengthwise of the country, and the remainder covered branch lines leading to the coast or up into the Cordilleras.

The prospects for 1909 seem even brighter for railway construction in Chile than those of 1908. The indications are, therefore, that there will be a demand for quite an amount of railway material and supplies during the year. The Chilean government will continue to do a large amount of construction work. For this interested parties should address the Director-General de Industria y Obras Publicas, Santiago, Chile, while for business for the Arica to La Paz railway communications should be addressed to the Sociedad Sir John Jackson limitted), Santiago, Chile. This contract calls for an outlay of very nearly $15,000,000 United States gold, and covers about 350 miles of main track.—Consular Reports.

BELTINGS THAT ARE DIFFERENT.

For milady's waist the belting makers have been turning out all sorts of pretty and dainty things this season. And a fresh belt, or one that harmonizes with her costume, adds not a little to the completeness and finish of madame's appearance.

White moire with jet dots is a summer novelty—the gleaming black jet against the snowy moire is a decidedly effective combination. The jet dots are not large, either—possibly half the size of a dime.

Dainty pink rosebuds or blue forget-me-nots trailing over a white moire surface is another very pretty style, and one that is particularly suited for August frocks.

Beltings by the yard have several advantages—mainly is sure of getting just her right waist length; then, too, she may wear buckles and pins that hit her fancy and change them as often as she pleases.

SYRIAN EMBROIDERY.

A type of embroidery that is specially adapted to conventional designs is the Syrian work, that gives an effect of overlapping scales. The designs which are arranged for this embroidery are divided into sections by lines running at regular intervals acrosss the scrolls and other figures.

The method of working is both simple and rapid. The sections are filled in with a filling cotton and then worked in satin stitch following the growth of scroll. Three sides of section are then outlined so that the design when finished looks as if one scale sprung out of the other.

This is particularly effective for borders on table covers or sofa pillows or the centre-pieces made of homespun linen used on tables between meals.

As the embroidery is done in Turkish floss or other heavy, glossy silk suitable for large designs, it works up quickly, yet has a handsome solid surface. There is room for infinite variety of shadings, but it is well to keep the designs, if possible, in several tones of the same color. Thus a line of reds makes an attractive coloring, or old blue, Chinese greens and yellow verging to orange.

LACE ON CENTREPIECE.

Lace that is used on centrepieces is not fulled, but is just held in enough to lie flat. The best way to get this flatness is to draw the thread of the lace, fasten one end to the linen, leaving enough to make a neat seam and then adjust fulness so that it lies even. When right side up one cannot see that any fullness exists.

Do not make mistake of spanning lace, as it will be ugly when laundered and the centrepiece will never lie flat.

One young woman when sewing lace to a centrepiece that has a scalloped edge bastes the lace so that its edge comes just inside the outer line of scallop. The scallop is then worked through both linen and lace, and there is no rough seam on the underside of centrepiece where lace is sewed.

SLIPPERS OF NET.

A shoemaker, in his search of something new, has invented an evening slipper of Russian net over colored satin linings. The heels are colored to match. There is a jewelled buckle at the toe in any appropriate stones.

Cloth of gold slippers are in fashion for all gowns trimmed with gold lace, and some bronzed slippers embroidered with beads cost as much as a gown.

There is also a fashion to have the top of boots made of bengaline and cravenette to match the gown.

The shoe absurdities will soon become as famous as the millinery ones.

A REVOLUTION IN COFFEE MAKING

How Modern Methods Have Improved the Quality of Coffee Many Fold.

Housekeepers now realize how impossible it was to buy really satisfactory coffee in the old days when all coffee was sold in bulk. They have come to appreciate that a large part of the strength and flavor of coffee is lost by exposure to the air. They know now that the reason one coffee is more delicate in flavor than another is due to the difference in roasting, that brings out the full flavor of the beans, and to grinding—and to excluding the air from the time the coffee is ground till it is used.

Among the connoisseurs the opinion is practically unanimous that no other coffee on the market fulfills all the conditions of what an ideal coffee should be as does the Hotel Astor Coffee, which was perfected for use in that famous hotel and has since been put on the general market. Sold in one and three pound tins, it comes in the berry, ground or pulverized, and is guaranteed to be exactly the same coffee as served by the Hotel Astor. Each can contains the famous Hotel Astor recipe for coffee making and assures you of perfect results.

You will find this coffee takes but about two-thirds the quantity required of inferior grades. Hotel Astor Coffee is sold by progressive grocers generally and doubtless by yours. But if he does not keep it, write to the importers, R. Fischer & Co., 129 Franklin street, New York City, giving your dealer's name and address, and they will tell you where you can get it.

PATENTED

This is the Square Pot of the

BOYNTON FURNACE

that saves fuel and dollars and will heat the whole of a house. In every great engine and under every big boiler you'll find a square fire box. Ever noticed it? Well—we have adapted that principle to our furnaces. A square pot gives a clean, hot, clinkerless fire without waste of fuel. It requires the least attention and responds instantly. BOYNTON furnaces only have square fire-pots. It is our patent. There are other improvements. A square ash pit that improves the draft and makes removal of ashes easier. A pure air supply—for health's sake. A dust flue that saves the rooms above.

Look up the BOYNTON dealer in your town and talk it over.

There are BOYNTON heating boilers of all kinds. Ask about our Combination Hot Water Heater and Steam or Hot Water, Also Ranges.

PARTED SIXTEEN YEARS, SISTERS MEET AGAIN.

For the first time in sixteen years two sisters met at Nutley. They are Mrs. Thomas P. Day, of Chestnut street, that place, and Mrs. John Tay, of Wakefield, Mass. The latter is now visiting the Day home, where she expects to stay several weeks.

The last place the sisters saw each other was at Wakefield, where the old Day homestead is located. This was just after Mrs. Tay and her husband had returned from Montevidio, South America, where they had lived for some time. Mr. Tay was engaged in the leather business and was also associated with Bishop Taylor, of the Methodist church, in missionary work there. Since they parted the sisters had kept in communication with each other, although they did not visit.

CAMDEN YARD MAY GET ANOTHER BATTLESHIP.

It has been practically decided that the two new battleships, bids for which were opened at the Navy Department last week, will be constructed by William Cramp & Sons of Philadelphia, and the New York Shipbuilding Company, of Camden, each company getting one battleship. The board on construction of the Navy Department had a meeting a few days ago, but no conclusion was reached and no award will be made this week. The Cramps submitted a bid of $4,450,000 for one battleship, and the New York Shipbuilding Company's bids ranger from $4,675,000 to $4,875,000.

NO INDICTMENT FOUND AGAINST SENATOR PRICE

The grand jury failed to return an indictment Friday against Senator Jacob C. Price at Trenton for alleged Sunday liquor sales at his hotel in July, despite the appearance of witnesses before the inquisitors.

It is understood that after the witnesses had retired the jurors agreed to drop the matter without even taking a vote.

POWDER MILL BLOWS UP.

One Dead and Three Injured in Pompton Explosion.

One man was killed, another badly burned, and two were slightly injured in an explosion at the Laflin & Rand powder works at Wayne Friday. A six-months-old baby, sleeping in a carriage, narrowly escaped death when a part of a blazing board, blown from the explosion barely missed striking it.

The dead man is George Moore, twenty-five years old, of Wayne, who was employed as foreman in the wet mixing mill. The man most injured is Samuel Bennett, thirty-five years old, who worked in the same mill as a laborer. Joseph Sommers and Frank Angustus, both of Wayne, received slight injuries.

FORMING WITTPENN CLUBS.

Friends of Mayor H. Otto Wittpenn have made arrangements to organize a Wittpenn club in every ward in Jersey City, in which the Mayor does not control the ward club. City Collector Robert Davis, who is the recognized leader of the regular city organization, said:

"In wards that have no Democratic clubs it is all right for the Mayor's friends to organize, but the clubs ought not to be named after any particular candidate."

Golfer Low to Marry.

The ceremony will be performed at the home of the bride's brother, Alexander Reid, 5 Fairmount avenue, Tuesday, September 14. A reception at De Jianne's will follow the ceremony.

Machine Disperses Fog.

A French scientist, says the August Popular Mechanics, has been experimenting for some time with two systems of dispersing fog. One embodies the discharge of Hertzian waves into the fog. The other system is the projection of warm air into the fog, and so far both have attained about the same results. A special hot-air machine is used in the latter system. Popular Mechanics contains a picture of the machine.

Checkmated.

"So you didn't take part in the campaign, Uncle Silas?"

MARRIES A TRENTON MAN

Miss Anna Coriell Randall the Bride of William Y. Bellerjeau.

WERE MARRIED LAST EVENING.

Home of Mrs. Elizabeth M. Randall on Somerset Street, is the Scene of Happy Wedding.

Miss Anna Coriell Randall, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth M. Randall, of 241 Somerset street, and William Young Bellerjeau, of Trenton, were married last week at 7 o'clock at the bride's home by the Rev. Albert J. Neisley, pastor of the Third Presbyterian church of Trenton. Miss Harriet Randall, a sister of the bride, was the maid of honor, and Clarence E. Holcomb, of Brooklyn, was the best man. The bride was given away by her uncle, B. Frank Coriell.

The general color scheme was gold and white, the parlors being handsomely decorated with golden rod, hydrangeas and palms. Eight ribbon bearers preceded the bridal procession into the front parlor, where beneath a canopy of goldenrod and white roses the ceremony was performed. The ribbon bearers were Misses Elizabeth Randall, sister of the bride, Lucie Coriell, a cousin; Daisy, Marie and Elizabeth Bellerjeau, sisters of the groom; Anna Holder, of New York; Mary Dunham and Mrs. John I. Holder, of New York. LeRoy Raisch, of Trenton, a cousin of the groom played the bridal chorus from Lohengrin as the couple took their temporary altar and as a recessional Mendelssohn's wedding march.

The bride wore a white mousseline gown over white silk and wore a veil. She carried a bouget of bridal roses and smilax. The maid of honor was attired in corn colored liberty satin over silk and she carried a shower bouquet of asters and smilax. After the ceremony a short reception was held after which Mr. and Mrs. Bellerjeau took a train for a wedding trip keeping their destination a secret.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Raisch, and Mrs. E. V. Reeves, of Asbury Park; Mr. and Mrs. D. V. Bellerjeau and Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Young, of Trenton; Mr. and Mrs. John I. Holder, Miss Anna Holder, Miss Laura Lee, of New York city; Herbert Purcell, Yonkers, N. Y.; John C. Layton, New York city; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Coriell, Mamaroneck; Mr. and Mrs. B. Frank Coriell, and Mr. and Mrs. William Coriell, of Plainfield.

CHANGES AT RUTGERS.

The 144th year of Rutgers College will begin September 22. It promises to be one of the best in the history of the college. The entering class this fall will be larger than last year's class.

President Demarest, who returned Wednesday from a trip to the far West, where he attended the meeting of the Association of Presidents of State Colleges, at Portland, Ore., authorizes the announcement that plans for the new Chemistry building are being drawn by the architects. The proposed building is to be constructed of brick and will be located on Bleecker place, just north of the Engineering building, which was completed last year. It is expected that the work of construction may be commenced this fall and that the Chemistry building will be completed and ready for occupancy by the opening of college in 1910.

The following changes in the faculty are announced: Professor Richard Morris, formerly associate professor of mathematics and graphics, becomes professor of mathematics and graphics; Frank Randall Pratt, formerly instructor in mathematics and graphics, has been transferred to the department of physics, as instructor in physics.

No appointment has yet been made to the chair of philosophy, which was made vacant by the resignation of Professor Wilbur Lucius Cumberland last June. The work in the department of philosophy will be carried on for this year by a visiting professor from one of the large Eastern universities.

The following new appointments to the force of instructors have been made: W. Bertram Twiss, A. M., graduate of Harvard University, has been appointed instructor in English, and Erik S. Palmer, B. S., a graduate of Sheffield Scientific School at Yale, has been appointed instructor in mathematics and graphics.

A Labor Day Boy.

Fireman J. F. Townley, of headquarters, is the father of a little son, born Monday. The youngster didn't get in any Labor Day parade, but his father says that within a few weeks he will be wearing a union suit and hose, to properly celebrate his birthday and parentage.

Y. M. C. A. Orchestra Plans.

RELEASE OSGOODBY IN FIVE HUNDRED BAIL

O. H. Osgoodby, of Somerville, a real estate man, who figured in a wild "joy ride" from Somerville to this city last Friday, and was arrested in his automobile by Patrolman O'Keefe at the Hotel Iroquois, waived a hearing before City Judge Runyon at the session of court Friday, and was held under $500 bail to await the action of the *grand jury. He was his own bonds*man. John A. Freck, of Somerville, is Osgoodby's counsel. The police charge that Osgoodby was driving the automobile while in an intoxicated condition and he is held for this violation of the State automobile law.

The real estate man, with John D. Hall, of Somerville, and Andrew Phlef, of Brooklyn, were together in the machine, and it is said that the party stopped at hotels in Somerville, Bound Brook and Dunellen for drinks. At the Park avenue hotel, they were arrested after trying to secure lodging for Hall, who, it is said, was in a practically helpless condition from drink. The policeman claims that Osgoodby was in no condition to run the automobile, and seized the machine taking it to a local garage.

At police headquarters after the arrest Friday night, Hall was locked up and Osgodby was released on his own recognizance to appear before City Judge Runyon the following morning. He did not put in an appearance. Sentence was suspended by the magistrate on Hall, who seemed to have been a victim of circumstances. Phief came out from Brooklyn Friday morning to look at property offered for sale by Osgoodby. He has not been held.

BOY FRUIT STEALERS HELD FOR PROBATION COURT

The police rounded up eight school boy fruit stealers and garden wreckers yesterday, and E. D. Young, of West Front street, and John O. Stevens, of Clinton avenue, assisted in the identification of the boys. Mr. Young, who was in court Monday, complained about the damage done to peach trees devastated of fruit, and Mr. Stevens has reported to the police that his grapes and apples have been stolen.

The boys arrested are Edward Hamilton, of Bergen street, Peter Phalen, of Ann street, Patrick Finnerty, of Rushmore avenue, Matthew Ward, of Halsey street, Jules Vergo, of Elk street, Henry Overland, of McDowell street, and George Boland, Mrs. Clinton avenue. DR. WILSON WILL SPEAK

President of Princeton to Deliver Address Here on "Democracy as I See it."

FRIDAY NIGHT, OCTOBER 29.

New Jersey's Leading Democrat and Scholar to Be Heard at the Local Theatre.

The new Democratic club held a special meeting last week in Exempt Firemen's Association hall and besides transacting the regular routine business definitely settled upon the arrangements for the coming visit of Dr. Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton University.

Dr. Wilson has accepted the invitation of the club to speak at a mass meeting to be held in the Plainfield theatre on Friday, October 29, and a committee composed of H. W. Marshall, P. L. Reville and James Colwin were appointed to decorate the theatre and hire the band. Dr. Wilson will address the meeting on "Democracy as I see it" and it is expected that a full house will be on hand to hear him.

The eminent president of Princeton was a candidate for United States Senator some years and now is spoken of as a possible candidate for the Presidency in 1912. He was a lifelong friend of Grover Cleveland and belongs to the Cleveland school of Democrats. He is probably the foremost Democrat in the State of New Jersey, a well known political economist, an author and an educator of the highest attainments, and will no doubt if nominated make a splendid race for the coveted honor of President of the United States.

President Leroy J. Ellis presided at last night's meeting and there were fourteen members of the club present. Four vice-presidents of the club were elected—one for each ward as follows: First ward, Walter L. Hetfield, Sr.; Second ward, W. E. Hoyt; Third ward, A. H. Atterbury; Fourth ward, J. J. Varley. The nominating committee for the coming primaries is composed of J. R. Reville, chairman; Harry W. Marshall, W. L. Hetfield, Sr., and J. T. McCarthy.

Next Tuesday night James E. Martine and John Seifert, of Arlington, will engage in a debate on the question of the recent national amendments. This ought to prove a thriller for members of both parties and will undoubtedly bring out a crowd which will fill the club room to its utmost capacity.

TRINITY'S FLOCK HEARS TWO HELPFUL SERMONS

Rev. John Y. Brock, who has returned from a vacation spent at his old home in Michigan preached morning and evening in Trinity Reformed church on Sunday before large congregations. The church quartet also rendered appropriate music at both services. His sermon in the morning was on "The Influence of a Life," the text being taken from Luke 1:3. It was a powerful presentation of the life of Christ exemplified by those who have allowed the influences of the Master to dominate their lives.

The sermon in the evening was taken from the text Jeremiah, 8:20. "Harvest is past, the summer is ended and we are not saved." Mr. Brock said in part: "Each season of nature has a tremendous lesson for us to learn. Spring comes with its verdure, the birds with their songs the grass springs up and flowers bloom, but these things all pass away as summer follows into the autumn and winter; then we have spring again, and so on through each succeeding year. What a lesson there is for us in these changing seasons. Let us mark the fact that for us there is but one Springtime in life and but one Harvest. Now is the time for us to be saved in the springtime of our lives.

"There are soul reasons when it is time for us to seek God and His salvation. Carelessness, indifference and neglect of the soul opportunities means failure in material and spiritual. Peter and Paul took advantage of their soul seasons and when your season comes if you take hold of God you will find your salvation and your way to eternal life.

"The harvest is sure to come in the spiritual life. The bride is a member of the First Reformed church, of Schnectady. The couple was unattended. The bride and groom are each about twenty-five years of age. The groom is an electrician in the G. and his wife expect to travel a bit and his wife expect to make their home at Montclair.

South Plainfield Wins.

The Gesang Turn Verein Baseball club was defeated by South Plainfield team, in the "rubber" contest of a series of three. The game was marked by numerous errors. Kiely pitched a fine game for the home club, allowing but three hits and fanning nine batsmen. Luthman and Montross twirled for the visitors. Willie Mullin at third base, played the best game for the home nine.

ALLEGED BIKE THIEF HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Cleverly parrying efforts to obtain from him incriminating statements by giving detailed explanations which City Judge Runyon did not consider would "hold water," Joseph Schwartzman, whose home is on West End Ave. at court Thursday denied that he took a Columbia bicycle belonging to Richard Harris, colored, of Grant avenue, and when accused of having stolen a watch from B. L. Wilson, a carpenter. He also entered a plea of "not guilty" on this charge, and added elaborate explanations. He was held by City Judge Runyon under $100 bail to await the action of the grand jury.

Schwartzman assured the court that he had been a victim of circumstances all the way through. He acknowledged that he had ridden the stolen bicycle, but said that a man, whose name he would not reveal, had taken the bike from a West End hotel "by mistake" and had asked him to return it. He was riding it back to Harris' house, he says, when the colored man met him and took it from him.

Harris says that when the wheel was returned to him it was shy the lantern and the bell. He says he was a bit reluctant to prove that Schwartzman rode the bike around town on his job as carpenter. Wilson testified that he had seen this. Schwartzman explained to the court that the wheel he rode was another, but very similar. He said it belonged to "the Swede."

When the charge of watch stealing was brought, Schwartzman said that the timepiece he had belonged to his sister and had been recently given him. Wilson, who is a carpenter, owned the watch, which he identified as his property, from the toolhouse on an East End building job last week. The police have learned from Schwartzman's sister that she has not seen him in several months, but the prisoner told the court that this must have been a case of "'lapsus mensis" on her part, as he had called on her less than a week ago.

Much of Schwartzman's parrying was amusing, and his explanations were interesting detail. The impression he sought to convey—that he was a victim of cruel circumstances —failed utterly, but he showed no surprise at the ruling of the court. Bail had not been supplied up to noon.

SALVATION ARMY GAVE A BIG PICNIC

The Salvation Army gave a free outing Monday at Watchung Crest to two hundred poor people of the city and borough, automobiles being used to convey them to the mountains. Officers from the Newark corps, accompanied by a brass band, joined in the procession and the stirring music added to the enthusiasm of the crowd. The ideal weather and beautiful surroundings combined to make the affair one of great pleasure. All sorts of outdoor games were enjoyed and swings and hammocks were provided for the children.

There was a bountiful supply of good things to eat from sandwiches to ice cream and cake. During the afternoon a Salvation Army meeting was held, conducted by Adjutant Downey and the band. At the close Captain Hewitt introduced Dr. Grossmann, who made a few remarks. The party returned home about 6 o'clock. Last night a meeting was held in the Salvation Army tent, conducted by Adjutant Downey and the brass band. Captain and Mrs. Fram will conduct a special meeting at the tent Thursday night.

SERVICES AT PARK AVENUE BAPTIST CHURCH SUNDAY.

Rev. A. E. Finn preached morning and evening at the Park Avenue Baptist church on Sunday to a large congregation considering the number of people who left town. The full choir was on hand and added materially to the services. The subject of the sermon in the morning was "Are you a pleasure yacht or an ocean steamer," from John 17-18. In the evening he took for his text "The influence of yesterday upon tomorrow." Joshua 7-13.

Fitzgerald—Turner.

Miss Lena Yates Fitzgerald, of Schnectady, N. Y., and John Edwin Turner, of Montclair, were married at 10 o'clock Monday morning by Rev. John Y. Brock, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, at his home on Watchung avenue. The bride is a member of the First Reformed church, of Schnectady. The couple was unattended. The bride and groom are each about twenty-five years of age. The groom is an electrician in the G. and his wife expect to travel a bit and his wife expect to make their home at Montclair.

HE'S A FRIEND OF COOK

Winfield S. Angleman Talks Interestingly of the Great Explorer.

"IS MOST MODEST OF MEN."

United States Minister on Steamer to Greet American Who Reached the North Pole.

Among the many who are particularly proud of the achievement of Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the American explorer, who has planted the Stars and Stripes on the North pole, is Winfield Scott Angleman, the prominent lawyer and chairman of the Republican City Committee. Mr. Angleman is an intimate friend of the first white man to reach that goal and last week he talked interestingly of Dr. Cook.

"Like everyone who knows him at all, I've always had great faith in Cook," said Mr. Angleman today. "He is the most unassuming fellow in the world, the kind that never seeks public notice. If he says that he has found the pole, you can depend upon it that when he gets to Copenhagen, he will furnish proof of his dispatches and will set the doubting ones at rest.

"Cook, you know," continued Mr. Angleman, "was surgeon in the Peary expedition of years ago. I met Peary in 1893 and about the same time formed an acquaintance with Cook. Both are splendid men. Somehow or other, I formed the opinion that some day Cook would be successful in his life ambition and was to get to the pole. He has won."

Dr. Frederick A. Cook's credit stands so high with Danish polar experts that the first message announcing his success in reaching the North Pole, meagre as it was, was accepted as conclusive at Copenhagen.

Commodore Hovgaard said yesterday: "I believe the message is true, because Dr. Cook is most trustworthy and incapable of making exaggerated statements."

C. A. Nielsen, an official of the Greenland Administration Department, who is well acquainted with Dr. Cook and was associated with him in Greenland, said: "When Dr. Cook says that he reached the North Pole there can be no doubt about it. His scientific discoveries will prove that."

A committee under the presidency of the Minister of Commerce has been formed to arrange a fitting reception to the explorer on his arrival at Copenhagen. Dr. Maurice F. Egan, the American Minister, will be aboard a special steamer which was sent out by the Royal Geographical Society yesterday to meet Dr. Cook, who is on his way to Copenhagen on the steamer Hans Egede.

Maurice F. Egan, the United States Minister at Copenhagen, has telegraphed the State Department that Dr. Cook's reported discovery of the North Pole has been corroborated by Dergnard Jensen, the Danish inspector of North Greenland.

TROLLEY CRASHES INTO AUTO 'BUS AT GARAGE

A southbound Somerset street trolley car, in charge of Motorman Lawrence Lawritzen, crashed into the big auxilliary 'bus of the Plainfield Auto 'Bus Company in front of Barfuss' garage at shortly after 8 o'clock last Thursday, bruising the three occupants of the auto and Mr. Barfuss, who was in front of the 'bus, repairing the carburetor. A suit for damages to the automobile, it is said, will be a result of the collision. F. A. Duttenhofer, a stockholder, Chauffeur Edward Farley and Charles Terry, of Dunellen, who were in the 'bus, sustained bruises and cuts, from broken glass, and the garage man was thrown down and bruised about the face and body.

In speaking about the accident this morning, Mr. Barfuss said that the automobile was standing in front of the garage when the car struck it. The body of the 'bus at the rear of the right side was split and a rear window broken. It is said that the damage will amount to $100. The trolley was also damaged and a platform gate put out of commission.

Lawritzen, who is considered by Superintendent Luhr of the P. S. C., to be one of the most careful motormen on the local lines, was with Conductor John Matthews on the car. He says that he was running slowly. Aside from Mr. Barfuss, Mr. Duttenhofer, who was sitting in the rear of the 'bus, is the most severely injured, and his hurts are not sufficiently serious to prevent him from being about. The 'bus was about to start out on a regular run, to take the place of one of the regular automobiles, which had broken down near South Plainfield. The service was considerably delayed by the accident.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

The Press and the Amendments.

Of the fifty-four daily and 235 weekly newspapers published in New Jersey only nine, so far as the News has noted, are actively opposing the adoption of the proposed constitutional amendments. Five times as many are vigorously standing for the changes. The rest of the papers are non-committal on the subject. Some of them have been absolutely silent, while others have simply urged their readers to go to the polls on September 14 next and cast their ballots "according to the dictates of the conscience." Notable in this latter class are the acknowledged organs of some of the Republican leaders. The most active opponents of the amendments are newspapers absolutely controlled by the bosses of the Democratic machine.

It is perhaps possible to use these known facts as the stand of the newspapers for a gage to forecast the popular feeling as it will be recorded at the polls next month. The silence of the big majority of the newspapers is significant of the lack of interest in the propositions on which the people are to vote. It probably indicates an unusually light vote for even a referendum election. The fact that the personal organs of Republican achine leaders are silent or evasive would seem to indicate that their bosses oppose the changes, but do not dare to say so openly. The Democratic bosses, on the other hand, are more frank and are willing to take the responsibility of letting it be known where they stand. Some of them have private interests to serve by fighting against the amendments, while others simply follow the leadership in order to retain the good will of the bosses. The majority of the independent papers are in the class favoring the amendments, and they are constantly giving their reasons for the position they have taken.

There are still tow weeks before the special election will be held, and it may be that a good many of the heretofore silent and non-committal papers will come out into the open and take a stand on the important issues contained in the proposal to change the fundamental law of the State. When they do so it will be possible to more accurately fix the strength of the friends and the opponents of the amendments. The campaign so far has been almost exclusively a newspaper campaign, at least so far as the News has been fourteen days, however, with noted speakers in the field, the scope of the campaign may be widened and some of the real inwardness of the opposition ay be developed in a way to open the eyes of the voters to the necessity going to the polls and vting for a reform in the judiciary system.—Newark News.

WINS U. S. RIFLE HONORS

Major William B. Martin the New National Military Champion Shot.

HIGHEST INDIVIDUAL SCORE.

Former Captain of Company K Carries Off Prize at National Rifle Tournament.

Major William B. Martin, of the Second Regiment, and former captain of Co. K, of this city, won the highest individual rifle honors of the year, last week, at the close of the National Rifle Association's tournament at Camp Perry. With the combined national individual and President's match scores, Major Martin won the military championship of the United States, the highest American rifle honor of the year. Major Martin was a member of the American rifle team that visited Bisley, doing such fine work, winning the famous trophy.

In the national individual contest Martin scored 322, in twenty-first place, and in the President's match, *the second stage of which was finish*ed in a rush during the afternoon, he made 314. A letter from President Taft is among the many homes coming to the Jerseymen in response to the following telegram sent by Lieut.-Col. R. E. Evans, the executive officer: "The President, Beverly, Mass.: Winner of the military championship of the United States, Major William B. Martin, New Jersey National Guard, Elizabeth; score, 636."

Major Martin has been a member of the Jersey team for several years, won the $500 Wimbledon cup in 1901 at Sea Girt, has won the Spencer match there, shot on the Palma team at Sea Girt in 1901, at Ottawa in 1902 and was alternate on the Palma team that went to Bisley in 1903, and last year tied Sergt. William F. Leushner, of Buffalo, for high score on the winning Olympic team—430. Martin also gets a gold medal and 50 per-cent, of the entrance money. Second place was won by Midshipman Thaddeus A. Thomson, whose score was 634, and third by Midshipman Andrew J. Denny, 634.

Midshipman Denny, who first shot up the camp two years ago, when as an unknown Annapolis cadet he made off with both the national individual and the national pistol matches, took the President's with a 316, but Major Martin and Lieut. A. D. Rothrock, of Ohio, winner of the national individual match a year ago, ran him hard. Rothrock got in second with 315 and Martin with 314 was third.

Lieut.-Col. William A. Tewes, of Jersey City, who was second at the start of the second stage, made 38 at rapid fire and 47 at 600 yards in the gale that blew down the tents right and left last night and whistled across the range all the morning, but on the 1,000 yard target he blew up and came home tenth with 311. Sergt. Leushner held twelfth place with 310.

LENTZ CHALLENGES COLGATE TO DEBATE.

Major Carl Lentz, a former chairman of the Essex County Republican Committee, who is aspiring to this position again and who has announced himself as a candidate at the coming primaries, Friday sent an open letter to Colonel Austen Colgate, of East Orange, the candidate of the Lee Idea wing of the party, challing him to a debate on the question of how the Republican County Committee should be managed.

Major Lentz in his letter leaves the time and place for such debate to be named by Colonel Colgate, excepting one night, September 10, when he has an engagement in Newark. In a postscript to his letter the Mayor states that he noted with pleasure the statement made by Colonel Colgate that he had never scratched a Republican ticket, but called attention to the fact that the

In conclusion the postscript says: "I recollect it is quite a distance from your home to the polling place."

The Major also sent an open letter to a former Board of Works Commissioner, Frank Bock, denying a statement alleged to have been made by Mr. Bock that he (the Major) was in the place to help Colgate, his reward to be his reappointment by Governor Fort to the State Tax Board. He called on Mr. Bock to prove his assertion.

DEFEAT FOR AMENDMENTS

Estimate Between 23,000 and 30,000 Majority Against Constitution's Change.

BEATEN IN UNION COUNTY.

Only Two of the Twenty-two Counties Are Supposed to Have Favored the Scheme.

Returns from the special constitutional amendment election, held yesterday, as received up to 2 o'clock this afternoon show that the suggested changes in the constitution have been overwhelmingly defeated. Only two of the twenty-two counties registered a favorable vote. It is estimated at this time that the plurality against the propositions will be anywhere from 23,000 to 30,000 and possibly more.

Union, Somerset, Essex, Hudson, Camden, Mercer and other conspicuous counties voted against any change. It is estimated that some 60,000 votes were cast and this is a very low percentage of the normal vote. The returns from Union are meagre, but they show a decisive defeat. The same is true of Somerset. In Somerville, only 129 votes were cast and seventy-five of these were against the changes. Hoboken and East Orange favored them, while Newark went by 6,660 the same way.

National light stock car race at Lowell, Mass., 127.2 miles in 2 hours, 28 minutes, average 52 miles per hour, and 15 minutes 11 seconds ahead of its nearest competitor. Chalmers "40" made a sensational race, going 180.2 miles in 182 minutes. This is faster time than that made for the same distance in the biggest car contest two days later. This was the same car that broke the 100 mile record at Brighton Beach track. ***

That sentiment was about equally divided with the voters of this city in the matter of the amendments was fully illustrated by the close vote yesterday. In the totals the figures show that there was a predilection in favor of the second and third amendments, while the first, fourth and fifth were not approved of by very small pluralities. The vote according to amendments was as follows: First, for, 161; against, 165. Second, for, 199; against, 166. Third, for, 197; against, 174. Fourth, for, 171; against, 192. In the borough of North Plainfield the amendments were defeated by practically a two-thirds vote. The figures follow: First district, first amendment, for 29, against 29; second amendment, for 31, against 28; third amendment, for 31, against 28; fourth amendment, for 25, against 35; fifth amendment, for 26, against 34. Second district, first amendent, for 9, against 29; second amendment, for 10, against 29; third amendment, for 13, against 25; fourth amendment, for 9, against 35; fifth amendment, for 10, against 34. Third district, first amendment, for 11, against 34; second amendment, for 16, against 34; third amendment, for 17, against 35; fourth amendment, for 15, against 35; fifth amendment, for 12, against 38.

At Scotch Plains the vote was very light and was as follows: First amendment, for 9, against 11; second amendment, for 10, against 10; the third amendment was skipped by all the voters. Fourth amendment, for 9, against 13; fifth amendment, for 10, against 12.

About eight per cent. of the voters registered in the city voted; ten per cent. in North Plainfield and seven per cent in Scotch Plains.

Little interest was shown in the election yesterday at Dunellen. About ten per cent of last year's registration voted on the amendments. The vote was about 2 to 1 against the amendments both as a whole and against each separate amendment. The count is as follows: First amendment, for 12, against 32; second amendment, for 16, against 37; third amendment, for 16, against 38; fourth amendment, for 16, against 41; fifth amendment, for 19, against 37.

GET ALLEGED BURGLAR

Caught at Phillipsburg, Gardner is Turned Over to Local Police.

BRITTEN'S STORE IS LOOTED.

Suspected Man Released at Dunellen When No Evidence Was Produced of a Burglary.

George Gardner, the alleged burglar, who it is said broke into the store of Bennett Brittin, at 1220 West Front street, on the night of August 12, has been apprehended by the police of Phillipsburg and will be turned over to Chief Kiely today.

Gardner was arrested by Marshal Sliney, of Dunellen, August 13, on suspicion of having stolen some cigars which he was offering for sale at ridiculously low prices. When brought before Recorder David Campbell in the borough court Gardner claimed to have bought the cigars from a dealer in Plainfield on a speculation and was selling them at a profit.

Recorder Campbell telephoned to Plainfield police headquarters stating the facts and was informed that up to that time no robbery had been committed. Recorder Campbell thereupon released Gardner and he made good his getaway. Subsequently the robbery at Britin's store was reported and a search for Gardner was instituted, with the above result.

Gov. Fort Declines to Sign Papers Requiring Presence of Riccardis in Pa.

SUIT FOR VALUE OF HORSES.

Marshal Weiss, Richard Boice and Stonewall Jackson to Be Held Responsible for Horses.

As a result of releasing two horses claimed to be their property by the Riccardis, father and son, Chief Marshal George Weiss Richard Boyce and Stonewall Jackson, of the borough of North Plainfield, will have to face a suit for the recovery of the value of the horses, said to be $700. Lawyer Edward W. Crane, counsel for the Riccardis says that the horses were in charge of the above named men and they are responsible for them.

Governor J. Franklin Fort refused *yesterday to sign extradition pa*pers for the Ricardis as required by Governor Stuart, of Pennsylvania, and the men must be released. The charge of horse stealing is void as there was not sufficient evidence to hold them for the crime. On the contrary, it has been found that the men were of good repute and had purchased the animals in the city of Pittston, Pa.

Mr. Crane when seen this morning said that suit for the recovery of the value of the two animals would be begun at once, or as soon as the necessary documents could be prepared. Mr. Crane appeared personally before Governor Fort in behalf of the two Riccardis and convinced the chief executive of the State that his clients were being illegally held under Bonds. The decision of the Governor was rendered late yesterday afternoon.

Michael and Benjamin Riccardi were arrested on September 1, on information given by Detective Charles H. Martin, and Jacob Lampert, of Norristown, Pa., who claimed that two horses then in the stables of Stonewall Jackson, on Somerset street, North Plainfield, were the property of Lampert. The Riccardis claimed to be the legitimate owners of the horses through purchase, which has since been proved to the satisfaction of the Governor.

REAL EXCITEMENT THERE

Dunellen Folk See Struggle to Lay Gas Pipes Under R. R. Track.

P. S. C. LABORERS DEFEATED.

As Quickly as They Dug Railroad Gang Filled in—Engine's Arrival Causes An Armistice.

New Market is in a state of considerable excitement today over a war between the Public Service Corporation and the Lehigh Valley Railroad. Some time ago the corporation asked for permission to lay gas pipes under the railroad crossing at New Market road. The railroad, having the right of way refused. This morning the gas company sent a force of 100 laborers down to lay the pipes without the consent of the railroad. The railroad hearing of it sent a force of its own, who filled in as fast as the men from the gas works dug. Finally as neither side made any progress, both sat down and rested, watching each other suspiciously.

The P. S. C. sent in an application to the railroad company months ago for permission to lay pipes under its tracks. It was desired to lay the pipes two feet deep. This the railroad company objected to claiming that it would injure the roadbed, demanding a depth of four feet. The gas company would not agree to this and so refused to lay the pipes four feet deep as the terms of the owners of the right of way dictated. This morning they decided that as many prospective customers had been waiting for a long time for gas, an attempt would be made to lay the pipes without any consent.

The railroad officials were not slow in getting the news that a gang had descended on their tracks and were tunneling under them and a gang was sent to the scene. They went to the crossing and soon filled in all the dirt that the gas company's men had dug up. The P. S. C. laborers sat down and watched. When they had finished their task the railroaders sat on the other side of the road and watched to see that no more work was made for them. The railroad then had an engine sent to the seat of hostilities to make sure that the pipes could not be laid until 60, when the matter has been settled by arbitration. The P. S. C. people declare that two feet is quite deep enough and that the railroad is unjust in its demands.

SHE ATTEMPTED SUICIDE

Augusta Wolter, of South Somerville, Shoots Herself in the Hand.

SEARCHING FOR FORMER LOVER

Threatens to Drink Acid Then Disappears—Will Be Cared For When Found.

A curious story comes from Westfield which has the police of that town and all other towns between Bound Brook and Newark excited. It is said that a young and pretty girl who has given her name as Ethel Walker and her residence as Plainfield, attempted suicide directly after leaving a main line trolley car at Westfield, yesterday. She is said to have shot herself in the hand and as that was not a vital spot she is said to have threatened to use the contents of a phial of carbolic acid which she had with her.

It is reported that the young woman is infatuated with a former employe of the trolley corporation who at present is at work in one of the factories along the route of the trolley. She has been traveling back and forth on the cars of the company, evidently searching for her recreant lover and failing to locate him, it is reported, resorted to the suicide route to end her sufferings.

The police and others between the two points named are searching for the unfortunate girl and if she is found she will be brought to this city and placed in charge of those who will care for her. On Saturday night, last week, the girl was found by the Elizabeth police wandering around that city, evidently on the lookout for someone, but she refused to disclose to the police what her mission was. She stated that she was the daughter of highly respectable people in this city and had gone to Elizabeth to meet her parents and ride home on the train with them. This story was not credited by the police and she was held over night for safe-keeping.

A later story concerning the young woman referred to above gives her name as Augusta Wolter, and her address as South Somerville. It is said that her aunt, Mrs. William J. Waldron, who lives in Elizabeth, had the girl as a boarder up to a week ago when she decamped leaving an unpaid board bill. Mrs. Waldron gives the girl's age as sixteen and says she is wayward. Her sister when seen this morning said that Augusta had been wild and had a predilection for a certain man employed on the trolley, but she declined to give the name of the man or say where he is now located. She also averred that her sister had done wrong and when told of the attempted suicide did not seem at all sur*prised.*

Augusta Wolter was seen last night at about midnight, alone, at the corner of Bridge and Market streets, Newark, but since that hour no trace of her has been discovered.

FOOT POWDER MAKERS FOUGHT OVER NAME

In the Circuit Court, Trenton, on Monday, Judge Lanning heard argument of counsel in the suit instituted by Allen S. Olmstead, of Le-Roy, N. Y., to enjoin Joseph C. Allen, of this city, from infringing the trade name of the complainant. Both parties to the litigation are manufac*turers of foot powder. Craig A.* Marsh, of this city, is counsel for Joseph C. Allen, who is engaged here in the manufacture of foot, talcum and other kinds of powder.

It is understood that Joseph C. Allen began the manufacture of his foot powder in 1894, while Allen S. Olmstead introduced his powder in 1895. The contention, it is said, is relative to the use of the name of Allen. Certain changes, it is said, have been made whereby the litigants have reached an understanding as to the use of the name.

TAX RATE GOES SOARING

It Was $1.40 Last Year But Will Probably Jump Beyond $1.60 This.

CITY VALUE TOTALS $23,571,529.

County Valuations $127,013,402—School Rate and County Rate Are Both Increased.

Official figures announced by the Union County Board of Taxation show that the county valuation is $127, 013,402, and on this basis the county rate for the coming year will be 31.1 cents on the hundred and the State school rate will 25.26 cents on the hundred. The county rate is an increase of 3.1 cents on the hundred and the State school an increase of 4.26 cents on the hundred, a total increase there of 6.36 cents.

The total valuation in Plainfield is $23,571,529, an increase of $764,969. There is an increase in the local school appropriation of $27,000, the figures last year being $35,000 against $62,000 this year.

The State school and county aggregates $153,000, an increase of over $29,000 over that of last year, which will materially aid to boost the rate in this city.

Until all of the figures are in it is impossible to announce the local tax rate for the coming year definitely, but it will be $1.60 on the hundred at least, and probably more. Last year it was $1.40. The city spent a great deal in laying brick pavement in the business section, macad*amizing of roads and the sanitary* sewer extensions, as well as in making numerous improvements, all of which have combined to increase the tax rate.

WARREN TWP. CLUB HAS A JOLLY TIME

An unusual meeting of the New Warren Township society circles on the square occured last night at Hintz' Hotel, Mount Bethel. William Henry Roger presided and Guy D. Peck, the secretary, reported several new names for membership. The constitution and by-laws were ratified.

William Jeffery, of New Providence Township, in a forceful address urged the voters of the township to stand together and clean house. Elect the best men of the township to the offices. Let those who will sneer, such sneers are almost not only at respectable citizens but are an insult to the women and the children. Mr. Jeffery said get the women and children with you and you are bound to win. He then sang a song composed by himself entitled "Warren," to the tune of "John Brown," and in a few moments the entire audience was singing as they never sang before.

Candidates were placed in nomination by the society on both tickets, and the petition were signed and executed on the spot. The Circles were organized and the meeting adjourned at midnight to meet again next Tuesday at the same place. Mr. Jeffery will then address the society and will also address the women of the township during the evening.

Junior Societies to Parade.

At a meeting of the local Junior Christian Endeavor Superintendents, Monday afternoon, it was decided as Friday, the last day of the State Endeavor convention is to be devoted to the Juniors, to have a parade precede the meeting, marching about half to three-quarters of an hour with a brass band. Each Junior will carry a flag and different societies will wear their badges and carry banners. A great time is expected as between eighteen and twenty societies have been invited to join and about 500 or 600 boys and girls are expected to join in the march.

CHURCHMEN INTERESTED

Instructive Talks Heard at Holy Cross on Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

MEETING LARGELY ATTENDED.

Both Franklin Spencer and John M. Locke Tell of the Association and Its Aims.

At a largely attended meeting at the Church of the Holy Cross, last Wednesday, the men were interested in a movement to form a chapter there of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew. Rev. George A. Warner, rector, was in charge, and the speakers of the evening were John M. Locke, of East Orange, a member of the National Council of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, and Franklin Spencer, of Elizabeth, acting president of the Central New Jersey Local Assembly of the order.

The meeting was chiefly one of instruction, setting forth the objects and principles of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, and the question of forming a chapter will be determined later, when Mr. Warner will call a meeting for the purpose.

Following a short service, in which the boy choir took part, singing the Hymn of St. Andrew, Mr. Warner gave a brief talk regarding the importance of interesting the men of the parish in church work. He said that they should be expected to do more than just pay the bills.

"The tendency of the age," said Mr. Warner, "is toward activity in church work. Are you content to stand by and see others do all the work. Are you keeping your baptismal vows by being a faithful soldier for Christ.

"The Brotherhood of St. Andrew is made up entirely of men. I would like to have an organization of this kind in the parish, where the men will be bound together fighting for a Christian truth. The boy between the ages of 12 and 20 years, needs someone to whom he can go and talk things over.

"If Christianity does not make a man more of a man, it is worthless. It is not fair to the rector to expect him to do all. He should have the co-operation of every man, as well of the women in his parish."

The rector then introduced Mr. Locke, who in an interesting manner told of the objects and principles of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, of which he has been a member for twenty-five years. He is a member of the Episcopal church at East Orange of which Mr. Warner was formerly rector. In his reference to the latter Mr. Locke said there was a new handful of men there. It is a most important that we get hold of the boys. John Wanamaker once said, 'Get hold of a boy you get hold of the multiplication table, while if you get hold of a man you get hold of only one.'

"It has been the rule of the church to say to the boy, you sit back there in the last pew. When you get gray hairs and whiskers then we will let you do something. In the meantime the devil gets the boy and he is lost to the church. The church must spread to reach the men and boys. Happily your rector is a man who has the faculty of getting close to boys and men.

"The Brotherhood is organized along definite practical lines, the basic principle of which is the rule of prayer and service. It is an organization exclusively for men and boys, to do the will of God and to know Christ."

Mr. Locke then explained that the Brotherhood of St. Andrew was organized out of a Bible class in a Chicago church, and ever since had been copied by every church in the country.

Franklin Spencer spoke briefly of the benefits of the Brotherhood and how successful it had been in holding the men and boys together and directing their footsteps in the right direction. He said that one of the principle objects of the organization is to get men and boys into the Sunday-school and the church and to pray for them.

Later in the evening, Rev. Milton Craft, formerly of this city, but now of Trenton, dropped into the meeting, but he took no part.

Reference was made to the National convention of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew to be held in Providence, R. I., October 13 to 17, and as many as possible were urged to attend. One of the objects of last night's meeting was to form chapters throughout the central division, which comprises the territory between Elizabeth and Trenton, taking in Somerville, Lakewood, Ocean Grove, Red Bank and the intervening towns and cities. On Wednesday night, September 15, in Trinity Parish House, Elizabeth, a formal organization of the Central New Jersey Local Assembly of the diocese of New Jersey will be held and officers will be elected. There will be representatives from the local churches.

WARREN TOWNSHIP MEN FORM AN ORGANIZATION

William Jeffery, of Berkeley Heights, addressed a large and enthusiastic gathering of citizens of Warren township, at Bintz's Hotel, Mount Bethel, Wednesday, when an organization called "Circles on the Square for Warren Township," was organized. William Henry Rogers was elected president and Guy D. Peck secretary and treasurer.

A committee comprising William Henry Rogers, Guy D. Peck, Robert Zerkaball, Fred Wiggins and Rev. Mr. Houser, was appointed and they will meet tomorrow night to draft a constitution and by-laws. Another meeting of the Circles will be held Tuesday night at Mount Bethel. Forty members were elected last night and more than one hundred are ready to join.

Those who identified themselves with the organization last night adopted a resolution to the effect that it should be known as "Circles on the Square, Warren Township," and that there shall be as many circles as there are centers of five which was appointed may deem necessary.

Mr. Jeffery in addressing the gathering said that Warren township is located most advantageously, the beauty of its topography being second to none in the State, but that the citizens of the township are not utilizing the splendid natural advantages. He referred to the undulating fertile land, and the hospitable people to be found in the township.

Mr. Jeffery said that if there were any troubles in the township it was due to the indifference of the people and he predicted that in the future they would remedy past mistakes. During the evening, Mr. Jeffery, several songs which have been used at the meetings at Berkeley Heights, and he was given a cordial reception.

THE QUEEN BEE.

The truth is, throughout all the wonder-workings of the beehive, the queen is little more than an instrument, a kind of automaton, merely doing what the workers compel her to do. They are the real queens in the hive and the mother-bee is the one and only subject. The workers have made her for their own wise purposes, just as they make the comb and the honey to store in it. The egg she is hatched from is in no way different from any worker-egg. If you take one from a queen cell and put it in the ordinary cell it will hatch out a common female worker-bee, and an egg transferred from the worker comb to a queen cell becomes a full-grown queen. Thousands and thousands of worker eggs are laid in a hive during the season, and each of those could be made into a queen if the workers chose. But the worker egg is laid in small cells, and the larva is bred on a bare minimum of food, at the least possible cost in time, trouble and space to the hive; while when a new queen is wanted, a cell as big as a finger-tip is built and the larva is stuffed like a turkey all through with unlimited food and time and all its five days of embryo life until room to grow in, it comes out at last a perfect mother-bee.—Van Norden Magazine.

WILLIAMS FOR SURROGATE.

Likely That He Will Oppose George T. Parrot.

Sidney Williams, president of the Downtown Republican Club, of Elizabeth, is being boomed for surrogate. The present incumbent, George T. Parrot, has held the office for years, but there will be a pretty fight between the two men this year for the plum.

Mr. Williams is a member of the Board of Health, of Elizabeth, and has given that office as a recognition of efficient service in the ranks of the part last year.

MARSHAL FOR ASSEMBLY

Union County Democratic Committee Endorses Him for Nomination.

ALSO SELECT TWO OTHERS.

Democrats Decide to Make No Fight for Either Register or County Clerk.

The Union County Democratic committee at its regular meeting in Elizabeth, Wednesday, endorsed a ticket for the Assembly and coroner nominations for the coming election. Those endorsed for the Assembly are Harry W. Marshall, of this city; Frank Halliday, of Rahway, and Albert S. Hall, of Union. Dr. J. H. Warnke, of Elizabeth, was endorsed for the nomination for coroner.

The committee decided not to endorse anyone for the office of county clerk or register of deeds, it being conceded that both James C. Calvert and Frank H. Smith, Republicans, who are candidates to succeed themselves, will have the support of the majority of the voters of the county.

The meeting was an enthusiastic one and every member was especially optimistic over the prospects of electing the Democratic ticket, as well as the candidates for coroner. They seemed to feel that conditions are just right this year to regain lost ground and with a strong ticket could see no reason why the party should not be successful.

Mr. Marshall, one of the candidates endorsed for the Assembly, has been active and prominent in civic and lodge affairs here for sometime. He is now president of the Board of Trade and was formerly potentate of Salaam Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles Mystic Shrine, of Newark. He is also active as a member of the local Masonic bodies. During Mayor James F. Buckle's term, he was appointed one of the three police commissioners, which office afterward legislated out of office. Mr. Marshall is the proprietor of the American Steam Laundry, at Watchung avenue and Fourth street, where he recently erected a large and handsome structure, with full modern equipment.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS.

Honor For New Jersey.

While the world is giving unlimited honor to an American for pushing his way to the very North Pole itself, New Jersey is feeling an additional touch of pride because Major W. B. Martin, of Elizabeth, has won the military championship at Camp Perry, and stands today the best military sharpshooter in the United States.

This is by no means the first of Major Martin's successes with the rifle. He went to England twice as a member of the American team; he has been a representative of the New Jersey rifle team for several years; he won the $500 Wimbledon Cup in 1901 at Sea Girt, and he has made enough to make him round shouldered, sturdy and stocky as he is, if he should attempt to wear them all at once. He may even yet win more of them in the Sea Girt tournament about to open here in the States of New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

The winning of the military championship of the United States is the highest honor a soldier can gain in time of peace, and to bring this honor to New Jersey, after the hottest kind of competition, is a matter not to be slightly regarded. It is an inspiration to the whole State militia; an example that will give a new impetus to rifle practise in this State. With such a successful rifleman as Major Martin instructing the members of the National Guard a higher degree of efficiency is almost certain to be reached; and this of itself gives to his achievement an importance that exceeds even the medal and the great honor he has won for himself and for this State.—Newark News.

New Fire House New Brunswick.

Hibernia Engine Company of New Brunswick, is to have a new fire house. The Common Council has voted to buy a lot at the corner of Wyckoff and Bartlett streets, in the Sixth ward of that city, and erect thereon a fire house. The total cost of the work, including the cost of the lot, is not to exceed $9,560. This company is the only one in that city that has not had accommodations for fire horses.

PEARY'S SHIP FITTED UP BY ELIZABETHANS

To Elizabeth ship carpenters and joiners belongs the credit of fitting up Commander Peary's boat, the Roosevelt, for her successful dash for the North Pole. Through their mechanical skill the boat was put in the excellent condition which enabled her to weather the ice drifts in the Arctic Ocean and land the American explorer at the goal for ages sought by the world's greatest navigators.

It will be remembered by most Elizabethans that the Roosevelt was for several months at the Shooter Island shipyard after her first dash for the Pole. It was at that shipyard, under the able foremanship of Alfred Anstey, of 9 Florida street, who is at present employed by the electric launch company at Bayonne, that the Elizabeth men overhauled the Roosevelt. The boat left the shipyard two years ago last June.

When it is known that the Roosevelt carried the seal of the City of Elizabeth interned in Commander Peary's great exploit is enhanced in Unioncounty.

In conversation with a reporter Captain George Coon, of the launch Comfort, told the story of how the seal of Elizabeth was carried to the Polar regions probably unknown to Commander Peary and his crew. He said that just before the Roosevelt left the Shooter Island shipyard, he went there with a party of friends to inspect her.

"I do not know what prompted me to do it," he said, "but the thought occurred to me that it would be a novelty if Peary should be successful in his dash and should have some souvenir aboard the boat from Elizabeth. I had an Old Home Week button bearing the seal of the city of Elizabeth on the inside of my coat. Unnoticed, I stuck it in the woodwork in the keel. The chances are that it is still there, for the spot where I placed it was afterward covered by the ship carpenters."

There are many Elizabethans who have known Commander Roosevelt, John J. Cottrell, who conducts a cafe, has three canes made from wood taken from the Roosevelt when she was being overhauled. The canes are made from the wood of which the hull of the Roosevelt is constructed. The name of this is said to be "greenheart." Because of its peculiar composition it is better able to withstand the ice drifts. Colonel George H. Rhodes, of the firm of Rhodes & Manyel, also has a cane made from the same wood.

Part of the crew of the Roosevelt who were with Peary when he made his first dash for the Pole, were aboard the Roosevelt during the time she was at Shooter Island. Some of Mr. Peary's Eskimo helpers and several of the dogs were on the ship.

BUD'S IMPORTANT JOB.

"It ain't that I don't like to see people look up, an' put the best foot forward an' all that," said Bud Ripley, according to Youth's Companion. "But Mary Haines always overdoes it." Taking the darning-egg out of one of her husband's socks and inserting it in another, she turned to her visitor and went on:

"She was down here last Tuesday, chock full of news about the sawmill the city folks have started up on Popple brook. Mr. Haines, she said, had got a job on one of the saws an' Bud was going to have 'a position,' "

"What doing, I wonder? Bud's a real good-natured boy, but I never thought he knew any more 'n the law allows," Mrs. Page commented frankly.

"I wondered, too," confessed Mrs. Ripley, "but I didn't have to ask."

"Tomorrow," says Myry, 'Bud will begin his new duties as chief of the commissary transporation department at the new sawmill. We expect,' she says, 'that he'll develop great expertness in his new duties.'

"'Do tell!' I says.

"Mebbe 'twas stubborn, but I just wouldn't show one mite of curiosity. I talked a mile a minute as long as Myry stayed, an' she couldn't get a word in edgeways.

"Next day, though, I started on up to Popple Brook, an' dropped in on Myry. It was about 11 when I got there, an' she was flying round the kitchen like as if she'd been with its head cut off, filling a whole row of dinner pails with hot victuals. Bud, with cap an' all on' cept his mittens, set tilted back against the wall, waiting."

"Well, I declare!" said Mrs. Page, as one who suddenly saw light.

"Yes, that's it!" confirmed Mrs. Ripley. "Bud's 'position' of 'chief of the commissary transportation department' is carrying dinner pails—his father's an' the hands Myry's taken in to board—to an' from the sawmill.

"When she'd loaded all the pails on to a pole an' started him off, Myry turned to me.

"'Bud's going to do splendid at it,'" 's she; 'he's taken right holt.'"

Luck.

"Lucky dog, that man Bosworth."

"Has he come into a fortune?"

"No; he has secured a certificate from his doctor showing that he has *organic heart trouble. When an in*surance agent attacks him hereafter he will merely have to show his certificate."—Chicago Record-Herald.

PATROLMEN CHEER FORT

Governor's Speech Feature of Ninth Annual Convention of Benevolent Association.

SAFFRON AND DOBSON SPEAK.

Chief Kiely and Councilmen Gloak and Randolph Guests of Bluecoats at Feast.

At least 2,500 patrolmen from all over the State attended the ninth annual convention of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association at Paterson Thursday, among whom were Patrolmen Measler, Flynn, Saffron and Dobson, of this city, who had as company Chief Kiely, Sergeant Overbaugh and Councilmen Gloak and Randolph as invited guests.

The features of the convention were the election of officers for the ensuing year for which there were several contests, a speech by Governor J. Franklin Fort, and a banquet at which nearly 3,000 men were seated. It was conceded to have been the most notable gathering ever held by the association and the most successful. Patrolmen Dobson and Saffron made speeches and Saffron received an ovation at the conclusion of his address.

The banquet took place in Lincoln Park and was a huge success from every viewpoint. At its conclusion Governor Fort made the address which was received with cheers by the assembled bluecoats and their guests. Governor Fort was introduced by the insurance and Banking Commissioner Vivian M. Lewis and said in part:

"The police of the State are the best exponents of law and order. I always have an assurance of safety wherever there is a police present. The State and cities should protect their police and uphold them in every way possible."

The Governor then spoke on the constitutional amendments, emphasizing especially the judiciary features.

"The best friend the policeman should have," he said, "should be the judge. I can truly say today that in Essex county I defended more policemen brought before me on charges than any judge on the bench and saved more officers from removal than any lawyer."

After defending the judiciary amendments and explaining the various provisions, Governor Fort concluded:

"Under this new system there will be but one trial judge. Cases will be immediately taken up for trial and a decision rendered. There is no appeal, with a delay of two or more years. I hope every man of you will be a missionary for that amendment."

The most imposing feature of the convention was the parade of the patrolmen. Twenty-six cities and towns were represented in the line of march which took in the principal streets of Paterson. The convention was marked by some stirring addresses among them those made by Patrolmen Andrew Saffron and George Dobson, of this city.

Patrolman Saffron's speech follows: "Brother members, as a representative of the Plainfield local, I urge that the same care and watchfulnes be exercised in the future as has been the case in the past for bills which have been presented to the legislature and which may prove a detriment to our respective departments.

"I must call to mind the 'Tenure of Office' act and the good results that have come of it. The class of men employed in this State since its adoption are second to none and much credit cannot be given to the father of the act, Chief of Police Monahan, of Jersey City, until recently State President of this association. Again, the law which requires the five years' service before promotion is a law that can only work for good in the department and besides all these things meet with the approval of not only the men of the department but of the public at large.

"The police bills on our statute books of today or since this association was formed, are based on practical ideas and drawn up as referenda so that the people have a voice and the laws themselves are so simple that anyone can understand them. For instance, the salary or pension bills, the people alone shall have the say as to how much the men shall be paid and how their money shall be spent. Such bills as these are a credit to this association as well as to the State. There seems to be a feeling of animosity on the part of the superior officers against this association. This should not and must not be.

"I need only call to your attention bill number 54, which was drawn to dispose of the Chief of Police of Asbury Park by a political faction. You, as representatives to the Legislature will remember the hard work for assistance to the Asbury Park local and the result. The bill died in the hands of the Committee. Such results as these should prevent any such feeling as I think exists.

"In conclusion I would ask each representative to remember that what is a benefit to your local is a direct benefit to the people you represent and what is a detriment to you is a detriment to your people."

Patrolman Dobson had this to say to his fellow members:

"The Plainfield branch of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association was organized December 8, 1905, and was incorporated August 23, 1906. With eighteen out of the twenty patrolmen of the department enrolled, and the three superior officers as honorary members, the association has prospered and holds popular favor among the citizens of Plainfield.

"The objects of this association are to unite fraternally and to give all moral and material aid to members in good standing and to establish a sick and death benefit fund, and we are accomplishing our purpose. It was not until the patrolmen in the local police department organized and became incorporated that its principles were valued generally and now we enjoy the esteem of the great majority of the people of our city.

"The association has been striving to bring about a more advantageous scale of wages, something that will correspond to the salaries paid in other cities of the same class and I am now long enough here to say we will succeed. The association has petitioned the Common Council (our governing body) for permission to submit the question of pensions for police officers to a vote of the people at the general election in November, and the measure will have already been assured that the effort will be successful. A majority of the Common Council favor the plan whereby two per cent. of each man's salary *becomes a part of the fund to sus*tain the system.

"Through the courtesy of the Councilmanic Police Board, the association has been granted permission to hold a dance for the benefit of the association sometime in November. There is now a strong probability that the Westfield police department will join the Plainfield association, making it stronger than ever. The force in that town is not large enough for an independent branch and the suggestion that it become a Plainfield will doubtless be followed."

Other speakers were Mayor McBride, of Paterson; Mayor Wittpenn, of Jersey City; Mayor Haussling, of Newark; Mayor Mravlag, of Elizabeth; Mayor Carey, of East Orange; Senator Blanchflife, Vivian M. Lewis, Speaker Prince, Assemblyman Baker, of Jersey City; Chief Bimson, of Paterson; Francis B. Lee, of this city; Henry W. Weller, the retiring president, and representatives of organized labor of Essex county.

The organization, which was organized nine years ago, has 3,700 members. This year has been the most successful in its history. This is largely due to the work of former President Weller, of Newark.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: John Beggans, of Jersey City, president; James O'Brien, of Elizabeth, vice president; William H. Goodwin, of Paterson, secretary; E. S. Longstreet, of Asbury Park, treasurer and John German, of Bayonne, sergeant at arms.

The Plainfield contingent report having a delightful and entertaining as well as an instructive time. The next convention will be held at Atlantic City in 1910.

FLAG NOW AT POLE MADE IN PATERSON

The flag which Commander Robert E. Peary says he "nailed to the Pole," was made in Paterson expressly for the purpose. The emblem was made from a special weave by the Phoenix Silk Manufacturing Company. It was made waterproof, so that in the snows and ice of the north the colors would not run.

It was on the occasion of Peary's visit to Paterson, five years ago, as a guest of Judge Francis Scott, that public-spirited citizens interested the Daughters of the American Revolution in a plan to present Peary with a flag, so that if Peary landed the American emblem on the summit of the earth it would be of the best possible make. It is a peace flag, surrounded by a broad white border. It is not very large and was woven so that it could be rolled or bundled in a very small space, so as to be conveniently carried.

It was presented to the explorer by Mrs. Donald McLean, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, when he sailed on the Roosevelt last year, with the request that he should fling it from the Pole when discovered.

An Autumn Possibility.

There has been much conjecture concerning the tallest suit of the future should the panier become popular. But at last an inkling has been given of what we may expect. One of the suits for earliest autumn is of cheviot with a very long coat. The gown underneath is trimmed around the hips with a short tunic of the cloth itself. This, while it fits the figure, is cut on panier lines or circular, and it is only evident when the coat is removed.

Another Dentist in Town.

Dr. G. F. Watts, formerly of New York, a graduate of Howard Dental College, will locate here on October 1, at 306 East Third street, occupying the offices recently vacated by Dr. Wormley, who has returned to Washington.

DOLLAR DINNER OF G.O.P.

Booms Launched at Gathering of Rahway Republican Club.

COUNTY OFFICEHOLDERS THERE

Commissioner of Banking Lewis and Others Address the Three Hundred Diners.

The dollar dinner held in the Auditorium, Rahway, Thursday, under the auspices of the Rahway Republican club, was a great success and was attended by many persons prominent in political affairs throughout the county. Those from this city were County Register F. H. Smith, Councilman Herbert Buxton, Andrew McCardell, Overseer of the Poor A. D. Ayers and John H. Cose. The large hall was taxed to its utmost to accommodate the crowd, for which 300 covers were laid.

Mayor Charles B. Holmes, who was chosen for toastmaster, was equal to the occasion. Having positively refused a re-nomination for office, he had a free hand and he did not mince words in introducing the speakers of the evening. Of the announced list of speakers, only one failed to appear. That was Senator Thomas J. Hillery, who was called to Trenton on business.

The speakers were Vivian M. Lewis, commissioner of banking and insurance, whose boom for Governor has been launched; the Rev. William Torrence Stuchel, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, Rahway; Dr. William H. Madison; County Register F. H. Smith and County Clerk James C. Calvert.

The dinner was noted for several things. Harry Simmons, a prominent and influential citizen, was boomed for Mayor, and he will doubtless receive the nomination. Dr. Holmes, who has refused to become a candidate again for the Mayoralty, was boomed for coroner, and there seems to be no doubt but that he will get the nomination. This will be in the nature of a remembrance for taking away the assembly nominee and giving it to Westfield. Lloyd Thompson, of that place, being slated for the nomination.

Booms were also launched for former Freeholder Adolph H. Gruener and Health Officer Frederick W. Randolph for freeholders. In addition to the speechmaking part of the program, T. Arthur Baker, of New York, entertained with monologues and musical numbers.

Among other county notables present were Assemblymen Carlton R. Pierce, Augustus Schwartz, Albert B. Kiratein and Sheriff Robert J. Kirkland.

HOPES FOR NEW METHOD OF TIMEKEEPING.

"Time and Its Measurment," the first part of an article appearing in the August number of Popular Mechanics, is written by a man who has a collection of 1,500 timepieces, gathered from all parts of the globe. The article traces the evolution of the modern idea of time from the ancient days before man included the night in his timekeeping. Japanese, Chinese, Indian, Pompeiian and Grecian methods are mentioned, also sun dials. Mr. Arthur says:

"The following table may be used to give an elementary hint of the three great steps in time measuring.

"Shadow time, 2000 to 1000 B. C.

"Dials and water clocks, 1000 B. C. to 1000 A. D.

"Clocks and watches, 1000 to 2000 A. D.

"I have pushed the gear wheel clocks and watches forward to 2000 A. D., as they may last to that time, but I have no doubt we will superseded them. At the present time science is just about ready to say that a time measurer consisting of wheels and pinions—a driving power and a regulator in the form of a pendulum or balance, is a clumsy contrivance and that we ought to do better very soon."

MISS CAROLINE CRAIG NOW MRS. E. A. SKINNER

Miss Caroline Roberts Craig, daughter of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Robert Houston Craig, of 210 Madison avenue, and Edwin Angell Skinner, of Bristol, R. I., were married at the home of the bride's parents at 5:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. The ceremony was performed by the bride's father, Rev. Dr. Robert Houston Craig, formerly of Amity. Miss Lily Craig, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid and Ralph E. Skinner, brother of the groom was best man.

The rooms were decorated with white clematis, the bridal couple standing under an arch of that vine during the ceremony. The presents were many, valuable and useful. After the wedding supper the young couple left for New York for a two weeks' trip.

The Reason.

"One half of the world does not know how the other half lives."

"Bride's father: Probably to think that one-half of the world attends to its own business."—Puck.

PLAN FOR CONVENTION

Arrangements Made for State Gathering of Christian Endeavorers.

THE FOUNDER TO BE HERE.

Union Service on Wednesday, October 6, Will Inaugurate the Three Days' Session.

At a meeting, in the Temple Baptist church, Thursday, of the local committee having charge of the details of the State Christian Endeavor convention to be held here October 6, 7 and 8, the provisional program was discussed and a favorable report was received regarding the official program. It is expected that both will be ready for announcement within a few days. A large chorus choir will be present at the convention meetings, in charge of Frank Stewart. Charles L. Lewis, as musical director for the Endeavor Union, will train the choir. All persons who can sing and who desire to contribute their services are requested to make the fact known as soon as possible.

The first meeting of the convention will be held on Wednesday night, October 6, and will be a union public service at which all the local churches will unite. The mid-week prayer-meeting services for that night will be given up for the big gathering. It is expected that J. T. Sproull, State president of the Endeavor Society, will be in charge. The official business of the convention will be transacted on Thursday and Friday, concluding Friday night with a meeting of unusual interest. Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark, the father of the Endeavor movement, will address the gathering, coming to Plainfield especially for the purpose.

The Endeavorers are planning to give Dr. Clark a rousing reception and make the event a noteworthy one in every detail. Many of the delegates to the convention will not reach Plainfield until Thursday morning, when the first business session will be held. Owing to limited accommodations, the general public will not be admitted to the business meetings, as there will be so many delegates to be provided for and who of necessity must attend.

HERE AND THERE.

Rev. T. D. Wesley, of Pluckemia, makes the following interesting comment regarding the forthcoming Hudson-Fulton celebration, under the caption, "Pluckemia and Herr Knickerbocker:"

"Many people have the wrong impression that Dutch means German. This is not so. The real Dutchman is a Hollander. In the interest of the discovery of the Hudson river in 1609 by Hendrick Hudson and of the settling of the Dutch on American soil, the people of Pluckemia will celebrate a Hudson-Dutch fair on September 23, 24 and in case of storm, one day longer. There will be exhibited a revival of Dutch costumes and associations, Holland decorations, maids, souvenirs, pictures of the Isle of Marken, lunches, etc., will be in evidence.

"The Far Hill band and a merry-go-round, with other features have been engaged for both days. This fair is the most significant of its kind ever gotten up in Pluckemia. As the town is off from the railroad, conveyances will be in waiting at the New Jersey Central station, Somerville and at Far Hills on the Lackawanna Railroad."

CUSED CHURCH TO AID IN SWINDLING WORK.

The presence of several coal wagons in front of St. George's rectory at Paterson Friday afternoon, the drivers of which wanted to put half a ton of coal into the coal bins there, brought to light a clever swindle that had been worked on half a dozen or more coal dealers. All the dealers were visited yesterday afternoon by a well dressed young man, who asked that half a ton of coal be delivered at once to St. George's church. He tendered a check of $14 for payment in each place. The checks bore the stamp of the church and were apparently signed by the rector, the Rev. Joseph F. Dolan.

The half ton of coal cost $3.12 and the stranger in each case received $10.88 in change. Four dealers were swindled in this manner. Father Dolan was mystified at the procession of coal wagons to the rectory, and the forgery was discovered when one of the drivers was sent back to the yards. The young man who worked the game has not been caught.

Many Kinds of Cuffs.

The choice of a cuff is as broad as the choice of a collar. The cheaper variety of shirtwaists have the straight stiffened cuff, cut like the one on a man's shirt, and held together with link buttons.

It is far better, however, to avoid this sign of a cheap waist and put on narrow turnover cuffs, or wrinkle the sleeves over the wrist and finish with a tiny edge of lace; then fasten with lace buttons.

DUNELLEN SCHOOL BODY SELECTS NEW PHYSICIAN

The Dunellen Board of Education at a regular meeting, last night, appointed Owen Mohan a truant officer for the coming year, and the resignation of Dr. Daniel Main, as school physician, was received and accepted. He has moved to Jacksonville, Fla., where he will practice, and for this reason relinquished the job. Dr. T. H. Platt was named as his successor, and a committee was appointed to wait on him and ascertain whether he would accept. It is believed he will.

A number of repair bills were ordered paid and the failure of Walter G. Clawson, contractor to complete the addition to the school building by August 1, as agreed, was commented upon to some extent. Excellent reports were received regarding general school conditions, the enrollment being large this year. The schools re-opened after the fall and winter terms on Tuesday with the new principal, Guy Rentchler, formerly of Roselle, in charge. He is the only new teacher this year. Principal Davis, whom he succeeds, has taken a position teaching a school near Perth Amboy.

ANOTHER LANDMARK HAS DISAPPEARED

Built forty-five years ago by David Hand, the old brick silo situated opposite the Netherwood Fresh Air Home, is being demolished. The land has been purchased by a real estate firm, and is being cleared preparatory to opening it up a a residential section.

The old building, the last to be cleared away from the property, is eighty-two feet in height, and massively constructed of brick. In place of girders, telegraph poles are set four feet apart all around the outside walls, and the brick wall is built in around these. Alexander Kane, "the house wrecker," who has the contract for removing the building, says that it was wonderfully well built. About 600,000 bricks were used in the walls. The silo has not been used for five years.

PHYSICIANS TO REPORT ALL BIRTHS AND DEATHS

Information regarding the new act, at a regular meeting Thursday, appears to be in the local Board of Health office. The statute provides for the more prompt report of births to the State Board of Health. By Chapter 109, laws of 1909, it is the duty of the physician present at the birth of any child to report the same within five days. A fine of $50 is the penalty for failure to comply with this law. Similar reports must be made of all deaths, and the penalty for violation is the same. All the local physicians have been notified that the statute will go into effect in this city October 1.

Blanks and printed matter relating to the new law have been supplied the local Board of Health. The printed matter will be distributed to physicians.

PRIZE WINNING FOWLS TO BE EXHIBITED AT TRENTON.

David Hand, of Berkley avenue, and B. G. Elliott, of Scotch Plains, have been enjoying a great success at the poultry shows at Red Bank and Rahway, in the State of Jersey. Their prize-winning fowls have taken many prizes at these exhibitions. For a pen of Buff Orphingtons, Mr. Hand took two firsts and one second at each exhibition. Mr. Elliott has secured in all the big plums at both places.

He received a first on cocks and a first on hens in Buff Orkingtons, first on cocks and first and second on hens, and a first and second on pullets in the Buff Leghorn class. Messrs. Hand and Elliott will exhibit their fowls at the coming shows at Trenton, Philadelphia and Madison Square Garden, New York.

MISS CORA TOMLINSON DIES IN ELIZABETH.

Miss Cora Tomlinson, sister of Rev. Everett Tomlinson, of Elizabeth, died Saturday at her home in that city after an illness of about two months.

Miss Tomlinson was well known in Plainfield. Her brother, Rev. Mr. Tomlinson, is the well-known writer of books for young people. A brother, Harold, was a victim of the Westfield wreck some years ago.

W. C. T. U. Convention Here.

The Union County W. C. T. U. Union will hold its twenty-fifth annual convention in the First M. E. church, Thursday, September 23. Mrs. M. D. Tomlinson, county president, will preside. There will be morning, afternoon and evening sessions, at 10, 2 and 8 o'clock, with the usual addresses and reports. The feature of the convention will be the address in the evening by Rev. Dr. C. L. Mead, of Hoboken. He will speak on "An Inspiring Vision."

AGED CRANFORD MAN HAS ODDLY VANISHED

Mystery surrounds the disappearance of Philip Jahn, of Cranford, who has been missing from his home in that place since August 31. Mr. Jahn is 71 years old.

Herman Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of Cranford, of which Mr. Jahn was a member, has been asked to look for the missing man. The Cranford police have also been ordered to be on the lookout for him.

When Mr. Jahn left home he wore a blue coat, light trousers and waistcoat and a straw hat. He had blue eyes and an iron gray moustache.

There seems to be no explanation of Mr. Jahn's disappearance. When he left he gave no intimation that he would be away longer than usual, and he did not have much money with him. Relatives and friends in other cities have told his wife that they have not heard from him. There is no reason to suspect foul play.

Mr. Jahn is well known in the county. He is a master painter and decorator and has been in business for many years.

MAY BUILD A NEW HOME FOR ORPHANS

Providing the proposed orphan asylum shall be built in Union county and by all the Roman Catholic churches in the county in common, the Rt. Rev. John J. O'Connor, bishop of the diocese, is reported to have consented to allow the asylum to be built.

The Very Rev. Martin F. Gessner, of St. Patrick's church, Elizabeth, received a letter from the bishop about a month ago saying that he would not consent to the project. Dean Gessner has been planning for the asylum for years, and has raised a large sum of money for it. He had purchased a site at Second street and Broadway, Elizabeth.

Dean Gessner was in favor of a plan of building the home near the school and church property in Court street so that the children could receive the advantage of religious training and education in St. Patrick's grammar and high school.

It is evidently Bishop O'Connor's intention to have an orphan asylum built which would be a benefit to the orphans of the several local Catholic parishes.

SOMERSET S.-S. ELECTION.

Judge Schenck Chosen As the President.

The Somerset County Sunday-school Association Wednesday afternoon elected the following officers:

Scott, of Lamington; superintendent of primary work, Mrs. J. A. Powelson, of this city; superintendent of home department, Philip Lindsley, of Raritan; of temperance work, Mrs. J. A. Thomson, of Middlebush; superintendent of teachers' training, Jacob Wyckoff, of Middlebush; of missions, Rev. Floris Ferwerda; of adult Bible classes, Rev. John Erler, of Pottersville.

Edward W. Dunham, of Trenton, representing the State executive committee, presented to the Somerset County association a silk flag as a reward for having raised the entire appropriation for State Sunday-school work. It was accepted by President Smalley.

A "DANCE MAD" CITY.

New York is dance mad. If you walk along Grand street on any night in the week during the winter months the glare of lights and the blare of music strike you on every side. It might be an esplanade at Dreamland instead of a business street. Columbia street, Delancey street, Stanton street, Allen street, Houston street, all have their quota of places, good, bad and indifferent. Further down the dance problem hold sway in almost every locality, and the problems which this dancing mania presents vary from the moral issues of the lower east side to the drink temptation that beset the girl further uptown. This is essentially the same problem. Down on the east side dancing is cheap. Twenty-five cents a couple, is all it costs—ten cents for girls, because, as I have said before, the girls are the desirable quantity. Throughout the city the rule obtains that it shall cost the girl less to enter the hall than the man. Downtown the dancing academy presents its worst features.—From the July Survey.

Frank P. Burke to Wed.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss May V. Dooley, of New York, and Frank P. Burke, of this city. The wedding will take place at the home of Miss Dooley, 440 East 137th street, New York, on Wednesday, September 29.

TROLLEYMEN'S CLAMBAKE

Knights of Controller and Bell-Cord Have Big Time at Bergen Point.

FITZSIMMONS THEIR GUEST.

Supervisor George Luhr Acts As Toastmaster—Special Trolley For Trip.

The clambake held at Meiser's Casino, Bergen Point, Thursday, under the auspices of the motormen and conductors of the P. S. R., of the central division, was a great success. There were sixty knights of the controller and bell-cord, together with several guests, in the party, including "Bob" Fitzsimmons, who was the special guest of Supervisor George Luhr, who planned the affair.

The motormen and conductors left here on a special trolley car for Elizabeth, where they boarded a New Jersey Central train for Bergen Point. Upon their arrival there was a special trolley in waiting to convey the party to Meiser's Casino.

The "bake" was one of the best and was prepared and served in Meiser's finest style. There was an abundance of good things to eat and the way the men put away the clams was a caution. It is said that they exhausted the supply completely.

Supervisor George Luhr was the toastmaster, and both he and Division Superintendent J. J. Gettings made speeches. "Bob" Fitzsimmons also favored the gathering with some of his latest stories, in which he related some of his experiences while abroad. It was about 12 o'clock when the men reached Plainfield on the return trip.

The committee in charge of the outing comprised Supervisor George Luhr, W. J. Davenport, M. J. Walsh, Hugh Higgins, Dan Carroll, who is M. J. Nevins was the treasurer and Patrick Marron the assistant treasurer.

ANNOUNCE SPEAKERS FOR G.O.P. SI. DINNER

United States Senator John Kean will act as toastmaster and two possible candidates for the Gubernatorial nomination will speak at the annual dollar dinner to be held at Turn Hall, Elizabeth, on Wednesday night, Sept. 22. They are State Senator Joseph Sherman Frelinghuysen, of Somerset, and Commissioner of Banking Vivian M Lewis, of Passaic. Judge William N. Runyon, of this city, and State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of Union, will also respond to formal toasts. The subjects have not been announced.

The dinner will be attended by at least 200 of the more prominent Republican workers in the county without regard to present or past factional affiliations.

SENATOR ACKERMAN HOME FROM EUROPE

State Senator Ackerman returned on the Deutschland Thursday after an eight-week trip through Europe. While on the Continent he visited many of the principal cities in Holland, Germany, Bavaria, Austria, Italy, Switzerland and France and also made a stop at London before returning. While there he saw former State Senator Charles A. Reed, who with his family, has been making a trip around the world.

Not having been in touch with the situation while abroad, Senator Ackerman asked to be excused today from discussing State politics. He said that the rest had done him much good. The Senator was accompanied by his wife, it being their annual custom to spend the summer in Europe.

BUSINESS COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT SOON.

Preparations for the annual commencement exercises of the Plainfield Business College are being completed by Prof. A. S. Herr. The latter inaugurated the idea of graduation exercises last year and this college is the only one of the kind that has this feature. The exercises will be held at the Plainfield theatre. The date has not been settled. The names of the speakers and other details will be announced as soon as completed.

The graduating class will number about thirty-five this year. Last year, it being the first observance of the event, 109 former graduates received their diplomas publicly.

Happy Family Reunion.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wiegand and son, George Wiegand, Jr., of West Fifth street; Mr. and Mrs. Julius Williams, of West Front street, and Mr. and Mrs. James Foster, of Chatham street, attended the reunion of the Happle family held on the farm of Frank Wine at Warrenville, Labor Day. There were about seventy-five guests. William Happle, of Illinois, came east especially for the reunion.

SELF-MASTER LODGE NEW RESCUE MISSION

Probably no stranger contrast in the methods of dealing with the weak and the offender can be seen anywhere than in the outskirts of the newborn city of Rahway, where, almost side by side, stands two institutions, both of them with the same purpose in view—the betterment of mankind, but both going about the work of reformation in distinctly different ways.

One is widely known. It is the New Jersey State Reformatory, supported by State funds and backed by a mighty commonwealth. The other is the newly established Self-Master Colony, where men and boys are allowed to roam at will and do just as they like as long as their behavior is reasonable and they perform their daily toil.

Unlike the reformatory there are no prison bars nor cells, there is na harsh discipline for the unruly, no special diet, only the normal restraint such as would be in order in any well-regulated family. Each individual is put upon his honor. This latter institution is a new departure in philanthropic work and unique in the annals of sociology.

It is the exemplification of an idea that originated in the brain of Andrew S. Floyd, a young man who for years had made a study of the problem which he undertook to solve. Mr. Floyd, who is conducting the institution referred to, for many years studied the missions, ten-cent lodging houses and various palaces of like character in New York city. The short-term jail and State prison he also looked upon of much consideration from him.

He saw flaws in all of them. The prison did not reform a man. It protected society, but did not improve the man. The mission and the charity home gave money and food to the unfortunate but did not give him a chance to help himself. Thus there were defects in both, according to his ideas, and so he started an institution, founded on an ideal, but quite simple as to its methods.

The Potter estate in East Hazelwood avenue, Rahway, was the spot selected for the working out of the self-master idea. The large dwelling and admirable surroundings were well adapted for a place of the kind. Mr. Floyd received sufficient funds to make a start, and now for a year has been conducting the Self-Master Lodge.

Here the various arts and crafts are taught to those who desire to learn them. Carpets and rugs are woven, brass is worked onto rare and beautiful designs, garden products are raised and other work of a self-sustaining nature is carried on. As yet the institution is not on an entirely independent basis, but with the few contributions received Mr. Floyd is able to carry on the work on a small scale.

There are at present twenty-two persons at the place, each trying to work out his own reformation, and in many cases succeeding. Fully 150 could be accommodated at the lodge were there sufficient funds, but more money is needed and both Mr. Floyd and Miss Lillian Kline, his secretary, are making appeals to the kindly disposed. A magazine, edited by Mr. Floyd and styled The Self Master, is sold, and this also helps to maintain the unique home.

Those who come to the home are usually young men who have been "sowing their wild oats." Many of them are the sons of the wealthy, who have gone downward in the social scale and who have not the courage to return to the early home environments. Others are the sons of the poor—the men and boys who have gone down in the struggle, or have never seen anything but the seamier side; men who drink because all their companions do likewise; who have no incentive to do better.

Mr. Floyd has many ways of getting these men to the home and they, hearing of the "simple life" methods and kind treatment at the Self-Master colony, come to the place without urging. Their records are generally known to Mr. Floyd, and no one who has been convicted of a crime is admitted. It is the man who is an habitual drunkard—perhaps a gambler—the man who has stolen bread to keep from starving, who is wanted at the home—he who is hunted like a beast—that is discouraged. There are thousands of these, and Mr. Floyd's great regret is that he cannot look after all of them.

When the day's work of seven hours is done and meals are served, the men in fellowship cook their own recreation. They sing in the parlor, play the piano or guitar, contributions from friends of the home, read the contributed books or leave the grounds and go wherever they choose. There is no taboo here. The men are placed on their honor and each appoints himself his own guardian. Drinking intoxicants is forbidden, but smoking is permitted. Tobacco is furnished the men and they do their own cooking and other things with the money they earn at the home. The small wages they receive are their own, and as they do not have to pay for their board or lodging many of them save all they earn and use it when they resume their places in the world. Any time they desire to leave the home for good they can do so, but its doors are always open for their return.

Each member of the family is allowed to worship in whatever manner he chooses, there being no stipulations in this regard. The lawn and the flowers that ornament it are looked after by the inmates. The interior of the home is kept bright and clean, and a personal interest taken in it by all.

The place has a home-like atmosphere and cheerful air. In the rear there is a large frame building where the men weave rags into carpets and rugs and do other work. Mr. Floyd is their teacher, and among all the crafts that he may be able to instruct those under his care. The implements of industry in use at the lodge are by no means adequate. There is a loom house which is probably 200 years old, and it is to remedy defects of this character that Miss Kline and Mr. Floyd have appealed for aid.

Mr. Floyd will speak at the League House, Metuchen, on Thursday night. His subject will be "The Homeless Man."

BIG PLANS MADE FOR INTERSTATE FAIR

Plans are now about completed for making this year's Interestate Fair at Trenton, the banner one in its history. There has been expended $15,000 for the newest and most sanitary sheds for housing the exhibits. The sheds are made of concrete, well lighted and ventilated.

The famous track has been made over and is now one of the fastest tracks in the East for light-harness racing. Under the auspices of the Interstate Fair Kennel Club, one of the best noveltyball dog shows of the season will be conducted on Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 29 and 30, with Jas. Watson, of Hackensack, as the manager. In former years an extra admission was charged for the dog show; this year, however, the directors have decided to make it free. It is expected that over 800 entries will be received.

The musical program of the interstate Fair will be of the highest class. Winkler's famous band of the Second Regiment has been engaged. This band is considered by musical critics all over the country to be the finest, from a musical standpoint, in Jersey. The band will give a concert every day of the fair.

A QUIET CAPITAL.

Crying babies and crowing roosters in Washington may yet feel the weight of the mighty arm of the law. A prophet has arisen who says that there shall be no more unnecessary noise during the hours set apart by common usage for slumber. For the public welfare, an organization is being formed for the prevention of noises, and the Constitution has been invoked to protect citizens against needless disturbance, either in home or abroad, at unseasonable hours. The crowing of the neighbor's rooster at 2:17 in the morning will no longer be tolerated, nor the rattle of milk cans at 4:12, when the new regime holds sway; the slamming gate and door, the squeaking, noisy trolley car, the boisterous ice car will never be heard in those halcyon days. The care of the nerves of the nation is surely a new phase of altruism.—National Magazine.

WILL ARREST 100 MORE SALOON MEN.

Saloon men, threatened with being forced to put up bonds of $1,500 each by Magistrate Hughes at Atlantic City for selling rum last Sunday in that city, drove a march on that official Thursday by entering bonds bail bail of $200 before other magistrates.

Victor Freisinger, proprietor of Old Vienna, was the first to try the new plan, under which the liquor sellers hope to defeat the plan of reformers to place them under bonds so large that they would be forced into jail for lack of bondsmen.

Under a State law defendants are allowed to appeal to the "nearest magistrate" for hearings, and it is believed that the new scheme of the rum sellers to appear before justices not in sympathy with reform will prevent both the imposition of high bail and the threatened arrests of those who fail to appear before Hughes.

Reformers still delay their avowed move to rearrest Mayor Stoy for failing to close saloons last Sunday, and refuse to give outlines of their intended plans. Arrests of over 100 saloonkeepers who failed to close on last Sunday have been ordered.

VICTIM OF HIGHWAYMEN

Philip Weisbecker Beaten and Robbed by Three Men in Dunellen.

LEFT ON ROAD UNCONSCIOUS.

His Assailants Two Italians and a Negro—Victim Found by John Curry, Junior.

A daring highway robbery occurred Thursday in Dunellen just back of the town near the brick yard, of which Philip Weisbecker, an agent for the Prudential Insurance Company was the victim. Weisbecker was robbed of a sum of money said to be between thirty and forty dollars and was left lying unconscious in the road. His assailants are said to be two Italians and a negro, but he can give no very good description of the trio.

According to Weisbecker's story he was on a collecting trip and while approaching the brick yard he was passed by the three men who turned suddenly and struck him on the head with some blunt instrument felling him to the ground and rendering him unconscious. That is all the man can say as to what happened to him.

John Curry, Jr., a sixteen-year-old youth found Weisbecker lying in the street with his head bleeding and summoned assistance. The injured man was conveyed to his home and Dr. Platt summoned. Dr. Platt found the man suffering from severe scalp lacerations, but no fracture. When Weisbecker recovered consciousness he told what had happened to him. His description of the highwaymen is so meagre that it is note likely that they will be apprehended.

The police of all the nearby towns have been notified and are keeping a strict watch on all trolley cars for possible suspicious characters. The hold up occurred at about 8 o'clock this morning.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF GEROME PACK

The funeral of Gerome Pack was held from the late home on Park avenue at 2 o'clock this afternoon, and was largely attended, especially by many of the older residents. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chamblis, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiated.

Mr. Pack was the oldest member of the First Baptist church and of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F. Members of the lodge attended, although they had no part in the service. There were a number of beautiful floral tributes. The interment was in Evergreen cemetery on Plainfield avenue.

Mr. Pack, who was eighty-nine years old, was born in Scotch Plains, but resided in this city practically all his life. In the early fifties he conducted a restaurant in the old New Jersey Central station and later engaged in business as a confectioner. During his business career he accumulated a considerable sum. He is survived by one son, Edmund W. Pack.

GAVE AN ACCOUNT OF POCONO PINES CONFERENCE.

Walter J. Firstbrook, who was a delegate to the Young People's Conference held in August at Pocono Pines, Pa., from the Christian Endeavor Society of Hope chapel, led the prayer-meeting in the chapel, Wednesday, and gave an account the recent gathering. The report was a complete and interesting one and showed that the delegate had striven to make it helpful and inspiring to the members present last night.

Mr. Firstbrook will meet with the heads of the various committee and give them some helpful and interesting suggestions, regarding the work to be accomplished during the coming season. A vote of thanks was extended to him last night by those present.

Made Wrong.

Johnny Jones was in Sunday-school for the first time, and didn't know much about religion. For instance, when he was asked the first question in the catechism, "Who made you?" he balked.

Tommy Tooter, op his right, nudged him. "Say 'God.'"

So Johnny said, "God made me," and waited for developments.

"That's right," said the teacher, "God made you. He made your eyes to see with, your nose to smell, your mouth to eat, your ears to hear, your hands to feel, and your feet to run. Now, I wonder if you, Tommy, can tell me what God did."

Tommy scratched his head. "Well, He made me wrong," he said. "For sometimes my nose runs and my feet smell."—New York Times.

MANY SENSATIONS FOR FAIR PATRONS.

Six Drop From One Balloon—Airship Races and Desperado All at Trenton Fair.

First among all of the great fairs of the United States to recognize public demand for vaudeville, the Trenton fair has always enjoyed the reputation of giving to its patrons the finest vaudeville to be seen anywhere in the world. Every year has brought new vaudeville innovations to the Trenton exposition, and this year will prove no exception.

When it is stated in all sincerity that the length and breadth of the North American continent have been searched to provide the vaudeville entertainment for the Interstate fair of 1909 only part of the truth has been told, for not only have the agents of the fair exhausted the resources of America, but they have also called upon Europe and Asia for acts to interest the visitors to this wonderful fair.

Perhaps the greatest sensation to be offered will be that supplied by Desperado, who dives from a little platform fifty feet in the air into a wooden chute, striking on his chest. From this chute he slides up an incline and is emptied at the mouth. How the performer dives from such an extreme height and, striking flatly on his chest, escapes instant death is the one great marvel of the year.

Not far behind Desperado as an attraction comes the airship race between Lincoln Beachey and Captain Anton Snyder of the balloon corps of the German army. This is to be an actual race in the air, in which the daring navigators will go two lap heats.

Ernest Adler and his ten performing polar bears is another act that will be absolutely new to this section of the country. These bears do many thrilling feats and are certain to prove one of the most talked of features of the fair.

Polar, "The Man Up a Pole," who has been the sensation all season at Brighton Beach, has also been secured.

The Six Flying Banvards, acknowledged to be the foremost aerial act in the world, have been brought from Paris at an almost unbelievable expense. It is the only act of its kind in existence; therefore Secretary Margerum is willing to pay the toll.

The Lundells, troupe of acrobatic cyclists, fresh from a season of triumphs at the New York Hippodrome, will also perform for the Trenton fair patrons. There are six in this troupe, and all are stars.

Each year sees a new thriller along the line of ballooning, and this year the thrill has been provided by Edward Hutchinson, who makes six drops from a balloon in a single flight. Prior to this act the record was four drops made last season at the Trenton fair.

Johnny Mack and his troupe of death challenging balloonists have also been signed and will introduce a number of new and thrilling feats.

In the opinion of many regular visitors at the Interstate fair—those who have not missed attending for ten or more years—the best act that has ever been offered was that of Schryer, the daredevil who dived from a bicycle all the way across the trotting track into a little tank of water. What will the "regulars" think when they read the announcement that this year a woman will do the trick?

Sounds impossible. Still it is the fact.

Sadie Knowlton is the young lady with sufficient nerve to attempt this wild act, and those who have seen her say that she begins where Schryer leaves off.

There are a dozen other acts on the program, making up a bill that easily excels anything the Trenton fair has offered in the past. Perhaps another such bill will never be offered again, because the expense attached to it is enough to daze even a Rockefeller.

"POLITICIANS' DAY" EVERYBODY'S CONVENTION DAY.

Leaders of Both Political Parties in New Jersey Will Meet at Trenton Fair.

As usual, "politicians' day" at the Trenton fair will be one of the really great days of the year, not only for the fair, but all over the state of New Jersey. The Trenton fair "politicians' day" has gradually grown to be almost a state institution, for on that day the leading politicians of every county in the state assemble within the hospitable gates of the fair, and there they make out the slates that are later adopted at the state, county and city conventions.

"Politicians' day" at the Trenton fair is the real convention day for the entire state, and right well do the leaders of both parties realize this. It is one of the feature sights of the fair to see these several thousand political leaders massed in the little tented village to the right of the grand stand. It is an all day session, and many a man is made and broken politically before this session is over.

This year Governor Fort will be one of the prominent figures at the fair Thursday, "politicians' day." He will be on the ground early, and with him will assemble all of the others, great and small.

PLAYGROUND COMMISSION

Mayor to Nominate Geo. P. Mellick, J. W. Gavett and H. W. Marshall.

TO INVESTIGATE PROPOSITION.

The Appointments Will Be Submitted to the Common Council for Confirmation.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk has decided to appoint Joseph W. Gavett, George P. Mellick and H. W. Marshall as playground commissioners, and will send the names to the Common Council at its next meeting for confirmation. The appointments are made in response to a resolution adopted by the Council requesting this action.

The commission will simply investigate the advisability and feasibility of establishing playgrounds in the city and submit a report later. Then further action will be decided as to the wisdom of proceeding with the original suggestion of Mayor Fisk.

The idea of having playgrounds in Plainfield was first suggested by Mr. Fisk, who has seen the benefits of them elsewhere. His idea is to establish one in the West End and another in the East End, providing places where children can enjoy various sports, without being compelled to go in the street as at present.

Mr. Fisk as well as other Plainfielders interested in the subject, has visited the playgrounds at East Orange several times, where they were much impressed with the advantages of them. The Plainfield Mothers' Association also support's the idea and at various meetings has been addressed by leaders in the movement. The commission appointed by Mr. Fisk is considered an excellent one and it is believed that its investigation will result in the establishment of playgrounds.

PATERSON GIRL DUPED BY ALLEGED BIGAMIST.

The arrest of George F. Diehl, thirty-five years old, of Stroudsburg, Pa., Sunday night, was the first intimation to Catherine Fulboam, of Paterson, that her husband was a married man at the time of her marriage to him.

Diehl, it is said, represented himself as a single man, and worth millions. The bride had no knowledge of his former marriage, and when he was placed under arrest she swooned.

Both were given a hearing, and the bride was placed in the custody of her father, Otto Fulboam, at Paterson. It was through the efforts of her father that Diehl's alleged bigamous life was revealed.

Diehl, on the other hand, seems to take his trouble lightly. He had not paid his bill at the hotel, and hasn't the wherewithal to satisfy the proprietor. It is expected Jersey authorities will bring action against him for bigamy.

Miss Fulboam became enamoured with Diehl during a recent vacation spent at Delaware Water Gap. The girl is considered pretty, and has been employed as a stenographer in a broker's office on Cortlandt street, New York, for the past five years. Her marriage took place in Jersey City about four weeks ago. Rev. Mr. Meyer performed the ceremony.

Mrs. Maze Edwards, formerly of this city, is now visiting relatives near Detroit for an indefinite time.

The Misses Olga and Edna Ebert, of Brooklyn, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Wurgler, of Webster place.

CHANGES AT HOSPITAL

Four More Physicians for Clinical Board Which Will Meet Daily.

STAFF RETIREMENTS PLAN.

George H. Goddard Is Succeeded by Harry W. Marshall as a Governor.

At the regular meeting of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital Monday, H. W. Marshall was elected a member to succeed George H. Goddard, who resigned recently after long and faithful service.

A report was received from committees relative to certain changes in the administration of the hospital and the committee was directed to make the changes. Heretofore members of the medical staff were appointed for an indefinite time, but under the new ruling they will be retired at the age of sixty-five years, and can then be appointed a consulting physician if the board so decides.

The changes also raise the office of clinical assistant to a higher grade and provide for the appointment of four additional physicians to the clinical board. Instead of the clinic being held only on Thursday, in the future it will be held every day and the assistants will act as chiefs at those times.

All appointments to the hospital staff are subject to the pleasure of the Board of Governors and changes can be made by the board any time it is so voted by the majority of the members. The rest of the business of the evening was of a routine nature.

SETBACK FOR REFORMERS.

The Atlantic City Council at its meeting last night passed an ordinance amending the vice and immorality act, and in future the recorder will have discretionary power as to the amount of fine or other punishment to be inflicted upon those who play Sunday baseball or engage in other things which shall be regarded as Sunday violations. Heretofore the ordinance made it obligatory on the part of the Recorder to impose a fine of $200 in event of conviction. The reformer element of the Council voted against the passage of the measure, but they were in the minority.

Peach Crop Profitable.

For the first time in ten years the peach crop of the northern part of New Jersey has paid the growers. A decade ago the trees were stricken with a blight which completely destroyed thousands of them. After the blight long died a few years the farmers set out new trees, and this year they bore their first paying crops.

Patrick Green, fifty-nine years old, was instantly killed by a train on the Millstone branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad yesterday morning. He was employed on the railroad, and stepped from behind one train in front of another and was ground under the wheels.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS OPEN

New Faces Seen Among the Faculties in City and Borough.

ATTENDANCE IS INCREASED.

New Courses Are Added—Principals Make Brief Addresses to the Pupils.

The Plainfield High School was re-opened Tuesday for the fall and winter term, with appropriate exercises. Dr. H. M. Maxson, superintendent of schools, gave his annual talk to the High School pupils, speaking on vacation topics and extending a hearty welcome to the teachers and many former pupils. Principal Lindsey Best followed Dr. Maxson with a short talk in which he announced the plans for the ensuing term and urged the co-operation of pupils and teachers for a successful year.

The balcony was filled with parents, friends and many former graduates. One of the features of the morning was the almost complete re-union of the Class of '09.

Five new teachers have been engaged to fill the vacancies left last June. Principal Best's place as instructor of science has been filled by the appointment of Prof. Frederick H. Beals, formerly of Worcester Academy and a graduate of Harvard University. The other vacancies have been filled by the Misses Anna Bowne, formerly of the Hartridge School; Grace E. Perlee, D. M. Day and Alice Forseith. The last named was formerly at the Stillman School.

The new freshman class numbers 125 pupils and is one of the largest ever recorded in the history of the High School. Mr. Best's opinion is that the school will be well crowded throughout the year.

Among the various courses of the High School, a new one has been added, affording a broader change of study. It is the manual training course and instead of the old form of having the work once a week, there will be a period every day. Mechanical drawing, instead of being a separate course, has been added to this department. It will be impossible to determine the exact enrollment before tomorrow. Announcement has been made that the new Washington School will be opened tomorrow.

The schools of North Plainfield opened Monday with a greater attendance than ever before. Principal H. C. Krebs and his teachers were busy all morning classifying the new pupils and assigning them to their classes. A teacher's meeting was held Monday and the teachers given instructions for the coming year. This morning everything went along smoothly.

The registration in the Somerset School and the Watchung School to date is 25 more than at last year's. The principal increase is in the primary school. There it will probably be necessary to hold two sessions. The other grades although well filled are not overcrowded.

TRINITY WOMEN HOLD FIRST FALL MEETING.

The Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church held its first fall meeting in the church Monday afternoon, with the new president, Mrs. E. A. Parse, in the chair. One new member was elected and two visitors were present. There was a healthy enthusiasm displayed in taking up the fall and winter work of the society.

The society received as gifts from Mrs. Mary Disborough, an earnest member, two Biblical pictures to adorn the walls of the society room; also two handsome vases.

Mrs. R. D. Newell, the secretary, made a report concerning the album quilt, which was made by the members. She stated that it had been presented to Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, and a beautiful letter acknowledging the gift had been received. The quilt contains about 800 names of members of the church and friends.

Songs are scattered through "The American Idea" with a lavish hand. Much is promised of "Sullivan," a topical song sung by Mark Hart, which Cohan himself considers better than his "Harrigan." Then there is "F-a-m-e," another hit of the "M-o-n-e-y" type. "Too Long From Long Acre Square," "You Always Follow Me," and "My Garden That Blooms For You," are included in the song repertoire. The piece is lavishly staged and costumed. Mr. Cohan having endeavored to beat the London producers at their own game in these particulars. As usual Mr. Cohan presents an original character such as the public has come to expect in each of his new pieces. This time it is "The Mysterious Man," played by Hugh Mack, who dramatizes his own part in the action and is a combination of "Foxy Quiller," "The Lone Fisherman" and "Evangeline." He is aided and abetted by "The Mysterious Girl," played by Lottie Burke.

The choir of the First Baptist church is expected to return next Sunday from its annual vacation. No changes are announced.

ASKING FUNDS FOR HUDSON CELEBRATION

Members of the Hudson-Fulton celebration committee yesterday met in the office of Adjutant General Wilbur F. Sadler at the State House, Trenton, and discussed ways and means for raising the necessary $4,000 for the part New Jersey is to take in the celebration. Those present were Adjutant General Sadler, former Governors Stokes and Murphy, Governor Fort, James Kearney and John Ramsey. It was decided to send out this letter of appeal for funds:

"Three hundred years ago, September 25, Henry Hudson anchored at the entrance to New York harbor, and during the ensuing month made the famous voyage of exploration which gave to the world the first definite knowledge concerning the river which bears his name and opened civilization to the region which now forms the great metropolitan centre of New York and New Jersey.

"At the end of this month, still within the tercentenary dates of Hudson's presence in our waters, New York city and State will enter upon a commemoration of the discovery of the river and of the first successful application of steam to navigation upon it, such as this country has never seen. Beginning with September 25, and continuing for about two weeks, many of the nations of the world will be represented by warships. The Netherlands will send, in addition to the gift of the Half Moon, a warship and a distinguished delegation of about twenty-five persons, headed by the Hartridge School; Grace E. Perlee, D. M. Day and Alice Forseith. The last named was formerly at the Stillman School.

"The new freshman class numbers 125 pupils and is one of the largest ever recorded in the history of the High School. Mr. Best's opinion is that the school will be well crowded throughout the year.

"Among the various courses of the High School, a new one has been added, affording a broader change of study. It is the manual training course and instead of the old form of having the work once a week, there will be a period every day. Mechanical drawing, instead of being a separate course, has been added to this department. It will be impossible to determine the exact enrollment before tomorrow. Announcement has been made that the new Washington School will be opened tomorrow.

"The schools of North Plainfield opened Monday with a greater attendance than ever before. Principal H. C. Krebs and his teachers were busy all morning classifying the new pupils and assigning them to their classes. A teacher's meeting was held Monday and the teachers given instructions for the coming year. This morning everything went along smoothly.

"The registration in the Somerset School and the Watchung School to date is 25 more than at last year's. The principal increase is in the primary school. There it will probably be necessary to hold two sessions. The other grades although well filled are not overcrowded.

TRINITY WOMEN HOLD FIRST FALL MEETING.

The Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church held its first fall meeting in the church Monday afternoon, with the new president, Mrs. E. A. Parse, in the chair. One new member was elected and two visitors were present. There was a healthy enthusiasm displayed in taking up the fall and winter work of the society.

The society received as gifts from Mrs. Mary Disborough, an earnest member, two Biblical pictures to adorn the walls of the society room; also two handsome vases.

Mrs. R. D. Newell, the secretary, made a report concerning the album quilt, which was made by the members. She stated that it had been presented to Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, and a beautiful letter acknowledging the gift had been received. The quilt contains about 800 names of members of the church and friends.

Songs are scattered through "The American Idea" with a lavish hand. Much is promised of "Sullivan," a topical song sung by Mark Hart, which Cohan himself considers better than his "Harrigan." Then there is "F-a-m-e," another hit of the "M-o-n-e-y" type. "Too Long From Long Acre Square," "You Always Follow Me," and "My Garden That Blooms For You," are included in the song repertoire. The piece is lavishly staged and costumed. Mr. Cohan having endeavored to beat the London producers at their own game in these particulars. As usual Mr. Cohan presents an original character such as the public has come to expect in each of his new pieces. This time it is "The Mysterious Man," played by Hugh Mack, who dramatizes his own part in the action and is a combination of "Foxy Quiller," "The Lone Fisherman" and "Evangeline." He is aided and abetted by "The Mysterious Girl," played by Lottie Burke.

The choir of the First Baptist church is expected to return next Sunday from its annual vacation. No changes are announced.

GALLAGHER AT IT AGAIN

Says He Will Present Affidavits of Borough Conditions to Court of Chancery.

WANTS INVESTIGATION MADE.

Dunellen Sprinkling Contract Stirs Up Animosity—Mayor Swackhamer Did Not Sign.

The Council and citizens of Dunellen were surprised and indignant Monday at the special meeting of the Council, called to investigate the bill presented by Cornelius Huff for sprinkling the streets, to find that the contract which had been prepared had not been signed by the Mayor. The Council had decided at the last meeting to dispense with the testimony of several men who claimed that the borough was not getting a square deal from the contractors, and appointed last night as the time for the inquiry.

The Mayor had examined one witness and was preparing to take his affidavit, when Councilman George Huff stated that he did not see that the statements of the affidavit would show that the bill was not rendered according to the contract. The Mayor then startled the Councilmen and citizens by his announcement: "Gentlemen, there is no contract. I have not signed the agreement."

The job of sprinkling the streets was awarded to C. W. Huff, early in the summer, he being the lowest bidder. A contract had been drawn up, but owing to Huff's illness, the Mayor and he had been unable to get together and complete the agreement. A few days ago Huff signed it in the presence of Marshal Slingy, but the Mayor was not present at the time and did not wish to sign it afterwards unless Huff was present.

The borough hall was crowded when the Mayor told the Council that the disputed document did not exist. The Council had allowed the work to go on and the bills to be paid for two months without taking the trouble to sign written terms. Michael Gallagher declared that he would present affidavits before the Court of Chancery today asking for an order compelling the officers of the borough to show cause why its affairs should not be investigated. "Things are in a pretty bad way," he said, "when the sons of councilmen can obtain borough jobs and then the Mayor not sign the terms, after two months' bills had been paid."

The members of the Council were as much astonished as the citizens. A motion was made that the Mayor should sign the paper then, but that was defeated. It was then decided to place the matter in the hands of the street committee after the evidence had been heard and give them until the next meeting to investigate.

Affidavits made by W. A. Coster, showing that the sprinkling wagon had not been operated nine hours a day, as the terms of the agreements which was to have been made, called for, by James Benson, a foreman, and John Rawson, a driver, both employed by Huff, stating that they kept no record of the days they went out to sprinkle, nor the hours that they worked, were given to the committee. Rawson, another driver employed by Huff, swore that he did a day's work when he went out, but that he did not know just when he went out, that he drew a day's pay and that he had a poor memory. This affidavit as also given to the committee for consideration.

What worries Huff most is the fact that he has no contract and that the terms on which he bid provide that he shall work only on days when directed by the committee to do so. He admits that he was never told to go out, but says that his father, Councilman George Huff, told him once or twice not to go out on rainy days. Now he is beginning to wonder whether he will get his money.

CHARGED WITH SMUGGLING.

Two Bayonne Men Arrested With Five Bales of Havana Leaf.

Frank Simmons, of Bayonne, a former captain in the fire department of that city, and Anton Engel, also of Bayonne, were arrested yesterday, charged with smuggling five bales of Havana leaf tobacco, worth about $600 a bale. When arrested they had five bales of tobacco in a wagon and were on their way to Newark. Simmons and Engel will be arraigned today before Commissioner Shields.

It is said that for some time extensive smuggling of tobacco from Havana has been accomplished by an organized gang. The five bales taken in Bayonne were brought from Havana to Constable Hook in a steamer.

Three Petitions Filed.

Inasmuch as candidates for office have until Saturday to file their petitions, but few have thus far reached the office of City Clerk J. T. MacMurray. Only three have been filed to date, those of John Manley, for constable; Frank H. Smith, as member of the county committee from the Third ward, and W. S. Tyler as a member of the Board of Education to succeed himself from the Third ward.

The Plainfield Baseball club has not yet secured a game for Saturday. Negotiations have been in progress with Rahway for a game here, but this afternoon the Rahwegians have not consented to leave their own fireside and get walloped.

By the way if Bound Brook should decide to play the Plainfield Baseball club on Crescent Oval, it would get all that is coming to it, as when the Athletics were in their visit to New York this week.

The Y. M. C. A. team is scheduled to play the Kenwood A. C., of Newark, on Saturday afternoon. The Newark aggregation is said to be a strong one and a good contest should result.

"Outwardly all the insinuations of probable action by the National Commission, which would mean the barring of Johnny Kling from organized baseball for three years, do not appear to have the least effect on the erstwhile Chicago Cub catcher and baseball magnate," says the Evening Sun. "When reminded that he was making himself liable to such action by the supreme court of the national pastime Kling is reported as saying: 'Let the National Commission enforce its rules; they can't stop it if it wants to debar me from organized baseball for three years simply because I played against Callahan's team. Gibson's presence behind the bat for Pittsburg has undoubtedly been a great factor in the sterling showing of the Pirates in th's season's National League race, and his feat of catching 112 consecutive games is a noteworthy performance. No one is more willing than Jim McGuire, newly appointed manager of the Cleveland Blues, to admit it, but the veteran has refuted the claim that catching 112 successive contests is a record. He said:

"Neither," answered the cautious man. "Not having funds to invest, I was a giraffe. I just rubber-necked.—Washington Star.

MISS CURRY HONORED

Called "The Wonderful Woman," Stupendous Energy Required for Work.

SOME INTERESTING STATISTICS.

Most Successful Season in History of Home—3,079 Children and Mothers Cared For.

Amid the surroundings of a perfect night and in a handsomely decorated pavilion the last goodbys to Miss Curry, "The Wonderful Woman," were said Saturday night. By last goodbys is meant only for this season, as she promises to return with her chances again next year and continue in the work which has made her loved by everyone who knows of her magnificent efforts in behalf of the poor children of the East Side of the big city.

The fact that Miss Curry has been given the title "wonderful" was patent Saturday evening, when in no les than four speeches she was thus referred to. The occasion was a reception tendered to her by her friends in Netherwood and other parts of Plainfield and about fifty of these gathered to bid her Godspeed in the winter's work in New York and to shake her hand in parting for a season.

The pavilion was draped with American flags and garlands of flowers, while rustic swings and chairs were found here and there for the special purpose of making the place look homeloke and inviting. It was pleasing to see and the social time which followed the reception was much enjoyed.

No formal report of the season's work was read owing to a misunderstanding, but enough figures were gathered to show that a stupendous missionary work is being carried on and in a most economical manner. David M. Runyon, cashier of the First National Bank, gave out a few figures which showed the condition of the finances from the end of last year's work to the conclusion of the work of the season. He said that that the season last year opened with a deficit of $60, and closed with all bills paid and a balance on hand of $122. This year opened with a balance on hand of $620, ade up of the previous balance of $122 and contributions of the balance. During this season about $1,500 had been contributed and the expenditures had been about $2,000, so that with all bills paid there will be left about $140 with which to begin next year's work.

During the summer 2,105 children have been cared for at the home besides 974 mothers, making a total of 3,079 souls whose physical and spiritual welfare have been safeguarded. 6,000 loaves of bread were eaten; 10,502 biscuits were disposed of to say nothing of 4,105 quarts of milk.

Owing to a sudden call out of town J. D. Loizeaux was unable to be present at the meeting and Miss James Parker had charge. Mr. Parker made a brief address in which he paid a high tribute to Miss Curry's unselfish devotion to the cause of the little people to whom she has ministered on home. He said: "Her whole heart is given to the Master's work and she succeeds in giving the children a happy time while she looks after the welfare of their characters and their souls. I think there is no object in this world to compare with that, and when we remember that it is done for Him it exhibits the same spirit as was shown by Mary who annointed the feet of Jesus with the precious ointment."

Mr. Parker has been intimately connected with the work of the home and is in touch with it all the year round said that the financial support while great was only a small part of the undertaking and only those closely associated with the work knew of its immensity. The thousand and one details which are so ably handled seem as nothing to those who merely see the surface and that is one reason why Miss Curry is wonderful. He also declared that it was impossible for anyone to realize the work they were helping to support. "There is no work anywhere," he said, "where a dollar goes farther. I visited an institution yesterday where they spend more in one week than is spent here in the whole season and yet the whole work of that institution is surface work. It does not reach the souls of the children. I can see how the influence of Miss Curry's life is something that cannot be calculated. You cannot afford to withdraw your support. It is her personal touch. She is accomplishing what all the New York churches, with all their means cannot do."

Among the others who spoke were Benjamin F. Hadley, Mrs. William Henry, Miss Minna Bock and George Chapman. All these speakers gave their views of the work and Mr. Chapman made it plain that while Miss Curry seemed to be blessed with more than human strength she should be compelled to take a rest of a couple of months so as to be able to take up the winter's work renewed in health and strength. Miss Curry was invited to say a few words and responded with a characteristic little speech in which she thanked all who had in any way contributed to the work of the home. She said it was much better and more satisfactory to work for Jesus than to discover the North Pole. In helping those who are deprived of the pleasant things of this life she finds help for herself. When she is tired she thinks of those who need help and at once becomes strong. Miss Curry asked that the prayers of all for the success of the winter's work. The formal part of the evening came to an end with a prayer offered by Mr. Parker.

Ice cream, cake and coffee were served and an hour was spent in social enjoyment. The home was closed for the winter Saturday night. Miss Curry will be at the Mission in St. Mark's place, New York, from now on unless she decides to obey the behests of her friends and take a vacation. The season just closed was declared to have been the most successful in the history of the home.

CLAIMED KAVIS USED BRASS KNUCKLES IN FIGHT

Frank Williams, John Kusman and Joseph Kavis, all Poles got into a three cornered fight Sunday at their boarding house, 215 West Front street and the three were considerably blood be-spattered when they made their appearance in court Monday before City Judge Wilson. All three were arraigned by Patrolman Flatley, who became suspicious of the noise in the apartments of Williams and made an investigation. Policeman Flatly told the court that he saw Kusman and Kavis emerging from the rear of the house and upon questioning them decided to go back an investigate a story they told of a man trying to whip everybody in sight.

He found Williams nursing a bleeding optic and from the conditions of things determined to arrest all three. In court this morning Williams claimed that he was hit by Kavis who used a pair of brass kunckles, but a search of the man failed to reveal the instrument his story lacked confirmation. According to an interpreter the fight was a general mixup in which the moving factor was the usual booze. Judge Runyon find all three making it $5 or twenty days.

SOMERSET COUNTY G.O.P. WILL SUPPORT SMALLEY

The first annual outing of the Somerset County Republican Committee was held at Boehm's Hotel, New Dorp, Staten Island, on Saturday. More than five hundred followers of Senator Joseph B. Frelinghuysen enjoyed the three hour sail before landing at the grove where they enjoyed a clambake.

Nearly every Republican politician in the county was aboard the boat and many from other counties, including Frank Lamphier, chairman of the Union County Republican Committee. There were no speeches at the dinner; the crowd was too anxious to eat and to cheer for Senator Frelinghuysen as the next Governor of this State.

The most interesting event of the day was the baseball game between the fat men and the shadows. Senator Frelinghuysen did the pitching for the heavyweights while "Charlie" Fleischman did similar duty for the slim Elms. Judge Schenck was the umpire. Three consecutive home runs were made off Senator Frelinghuysen and he retired in favor of another whose identity has not yet been made public. The scorer refused to make public the details of the game so it was declared a tie.

Some interesting talk was overheard as to the Assembly nominations in Somerset. Charles Fleischman easemed to be the one to be most thought of for the place but the young men and is considered to be the logical man for the job. W. W. Smalley who has already served three terms in the House was the favorite of the older Republicans, who pointed to his record in the Legislature as the best argument why he should be returned there. The judgment of the older men prevailed and it was decided to support Mr. Smalley.

TROTTING AT RAHWAY.

Three races were held, but the number of entries in each was very small. The summaries:

CHRIST AS THE PILOT

Rev. Chas. A. Goodrich Draws Lessons from Recent Trip Abroad.

WHY THANKFUL TO RETURN.

Says Communication With God Is as Reasonable as Wireless—God the Safe Guide.

Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, was in his pulpit Sunday morning having returned home on Saturday afternoon. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was celebrated in the morning and Mr. Goodrich's address was brief. He gave as texts for his sermon, John 16:16 and Matthew 28:20. "A little while, and ye shall not see me; and, again a little while, and ye shall see me, because I go to the Father;" and "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

Mr. Goodrich prefaced his remarks by telling of a question which was asked of him Saturday morning while the ship was approaching the harbor. "What are you specially thankful to come home for? They do things so much better in England." His questioner was a young woman passenger. He said: "We do not have to try to think of a reason why we are thankful to return. Do we not love those to whom we are returning? And is not that sufficient reason?

"Of the return we may say that it may leave pictures on our minds if it kindly will. Vast stretches of smooth sea greeting the eye on every hand, and as the sun dips into the distant horizon we catch glimpses of the azure turning into burnished gold as the great orb of day sinks to rest in the west. The glint of the ship's light at the masthead foretells the coming night. The kindly stars which shine like the eyes of savage beasts on the edge of a forest. The silver sheen of faroff sunlit waters of the morning. The intense masses of blue curling up alongside the ship and slipping back while the spray blows away in rainbow tints.

"Then comes a mist. It changes to rain. Then the wind thrashing the sea into great surges. As far as the eye could reach one could see great blue waves beating up and up and the great ship moves on, ever steady, never swerving from her course, steadily on and on. All leads to the thought of home; the loved ones, the friends seem to come to one out of the vastness of the deep.

"And Christ bring this picture to us in as clear a vision. 'A little while and ye shall see Me.' On our voyage the pilot takes us just a little way then leaves the ship to go on its enterprise alone. He is with us but a little while and is gone. Jesus took his disciples just a little way on their journey and left them to feel the force of the stupendous enterprise, to let them make the voyage as best they could. And so he lets the church go on. The compass of wisdom, skill and power, to accomplish the voyage successfully.

"It was a marvel how the infant church was piloted past the shoals and reefs of its early existence, but 'Lo I am with you alway' shows that the pilot of then is the pilot of today. God is able to guide your life and my life and make it safe. It is for us to do, to suffer and enjoy while the pilot steers and make the eternal future secure. If there can come messages through the ether to those on board the ship is it not equally possible for messages to come from God and prayers to reach Him? Let us turn from this last days' guidance and do what we can for God's Kingdom and our fellow men."

MISSOURI'S APPLE TREES.

"Missouri's apple crop last year was enormous and netted hundreds of thousands of dollars clear profit. —Daily Paper.

'Way down in old Missouri,
Against the springtime blue,
A wave of rosy blossoms breaks,
All starred with diamond dew,
The balmy air is scented
With delicate perfume
From miles of ancient orchards filled
With apple trees in bloom.

Then comes the summer's magic
Of sunshine and of showers,
And turns to swelling emerald
spheres;
The fair and fragrant flowers;
And autumn, bright and sunny,
Instead of gray and cold,
Appears and changes every one
To balls of shining gold.

From leafy branches bending
Beneath their burden rare,
Next busy fingers gather them
And pack them all with care.
And trade, in crowded markets,
To yellow gold transmutes
The richest and the mellowest
Of all Missouri's fruits.

While others seeking fortune
Must wrest it from the soil,
Or blast it from the stingy rock
With danger and with toil,
Missouri finds her wealth at home
Where men must starve and freeze
Or hunt it in a country
Upon her apple trees.

FINED HIM FOR ASSAULT

Albert Apgar, of Oak Street, Punished for Striking John Howell.

FORMER'S DOGS CAUSE FIGHT.

Apgar Takes Unfair Advantage of Small Man and Lands in Court —His Police Record.

John Howell, a small statured man, of Rock avenue, was the complainant against Albert Apgar, of Oak street before City Judge Runyon Tuesday charging Apgar with assault. Apgar was given the choice of paying a five dollar fine or going to jail for twenty days.

Apgar owns a pair of dogs which Howell claimed had annoyed him and his wife on more than one occasion. Howell also has a dog which he is keeping for a friend. The three dogs do not agree very well and it was shown to the satisfaction of the court that Apgar's dogs were the aggressors in the cases mentioned by Howell. However, this was not the cause of Howell's complaint. He alleged that last Saturday night while on his way home in the company of his wife and two boarders after a shopping tour in the city, he was waylaid by Apgar and assaulted while unable to defend himself, simply because he asked Apgar to keep his dogs tied up.

The assault took place about 11 o'cloce at night and according to the evidence was unprovoked. Threats to kill were murmered according to the stories of both men but the judge believed that Apgar was guilty and imposed the sentence noted above at the same time telling Apgar that his next offence would bring a jail sentence. Apgar was arrested and held for the grand jury in 1907 for illegal liquor selling.

DR. HERRING TALKS ON HIS TRIP ABROAD

Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, who in company with his wife, returned last week from a ten weeks' trip abroad, leaving here on July 1, in his sermon at the First Presbyterian church Sunday night gave a brief synopsis of the trip, which proved interesting. Later on he will give two or three lectures on the trip, giving his impressions.

In the course of his talk last night, Dr. Herring explained that he and Mrs. Herring left July 1 on the steamer Hamburg direct to Naples from Boston, then going to Port Said, Carlo, Egypt, where they remained a few days, thence to Jaffa and to Jerusalem, where they tarried for five days. After that they took cluding Jericho, Hebron and Bethlecluding Jerico, Hebron and eBthlehem, and then took an overland journey to Tiberias, from which point they went by boat to Semach and then by train to Damascus, where they remained a few days.

After visiting the ruins at Baalbec they went to Beyrout, where they visited the American College. They then went to Constantinople, remaining there a few days; thence by rail to Venice, Florence and Rome and riving home last Thursday on the steamer Romanic of the White Star Line.

The journey was a delightful one throughout and not a thing occurred to mar the pleasures of it. Dr. Herring took a large number of pictures on the trip and these will be seen later when he gives his lectures.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF WILLIAM H. WALDRON.

The funeral services of William H. Waldron were held yesterday afternoon. A short service was held at the house, 37 Summit avenue, at 1 o'clock and regular service at the Springdale church two hours later. Both services were largely attended.

Mr. Waldron was born at Martinsville 61 years ago and subsequently lived in Dunellen and Plainfield. He was a mason by trade and had many friends. Besides a widow, six children survive him. Mrs. Charles Hill, Mrs. James Kane, Miss Ernestine Waldron, George, Oscar and Bert Waldron, the last named being the son with whom his last days were spent. He leaves three sisters, Miss Rachel Waldron, of Martinsville,; Mrs. Elizabeth Goldhria, of Bound Brook, and Mrs. Hannah Humble, of Dunellen; and a brother, R K. Waldron, of Martinsville.

The Men's club of the First Baptist church is preparing to open the fall and winter season. The plans are to give a banquet at the Park club about October 16, when activities will be resumed. Several excellent speakers will be secured for the occasion, the idea being to stimulate greater interest in the club and church work.

"Do you have any literary people in your town," asked a guest of Mr. Booth Tarkington out in Indiana.

"You bet you goes Hiram Sydenham that man with the pick and shovel on his shoulders," replied Mr. Tarkington. "He has produced some of the best cellars every season."—Judge.

BREACH OF PROMISE SUIT AGAINST SOMERVILLE DENTIST

A sensation has been caused in Somerville by the arrest and imprisonment of Dr. Richard F. Gordon, on a replas issued by the New Jersey Supreme Court in the civil action of Madie L. White, for $20,000 damages for breach of promise.

Dr. Gordon was taken into custody by Sheriff Frank T. Rose, at his country home, near Bound Brook, on Saturday night, and placed in the Somerset county jail under $5,000 bonds. The amount of ball was fixed by the Supreme Court.

Dr. Gordon is still in the county jail, and his friends are making an effort to have the amount of his bail reduced. Dr. Gordon, who is said to be a dentist, with offices in New York city and Red Bank, has been living with a woman who says she is his second wife, on a farm near Bound Brook, for about one year. Little is known of the couple at Somerville, as they have lived a very quiet and secluded life. Dr. Gordon is sixty years old, and the woman is less than half.

Madie L. White is not known at Somerville, but it is understood that she is a resident of Monmouth county. Her counsel is John P. Lloyd, of Matawan.

There is much secrecy connected with the case. Dr. Gordon and his wife refuse to be interviewed and the officials are ignorant of the circumstances which caused Miss White to bring civil action against the aged dentist.

Designed Window Lamp.

Wallace B. Clarke, who is a designer and maker of stained lamps and domes and who is located on West Front street, designed and made the stained art glass dome which is hanging in the window of the Ritz ice cream and candy store in the Babcock building on West Front street. The dome is beautifully finished, every piece being hand made. It attracts considerable attention from the passerby and marks a new era in window lighting in the stores of Plainfield.

Plainfield Horses Win at Lenox.

Fred Bull's Midlothian, T. J. O'Donahue's Tots and Louis Batjer's Rosebank, were also in the money in the various races. This was one of the most important meets of the season and the entry list was unusually large. All the Plainfield horses were entered from the Watchung Hunt Club.

DINNER GUESTS

American Idea Catchy

Trixie Friganza Capital in George M. Cohan's Musical Comedy.

THE HARTS ARE IMMENSE.

A Two-hour and a Half Laugh Is Furnished at the Plainfield Theatre.

Trixie Friganza was the real thing in "The American Idea" at the Plainfield theatre Monday night, her impersonation of Mrs. William Waxtapper keeping the audience in roars of laughter throughout the evening. As some one said, "she is a second edition of Marie Dressler," which is saying a good deal. She was ably supported by Arthur Lipson, Mark and Tony Hart. The music of the play is tuneful and pleasing and was appreciated by the large audience.

The plot builds itself upon the social aspirations of two rival Brooklyn millionaries, one Irish and the other German, who while sightseeing in Paris, are lured into buying bogus titles for their daughters, thanks to the enterprise of a Yankee showman and grafter, one Stephen Hustleford, who is stranded in the French capital. There is a big gallery of characters, all of whom are Americans abroad, with the exception of the Count de Souchet, a bogus nobleman played by Arthur Lipson, who is well known to playgoers here. He is bought with genuine American money by Mrs. William Waxtapper (Trixie Friganza) who wants a blue-blooded husband. There is a clever juvenile love story interwoven with the main theme and the story is developed by a cascade of exciting incidents.

The piece is a merry satire throughout on international marriage, Mr. Cohan taking great liberties with the aristocracy of France. The company presenting "The American Idea" is a permanent organization known as the Cohan and Harris comedians. Trixie Friganza heads the cast; she is assisted by Arthur Lipson, Raymond Finlay, Mark Hart, Tony Hart, Hugh Mack, Dan Day, R. L. McAndrews, Rose King, Lottie Barker, Beatrice Whitford, Myrtle Gilbert, Bessie Crawford, Edith Rose and Lola Hilton. These are supported by seventy-five singers including Mlle. La Reve, the famous Parisian danseuse, brought to America by Mr. Cohan to be featured in musical productions. As dence is the great dancer in England, so Mlle. La Reve is the favorite of France.

ALECK KANE MAKES APOLOGY TO COURT

Aleck Kane, of Fillmore avenue, was the complainant in the city court Tuesday against Fred Randolph, of 125 Cottage street, charging Randolph with disorderly conduct while under the influence of liquor. Randolph stoutly denied that he was drunk and furthermore made a counter charge against Kane.

Both claimed that the other used profane language and owing to lack of witnesses the case was adjourned until Saturday morning to allow the men to produce witnesses.

Kane became impatient at the apparent slow moving of the wheels of justice before his case was called and made the remark that Judge Runyon should have been more prompt in disposing of the business of the court and not keep him waiting as he was a very busy man.

Judge Runyon was not informed of the fact of Mr. Kane's annoyance at the things was done up until after Kane had left the court, but on being told of the matter sent Detective Sergeant Flynn hot foot after the "misused" man. Kane returned somewhat out of breath only to listen to a lecture on court observances and was allowed to apologize to Judge Runyon.

HERE AND THERE.

C. H. Schermerborn in conversation with his friend, Dr. Samuel Ayers, of 178 West 81st street, New York, who was formerly a Plainfielder, regarding the abuse of domestic animals in general and that of cats in particular, remarked that the cat is a much-abused animal, abused more on account of thoughtlessness and heedlessness of their owners through any intentional neglect on their part. He further said that he has been in the habit of distributing beef's liver to a number of half-starved felines in his neighborhood for the past ten years. He has fed to these poor animals at least three pounds of liver daily, and without an intermission of a single day, as he has not been absent from the city a single night in fourteen years. During this period he has purchased, cut up and distributed more than four and half tons of liver. Many of these cats know their names. One is known as Levi Grey, others as Jeremiah Black, Demga Deen, Smutty Nose, Little Whiteface, Mumsie Grey Bird, Black Bird and Ted.

Change in Coal Business.

Boyd Bros., the well known coal dealers, have sold out their business to Wadley & Goodenough, a firm which has been engaged in the coal business for some time in Plainfield, N. J., and will continue both enterprises. Mr. Goodenough is the son of Rev. A. H. Goodenough, who is well acquainted in Stamford. The firm of Boyd Bros., which consisted of Charles and Andrew Boyd, started in business eleven years ago. They built up a good trade, and have for several years been factors in the local coal market. Both of the members will remain as local manager of the new firm, which starts in its Stamford venture with the successful experience behind it, and with a good outlook, as it is taking over a well established business.—Stamford, Conn., Daily Advocate.

WHAT THE WORLD THROWS AWAY.

"A Chinaman will live on what a Frenchman throws away; a Frenchman will live on what a German throws away; a German will live on what an Englishman throws away; what an Englishman will live on what an American throws away." We are the most wasteful people in the world. This, says a writer in "Success Magazine," is so much the better for those who deal in our waste. The humble junk business, the trade of unconsidered trifles, has prospered in America more than in all other countries. In Boston lives a dealer who has accumulated more than a million dollars; several of his competitors could sign checks in his competitors could sign checks in six figures. The leading dealer in Providence, who handles nothing but scrap iron, is worth half a million. Philadelphia has two junk millionaires and a cluster of near-millionaires. One of these Philadelphia dealers has half a million invested in buildings and equipment alone.

Ground in New York is too costly for many large warehouses or iron yards, and most of them are located in New Jersey. Scattered over that State are a dozen dealers who have made fifty, one hundred, two hundred, five hundred thousand dollars from that which the metropolis has thrown away. One of these New Jersey dealers recently bought the greatest "lot" of junk ever handled in the world's history—the old iron and refuse which the French abandoned at Panama. The original cost of this material was about twenty million dollars. What was the tune of the mere song he paid for it, or how much has made by selling off the scrap iron and metal, no one has ever dared to estimate.

GOOD ROAD OR GOOD ROADS?

Shall it be a good road or good roads? questions H. H. Windsor in the Popular Mechanics, and adds:

"The State of Pennsylvania appropriated $3,000,000 to be spent during the next two years in the construction of a good road from Philadelphia to Pittsburg and on to the Ohio State line, the distance to be about 360 miles, which makes the average cost per mile $8,300, inasmuch as the route will doubtless follow to a large extent highways now in use, much of which is already fairly 'good roads,' the expenditure of such a sum, if honestly applied, cannot fail of superior results.

"The plan, however, is to be regretted. In the first place it is not needed. There is not now, nor is there likely to be, any considerable amount of trans-state freight traffic for such a road. All classes of freight are being moved by the railroads at rates which make hauling on highways prohibitive.

"The cities and villages on the immediate route would, of course, be benefited, but at the expense of other portions of the State.

"As an example of high-grade road building to the rest of the State it is of doubtful value, because of its very excellence. Few counties and fewer townships could or would feel able or inclined to duplicate it locally. On the contrary, on account of its cost, it places an argument in the mouths of those opposing the good road movement calculated to create adverse opinion.

"Vastly better would be a distribution of this money on a basis, say of $2,000 a mile to such counties as would spend an equal amount of their own money. This would provide for 1,500 miles of excellent roads, as $4,000 a mile spent on present highways would make a really good road where road material is as abundant as it is in Pennsylvania. This is the plan which has been adopted elsewhere, and is found not only to stimulate the desire for good roads, but enables any and all parts of the State to be equally benefited."

MORE THAN HE EXPECTED.

The professor steps into the barber's chair and assumes an attitude of deep meditation, relates Puck.

"Hair cut, sir?"

"Please!" The barber cuts his hair.

"Like a shampoo?"

"Um—please!" He gets the shampoo.

"Shave you, sir?"

"Um—yes!" One shave.

"Massage?" He nods assent, and consequently is messaged. The barber removes the towel, the professor arises, and mechanically takes the proffered change.

"What's this?"

"Your check, sir."

"My check?"

"Certainly, sir. Haircut, shampoo, shave, and massage."

The professor rubs his hand over face and head. "Did I get all that?"

"Surely, sir."

"It's queer, very queer—most extraordinarily queer! A most wonderful example of philosophical phenomena!"

"What's queer, sir?" asks the barber, in dismay.

The professor draws a small, oblong black box from inside pocket. "Why, the working of the human mind. What I came in for was to get my razor honed."

A WOMAN'S THEORY.

"I do not see why we should try to dress well during the hottest summer months," a practical woman said the other day, and then she proceeded to explain her theory of dress. She said it was merely a matter of common sense. "Prints and muslins are more appropriate, anyway, for hot weather, and why should we not all wear them? For my part, next summer my wardrobe will contain not one dressy or silken gown. Every one will be so simple that it might be the property of some village maiden, and I shall wear any one of them into the city, if necessary shopping calls me."

And, really, the theory is not unreasonable. A woman in an immaculate muslin frock always looks presentable, even at a warm weather entertainment. It has been the custom to wear boned gowns in the city streets because neatness is demanded, yet, really, they are so uncomfortable and they so soon become shabby that they are very unsatisfactory. It may be that the theoretical woman will never be brave enough to put her theory into practice, yet some other woman may.

One exceptionally good wife and mother of my acquaintance decided when still a bride, that she would wear white-wash dresses in the house on all occasions, and she has now done so for twenty years. They are all of fine material, and they are very little trimmed, although sleeves and general appearance vary slightly with the prevailing fashion. Besides these frocks, all she needs is a single street suit, shopping and calling, her white dresses serve her even on the evenings she spends away from home.

Wash muslins are very inexpensive, they cannot fade, and they wear a long time. If she need not economize on her laundry bills, the wearing of cotton fabrics is a fad that may be well taken up by the woman whose purse is none too fat.

THE WORLD'S BIG INDUSTRIES.

According to the latest figures, the water-power development of this country is reported at 5,357,000 horsepower, and the number of wheels which it turns at 57,827.

The canals of Holland have a total length of 5,000 miles, and they are much more important than the country's railroads, which have a mileage of 2,000 miles.

The available iron ore supply of the United States is estimated at 4,785,000,000 long tons.

The wealth production on farms, according to the estimate of the Department of Agriculture, was in 1897, $4,250,000,000, and in 1907, $7,412,000,000.

The production of iron ore from the mines of the United States in the year 1907 was 52,000,000 tons, the largest total ever produced in a single year.

PROGRESS OF THE DAY ALL OVER THE WORLD.

The government is endeavoring to predict the spring freshets by gauging the snowfall in the mountains.

The small industry of France has been considerably disturbed recently by the decision of the French Minister of Agriculture in establishing the legal status of the snail, in which snails are defined as animals injurious to vegetation, and therefore legally subject to capture and destruction at all times and seasons. This decision has created excitement and dismay among the numerous persons who earn a livelihood by collecting snails for market.

HER MOODS.

A woman is a thing, they say,
Of moods. To be explicative—
She points out to a man the way
To go—and that's INDICATIVE.

At first she does it gently, just
To save a scene compunctive—
Says that he "may," not that he "must,"
And that's her mood SUBJUNCTIVE.

If he demurs, does she give way?
Nay, never for a minute! I've Known her to work for many a day
To win. And that's INFINITIVE.

But if suggestion, patience, tact,
Fail, she becomes declarative—
She orders—and you'd better act
Good, when her mood's IMPERATIVE!

—Cleveland Leader.

Victoria Punch.

Pour one cupful of hot tea infusion over one cupful of fine granulated sugar, and as soon as the sugar is dissolved add three-fourths of a cupful of orange juice and one-third of a cupful of lemon juice. Strain into a punchbowl over a large piece of ice, and just before serving add one pint of carbonated water. Garnish with a few thin slices of orange from which the seeds have been removed. The ginger ale gives this punch a delightful sparkle.—Woman's Home Companion.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Sept. 19, 1909.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic—"Pilgrim's Progress" series.—IX. Vanity fair.—Gen. 1, 2-25; Ex. 1-14.

In his description of Vanity Fair Bunyan has given us a most vivid picture of the vanities that exist in this world that tend to tempt the Christian on his journey to the Celestial City. The fair itself is very much indeed like the world, and the temptations and difficulties that beset those on the way to the heavenly city are characteristic of those which all meet who try to live a Christian life. Particularly was this true in Bunyan's day, with little less application today and for all days.

The town of Vanity, in which the fair was held, was on the direct road to the Celestial City. Every pilgrim of necessity, therefore, had to pass through it. The same is true today. We are in the world and must meet the temptations of the world. The glare and glitter of worldliness, especially for the young and inexperienced, are very attractive and seductive. Many stumble into the pitfalls that are set for them. Even Solomon, known for his wisdom, was for years completely under the spell of worldliness. In all its varied forms, he drank to the very dregs the cup of worldly attractions. But when it was all over he pronounced it "vanity of vanities" and urged the young to "remember their Creator in the days of their youth." He had failed to do so, and had paid the penalty. The world had deceived him as it has millions of others. Let us, however, not be among that number. Instead of waiting until we have wasted our lives and then offering them to God, let us consecrate them to him now "in the days of our youth" and give to Him the best of our life instead of its fag end.

The fair at Vanity was perpetually open. It was not a temporary exhibition, but a continual performance. The vanities of life are always with us. No period in life is without them. In youth, in manhood and in old age the world still has its temptations for us. Their forms may change at different periods, but only because different things appeal to us at different ages. Each age of life has its peculiar temptations, so that we must be constantly on our guard.

Bunyan also pictures Christ at Vanity Fair. In the wilderness Satan showed Christ the grandeur of the world and tried to tempt Him with them, but Christ was not overcome. He came off victorious. We may do the same if we follow His example and trust in Him to aid us. "In the world," He says, "ye shall have tribulations, but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world." Through Him we may overcome it.

BIBLE READINGS.

Prov. 1, 10-19; xvi, 18; xxii, 1-10; xii, 1-8; Isa. xxvii, 1-5; Matt. iv, 1-11; v, 8; John xv, 18-27; xvi, 33; John ii, 15-17; Rev. xxi, 1-5.

The Top Button.

Emperor William of Germany likes to wear the army uniform. When he sits at his work table in his palace in Berlin he is in the habit, for the sake of comfort, of unbuttoning the stiff military coat and throwing it open. But when, as frequently happens, some body of soldiers marches by, the emperor at once buttons his coat to the very top and stands up at the window to receive their salutes. One day a member of his court, seeing the emperor do this, asked him, "Your Majesty, why are you so particular to button your coat, even to the top button, when the troops are marching past?"

"My soldiers," replied Emperor William, "have never seen me with my coat unbuttoned, and I don't intend that they ever shall." And then he added with great impressiveness, "The efficiency of an army is a matter of the top button."

That is true of any army, and it is also true of a man. Slovenly in one thing, slovenly in all things. Nothing spreads over a life so quickly as slovenliness. It is the top button that makes the difference between a cheerless home and an abode of comfort—whether the bread shall be sweet or sour, the pit crust heavy or flabby, the beds pleasant to sleep in or destructive of slumber. It is the top button that makes the difference between a successful business and bankruptcy. It is the top button that decides whether or not you are a success in the Father's business, doing your best with every Sunday school lesson you teach, every Christian Endeavor prayer meeting speech you make, every friendly letter you write, or letting your second best or your tenth best answer.—Caleb Cobweb in Christian Endeavor World.

Hindoo C. E. Workers.

Many Hindoo Endeavorers spend their vacations in traveling among the villages preaching Christ. They often use the magic lantern. Sometimes they take passage on railroad trains and move from car to car as the train speeds on, till they have preached to all the passengers. There is a girls' society in Madura, India, that all alone organized and conducted a Sunday school for ninety weaver boys for whom no other Christian work was done.

After Twenty-five Years.

At a recent meeting in Belfast, Ireland, Dr. Clark told that a short time ago a census was taken of the first fifty Christian Endeavor societies formed in America, and as a result it was found that all but eight are still in existence. A magnificent record after almost twenty-five years!

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR DAY

Nineteen Commanderies to Be Elaborately Entertained at Atlantic City.

WILL BE FINE DRESS PARADE.

Plan Reception and Dance for the Women Visitors and a Trip to Ocean City.

Arrangements are now completed for the annual field day of the Grand Commandery, Knights Templar, of the State of New Jersey, which will be held at Atlantic City on Friday, on which occasion nineteen commanderies representing every part of the State, and Mary Commandery, No. 36, Knights Templar, of Pennsylvania, stationed at Philadelphia, will pass in review before Right Eminent Sir Charles A. Mohn, grand commander of New Jersey. Among the commanderies will be Trinity, of this city.

For months past Atlantic Commandery, No. 20, which will be the host this year, has planned to make this gathering the greatest held in the State, and the parade on Friday afternoon will be the largest ever witnessed in New Jersey. The visiting Knights Templar and their ladies will remain in Atlantic City until Sunday evening, and their entire time while there will be one continuous program of entertainment.

The grand parade will take place on Friday afternoon, starting at 3 o'clock. Following the dismissal of the parade, there will be an informal reception to the officers of the Grand Commandery at their headquarters at Haddon Hall. On the evening of Friday Atlantic Commandery will give a reception and dance in the Music Hall, Steel Pier, to all the visiting Sir Knights and their ladies. The hall will be beautifully decorated for the occasion.

The grand march will begin at 9:15 o'clock, and during the dance intermission the drill corps of Atlantic Commandery will give an exhibition. It is estimated that more than 2,000 Templars in their full-dress uniforms will attend this function.

Saturday, Sept. 18, although given up to the entertainment of the visiting Sir Knights, will practically be known as Shrine Day. In the morning the Knights Templar will be taken in special cars over the Shore Fast Line to Ocean City, where they will be received by the Mayor and the Sir Knights of Ocean City and entertained. The party will return to Atlantic City in special trains, leaving at noon.

On Saturday afternoon the members of several temples of the Mystic Shrine, escorted by their patrols, will parade over the same route. In the evening there will be a special entertainment in the Casino Hall of the Steel Pier, followed by a dance in the Marine Hall of the same pier. The same evening there will be a special ceremonial session of the Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine in the Music Hall of the pier. During that day there will be numerous Templar receptions and other forms of entertainment.

Sunday morning the visiting Templars will be taken on a rolling chair ride up the boardwalk, followed by being entertained at the Ventnor Yacht Club. Part of the afternoon and evening of Sunday afternoon will be sail and motor boat rides on the Thoroughfare.

Nearly all the hotels and all the business places in Atlantic City have arranged to decorate their places in honor of the visiting Knights Templar.

Dr. Isaac E. Leonard, eminent commander of Atlantic Commandery, has as his committee arranging for this field day the entire membership of Atlantic Commandery. Mayor Stoy, other city officials and many of the prominent citizens of Atlantic City are members of this commandery.

COPPER IN RUSSIA.

Consul General Hunter Sharp, of Moscow, furnishes the following statistics covering the output of copper in Russia and the outlook for enlarged production:

The production of copper in Russia amounted to 16,206, 14,554 and 16,591 tons in 1906, 1907 and 1908 respectively, showing a steady increase. Deposits of copper in the Caucasus present vast opportunities, and enormous beds of corrolles exist in Central Russia and in the Dniester basin, the quantities in the latter alone being estimated as high as 27,000,000 tons.

The production in the several districts in 1908 were as follows, in tons: Ural, 8,429; Caucasus, 4,780; Siberia and Kirgiels, 2,416; all other districts, 966. The consumption of copper in Russia in 1908 was as follows: Produced in the empire, 16,478 tons; imported, 4,855 tons; total, 21,333 tons, less 113 tons exported. The purchases of copper in Moscow during 1908 ranged from 68.75 to $8.50 per pood of thirty-six pounds.—Consular Reports.

Some of the newest slippers are those of satin, covered with a net of contrasting or harmonizing shade. A rosette, in the centre of which is a mock jewel, is the favorite trimming for these dainty articles of foot covering.

ONLY FOR TABLE OF EMPEROR.

Tea That Is Worth Much More Than Its Weight in Gold.

The tea looked like golden floss silk—like shredded golden satin—like the fluff of dandelion dyed gold. "And is this tea?" said the reporter.

"That," the tea merchant answered, "is the best tea in the world, and it is worth $90 or more a pound. For this, sir, is the famous Golden Tip. I'll tell you why it is so costly.

"Every chest of the best $1.50 tea contains some handfuls of undeveloped leaves, of small, gold-tipped leaves, called Flowery Pekoe. Sort out from a chest these leaves; wrap them—a handful at a time—in a square of satin; shake the satin lightly; empty the leaves back into the chest. Clinging to the satin remain a few golden shreds, a golden fluff, a golden lint. You brush it off carefully into a jar. You cull more handfuls of undeveloped leaves from another chest, and shaking them up in the satin, you are again rewarded with some more golden fluff.

"That is Golden Tip, and by the time you have obtained in this tedious manner a pound of it it is no wonder that the exquisite product is worth $50 or $100, is it?" He shook the tea about in its Satsuma jar. The fluffy golden stuff shimmered like satin. "Only emperors drink it," he said. "A cup costs more than a bottle of champagne."

IS ALTOGETHER OUT OF DATE.

According to This, Modesty Is Very Much a Thing of the Past.

Modesty is supposed to have come over in the Mayflower, along with the story of Rebecca at the Well. Since then Boston has become psychological and modesty has a subliminal self.

There is a tradition that modesty once lived in New York, but this has never been proved. It is highly improbable, especially as New York has always had a smart set.

Modesty, indeed, is a recluse. Her pew in church has been given up. She never had a box at the opera. She would not dare be operated upon in any hospital. The children would disconcert her in any home. With no roof to shelter her, no nourishment to sustain her, she walks the untrodden paths, a miserable and discontented thing of the past.—Lippincott's.

Was it Ghost of Brother?

Miss Isla Stewart, for 21 years matron of St. Bartholomew's hospital, London, recently told this story at a public dinner given in her honor: Some years ago, in one of her wards, lay a little boy who was dying of hip disease. He was an orphan with only one brother, a sailor then serving on a British warship in Chinese waters. One morning the boy told her that he had had such a happy night, as he had dreamed that his brother was with him in the garden of Gethsemane. When the night nurse came to report she said that she had had a curious experience. When looking along the ward during the night she had been astonished to see a sailor in the ward beside the boy's bed. Reasoning that, however, she had gone to the bed to inquire into the matter, when she found there was nobody there. Twice afterward during the night she had seen the same apparition. At last she turned down the gas and stayed at the bottom of some plants. After that she did not see the sailor again.

Romance of a Glasgow Boy.

Fortune, as are told, only knocks at a man's door once in a lifetime, and if refused admittance passes by, never to return again. The saying is belied, however, by the career of George McCulloch, a Glasgow boy, who arrived in Australia just 60 years ago, with less than $25 in his pocket, and who died the other day a millionaire. This is how Mr. McCulloch threw away his first piece of acquiring a fortune: One night, sitting in a tiny shanty at the foot of the Broken Hill mine, soon after its discovery, he played a game of euchre with a companion, his stake being the fourteenth share of the mine itself. He lost, and the share which thus passed out of his hands was, six years later, worth no less than $6,250,000.

"Here."

There is, in Katharine M. Abbott's recent book, "Old Paths and Legends of the New England Border," a little story which illustrates the importance of accurate statement.

In Saybrook, Conn., in the days of cottage prayer-meetings 100 years ago, a lady directed her servant to go to each neighbor and say that Mrs. Bowles will have the prayer-meeting here to-night.

The servant carried out her instructions to the letter: "Mrs. Bowles says the prayer-meeting will be here to-night."

Accordingly, each lady arranged her chairs, put on her best gown, made ready for the coming of the parson, and stayed at home.—Youth's Companion.

MEMORY'S MELODIES.

A slumber-song at eventide,
With the cradle slowly swinging;
"Fast fals the night, with Me abide"
Her soul was softly singing.

The song is hushed, the music's died.
That Voice sings now in Glory;
But ho! I'd give the world beside—
As once again a little child —
To hear the Old, Old Story!

Yet, in my ears, on down the years,
Sweet echoes keep a-ringing;
Through doubt's dumb fears and wisdom's tears;
Whene-er the twilight hour appears,
I hear Love's Song still singing!

Soft lullabies from Land-o'-Dream,
Love's cradle-songs sweet and low—
Those melodies forever seem
Still singing whereso'er I go;
Once dear to Childhood's hour and scene,
Life's Heart of Age still keeps them so!

AGREE ON N. B. SMALLEY

Borough's Former Executive Consents to Accept Nomination for Mayoralty.

CONFERENCE AT PARK CLUB.

Councilman Van Arsdale to Be Renominated—Mr. Hudson May Succeed Councilman Waldron.

Representative taxpayers of the borough gathered Thursday at the Park Club to discuss the political situation in North Plainfield and incidently to decide on a man to succeed Samuel Townsend as mayor. Before they had proceeded far it was found that the consensus of opinion was centered on one man. In fact he was the unanimous choice. His name is Newton B. Smalley.

Former Mayor Benjamin A. Hegeman called the meeting to order and was selected as presiding officer. After he had outlined the purpose of the gathering, he called on those present for remarks. Each one had something to say, but the speeches were purely informal in character. They were plain-spoken utterances and the gist of the talk was that there was only one man who would fill the bill. Mr. Hegeman sent for the man and when he appeared he was taken by surprise. "Newt., we want you for mayor again" was the salutation with which he was greeted.

Mr. Smalley thanked the conferees for their compliment after he had listened to what Chairman Hegeman had to say. The former mayor shook his head in the negative as he decided that he had served the borough long in that capacity and did not think it right or fair to be called upon again. Arguments were brought to bear on him in a jiffy. He was told that he was the unanimous choice of the gathering and that while they did not pretend to speak for the Republican party or for the voters in general, they knew that they had but reflected the sentiment of the great majority in deciding upon him. Finally, Mr. Smalley reluctantly consented—and a cheer went up.

Without losing any time, Chairman Hegeman had a formal petition prepared and those present affixed their signatures. It was then sent to Tax Collector George Brown's office where all Republicans may sign it.

The talk drifted to Councilmanic nominations. The terms of two members, Morris C. VanArsdale and Brasilla R. Waldron, expire and there was some discussion as to their successors. Mr. VanArsdale was persuaded to accept renomination. There is talk of nominating William Hudson in place of Mr. Waldron.

Among those at last night's conference were Recorder Charles M. Dolliver, former Councilmar. Charles A. Lee, District Court Judge Isaac P. Runyon, former Councilman Jas. K. Arnold, Daniel Hulick, Charles Debele, former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Edmund Hutchinson, Councilman M. C. VanArsdale, former Councilman John P. Emmons, Alexander Milne, Councilman William L. Smalley and W. F. Williams.

When seen today, Mayor Smalley said that he did not desire to serve again because his private business interests demanded his time but that if the people wanted him he felt it his duty to do so. "It's like that saying of Grover Cleveland's," said Mr. Smalley. "The office should seek the man and not the man the office.' I've been mayor so much that I think some other fellow should get in harness. It means a whole lot of work and hard work, too. It is not an easy job to please the people, but if you are sure of the square and do what you think is for their best interest you won't have much trouble. Yes, I'll run for the office again, but I wish some other man had been selected."

Mr. Smalley was first elected mayor of the borough in 1899. He served for five consecutive terms, retiring January 1, 1908. His regime was the longest in the history of the borough. A year ago Mr. Smalley was appointed by the Governor as a member of the Somerset County Board for the Equalization of Taxes.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1909.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

The success of Lew Fields' production, "The Midnight Sons," at the Broadway theatre, continues unabated and unparalleled.

Brooks and Dingwall's production of the great Drury Lane drama, "The Sins of Society," now running at the New York theatre, has demonstrated that the time is ripe for melodrama when it is done in a modern and approved manner after the style of this wonderful staging of a strongly drawn story.

Since his return from Europe just a month ago, Charles Frohman has successfully produced "Detective Sparkes," with Miss Hattie Williams in the title role, "Maxine Lapin," and the Viennese musical comedy, "The Dollar Princess." On November 14, Mr. Frohman will make a Chicago production of "Arsene Lupin." This company will cover the middle and extreme West of the country, while the play is still being performed in New York.

Charles Frohman has decided upon Tuesday, September 21, instead of Monday, for the first performance of the new John Drew comedy, "Inconstant George," which will follow Mr. Drew's two weeks' engagement in "Jack Straw" at The Empire theatre. "Inconstant George" had its first rehearsal on the stage of the Empire theatre recently. The company, as assembled, included Martin Sabine, Fred Tiden, Rex MacDougall, Mary Boland, Adelaide Prince, Jane Laurel and Desmond Kelly.

Lillian Russell opens her New York season next Monday night in Edmund Day's modern comedy, "The Widow's Might," at the Liberty theatre, where the famous American beauty is booked for an indefinite run. Miss Russell and the members of her company gave the new piece a thorough tryout in Springfield, Mass., the latter half of the week, where the company came up to the sanguine expectations of her management and scored a solid hit with the audiences that witnessed the opening performances. The fair fair Lillian's newest vehicle is a comedy of Wall street and social life in New York and it presents her in the most serious character she has undertaken since she deserted the musical stage for the more exacting art of the comedienne.

William Morris, circuit builder and pioneer of independent vaudeville, inaugurated the regular season of fall fashions in vaudeville at the American Music Hall, New York city, on Monday night, with a gala bill. The Divine Myrma, the "Mermaid Mystery," the beautiful water nymph who has been heralded as the sensation of Trouville and other French watering places, provided a veritable sensation on this, the occasion of the American debut. Annette Kellerman, the Finnery Girls and others have demonstrated their grace and endurance before the New York public here now, but the Divine Myrma can actually give exhibitions in diving to the much lauded Annette, and as for beauty of face and figure, she has a further advantage.

THE VANITY MIRROR.

The vanity mirror is the companion of almost every woman today.

There are glove mirrors, lovely little things that can be slipped into a glove out of sight, or fixed with a clip so that they are always ready for use in the palm of the gloved hand. The wearer of one of these can glance at herself every few minutes, and no one will guess what she is doing, for the mirror could not be seen by anyone talking to her.

There are parasols with little round heads that open when a spring is touched and disclose a mirror concealed in the lid. Also there are miniature vanity boxes without number, all with mirrors. These little boxes are made in every conceivable shape and material. Some of gold, heart shaped, some round or square. Some, again, are like watches, and can be worn on a chain.

For use at the other evening entertainments tiny mirrors are fitted to fans, so that the owners can glance into them without attracting observation. Sometimes the little glass is so placed that it is hidden unless the fan is opened to the full extent. Occasionally, it is completely out of sight until a secret spring is touched.

A few women have had mirrors placed in the lid of an opera glass case. This, by the way, is a very satisfactory scheme, as the glass can be larger than the ones fitted to fans or the tiny vanity boxes. And, one may add, as a rule the very tiny mirror is worth nothing at all.

At a baseball game in Chicago the gatekeeper hurried to Comiskey, leader of the White Sox, and said:

"Umpire Hurst is here with two friends. Shall I pass 'em in?"

"An umpire with two friends!" gasped Comiskey! "Sure!"—Everybody's.

LOCAL OPTION TALK BY P. FRANK BURKE

J. Frank Burke occupied the pulpit at the First M. E. church, Sunday morning, speaking in the interest of the local option movement, especially in this State. There was a large congregation present and all seemed to be interested in the progress of the movement as set forth by Mr. Burke. He gave a history of the movement, explained its objects and displayed a map, showing that New Jersey is one of only four States in the country that has not allowed the question of local option to be submitted to a vote of the people.

In his reference to this fact, Mr. Burke said that the other three States are Pennsylvania, Utah and Nevada, and judging by the trend of affairs he felt sure that New Jersey would soon be in line with the majority of States. He told of the earnest work being accomplished in New Jersey in behalf of local option, of the enthusiasm being aroused among the supporters of local option and he felt sure that it would not be long before the people of the State would insist on the submission of the question to a vote.

During the course of his remarks, Mr. Burke gave statistics to show that local option appears to be the only solution to the all-important question.

Last night Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson occupied his pulpit and preached a strong sermon on the parable of "The Pharisee and the Publican," which he illustrated with numerous pertinent incidents. The congregation was a large one.

COOKED SUPPER ON DRIVE; Y.W.C.A. ENJOY JAUNT

The Young Women's Christian Association is preparing to have a great time at the opening of their new building early in October. The new reception hall is almost finished, so it will probably be put into use next week.

The large piazza extending around the entire house is the pride of the members. The house is splendidly laid out and promises to be a source of pleasure and profit to the members.

The first of the fall series of walks was taken Saturday under the direction of Miss Margaret Mosher, physical director, to the old baby camp on Johnston's drive. The distance is about four miles.

Here they cooked their supper over an open fire. After resting for a while, they returned to the city, reaching the association rooms about 7 o'clock.

Until the new building is opened the secretary will have her office in the gymnasium, where she will give information and receive calls. A new prospectus is being prepared for the fall classes and all indications point to a most successful year.

HE RESIGNS PASTORATE AT SOUTH PLAINFIELD

The Rev. C. W. F. Attlee has resigned the pastorate of the Baptist church at South Plainfield. The resignation will take effect on the last Sunday of the month, September 26. The reason given for the retirement of Mr. Attlee is that the church is not able to support a pastor at present. What the congregation will do after this month has not yet been decided upon. At one time the was considered one of the best country charges, but in recent years many removals and the lack of new families moving in has had its effect on the church.

For some time Mr. Attlee has been combining his pastoral work with that of newspaper reporting and during the past summer he has devoted almost his entire time to reportorial work. After he retires from his present position at South Plainfield his plans will be announced. He and his family reside on West End avenue, the borough, the church having sold the parsonage to liquidate an indebtedness on the property.

HAD DELIGHTFUL TIME IN BEAUTIFUL HUNTERDON

After a delightful outing at "Grandin Mere," Hamden, Hunterdon county, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Force and daughter, Miss Lillian Force, and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Cutter returned home last night. Favored by exceptionally good weather and thoroughly enjoying every moment while the guests of Mrs. F. F. Grandin and her charming daughters, Miss Sara Todd and Miss Elizabeth Grandin, they were reluctant to leave picturesque old Hunterdon. Mr. Force and family had spent a week, as is their annual custom, at "Grandin Mere," and on Saturday they were joined by Mr. and Mrs. Cutter.

"Grandin Mere" is known for miles around in that locality for its attractiveness and for the uniform hospitality of Mrs. Grandin and her daughters. The place is one of the sights in Hunterdon.

"SICKED" DOG ON MAIN

Li'l Oscar's Leg Chewed by Wm. Spring's Terrier—Has Bad Record.

RESULT OF GAME OF MARBLES.

Court Imposes Fine of $5—or "Get the Dog"—Bryant Don't Relish the Job.

Dog Catcher John Bryant has a job on hand which he does not relish and which he says involves danger to himself. William Spring, a young colored boy, of 508 West Third street, owns a Scotch terrier which is a terror to little Negrodom. Monday afternoon the dog bit Oscar Main, also colored, of 616 West Fourth street, so severely that he had to be treated at Muhlenberg Hospital for his injuries. A piece as large as a quarter of a dollar was bitten out of little Oscar's leg.

The "sicking the dog" was the result of a game of marbles in which a youth named Arthur Venable lost his "miggles" to Spring. Spring refused to return the trophies of the game to the loser on his demand and as Venable followed Spring into the latter's yard to enforce his demands Spring threatened to set his dog on him unless he got out.

The threat was not an idle one for suiting the action to the word Spring brought out his terrier and sicked him on Venable. But the dog evidently having no special powers of discernment attacked young Main instead of Venable, who had made a hasty exit from the yard, and bit a large chunk of brown flesh from Main's leg.

An aunt of the Spring boy was in court and informed Judge Runyon that his mother would not pay any fine for the boy and as the Judge had decided to fine him five dollars or have the dog killed, the aunt welcome job of corralling the animal and destroying it falls upon Dog Catcher Bryant. Mr. Bryant says that he has had trouble with this same dog before and he asked permission from the court to "knock him out" once or twice before bringing him to the pound. Judge Runyon gave the required permission.

"GOLD DUST TWINS" NEARLY WIN FREEDOM

Irving and George Blaney, of Somerville, widely known as the "Gold Dust Twins," are back in the State Reform School after a year's respite in which they have added many depredations to their long list of petty crimes. The twins made a characteristic exit from the field of their operations on Saturday, when Special Officer Smith, of the State Reform School, attempted to conduct them single handed from the Somerset county jail to the State institution.

Officer Smith, with a confidence born of long experience with the twins in the Jamesburg school, believed that the latter could be induced to walk along with him, although Keeper James P. Major, of the county jail, advised him to handcuff them and to obtain the assistance of two or three policemen to get them safely to the train. Smith started from the jail with the twins unassisted, and had proceeded less than a block when the twins gave the officer a jolt and simultaneously made a break for liberty. Smith managed to catch Irving and Irving sprinted down the street with Keeper Major in hot pursuit. When Irving reached the residence of Dr. Halstead, at the corner of Grove and High streets, he made a dash through the doorway and as Major began a wild chase across lots and over backyard fences, which ended when Keeper Major caught up with the juvenile prisoner at a high-board fence and gave him a tap in the head that sent him sprawling to the ground.

In the mean time Smith handed the remaining twin over to the custody of Sheriff Ross, and started on a brisk run around the block to head off the escaping prisoner. Keeper Major returned to the starting point with his prisoner and Smith turned up later through a windfall from his fast run around the block. Smith borrowed a pair of handcuffs from Sheriff Ross. When the twins were finally chained together, Smith made another start, but the prisoners managed to slip the handcuffs and made a second attempt to escape, which was checkmated. The officers then placed a handcuff around the forearm of each twin and finally got them to the reform school.

The Blaney twins, who are now fourteen years old, are probably the most remarkable juvenile criminals on record. They started on a career of crime when seven years of age, and were imprisoned in both Middlesex and Somerset county jails several times for petty offenses before they had reached the age of ten. They gained widespread notoriety about four years ago, when they set fire to the old Somerset county jail with the object of effecting their escape. They have had a year's freedom, but petty thefts are so traced to them and resentence followed.

Owing to the fact that it was necessary for so many of the players to default, it was decided to postpone the club championship competition until next Saturday.

ON THE GOLF COURSE AT THE COUNTRY CLUB

The weekly competition for the Fall handicap cups, Classes A and B, attracted a large number of players to the Plainfield Country club on Saturday. As the season progresses, the competition grows more interesting and the scores indicate that it will be a close one at the finish. The social features at the clubhouse were also greatly enjoyed, fully fifty guests being present at the dinner-dance. This is almost the capacity for the dining room.

In the competition on the course, the point winners in Class A were C. B. Morgan, Henry D. Hibbard and R. G. Morse, while in Class B they were G. F. Earl, C. C. Burke and H. F. Fox. The best scores:

LITERARY

Two very brief, but none the less interesting and suggestive communications appear in the September issue of Pearson's Age, one relating to concrete telegraph poles and the other to concrete railroad ties. For both these purposes concrete has been used with success.

The glow of the "Golden West" permeates the September issue of the National. The editor, Joe Chappie, takes his gold-tipped pen in hand and starts through the yellow fields of the country, and describes graphically the wonderful development he finds everywhere in evidence.

THAT VELVET CROWN.

The full-crowned hat made its first venture in Paris in the soft puff of silk chiffon, flowered lawn or hand-run lace, but drifted speedily over to a mass of velvet, despite the fact that midsummer madness alone could have sanctioned such a weight upon the head of delicate woman during our warmest days. The fashion seems not to be gaining ground so rapidly as might have been expected.

Perhaps we feel we were overcredulous in the matter of the peach-basket.

Will Hold a Steeplechase Meet.

The Watchung Hunt club will hold a steeplechase meet at its grounds on Plainfield avenue, Saturday afternoon, October 16, when an attractive card will be presented. The horses to be entered will comprise some of the best in the metropolitan district, although a few will be missing because this being the hunting season, it will be impossible to get them. The list of entries will be published in the near future. The farmers over whose lands the hunt club members hunt, will be accorded the usual courtesies of the grounds that day.

WARREN A.C. DEFEATS THE MONROE IN NINTH

The Warren A. C. baseball team defeated Monroe A. C., in a loosely played game by a score of 8 to 5. The errors on the part of Monroe A. C. were responsible for the first five runs by the opposing nine. This gave them more of a lead than could well be overcome during the remaining part of the contest. The Monroe A. C. did not score until the fifth inning. Another tally was made in the eighth and in the ninth they succeeded in getting three runs over the plate. The score:

Fisk, nominating and appointing the following persons as directors for a term of three years, beginning July 1, 1909: William F. Merrill, Cornelius Boardman Tyler and Dr. B. VanD. Hedges. The first two succeed themselves and the last named succeeds J. Evarts Tracy.

DUNELLEN WALLOPED BY SCOTCH PLAINS NINE

The Scotch Plains team visited Dunellen, Saturday, and swamped the locals by a score of 10 to 1. The home team was no match for the Plains, only securing three hits off MacLaughlin's delivery. On the other hand, the visitors pounded Harney's delivery for a total of sixteen hits which combined with numerous errors was responsible for the large score. The feature of the game was a great catch by Garretson in the third inning. For the most part the Plains toyed with the home team and not once was the result in doubt. The score:

SCOTCH PLAINS DEFEATS WESTFIELD AGGREGATION

The Plains team had no difficulty in defeating Westfield at the latter place, yesterday afternoon, the score being 4 to 1. At times it was a balloon ascension for both teams, Ortleib was on the firing line for his home town, and was touched for eight hits, and struck out two men. Miller and MacLaughlin did the box work for the Plainsmen and held Westfield safe at all times.

Millre fanned two and allowed three hits in three innings, while MacLaughlin struck out seven men and allowed but two hits. The line-up and batting averages:

BARNES' HITS WIN GAME

First Baseman Straightens Out Ortlieb's Curves for a Percentage of 1,000.

BREWER HYPNOTIZES BATTERS.

Six Scattered Singles Gathered Off Plainfield Pitcher—Jack Martin Pleases Fans.

They came, they saw Brewer and were conquered. That is the story of the ball game between Plainfield and Elizabeth which was played Saturday afternoon at Crescent Oval. The Elizabethans looked swift enough in the preliminary canter, but when it came to playing ball Plainfield played rings around them and they were a subdued lot of ball tossers who wended their way toward the Singer City after they had vainly tried to locate Plainfield's lanky pitcher's offerings.

At no time this season has Manager Doerflinger's club put up so snappy a game of ball. To be sure they have won games before, but not in so decisive and clean cut way. After the first session when Carlstrom managed to squeeze through on his own hit, a stolen middle sack and two outs, not a semblance of a tally came the way of the gladiators from Elizabeth. Brewer had them hypnotized and what the lanky pitcher did not have on the ball was not worth having. His mates, too, came up to the plate with determination to do or die and they didn't die.

Boyd, the first man up in the first inning, was passed. Emery advanced him by a neat bunt on which he beat all at first. Jack Martin got to first on McVicker's fumble on his grounder. Britt Martin struck out, but Barnes came along with a nifty two-sacker scoring Boyd and Martin and sent home himself on Seery's and Schott's hits. Dodge ended the inning with a fly to Grossman in left field. In the second inning after Brewer had gone out on a little roller to Kling, Boyd bunted safely, stole second and same home on Emery's two-bagger to left. This ended the scoring for the day, but did not stop some pretty playing.

The feature of the game was Barnes' splendid batting. Out of four times up he made four hits, one a two-bagger. Seery, while a little off on throwing to second, also batted well, making two singles. Of course, Jack Martin's game at short was watched with critical eyes and it is needless to say that he played the position perfectly. He had eight chances, all of which were accepted without an error and in the style usually looked for in a big league player. He covered lots of ground and was on the jump all the time. Britt Martin made a mess of an easy chance in the seventh, but more than offset it when he grabbed Kling's infield fly in the ninth about two inches from the ground and threw to first, doubling Nolan who had got on by a scant single over second. Nolan started for second when Kling hit the ball and was easily put out before he could return to the initial sack.

Altogether it was a finely played game and the thousand fans present, including many of the fair sex, thoroughly enjoyed it. Umpire Doubleday umpire system worked nicely and perhaps Chief Kiely's presence in the stand had a soothing influence on the players, as no kicks were recorded.

C. E. CONVENTION PLANS

Delegates to Be Welcomed by Local Divines at Opening Session.

THURSDAY NIGHT, OCTOBER 7.

Notable Speakers for Three Days' Session—Entertainment Committee Busy.

The annual State Christian Endeavor convention, to be held here on October 7, 8 and 9, will be formally opened Thursday night, October 7, in the First Presbyterian church, with addresses of welcome by Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, on behalf of the convention church; Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, as president of the Plainfield Ministers' Association and Clarence B. LaRue on behalf of the local Endeavor Union.

State President J. T. Sproull will respond on behalf of the State Union. All meetings will be open to the public and all who attend will receive a cordial welcome. Ushers will be in attendance at all sessions.

Among the notable convention speakers will be Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark, the founder of the Christian Endeavor movement, and Carl Lehmen, the field secretary for Colorado and New Mexico. Dr. Clark will deliver two addresses on Friday night, because of the large number of delegates who will come by special trains and trolley cars from Essex, Hudson, Union and Somerset counties to hear him. For this reason the First Presbyterian and First Baptist churches will be used for meetings to be addressed by Dr. Clark.

Mrs. Francis E. Clark, who is an expert on Junior work, will speak to the Juniors on Friday afternoon. The Junior exercises will be in charge of Mrs. Wheaton S. Lowry and they will be a big feature of the convention. A parade in which 500 children will participate will precede the exercises in the church.

A meeting of the convention committee will be held tomorrow night in the Y. M. C. A. parlors. The committee has matters of detail well in hand and the indications are that this convention will be one of the most successful in the history of the State Union. Information in regard to the convention can be obtained from the secretary, Charles F. Windham, of 57 Fairview avenue.

An important feature of the preparation is the work of the entertainment committee, which is now busy securing homes for the delegates who expect to remain here all three days. Friends of the Endeavorers who are willing to entertain delegates for either one, two or three days, providing lodging and breakfast only, the noon and evening meals being provided otherwise by the committee, are earnestly requested to give their names to members of the committee as soon as possible.

The entertainment committee comprises representatives from the various churches in the city and borough. In signifying your desire to entertain delegates it is requested that you state how many delegates can be entertained and the number of days. This information can be sent to Alexander D. Galloway, chairman of the convention entertainment committee, 249 Netherwood avenue, this city.

The details for the convention are rapidly being completed and the indications are that it will be one of the largest and most successful gatherings held in recent years, owing to the fact that Plainfield is so easy of access to all parts of the State.

The girls' athletic association of the Plainfield High School, met this morning and elected these officers for the ensuing year: President, Miss Dorothy Merrill; vice-president, Miss E. Harry VanZandt was elected president.

The goods to be sold are in first-class condition and comprise a large assortment of desirable furniture. The terms will be cash. D. E. Gavin will be the clerk.

NO RELIGIOUS MEETINGS

Board of Education Declines to Permit School Bldgs. to Be Used for That Purpose.

BIDS FOR THE NEW SCHOOL.

Finance Committee Is Authorized to Borrow $15,000—The Custodian's Report.

The Board of Education at its monthly meeting at the Plainfield High School, last night, refused the application of the Christian Science church, of this city, for the use of the school auditorium for a lecture on Christian Science. The board expressed the opinion that it would be unwise to allow the use of the auditorium for any purpose that might raise religious questions or disputes.

The Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield asked for the use of the auditorium on October 25, for a lecture to be given by Prof. Charles Zeublen on the subject of "Representative Government vs. Democracy," and the request was granted.

The building committee was authorized to advertise for bids for the new school building to be erected on Dunellen avenue. The architects will have the plans and specifications ready for distribution in about ten days. The plans call for an eight-room building to be constructed of brick and stone, with the unusual modern equipment. The school will be intended to provide accommodations for children living in the extreme West End of the city and other sections of the Fourth ward.

Principal Lindsey Best was appointed a member of the teachers' examination committee, in place of Ira W. Travell, resigned, and Drs. T. H. Tomlinson and A. F. VanHorn were re-appointed medical inspectors in the schools for another year. The finance committee was authorized to borrow $15,500 to meet current bills and September balances.

During the evening bills amounting to $4,500 were ordered paid. The report of the collector for July showed receipts of $393.22 and for August, $4,9.23 (at school monies. The custodian's report for August showed a balance August 31, 1909, to the credit of the board, of $29,-702.58. These reports were received and ordered filed. The other business was chiefly routine. All the members were present.

NEEDLESS WASTE BY SPECIAL ELECTION

Former Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of the Borough, made a stirring address before "Our Men's Association" at Binz's Hotel, Warrenville, last night, in which he took Governor J. Franklin Fort to task for advocating the special election at this time, necessitating needless waste of $75,-000 of the people's money. Mr. Smalley also advocated assessors' maps for every township in the county, as being the only solution to a very difficult problem in levying an equitable assessment.

The earnest, straightforward remarks by Mr. Smalley were heartily endorsed by William Jeffery, of Berkeley Heights. The meeting was largely attended by men from all parts of Warren township. W. H. Rogers presided at the meeting as president of the association.

RIVAL EXPRESSMEN HAVE BURIED HATCHET.

A truce has been patched up between James Gray and Walter Thompson, local expressmen, and perhaps there will be no further occasion to resort to the kindly offices of City Judge Runyon to do the patching.

Gray and Thompson have been at loggerheads for a few weeks owing no doubt to the competition in business. Charges and countercharges of threats of carving each other have been passed and Gray believed the matter should be threshed out in court so that a complete understanding might be reached.

Judge Runyon listened to both sides of the controversy this morning and advised the two expressmen to keep away from each other for the future and the trouble between them would die a natural death.

Will Wed October 12.

Miss Lillian Torrey Glen, daughter of Mrs. J. Renwick Glen, of West Sixth street, and George Herbert Gains, will be married at Grace church Tuesday afternoon, October 12, at 3:30 o'clock.

—It is Joseph W. Gavett who was appointed a playground commissioner, and not Andrew J. Gavett, as stated in yesterday's issue of The Daily Press.

SEEK DRAKE'S MILLIONS

Local Claimants to Wealth of English Navigator to Make Fight for it.

MEMBERSHIP FEE IS $5.00.

One of the Countless Estates Tied Up in Chancery Sought by Local Descendants.

That the Drake heirs intend to make a concerted effort to recover some of the wealth supposed to be lying in the coffers of the great English Court of Chancery is evident by the call for a meeting which is to be held next Monday afternoon in the W. C. T. U. room in the Babcock building.

The Drakes and others formed an association some weeks ago which they named "Association of the Descendents of Sir Francis Drake." A meeting was held with Mrs. Eleanor Dunn on August 26, and at that time some thirty descendants of Sir Francis came together and talked over the matter of making an effort to get some of the supposed fortune that awaits the claimants in this country.

The meeting of Monday is to still further discuss the matter and reorganize the forces of the association by the addition of new members. The association intends to send a representative to England for the purpose of making a search of the records and a contribution of $5 will be asked from each member to defray the expenses of the trip and the research among the musty records of the Court of Chancery.

Since the last meeting Mrs. Dunn, the president of the association, has received communications from many new heirs in the West and South and she would like very much to hear from those who believe that they are descended from the famous navigator. Mrs. Dunn lives at 52 Norwood avenue. Among the families connected with the movement through direct relationship or marriage are the Dunns, Martins, Stelles, Manninges, Dunhams, Runyons, Hulls, Pyatts and FitzRandolps.

BERKELEY HEIGHTS BUNGALOW LIBRARY

Berkeley Heights is to have a public library. Lucky Berkeley. William Jeffery, the public spirited citizen who bought the model bungalow which won first prize for floats in the Charter Day parade, and who intended to give the little house to his daughter for a play house has decided to fit it up as a library and donate it to the people of his town. He already has a sufficient number of volumes to make a good start, and further donations of books are expected to fill up the shelves in short order.

It is Mr. Jeffery's purpose to place the management of the new library in the hands of the public school children and the system to be followed will be that in vogue in the Plainfield library where home counts a whole lot in the success of the undertaking. The three schools in Berkeley Heights are interested in the new library and have pledged their support in every way. The children are enthusiastic over the prospect of having a store of books upon which to draw for their entertainment and study.

By Monday of next week the new library will be in full swing and its official title will be "Berkeley Public Library." Support for the new institution is expected from everyone interested in Berkeley Heights and donations of books will be thankfully received. Mr. Jeffery says that he will send his automobile for any books that people wish to donate if they will only notify him of the fact that they wish to contribute volumes. The library is designed to furnish reading matter for adults as well as children, so books of all kinds will be acceptable. The library will be located at the corner of Putnam and Plainfield avenues, Berkeley Heights.

"Bob" Alberts Will Be Here.

"Bob" Alberts, known as the "Pommery Sec" of Grand Secretaries, will visit Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. In the announcement of his intended visit, Frederick J. Pope, the secretary, has the following to say: "If you know 'Bob' you will not miss this opportunity to see and hear him, should you be so unfortunate as not to know him or not fall to be on hand. Among the Arcanum 'Stars' he is known as the 'Halley Comet.' He is a genial, whole-souled—well, he comes from Hoboken, you can imagine the rest.'

GOVERNOR GLEN NOT TO BE HEARD HERE

Owing to a breakdown from overwork, ex-Governor Glenn, of North Carolina, will probably have to cancel his engagement to speak in this city on the subject of local option. The ex-Governor has been continually at it for the past months talking in all the large, and many of the smaller cities, of this State and it is due to this persistent effort that his health has failed him.

The great speaker's breakdown was rumored yesterday and confirmation was sought from Samuel Swackhamer this morning, who is a personal friend of the ex-Governor, but Mr. Swackhamer was unable to more than say that he had heard the same thing and doubted that the meeting planned for this city could be held.

Mr. Swackhamer, who is an ardent worker in the cause of local option, spoke at Milford last night in behalf of the movement and in support of Senator William C. Gebhardt, who is making an active canvass through Hunterdon county previous to the coming primaries. Senator Gebhardt wants to succeed himself in order to secure a hearing of the voice of the people in the matter of the liquor traffic and its control.

CITY SELLS PROPERTY FOR UNPAID TAXES

The sale of land for 1908 unpaid taxes is being held at the office of Tax Collector William R. Townsend this afternoon. A number of delinquent taxpayers called at the office during the morning and settled their accounts, leaving about sixty properties to be sold this afternoon.

In a majority of cases the amount in taxes charged against the properties was small, a few aggregating a little over $100. There was the usual gathering of bargain hunters in real estate, persons looking for desirable properties for little money. Besides paying the amount of the tax, the purchaser also is obliged to pay the office fees to cover the expense of certificates, advertising, etc., amounting to about $3 and also interest at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum.

FUNDS ARE NEEDED NOW FOR WHITE PLAGUE WORK.

The finance committee from the Plainfield Society for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis, met in the parish house of Grace church, last night, when there was a discussion regarding methods to be used in raising funds to pay the balance for the construction of the tuberculosis pavilion as well as for the maintenance. The building will be ready for occupancy early in October.

After the discussion an adjournment was taken to Monday night, at the same place at 8 o'clock, when detailed plans will be approved. Miss Leahy will be the nurse in charge at the pavilion.

THIS YOUTH JUST CAN'T HELP STEALING MONEY

Henry Donnelly, the fifteen-year-old son of Patrick Donnelly, of 317 Stebbins place, was charged with stealing $20.60 from Mary Flatley twice yesterday and this morning was paroled to appear with his father in the city court, before Judge William Runyon, on Saturday morning.

Young Donnelly first stole the money early in the morning, but the loss was discovered quickly by Miss Flatley and the money recovered. At 11 o'clock the money had again disappeared, so had Henry. The simultaneous disappearance of boy and money prompted the boy's father to notify the police and last night the boy was picked up on the street and taken to police headquarters. The money, still intact, was found in his pocket.

Judge Runyon questioned the youthful relinquent as to his motives for taking the money. The boy said he had no plans, he just simply took it because it was money. Judge Runyon did not believe that the boy was altogether bad and allowed him to go on his promise to behave and present himself Saturday morning with his father for a further consideration of the case. Donnelly said his mother is sick in bed and that, perhaps, accounted for his unkempt appearance. He promised to be good.

OVER 3,000 PUPILS IN LOCAL PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Dr. H. M. Maxson, superintendent of the Plainfield schools, at the September meeting of the Board of Education, last night reported that the new Washington school was opened Monday, with over 400 pupils, every class room, but one, in the building being occupied.

It was also reported by Dr. Maxson that the total attendance of children in all the schools of the city is 3,659, which is 195 more than the attendance of last year. This increase is largely in the Stillman school and in the Washington and Irving districts. The increase, it all in one building, would require the addition of five classes and explains the ever increasing need for additional accommodations which the city is feeling from year to year.

Senior Class Elects Officers.

The senior class of the Plainfield High School met yesterday afternoon and elected these officers for the year: President, Fred Loizeaux; vice-president, Miss Margaret Leggett; secretary, Howard Runyon; treasurer, Russell Miller.

WOMAN BURNED TO DEATH

While Alone Preparing Evening Meal, Mrs. John Green Loses Her Life.

ENVELOPED IN THE FLAMES.

It's the Old Story of the Oil Stove —Victim Dies on Way to the Hospital.

Mrs. John Green, a tenant in the Kreyling building, Main street, Bound Brook, was burned to death last night while alone and in the act of preparing the evening meal. Her husband found her dead body after a search among his neighbors who were loath to tell the man what had happened.

From what can be gleaned from the other tenants in the house Mrs. Green had applied a match to the wick of an oil stove on which she was preparing supper. The oil in the stove had become exhausted and in refilling the stove the oil became ignited and an explosion followed. Mrs. Green's clothing caught fire and in a moment she was a mass of flames.

Her screams attracted the attention of the other tenants who rushed the rescue of the burning woman. In the meantime the fire had spread to the furniture in the room and the fire department was summoned. Mrs. Green was carried to the lawn in front of the house and with the aid of blankets the fire in her burning clothes was extinguished, but not before she was fatally burned. She died on the way to the Somerset hospital in the ambulance. Mrs. Green left no children.

HUDSON-FULTON STAMP SALE BEGINS SATURDAY

Postmaster E. H. Bird, who has placed his order for the new Hudson-Fulton two-cent stamps, expects to receive the same so that they can be put on sale Saturday, the first day allowed by the government officials. Mr. Bird has ordered over 100,000 stamps of this issue. This morning a Plainfielder sought earnestly to secure fifty stamps of the new issue from Mr. Bird, offering to pay $1.25 for the same. Mr. Bird was compelled to decline the offer.

Experts claim that the new issue is one of the finest from an artistic point of view yet issued by Uncle Sam. The stamp shows the Palisades, near New York, a canoe with Indians and both the Half Moon of old Hendrik Hudson and the Clermont of Robert Fulton. The number is executed so well that by using a glass names of the pennants flying from two vessels can be decipered.

There are only 50,000,000 of these stamps issued, and the department has received many requests from postmasters from all parts of the country, so that the whole supply is likely to be gobbled up shortly. The first block was sent out from Washington last Monday. This block will go to more distant points. The first sales of the Hudson-Fulton stamps will be on the 25th.

Among those present were the Misses Blanche Mercier, Florence Long, Amelia Carbone, Cecilia, Mamie, Helen and Winnie Brennan, Sarah Head, Evelyn Porter, Anna Wiergeler, Katherine Miller, Katherine McDonough, Margaret Harris, Dora, Florence and Anette Wilson, and Lester Marsh, Eugene Groves, Frank and Charles Ferraro, Will Skinner, Paul Richter, Benjamin Coon, Will Conway, Leonard Bennett, Nelson Leonard, Harold Kask, S. The present membership of the union is about 200 and much progress has been made by temperance work.

The report of Miss May E. Howlett, treasurer, showed the receipts for the year to be $622.89 and the disbursements $611.60, leaving a balance of $5.79 to start the new year.

The afternoon session was devoted chiefly to the reports of the various departments and a discussion of plans for the winter, concluding with devotional exercises. Attention was called to the twenty-fifth annual convention of the Union County W. C. T. U. to be held at the First M. E. church, Thursday, September 23. The chief address will be delivered by Rev. Dr. C. L. Mead, of Hoboken.

30TH N. J. VOL. HOLD THEIR ANNUAL REUNION

The surviving members of the 30th Regiment, N. J. Vols., including Peter V. Weaver, David R. Weaver, Nelson Runyon, Theodore I. Runyon, Randolph Thorn, Tenadore Van Cleef, and others from this city, held their annual reunion on Somerville, Wednesday. A business meeting was held in the morning at the rooms of Gen. Wadsworth Post, G. A. R., when the officers were re-elected for the coming year and reports were presented.

Afterward a banquet was held at Cawley's Hotel, where speeches were made by Mayor Kenyon, of Somerville; Lawyer Frederick Pope, Nelson Runyon and others. The speeches were of a reminiscent character and stirred the hearts of the old soldiers as important scenes and incidents of the Civil War in which they had a part were recalled. There were about sixty members of the regiment present.

TO CLOSE NOTED HOTEL; J. C. BENDER TO RETIRE

The Lorriane Hotel, famous throughout the county as a rendezvous for social and political outings, will cease to exist after October 1. John C. Bender, who is probably one of the best known hotelkeepers in the county, will retire as proprietor of the hotel on that date. His decision to retire is the result of an increase in his wholesale meat business and has been contemplated by him for several years.

Mr. Bender has been in the hotel business in Roselle Park for eighteen years, during which time he has been the host of hundreds of large social gatherings. Mr. Bender's business will be taken up by his manager who bought him out. The manager will open a place of business across the street from where the present hotel stands and in the brick building at Westfield and Sheridan avenues. This building is now occupied by the Shuster Brothers, grocers. This concern will move within a few days to a handsome new brick building next to the building where the grocery is being built by the Shuster firm.

The Lorraine is famous as a roadhouse. For years it has been the stopping place of driving and automobile parties. Connected with the hotel are bowling alleys and the place was the headquarters for years of well known county bowling clubs.

Among organizations and social clubs that held annual dinners and gatherings at the hotel are the Hall Fellows, Wide Awake Letter Carriers, firemen's associations, the Triangle A. C., the G. A. R., Liederkranz, Daisy Bowling Club, Lady Pioneers, the Teller Association and many German societies. Organizations and dinner parties from surrounding cities often held gatherings there. The grove connected with the hotel every summer was utilized as picnic grounds.

SIDEWALKS THROUGHOUT BOROUGH NOW PLANNED

An ordinance extending the limits in which property-owners are compelled to lay sidewalks, was introduced at the adjourned meeting of the Borough Council Friday and passed on its first reading. Notices were ordered posted about the borough informing the taxpayers of a public hearing and that it is the intention to pass the ordinance on final reading, Wednesday night, September 29. The ordinance includes all streets within the borough, but outside of the fire limits, walks other than those called for may be laid at the discretion of the Council.

Petitions were received asking the Council to macadamize Regent street, from Somerset street to Watchung avenue, and to widen and macadamize Clinton avenue from Greenbrook road to Green brook. Favorable action was taken on the first petition in accordance with a resolution offered by Councilman Waldron and the matter was referred to the street committee.

In accordance with a resolution Clerk Martin was instructed to notify James D. Frazee and M. F. Gano, of Grove street; Andrew Larkins and Gotfried Kruger, of Somerset street, and the Mundy Estate to either repair the sidewalks in front of their property or lay new ones.

Permits were granted to Thomas Moran, of Regent street, to elevate his house and build an extension and to George L. Chandler to build a house on Westervelt avenue.

NOMINATE F. DE L. HYDE

North Plainfield Township Republicans Name Wealthy, Man for Freeholder.

CHAS. C. WHEELER CHAIRMAN.

Dr. Moldenke for County Committee and John Beethan for Township Committee.

An enthusiastic and largely attended meeting of Republicans of North Plainfield township was held at Mani's Hotel, Wednesday, when candidates were endorsed for the approaching election. Charles C. Wheeler was made chairman of the meeting, and he was also named as the successor of Dr. Richard Moldenke, as a member of the county committee.

Francis De Lacy Hyde, of Mountain avenue, was placed in nomination as a candidate for freeholder, in opposition to Freeholder William Demler, a Democrat, who will again be a candidate. Dirk de Haas, also a Democrat, is a candidate for freeholder. The nomination of Mr. Hyde was received with much enthusiasm and everyone expressed the opinion that he would be elected by a large majority. Mr. Hyde's acceptance has been received and it has informed the Republicans that he will make a strong fight for the office. He is a brother-in-law of former State Senator Everett Colby.

The Republicans voted unanimously for John Beetham, for member of the county committee to succeed Alfred Brokaw, and he will doubtless be elected. Samuel Cleaves was also endorsed for constable; J. P. Voorhees for surveyor of highways and Charles P. Sebring was elected a delegate to the county convention to be held at Somerville.

CARROLL RECOVERS $26. FOR BURNT OVERCOAT

An interesting question resulting from the which occurred in the clothing store of Chas. Rogoff on Dec. 16, 1907, was decided in the district court Wednesday before Judge Isaac Runyon when the suit of Vincent J. Carroll to recover the value of an overcoat, burned in the fire, was settled in favor of Carroll for $26. J. Henry Crane appeared for Carroll and Francis J. Bintz was counsel for Rogoff.

According to the testimony adduced Rogoff was fully aware that his gas meter was leaking and it was entirely due to his carelessness in lighting a gas stove in his shop that the fire occurred. Judge Runyon, who was sitting in the absence of Judge William Newcorn, fixed the value of the coat at $26, the sum named above, although the testimony as to the actual value of the garment was somewhat conflicting.

It was plainly evident that the testimony of Rogoff while it made him culpable negligent, was not believed in its entirety by Judge Runyon. Mr. Carroll testified that Rogoff used some pretty hard language when Carroll asked him for a settlement, although the requir d compensation for the loss of the coat hing*ed on a matter of $2.50.*

Fire Chief Thaddeus Doane was a witness in this case and told the story of the leaky gas meter on which the settlement of the suit was based.

Irby—Phillips.

Miss Ella Phillips, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Phillips, of 610 West Fourth street, and William J. Irby, both of this city, were married last night by the Rev. G. W. Bailey, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church. Miss Frances Bookes acted as bridesmaid and Richard Harvey as best man. The bride was given away by her father, William Phillips. The house was *prettily dec*orated with flowers, red, white and yellow being the colors. The bride received many handsome presents from her friends. Mr. and Mrs. Irby will reside in Plainfield.

Collante Skirt Effect.

In spite of the complication of flounces, shirred yokes and swathing, floating draperies, the skirt effect is decidedly collante. In general the cuirass effect of bodice prevails, beginning at the height of the bust, below the becoming gulmpe, and reaching below the hips to meet a gathered or plaited skirt. Notwithstanding this circling line, the edge at the low bodice cutting the figure, the silhouette remains slender from the cleverness of its arrangement. Sometimes round, the cuirass effect is varied with lengthening sides, leaving ample fulness below the shortened back.

G.O.P. RECEIVES OPINION

Assistant Attorney General Gaskill Explains a Recent Statute.

FOR THE CITY COMMITTEE.

Appointive Members Are Illegal—Must Elect Members for Districts by Wards.

The Republican City Committee Wednesday received the opinion of Assistant Attorney General Nelson B. Gaskill as the interpretation to be placed on the Act of 1909 as to the method of eshoosing members of the *city and county committees, particu*larly as it effects the constitution and by laws of the local G. O. P. committee. By these rules provision is made for the election of a given number of members in each district by wards and in addition for the selection by appointment of some others. It would be impossible, it seems, by the present rules of the city committee to elect by districts.

Following is the opinion as received by Secretary William R. Townsend:

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 14, 1909.

W. R. Townsend, Esq.,

Sec'y Republican City Executive Committee, Plainfield, N. J.

Dear Sir:—I am in receipt of your letter of Sept. 8th, with reference to the act requiring the election of members of county committees at the primary elections, and the modifications from the constitution of your city committee, contained in your letter.

The first question which you present seems to depend upon the constitutional regulation that three members each shall be elected from the first, second and third wards, and four from the fourth ward, and the question is whether these members must be elected severally from election districts or from the wards by election districts. The phraseology of the act in question is, "the members of such county or city committee shall be elected by election districts at such primary elections," &c. You will note the phraseology is "election by election districts," not "from election districts," and this office has held that the words "by election districts" refer to the manner of conducting the election, and not to the source of the candidates or nominees. I had this matter under discussion with Governor Fort, who concurred in this interpretation. So that I find nothing in the act which makes it necessary to change the sources from which the candidates for election from the various wards must come. I assume that your present constitutional provision that the nominees hereto*fore have come from the wards as* such, and this practice, it seems to me, should continue, except that the election should be by election districts, and not by the wards named above, although the testimony as to the actual value of the garment was somewhat conflicting.

Your second question is with reference to the increase of membership by appointments by the committee itself. This seems to me under the present statute to be illegal, since it would provide a county committee partially elective and partially appointive, and the act seems to contemplate the election of all the members of the county or city committee, in which view I am, I believe, justified by the opinion of Mr. Justice Swayze, recently appearing in the newspapers, which is, generally, to the effect that all the members of a committee must be elected each year.

Very truly yours,
NELSON B. GASKILL,
Asst. Attorney General.

TREND OF THE BRITISH FARMER TO PROTECTION.

"British Farmers and the Fiscal Question" is the subject of an interesting article in the North American Review by William E. Bear on the status of the English farmer under present conditions. He speaks among other things, of the question of the small holdings urged by the government. To quote:

"From one point of view this proposed multiplication of small holders of land is intimately connected with the fiscal question, for when these little farmers find how poor a living they can obtain from the land they will almost certainly clamor for protection as the only means of saving them from ruin. That they would be supported in such a demand by the great majority of English farmers there is no doubt, as the Central Chamber of Agriculture, consisting mainly of delegates from provincial chambers, representing nearly the whole of England, has passed a resolution in favor of Mr. Chamberlain's scheme of fiscal reform, while no chamber affiliated to the central institution has declared against it. In Scotland, where the farmers are mainly producers of meat, milk and cheese, fiscal reformers obtain less support."

Mr. Scarborough to Wed.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lee Northop, of Syracuse, N. Y., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ethel O. Northop to Paul C. Scarborough, of this city. Miss Northrop is a popular member of the Kappa Alpha Theta society of Syracuse University. Mr. Scarborough is principal of the Demarest school at Demarest, N. J.

THE FLEET IN A FOG.

Navigation in a fog at sea is always perilous, even for single ships, but the dangers are multiplied a hundred fold for a fleet. Sound signals of every kind are in use, mostly by means of foghorns and sirens and also by firing guns from the flagship, the rounds and intervals between them and reports being regulated by code so as to convey exact meanings to all concerned. At the same time, to prevent collisions, the first precaution taken on board every ship of a fleet is to put a fog buoy overboard the moment a fog comes on.

The buoy consists of a large cask painted red, which is attached at the stern of every ship by a rope of grass fibre, a material that floats on the surface. Each ship pays out astern a length of rope equivalent to the intervals kept between the ships of the fleet—two cables (400 yards) is close order, four cables to open order. The cask should float at the bows of the ship next astern, splashing up the water as it is towed over the waves. The speed is kept through out the fleet whatever the speed of the ships by every vessel keeping her bows close up to the splash of the fog buoy towing in the wake of her immediate leader in line.

Erler—Vliet.

Miss Lillian Irene Vliet, a niece of John Manley, of this city, was married Wednesday in the First Presbyterian church of New Brunswick, by Dr. Eugene W. Erler, of Newark. Rev. William W. Knox, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony. Miss Mary Clay, of Long Island, was the bridesmaid and James Wallace Hegeman, of New York, was best man. Guests from Philadelphia, Washington, Plainfield and Newark filled the lecture room of the church where the ceremony was conducted. A collation was served on the lawn of the parents' residence.

—Miss Sachar, of this city, has taken the position as teacher in the public school at Pluckemin.

PLANS CONCERT SEASON

Joseph McIntyre Busy in Arranging for Musical Offerings.

ARTISTS ARE OF HIGH RANK.

In Addition to the Galaxy Seen Last Season, Some Others Are Promised.

With the approach of the grand opera season in New York when, unless all signs fail, is to be the most brilliant in the history of Gotham, it is not surprising that the devotees of music are keyed up to the concert pitch and are eager for the initial performances at the rival houses—the Metropolitan and the Manhattan. Each season New York and its environs becomes more and more dependent upon their favorite artists, vocal and instrumental, for their entertainment and Plainfield is ever abreast with the march of progress and cultivation. To this end a brilliant musical season has been planned for this city and Joseph McIntyre, whose chamber concerts have charmed so many audiences in the past, unhesitatingly declares the series of concerts planned for the approaching season will far eclipse all previous efforts.

Only a few years ago a concert with artists of national or international reputations was unheard of in Plainfield. Devotees of music in this city were compelled to journey to New York for their entertainment. With the advent of Mr. McIntyre in Plainfield, however, all was changed and by dint of much patience and no end of hard work he built up a most representative clientelle and by presenting programs of unrivalled merit he was enabled to establish himself firmly in the affections of his patrons.

The first of this season's concerts will be given the latter part of October. When seen today Mr. McIntyre said it is a little too early to announce his plans just yet, but that in a week or so he will submit a list of those artists who are to participate in his concerts, which will apply verify all claims he has made as to the character of entertainment he is to give to the people here.

In looking forward to the forthcoming season it might be well to recall what strides Plainfield has made in the cultivation of its musical tastes. When the first of the Thursday chamber concerts was given there was but a pitiful handful of patrons in attendance. The concert demonstrated that Plainfield's awakening was at hand, however, and with each succeeding concert the attendance increased until now a standing room is frequently at a premium.

Plainfield's awakening may have been slow, but it was nevertheless thorough, as a glance backward at the works heretofore given will show. Among these might be mentioned the trios by Beethoven, Schubert, Dvorak, Tschaikowski, Gade, Mendelssohn, Haydn, Mozart, Saint-Saens, Brahms, Schutt, Smetana, Arensky and Rubenstein, besides sonatas for all kinds of instruments and short solo pieces by the most representative composers for each instrument.

The trio work in the course of the past four seasons has been unquestioned and when it is recalled that artists of the most finished type have been presented to augment the evening's enjoyment, it can be readily believed that Plainfield has risen to the occasion and now demands the very best that can be procured.

Among those heard here and assisting artists might be mentioned Francis Rogers, Julian Walker, Shanna Cumming, Edith Chapman Goold, Gwlym Miles, Carl Duffit, Glen Hall and Paul Dufault, and others.

This array of artists comprises the best known names in the musical world and when Mr. McIntyre declares that those engaged for the coming season are only stars of the first magnitude, it is safe to assert that Plainfield's music loving public has a genuine treat to look forward to this winter.

DYER LOSES DIVORCE SUIT.

Vice Chancellor Walker Sees Case of Mutual Desire to Separate.

Vice-Chancellor Walker filed in Court of Chancery on Tuesday yesterday a memorandum to the effect that William M. Dyer, of Newark, has not made out a case in his suit against his wife for divorce.

Dyer relied on letters to prove that his wife had deserted him when he refused to live with her, which she proposed to make to relatives. In the opinion of the Vice-Chancellor "it looks like a case of separation by mutual consent."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Sept. 28, 1902.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic—How missionaries win souls for Jesus Christ—Jer. iii, 15.

The methods of winning souls for Christ are practically the same the world over. The sinner must be led to see his sinfulness, and in Christ the power to save him, and to accept Christ as his atoning Saviour. But when it comes to the methods of bringing about these results in the minds and hearts of men, the work of the missionary is vastly different from that of those who labor among people to whom the gospel has been known from childhood. Missionaries to foreign fields especially must work along different lines. They are dealing with a strange people. To these people Christ and his teachings are unknown. Their faith has been placed in other religions. Their methods of thinking and of living are vastly different, as well as their daily habits and customs. The effort to save men under these circumstances must necessarily be different from those used at home.

Paul, the greatest of all missionaries, realized this problem and solved it. The ways suggested in this passage to the Corinthians, properly understood, cover the entire ground. Indeed one sentence does it—"all things to all men, that I might by all means save some." Involved in the principle here set forth are suggested the requirements of missionaries for saving souls for Christ.

1. Missionaries need intelligence to win souls for Christ. Paul was a man of marked intellectual ability and finely educated. He had the finest scholastic training that the Jews could give. He was familiar with Greek philosophy and poetry, of Rome and Roman customs. He also had considerable knowledge. He therefore could meet with success the philosophy of Greece, the paganism of Rome and the unbelief of his fellow countrymen, the Jews. The people of other nations are not lacking in mental capacity. The religious leaders are shrewd in argumentation. Many of them are keen sophists and cannot be successfully reached with Christianity unless the missionaries be unusually equipped mentally as well as spiritually for their work. The church today as never before is sending its brightest and best educated men and women as missionaries, which is the proper thing to do.

2. Missionaries need adaptation to win souls for Christ. Paul possessed this power. To the Jew he became as a Jew, to the Greeks as a Greek, etc. Missionaries as far as possible should adapt themselves to the people among whom they labor. Be as much like them and live as much like them as can be done. The missionary among the miners, who dressed as they did, and went down into the mines as they did, had no difficulty in winning men for Christ. Had he remained above ground, clothed himself in clerical garb and erected a regular church building he would have had but few to hear his message. But becoming one of them like he might save some they were glad to hear and to accept his message.

BIBLE READINGS.

Isa. iii, 1-7; Nah. i, 15; Matt. x, 1-10; xxviii, 19, 20; Mark xvi, 15; Luke xv 1-10; John iv, 1-29; Rom. x, 12-15; Acts xvii, 15-29; Rev. xxii, 17.

Unique Place of Christian Endeavor.

That the Christian Endeavor society has a unique place in the life of the modern church is proved by the history of nearly twenty-eight years and by the fact that when one society for local reasons has failed to fill its niche a score have sprung up to take its place. This shows the enduring and self propagating life that there is in the Endeavor idea.

The Christian Endeavor cause was one of those great things in church life. It was bound to come. The need was there. The place was vacant. Its need was felt by ten thousand pastors and church workers. It had only to be suggested to be adopted.

Never did I feel the truth of this more than today, when in foreign countries among people who speak many different languages I find societies of Christian Endeavor springing up everywhere, simply because they are needed and because they supply a long felt want in the church life that no other organization has filled.

First, then, their unique place is a distinctly religious place. It may seem strange to speak of this as a unique place in the church life. Can there be anything in the church life that is not distinctly religious? There certainly can be and are such organizations whose aim is distinctly social or merely civil. I am not in any way disparaging them. It is well for people to get acquainted with one another, and to this end it is well to have a society, if it is needed, to promote acquaintance. It is well to teach young people temperance and womanliness, temperance and purity. In a sense all these things are religious, but they need a spiritual basis to make them enduring and efficient.

The Christian Endeavor society finds this basis in the weekly prayer meeting and the monthly consecration meeting and in the pledge which keeps them vital and vigorous and which provides also for personal prayer and Bible reading. In this respect, so far as I know, this society and those modeled after it are unique among the organizations of the church for young people. There are none others founded on prayer and the prayer meeting and so closely welded to it.—Francis E. Clark, D.D., LL.D.

HUNDRED THOUSAND DEAL

Big Tract to Be Transformed Into High Class Residential Park.

HOPE COMMON THE SITE.

Charles H. Lyman Negotiates Transfer to Ernest Sharpe of Leonard and Niles Properties.

Charles H. Lyman, the real estate broker, has just closed one of the most important realty deals made within some years, whereby Ernest Sharpe becomes the owner of the Leonard property and Niles tract, better known as Hope Common. The tract is bounded by Sherman, Plainfield and Grant avenues and continues through to Stelle avenue and Randolph road, comprising in all about thirty-five acres. The change in this property means that Hope Common will not be available in the future for athletic contests which made it famous in the past.

This is doubtless the largest unimproved tract of land sold here in a long time, and it is Mr. Sharpe's intention to begin at once the development and improvement of the same. The tract will be divided into lots having a frontage of one hundred feet and it will all be restricted and devoted to the building of only high-class houses.

This property has been in the Leonard and Niles families for a great many years and has always been considered ideal for building purposes owing to the advantageous character of the soil, the high land, making perfect drainage. The consideration in the deal was about $100,000.

Mr. Sharpe has not decided just how many houses he will build, but as there is quite a demand for the style of dwelling he has in mind, he will undoubtedly erect a number of modern houses.

ROAD WORK DIFFICULTY SETTLED BY SUPERVISOR

State Supervisor of Roads Robert A. Meeker was in Washington, Friday, where he held a conference with officials of the War Department relative to the re-building of the road between Rio Grande and Holly Beach, which is one of the five mile beach in the southern part of the State. As a result objectors who held up the work, withdrew their remonstrances and the work will be continued according to the original plans.

The State has been re-building the road between Rio Grande and Holly Beach, developing the same as a summer resort. The growth of the improvement was practically stopped because of the poor connection between the mainland and the shore. At this place there are numerous small resorts on the sandbar about three miles off of shore.

The State approved plans and specifications for a highway between Rio Grande on the mainland and Holly Beach, the road to be four feet above the meadows, insuring a safe dry road, even in the highest tides. As a result of these improvements there were numerous streams to be filled in, making a solid road in place of a chain of bridges which were located about one-third the length of the improvement.

The work was progressing satisfactory, when complaints were filed with the War Department, stating that the construction interferred with navigation. In consequence of this the contractor and the Board of Freeholders of Cape May county stopped the work and nothing was done until the War Plans were prepared according the wishes of the chief engineer.

This work was under the general supervision of Captain Louis H. Rand. Negotiations were resolved at the beginning of the shore season. As the contract required that all work be suspended from July 1 to October 1, the matter was held in abeyance until yesterday, when the final decision was rendered. The objections filed in the office of Captain Rand, were withdrawn, and these was forwarded to the Secretary of War, with recommendations, papers, asking that the work be allowed to proceed along the original plans and specifications.

This road is considered an absolute necessity to the shore section. There are so many patrons who travel there from Philadelphia and other large cities in their automobiles. Wildwood, the next borough to Holly Beach, has a speedway, where many races are held. There is a gravel road there seventy feet wide and so well built that a mile has been made in forty-two seconds, a record hard to beat anywhere.

Edward Bannon, arrested several times by Atlantic City police on charges of intoxication, surprised City Judge Keffer by thanking that official for a thirty-day sentence in the county jail. "I'm better off in jail than out, judge," declared Bannon, who insisted that he was happy while in prison and away from the temptation of liquor.

ENORMOUS WOODEN PIPE LINES.

The water pipes of centuries ago were made of wood and during recent years modern methods have caused a revival of the industry. The earlier years wood pipes were made from logs by the slow and rather uncertain process of boring. Such pipes were only used for low pressure service. Today wood pipes are made of selected staves, manufactured with mathematical accuracy, each stave being a perfect segmen of the whole circle.

Douglas or Oregon fir, obtained in Oregon and Washington, is the wood best adapted for the manufacture of such pipe, this timber, when saturated with water and protected from outside influences, being practically everlasting. Popular Mechanics describes the methods used in banding the staves into pipe and says:

Nearly 1,000 feet of this type of stave pipe, 8¼ feet in diameter, has also been placed in operation to furnish water for the turbines of the electric plant that furnishes the power to draw the trains of the Great Northern Railway through the tunnel in the Cascades. This plant develops 16,000 horse-power. The maximum head carried by the pipe is 168 feet.

"The wooden pipe for this line was delivered on special railroad trucks and consisted of 65 cars of staves, or 1,500,000 feet board measure. The steel bands, weighing nearly 2,000,000 pounds, were carried by 37 cars. The malleable cast-iron shoes required for anchoring this enormous pressure pipe line required five large cars."

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

The Defeat of the Amendments.

The defeat of the constitutional amendments at the polls yesterday was decisive, judged by the number of votes cast for and against the proposed changes. But the great bulk of the voters of New Jersey failed to go to the polls to record their opinion on no of the most important propositions ever submitted for their consideration. Yet it cannot be fairly said that these amendments were rejected, for the fact is that there had been organized opposition to them from the start. With only a few exceptions, the machine leaders of both the big political parties worked for the defeat of the amendments. The organized labor element joined the ranks of the opponents, and so did the Socialists. The independent vote was divided, while the rank and file of the voters of all parties were apathetic.

The only organized effort for overcoming the opposition was in favor of the Hetchcy amendments, and this was conducted by the State Bar Association. The members of that body, however, confined their activities strictly to written arguments showing the need of the proposed changes and the benefits that would result from their adoption. There was no practical campaign on the part of the lawyers for getting out the vote, and that branch of activity was left entirely to the opponents of the propositions. Under these circumstances the result was almost a foregone conclusion, especially when the fate of similar amendments in this State is remembered.

It seems almost impossible to arouse the people of New Jersey to the point of voting on abstract propositions when there is no personal controversy involved. They will turn out to the polls at the primaries and elections when they have before them the selection and election of candidates, and they will record their preferences on constitutional questions ordinarily with discretion. Only about seventeen per cent. of the voters of Newark went to the polls yesterday, and the percentage in the rest of the State was perhaps smaller. At least eighty per cent. of the voters were thus shown to be indifferent to the outcome. As in the voting machine elections, this proved the absolute worthlessness of the referendum.

Governor Fort endeavored at almost the last moment to arouse interest by personal appeals, platform arguments, but his effort, like that of the legal fraternity, was fruitless. This fact was due to no weakness in his belated presentation of the subject, but to conditions that nobody could overcome by merely printed and spoken words.

The people of the New Jersey must, as a result of the vote yesterday, bear the ills inflicted upon them by the Constitution as it now exists for at least another five years. There is absolutely no hope of bringing about the holding of a constitutional convention. The courts must go on in the old way, and the only hope for relief from present election methods is to be found in the repeal of the anti-spring election law. It is not to be expected, however, that those who worked for the defeat of the amendment calling for the choice of Assemblymen by districts and for the reapportionment of Assembly officeholders so as to bring about the separation of general and local elections will now join hands for the reform that, previous to the special election, they declared could be so easily secured by the repeal of the offensive Meeker act.—Newark News

ALLEGED FIREBUG IS HELD

Nathan Semmer to Await the Action of the Grand Jury.

BONDS ARE FIXED AT $2,000.

Testimony Points to Suspicious Circumstances Surrounding Sunday's Fire.

After the reading of the complaint George Mitchell, colored, of 661 West Third street, was called to the stand and told the court that he knew the prisoner only by sight and saw him at about 11:30 the night of the fire walking down West Third street looking for an officer. Mitchell questioned Semmer as to the trouble and was told that Semmer's wife's house was on fire. Mitchell and after Patrolman Vanderweg who had passed there a minute or two previously and the two ran to the fire alarm box and the patrolman turned in the alarm. From there they ran in the direction of the furniture store and by the time they arrived the front of the store was a mass of flames. Mitchell said that Semmer did not appear excited at the time.

William Hooper, also colored, who is employed with Edward Peterson and Edward Peterson had been drinking soda in Semmer's place at about 11:10 testified that Henry was pushed out of the door by Semmer when he did not move fast enough to suit him. Hooper also said that the fire alarm was turned in shortly after he arrived in his home at 536 West Third street. After a while saw Semmer walking up and down the street opposite the store, but appeared to be in no hurry to do what was transpiring. Henry corroborated Hooper and added that after leaving the store Semmer walked toward the alley alongside the house which leads to the rear of the burned premises.

James McEvoy said he saw Semmer coming down the middle of the road walking and heard him ask for a policeman. When he heard that Semmer's place was on fire he and Martin Kane ran down to the place and while Kane ran upstairs to warn the sleeping tenants he (McEvoy) tried to get into the store by kicking in the door. He injured his foot in this way but the fire became so hot that he abandoned his efforts of later. Kane corroborated this testimony, but could not say who was asleep in the house as he could not see in the dark.

George Ruggles, colored, of 507 West Third street, was the next to testify and told practically the same story as Kane, regarding the time of the fire.

Captain Fredericksen also told of the time the alarm was sounded and told of his search of Semmer revealing the insurance policy which was found in Semmer's pocket. The finding of the policy is one of the strong points of the prosecution, although the policy shows considerable pocket wear, being dirty, creased and worn through at the folds.

Sergeant Overbaugh was the strongest witness for the State. He said he questioned Semmer after he had found him and that Semmer said the fire broke out while there were eight or ten people in the store. Semmer also told him that he saw the fire start while these people were in the store. Sergeant Overbaugh and Roundsman Higgins arrived at practically the same time, after the first had been extinguished, and they saw Morris Sachar, owner of the building, who said that Semmer was the only person in the store at the time the fire broke out. Semmer told Overbaugh that he valued his stock at $1,100. The value of the soda fountain was not stated, but it was concluded to have been a cheap affair. Detective Sergeant Flynn, who made an investigation of the premises the next day and found the lock on the door broken. This was taken to mean that Semmer had locked the door after leaving.

Former City Judge W. A. Coddington, of counsel for the defense, summed up the case for Semmer and declared that there was no evidence on which to hold Semmer. Proof was wanting of intent and there was not sufficient motive in the light of the amount of the insurance policy, $300. Mr. Coddington explained that the police must have some one in arrest on account of the fire and they had singled out Semmer as the scapegoat. Assistant Prosecutor Walter Hetfield, Jr., repudiated any such motive on the part of the police and claimed that such cases as this one must largely be decided on circumstantial evidence, and he believed there was enough of that here to warrant the holding Semmer for the grand jury. He claimed that if Semmer was innocent of the charge of arson he should have taken the witness stand and told his story. Semmer's counsel evidently think it wise not to put the man on the stand at this time, so his story was not heard.

Judge Runyon held the prisoner to await the action of the grand jury in the amount fixed by Judge Atwater, $2,000.

OIL ROAD FOUND BEST

Cars Going at Thirty Miles an Hour Leave Little or No Impression.

ENGINEER GAVETT PRESENT.

Bergen County Engineer Proves His Theory That Heavy Wagons Do the Most Damage.

Three strips of macadam road, prepared in different ways on the Ridgewood road through Glen Ridge were tested Friday before sixty men prominent in the automobile and road matters in the State. Among those in the party was City Engineer Andrew J. Gavett, of this city. The test was made by running automobiles of practically the same weight over the roads at different rates of speed—ten miles up to sixty—and noting the effect on the road. The first strip tested was a portion of the road left untended for a year and a half, but which in spite of the almost constant automobile traffic, was in fairly good condition. It was found that when the automobiles were run over the road at the rate of twenty-five miles no effect other than a compression was noticeable.

At thirty miles an hour some of those watching the effects said there was a slight "strip," meaning a casting aside of the lighter stones forming the surface of the road to one side. At forty the strip became decided, and as sixty there was no doubt that considerable of the surfacing was cast aside. During the progress of the tests all other traffic was held up.

The next piece of road tested was a strip that had been treated with one coating of oil. Even the highest speeds failed to make any noticeable impression on the road treated in this manner, and beyond a slight scattering of the dust directly in the track of the speeding wheels the road remained the same as if no car had passed over it.

Tests were then made on a strip treated with clay binder in the old-fashioned way. The tests showed that, while not as efficient as the oil roads, the clay roads held together better than the untreated road.

The theory of Essex County Engineer James Owen, who conducted the tests, that there is a popular delusion in regard to the amount of damage done roads by automobiles. To prove his statement, Mr. Owen had four big coal wagons, drawn by heavy dray horses, pass over the road after the automobile tests were finished. After their passing, the heavy marks of the horses' hoofs had loosened stones twice the size of those whirled up by the automobiles. The majority of the party was satisfied as to the strength of Mr. Owen's theory.

J. FRANCIS MEANEY BECOMES A BENEDICT

Miss Blanche L. Giles, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel N. Giles, of West Front street, and J. Francis Meaney, also of this city, were married at 12 o'clock Saturday at the rectory of St. Mary's church, Rev. B. J. Bogan, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony.

The bride wore a traveling suit, with hat to match. She was attended by Miss Mary Dunn, of St. George, S. I., as bridesmaid, who wore an empire gown of blue shade. The best man was Vincent T. Meaney, brother of the groom. Immediately after the ceremony the couple left on an extended wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside in Plainfield for a time. Mr. Meaney is engaged in business in New York city.

RAILROAD PLANS TO EXTEND ITS TRACKS.

Officials of the New Jersey and Pennsylvania Railroad and members of the Morristown Township Committee held a meeting in Speedwell avenue Saturday afternoon, and later went over the lake road on which the railroad company desires to extend its tracks. The company plans to change the grade of the road about six feet, and wants permission of the Township Committee.

With the line extended to Speedwell avenue, it will connect with the new trolley and be easy of access for Morristown people. Stages now run from the park to the railroad station, which is two miles from the centre of the town. It was declared by an official that in the event of the railroad getting a good entry into Morristown, the roadbed would be improved and the railroad would have direct connections to Philadelphia.

Because of ill-health John V. Whitaker has resigned as keeper of the Cape May County Almshouse.

VERY ANCIENT GAME IS POLO.

Was Played in China Thousands of Years Ago Under the Name of Horseball.

"One day, while walking along Liu-Li-Ch'ang, the great book and curio street of Pekin," says a writer in St. Nicholas, "I stepped into a store to look at some Chinese paintings. The street is more than a mile in length, not very wide and not particularly clean, but it is the model street in all upper China and one of the most remarkable in the world. It contains nothing but book stores and curio stores.

"There you will find a history—not a history of the world—not a universal history, but only a history of China which would fill a two-horse wagon. There you can also find an encyclopedia which contains as many volumes as there are days in a hundred years. And there you will find the works of a man who, besides governing 400,000,000 people, wrote as many separate poems as there are minutes in a month.

"Among many other things the dealer brought out a painting of five men dressed in the style of the Ming dynasty—a garb of four or five hundred years ago, playing polo. The picture was painted on a piece of silk about three and a half feet long and 15 inches wide. The silk had originally been white, but through the years and centuries since it was executed it had turned a beautiful brown.

"I found by the inscription that it had been painted by a man named Ch'lu Ying, the greatest landscape and figure painter of the Ming dynasty, some 400 years ago.

"'What are the men doing?' I inquired of the merchant.

"'Knocking horse ball,' he answered.

"'But they are not riding horses; they are on mules,' I continued.

"'Quite right,' said he; 'a horse would be too large to turn quickly and play easily and he would not be tough enough to stand the game.'

"'Why, is it a violent game?' I asked.

"'I do not know,' he continued; 'I never saw it played, but I suppose it is. When riding on mules, turning, twisting, galloping, swinging clubs and yelling, it cannot be very mild. They are liable to run into each other, their mules may fall, or they may be unseated and trampled under foot by their antagonists. It is not child's play.'

"'How long have the Chinese played this game?' I inquired.

"'He waved his hand at me in that queer way the Chinese have of saying they can't know.

"'I do not know. I suppose they have always had it; at least,' he modified his statement, 'for 2,500 or 3,000 years.'"

Domesticating the Buffalo.

The experiments in Corbin park, New Hampshire, have demonstrated not only that it is possible to make the buffalo of great value as a domestic animal, but that it is just as easy to rear and much less expensive to handle than domestic cattle. This New Hampshire herd was started in 1890 with 30 head. In six years the herd had increased to 75. Animals have been sold from this herd for other parks, yet in 1906 the herd numbered 160. For each animal sold in the year the herd produces two calves. The young animals obtained their own living, running in the woods and on Croydon mountain. During the long, severe winters when the snow in New Hampshire is so deep that it is impossible for any animal to paw down to the ground, the animals are fed on hay and for convenience are yarded in small inclosures near the barns where the hay is kept. The American Bison association is endeavoring at present to push this interest of all American game animals to the front as a valuable farm animal. It is said that its flesh is almost indistinguishable from beef. The hide brings an enormous price and the heads of old bulls are sometimes worth $500 to $600 for mounting purposes.

Some of Turkey's Wealth.

No one has ever attempted to place a value on the contents of the Ottoman treasury, which it is stated the Young Turks propose to turn into cash for national needs. Its worth in money is unthinkable, for the solid gold throne is studded with 10,000 pearls as big as filberts, while there are rows of bowls filled with uncut gems, and amazing ancient armor set with rubies, emeralds and diamonds. Among all this wealth there are also such trifles as some of the most exquisite Sevres china in the world, presented by Louis XIV. to Sultan Mustapha.

"That's Good."

"My husband has always been one to encourage those who work for him," remarked Mrs. Pike to her sister.

"You mean he is always ready to give praise where praise is due?"

"Yes, indeed he is. When one of the men does good work he is quick to say so. Night after night, after he has been late at the office, I hear him murmuring in his sleep: 'That's good! That's good!'" And he always refuses to let me believe that he was dreaming about the good work the men are doing at the office. Oh, I'm so glad!"

Circumstantial Evidence.

"Did you say Jaggers was a member of the stock exchange?"

"Yes."

"Bull or bear?"

"Bear, I guess; at least, that's the distinction his home bearing seems to enforce."

SNEAK THIEF IS HELD

George Gardner Sent to Elizabeth for Trial on Charge of Stealing Cigars.

BENNETT BRITTIN COMPLAINANT

Tried to Sell $2.50 Worth of Cigars For Fifty Cents—Held For Grand Jury.

George Gardner, who has been held since Thursday afternoon on a charge of stealing cigars from Bennett Brittin, of 1220 West Front street, was up for a hearing before $2,000 bonds in the city court Saturday by City Judge William Ilion of the grand jury. The bond.

Gardner was apprehended near his home in Phillipsburg, on Wednesday and was brought to this city for trial on the charge of stealing cigars of the value of $22.50 from Mr. Brittin on the afternoon of August 12 last. Marshal William Sibley, of Dunellen, who arrested Gardner on that date testified as to the circumstances under which he took Gardner into custody. James Benson, another Dunellenite, told how he bought the cigars Gardner was offering for sale. Benson said that he received the cigars for fifty cents and that Gardner said he needed the money. Gardner afterwards said that he had more than two dollars in his pocket and consequently could not have been hardup enough to need fifty cents for cigars that was worth $2.50.

William Romaine, the bartender of Maier's hotel, where the transaction took place, told of Gardner's offering the smokes for sale. From all the testimony brought out there appears to have been another individual a dark horse, so to speak, who sold the cigars to Gardner for the trifling sum of thirty cents. As a matter of fact there was another man, undoubtedly a pal of Gardner's who had the stock in trade of the pair and who has made himself scarce. This of course Gardner denies, but all three of the witnesses from Dunellen are positive of the presence of the other man.

Mr. Brittin also testified identifying the box which was offered in evidence by Assistant Prosecutor Hetfield. Gardner was sent to Elizabeth for trial. He has a police record.

MISS ROLLES TALKS OF MISSION TO SO. CHINA

Miss Myra Rolles, of Tottenville, Staten Island, was the speaker at the Missionary and Christian Alliance in the W. C. T. U. rooms Friday afternoon before a large audience. Miss Rolles will leave New York about the fifteenth of next month for southern China by way of Vancouver, for the missionary field in that country. She will be accompanied by Miss Lucy Jones, of Rochester, Kentucky, who is making her second trip to that land of the heathen. Miss Rolles' talk was along the lines of missionary work and gave in great detail the present conditions in Wu Chow, the place to which she will devote the next seven years of her life.

Among other things she stated that there are 1,400 cities in China where the natives have not yet heard of the Gospel and since the door has been opened for the activities of the Christian nations the opportunities were great for the propaganda of Christianity. Polygamy, she said is a common practice among those who can afford to keep more than one wife and a female child is looked upon as an unwelcome intruder in the family circle and was either killed or sold into slavery or worse.

She said that China is awakening and the greatest opportunities await the workers who are venturing into that hitherto idolatrous and superstitious nation. A newspaper has been started in Pekin which is conducted for and by the women and it already has a great circulation considering the fact that only one in three hundred women can read. Miss Rolles is home on a visit to the women of China. The fact that the New Testament has been allowed to be put beside the great Chinese classics is considered to be a forward step in the redemption of the country.

Many things are necessary for the missionary to those strange lands and the equipment must be made with an eye to the necessities. For these things about $250 is necessary and nearly all that amount has been raised and no doubt before the close of the balance will be forthcoming before the date set for Miss Rolles' departure. She is being sent out by the Christian Alliance of Nyack, New York.

Leroy Mortimer, of 2902 Thompson street, Camden, employed as a leverman at the Pavonia tower of the Pennsylvania Railroad, was badly cut on the head while burning brush on the East Side Gun Club grounds. Mortimer threw a bottle of powder into the fire and an explosion followed.

The Constitutionalist.

AN INDEPENDENT WEEKLY.

Terms: $2.00 per year.

A. L. FORCE, Editor and Proprietor.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1909

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

The Hippodrome enters upon its third week Monday with the three big new spectacles which have received the highest commendation from the press and public. Nothing more elaborate in the way of spectacular entertainment has ever before been provided for theatregoers. This seems to be the general opinion and the greatest indication of public interest is shown by the box office receipts which continue to exceed last year's record. "A Trip to Japan," "The Ballet of Jewels" and "Inside the Earth" are all marvels of scenic beauty and the glittering ballet led by Mlle. Albertina Rasch, the dainty little premiere from Vienna, is by no means the least attractive portion of the gigantic show. A complete circus is included in the entertainment and there are many scenic surprises including the astonishing finale when an army of silver clad men and maids march into the water and disappear from sight in most extraordinary fashion. The Hippodrome will probably have its banner season this year.

"The Bridge," the new play by Rupert Hughes, in which Harrison Grey Fiske is presenting Guy Bates Post as a star at the Majestic h'Teatre, is distinctly a play of "today." It vibrates with the spirit of the new America that has arisen in the last decade—the America of endeavor and achievement. Mr. Hughes strikes an entirely new note in the ever broadening field of American drama, pointedly exposing the hollowness of class distinction in this country by glorifying the worth of men who carve for themselves noble careers without the aid of inherited wealth and position.

In the parlance of the first nighters who gathered to receive Lillian Russell in her new comedy, "The Widow's Might," in New York the past week, the consensus of opinion was that the fair Lillian wins again. Edmund Day's comedy of Wall Street which is her stellar vehicle for the present, turns out the play that permits Miss Russell to shine in new surroundings with all the charm and feminine graces that have long combined to make her an institution on the American stage. A surprising element of her new character which was particularly noticed was that the former queen of comic opera has ripened in her art and the refinedness and the fact of most note was the splendid advancement she has made in this difficult branch of art. Her development has added to her poise and charm, and withal her work in the central character of this long waiting son of Cupid and the Stock Exchange was so clean cut and convincing that Miss Russell lifted the piece into success and by force of her personality and wonderful stage presence made it a decided hit.

NEW JERSEY FAIR.

New and Novel Features Will Be Introduced.

October 9 to 17, inclusive, are the dates set for the New Jersey Fair of 1909, at Olympic Park, Newark. This big event, which has now come to be recognized as one of the most interesting annual exhibitions of its sort in this section of the country, will be on a much larger and more elaborate scale this year than ever before. New and novel features will be introduced and all of the old departments will be strengthened and enlarged.

Judging from the unusually great number of applications already received for space in the exhibition buildings and for other concessions, the general display of agricultural products, industrial wares, etc., and the variety of special amusement features will bear favorable comparison with the best offerings of big fairs elsewhere that have been established for years.

A special effort of the management will be to infuse life and spice into every day's program of events during the entire nine days of the fair, in conformity with this idea a series of high-class horse racing meets has been arranged for each afternoon, excepting Sunday

IN BLACK AND WHITE.

Perhaps the most effective colors if colors we may call them—for the small child are black and white. It is a nice relief when you have tired of the all-white proposition to get a shepherd's plaid coat to be worn with the sheer white frock and black shoes and stockings. The large panama hat is tempting with this effective outfit should be draped with a loosely tied scarf of black satin dotted with white spots an inch and a half in diameter.

Paris is recommending the scarf as a hat trimming, and it is sent over here in black, blue and scarlet, with white disks sprinkled over its satin surface.

The plan of providing two different trimmings for the same hat may be admirably accomplished by the use of two-colored scarfs, and there will be no stumbling block to the amateur, as the scarf means simply the tying of a bow.

CELESTIAL BOOZE FIGHTER CREATS DISTURBANCE

Lewis Voy, a celestial with a love for whiskey, got into the toils Saturday night when after drinking several glasses of his favorite substitute for rice wine he sought a couch on the sidewalk on Madison avenue near Front street. He was gathered in by Patrolman Payne and was dead to the world when placed in a cell at police headquarters. This morning when arraigned before City Judge Runyon, Voy through an interpreter said that he knew nothing about what he had done. It transpired, though, that on awakening in his cell during the night he became frantic at his unusual surroundings and tore up the bedclothing and otherwise created a disturbance.

Patrolman Payne said Monday that the chinaman was so drunk that he wanted a barber to shave off his queue, but had to be satisfied with just an ordinary shave. Through the interpreter Voy told the court that some boys had blown a powder into his face which he inhaled and which must have been full of dope as it made him drunk. It was learned, however, that he had absorbed no less than four full glasses of whiskey within ten minutes at a local saloon. He was allowed to go. Voy was the second chinaman ever arrested in this city.

MISS FLORENCE R. HILL VICTIM OF NEURASTHENIA

Miss Florence Rosamond Hill, aged 25 years, daughter of Mrs. Mary Barber Hill, of 58 Westervelt avenue, died Saturday night at her home following an illness of about a week. Death was due to nervous prostration and a complication of other troubles. Miss Hill was born in Elmira, N. Y., and had been a resident of Plainfield about seventeen years.

During the past six years she was the private secretary for Augustus J. Brunson, president of the First National Bank, and she always applied herself very closely to the difficult work. During the summer she was granted a two weeks' vacation and this seemed to benefit her, but a week ago she was taken suddenly ill and failed to rally.

Miss Hill was a communicant of Grace church and a member of the Sunday-school, being a faithful attendant at the services. She is survived by a mother, a sister, Miss Juliet Hill and a brother, Oliver B. Hill, all of this city.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. LOUISE MILLIKEN

The funeral of Mrs. Louise Ward Milliken, who died at Lake Placid, N. Y., last Friday, took place Monday from the residence of her sister-in-law, Mrs. J. W. DeGraff, 996 Central avenue. The services were held at 3 o'clock and were conducted by Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace Episcopal church. Miss Grace Carroll sang with much feeling "Nearer, My God, to Thee" and "Lead Kindly Light." Miss Carroll was accompanied by Howard Case on the piano. A large number of friends and relatives were present and many accompanied the remains to their last resting place in Hillside cemetery.

Mrs. Milliken was born at Towanda, Pa., and when very young went with her parents to Syracuse, where she resided until two years after her marriage to Mr. Milliken. Mr. and Mrs. Milliken came to North Plainfield then and remained there for two years, afterwards moving to New York where they have resided ever since.

Had Mrs. Milliken not died she would have been able to have joined in celebrating the twenty-first anniversary of her wedding which took place on September 18, 1888. She died just one day before the anniversary. She was well known at Bar Harbor where she had a summer home and was a frequent visitor in Plainfield.

Besides her husband Mrs. Milliken is survived by two children, Foster, Jr., seventeen, and a daughter, Ruth, nearly fifteen years old.

Approaching Wedding.

Mrs. I. Renwick Glen, of West Sixth street, has issued invitations to the marriage of her daughter, Miss Lillian Torrey Glen, to George Herbert Gains, on Tuesday afternoon, October 4, at 3:30 o'clock, at Grace church, East Seventh and Sycamore streets. Miss Glen was formerly a teacher in the Irving school.

"Snow Ball" a Champion.

Fred Moore's famous toy poodle, "Snowball," won further honors at the annual bench show of the Atlantic City Kennel club, Saturday, when two blues, a winners and a special prize was awarded to the Plainfield dog. This entitles it to a championship, having won nine blues, five winners and a special in all. Mr. Moore will probably enter his dog in the Madison Square Garden show later in the season.

WAGON UPSET: HIP BROKEN

Mrs. W. J. Case, of Bingham-ton, Thrown from Runabout —Taken to Hospital.

STRUCK BY TROLLEY CAR.

Mr. Case Escapes Injury—Accident at Park Avenue and Fourth Street—Trolley Crew Not Held.

An accident which nearly cost the life of Mrs. W. J. Case, of Leicestershire, a suburb of Binghamton, N. Y., occurred shortly after 8 o'clock Saturday night at the corner of Park avenue and Fourth street. Mrs. Case with her husband was driving a runabout up Park avenue and as they crossed Fourth street trolley car No. 109, in charge of Motorman Casenose and Conductor W. W. Drake, ran into the runabout spilling both the occupants out. In the fall to the pavement Mrs. Case sustained a fracture of the hip and contusions of the body.

The injured woman is about sixty years old and the shock will materially retard her recovery. Dr. Currie, who was called attended Mrs. Case and had her taken to Muhlenberg Hospital. Mr. Case, although thrown to the ground sustained no injuries beyond a shaking up and was able to accompany his wife as far as the hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Case were here on a visit to Mr. and Mrs. B. Carpenter, of Trent, and had been on a shopping trip to the city. They were on their way home when the accident happened. The trolley crew were not arrested. Casenose claims that his car was moving very slowly at the time of the accident and that the driver of the horse was responsible for the accident as he did not heed the warning bell when sounded.

The car had just begun to move after allowing some ten or twelve passengers to alight at the corner of Park avenue. The rear wheel on the right side of the runabout was pushed up so as to tip the wagon over throwing the two old people out. Dr. Currie said Sunday afternoon that barring complications which are not expected Mrs. Case would recover.

FALL INTO EXCAVATION INJURES MARY KERWIN

Mary Kerwin, a domestic, in the employ of W. C. Duykinck, fell into an excavation Monday on Johnson avenue while on her way home from a visit to friends on Jackson avenue. Miss Kerwin though severely hurt managed to get home and reported the occurrence to her employer who notified the police.

Patrolman Simpson, who was sent out to investigate, found that the hole in which the young woman had fallen was marked properly with a red lantern although she said that the hole into which she had fallen had no light. It was reported that Miss Kerwin had said that she had fallen into a hole in the sidewalk, but as there are no holes in the walk where she said she had been, it is concluded that she crossed the vacant lot at Jackson avenue and in failing to notice the warning light fell into the excavation mentioned.

It was not possible to learn the extent of the young woman's injuries this morning, but it was said at Mr. Duykinck's residence that Miss Kerwin had "hurt her back and limbs severely" and was confined to her bed.

PAUL THE TRAVELLER AND MAKER OF HISTORY

At the Congregational church Sunday morning, Rev. C. L. Goodrich preached before a large congregation. He chose as his subject "Paul as a Traveler." He compared the journeys of Paul to those of the modern travelers, contrasting his methods with those of the present day tourist, making his discourse not only elevating but instructive and interesting.

The hardships that Paul endured in his journeys to Antioch, Asia Minor, Macedonia, Greece and Rome, from Jerusalem, on foot with the occasional aid of a donkey and the long tiresome and hazardous trips on the water in small sailing boats were described. If he had kept a diary, Mr. Goodrich said, it has been lost as so many books which we would prize so highly have been. As it is, he said we have to be satisfied with the scanty notes furnished us by Luke.

The motives of those making long journeys today, pleasure, study and business, were placed beside that of Paul, to work not for his own pleasure nor profit, but to help other men and to accomplish the mission given him by his Master.

But, he said, there are still some travelers journeying for the same purpose that Paul did, the missionaries.

Another difference is, it was shown, that Paul went about making history while ordinary tourists are content to look at such an event did he make history that to following history, the travelers interest in his life surpasses even that aroused by the dramas of Shakespeare or the wars, and relics of the middle ages. And, where Paul spread the seed sometimes in sorrow, he became the foundation for the great European church and Christianity, the English church and Christianity and the American and Anglo-Saxon Christianity with its enlightment and progress. Yet, whatever great future these mighty institutions may have they will owe much of it to Paul.

SUICIDE OF AMOS MUNDY; HANGED HIMSELF SATURDAY

Amos Mundy, of Springdale, was found hanging dead in a building on which he had been working in Bound Brook Monday, by some of the other carpenters engaged on the job. Mundy had been working on the building for some time past, but did not work last week, and his actions during the last few days gave the impression that he was laboring under some trouble which he is not known to have confided to anyone.

The body was discovered hanging to the rafters of the new building and was immediately cut down, but life had been extinct for many hours. It is believed that Mundy waited until the workmen had quit on Saturday and then entered the place and hung himself. It is thought that the was despondent over financial matters and fearing further trouble decided to take the shortest cut to oblivion. The body was taken this morning to Eckhart's morgue at Bound Brook. Mundy leaves a widow and had no children.

Charles K. Moore a Suicide.

Charles K. Moore, who committed suicide in his home, 307 Columbus avenue, New York, last week, by drinking a vial of cyanide of potassium, was a former resident of this city, and was prominent here in the construction of the local water supply system, being one of the engineers. He was a grandnephew of Robert Fulton, and following his death Coroner Acritelli made public a letter written by Mr. Moore on that subject. Mr. Moore's wife is an invalid living at Eagle Rock. He also leaves a son, James Moore. Mr. Moore had a host of friends here.

MARTINE PREACHES DYED IN WOOL FAITH

James E. Martine made an address at the meeting of the Sixth Ward Democratic Club in Elizabeth last night for which he was, as usual, vociferously cheered and loudly applauded. The meeting was an enthusiastic one from start to finish and when Mr. Martine arose to deliver the speech he had been invited to give the ball was filled with men anxious to listen and learn from the lips of the famous orator something about the present outlook for the great Democratic party.

Mr. Martine advised the club to stand together in what ever they undertake and pointed out to the members the wisdom of organization in order to get results. He urged them to support their Democratic nominees at the polls whoever they might be. "The primaries will settle the question of who is to represent you in the offices in the gift of the people," he said, "and it is your duty to support the men whom you nominate. The battle which confronts you, never swerving to the left or right, but forging always onward to the goal in a straight line. It is patent to me that the Republican party in this State is discontended and their discontent means your opportunity. You know what they have done to the whole American nation in their recent tinkering of the tariff! Everything, including the actual necessaries of life will cost you more than ever! O, yes, they are discontented and as I said, it is your opportunity."

CADY MEANS TO WAGE BATTLE WITH MACHINE.

Since filing his petition for the Republican nomination for member of Assembly from Union county, Schuyler M. Cady, of Summit, has been busily engaged in seeking support of his candidacy. Although the Union county republican machine has named Augustus W. Schwartz, of Elizabeth; Carlton B. Pierce, of Cranford, and Lloyd Thompson, of Westfield, as Assembly candidates, Mr. Cady believes he will be able to make the contest interesting for the machine candidates on the day of the primary.

The local Republican Club has indorsed Mr. Cady's candidacy, and, it is said, a number of the local Republican leaders are lending a helping hand in securing votes for him throughout the county.

Mr. Cady is the son of Freeholder John N. Cady and is but twenty-seven years of age, and is a member of a law firm, with offices in Newark and New York. After graduating from the Summit Academy in 1888 he entered Princeton University, from which he graduated in 1902 with the degree of A. B. During the winters of 1902 and 1904 Mr. Cady taught in the Princeton High School, and in 1905 he obtained the degree of M. A. from Princeton University. Mr. Cady is a graduate of the New York Law School, from which he secured the degree of LL. D. He was admitted to the bar in this State in 1906 after having served a law clerkship in the office of Hood and Hood, in Newark.

Besides being a director of the Young Men's Christian Association of Summit, Mr. Cady is treasurer of the Highland club, treasurer of the Y. M. C. A. Athletic Association and a member of the Chemical Engine Company. He was manager of the Y. M. C. A. baseball team in the season of 1908. Last winter Mr. Cady wrote a four-act comedy drama, entitled "Julius Caesar," which was presented by the members of the Young Men's Christian Association twice for the benefit of the association baseball team.

REV. MR. FINN RESIGNS

Park Ave. Church Pastor to Relinquish Charge on October 17.

GOES TO ROCHESTER, PENN.

Since Coming Here Five Years Ago He Has Placed Church on Firm Financial Basis —His Work.

Rev. A. E. Finn, who has been pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church since January 3, 1905, has tendered his resignation to accept the call to become pastor of the First Baptist church, of Rochester, Pa.

Mr. Finn's resignation was read to his congregation by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, who exchanged pulpits Sunday morning for the express purpose. While a few members of the congregation had an inkling of the resignation the majority did not, and there was a general expression of the sincerest regret. Mr. Finn will begin his new work at Rochester on October 24.

When Mr. Finn came from the Baptist church of Cherryville, Hunterdon county, to become the pastor of the local church, on January 3, 1904, there was a floating and mortgage debt of nearly $12,000. This has been reduced to $5,000. A new steam heating plant has been installed at a cost of $1,000, a new carpet laid, the building thoroughly overhauled and painted outside, acoustic difficulties overcome, a fine property opposite the church secured as a parsonage, missionary offerings largely increased to foreign missions, about 200 per cent., and 119 members have been added to the church.

Mr. Finn's resignation follows:

"It has been our privilege and pleasure under the guiding providence of our Father to be associated in Christian work for five years and nine months, during which time we have had the privilege of witnessing many marked evidences of the divine favor. Courtesies and kindness have been akin to that love so wonderfully described in the thirteenth chapter of first Corinthians. Your loyalty and devotion to the word of God and the Church of Jesus Christ has been a stimulus to my ministry. The manner in which you have responded to every plan that I have developed for the prosperity of this vineyard has brought joy to my heart. In view of all these things I find it difficult to say what must be said—a very large and unanimous call has come to me from another field, a field that presents a large opportunity for Christian work.

"The call appeals to me as a call from God and bears with it the necessity of severing my relationship with you as pastor. Believe me, I have not taken this step without weeks of prayer and meditation on the subject and I feel that it is God's will that I should go and work in another field. It is always a joy to listen to the voice of God and to follow His leading, but in doing so very frequently painful seperations must be endured. I am both sad and sorry to leave the work in which I have been so happy but God's call seems clear and distinct and His call I cannot disobey. I therefore tender my resignation as pastor of this church to take effect on the 17 of October. May the richest mercies and favors of God continue to abide with this church and with each member of it is the prayer of your sincere friend and pastor,"

"THE SHEPHERD KNOWETH HIS SHEEP."

A noted divine in Washington was constantly urging his flock to be more sociable and to give a hearty welcome to "the stranger within the gates," not forgetting to maintain a proper interest in the members of their own households. After one of his most effective sermons on his pet theme he went to the door as usual and began to shake hands industriously with the people passing out after the service.

He was much interested in a well-dressed and intelligent looking young girl, apparently a stranger, and greeted her heartily.

"I hope we may see you often here," he said. "We always have a warm welcome for new faces."

"Thank you, sir," she replied modestly.

"Do you live hereabout?" he went on.

The girl looked at him with a puzzled smile. "Yes, sir, I do."

"Will you kindly leave me your address, and my wife and I will call on you some evening?" he said.

"You would not have to go far to find me—I am your cook."—National Magazine.

TELLS OF ENGLAND'S WAR PREPARATIONS

Rev. A. C. Nickerson Says That England is Today a Vast Camp Getting Ready for Military Service.

CONFLICT WITH GERMANY.

Well Informed Englishmen, He Says, Believe That a Struggle Is Inevitable but Not for Conquest and Rule.

Rev. A. C. Nickerson, pastor of All Souls' Unitarian church delivered an address to his congregation Sunday morning which was remarkable for several things. He said that England is a vast camp; her people feeding every day on the possibility of war; Germany's attitude being the immediate cause of the nervous feeling of the Britons. Her schools are becoming more and more military schools and compulsory military service in the "light little isle" is not a remote possibility.

There was a large congregation present to hear Dr. Nickerson and many complimentary things were said about the address. In fact there are those who think that the publication of "English Impressions" will entertain not only those personally acquainted with the pastor of All Souls, but will prove interesting reading to the country at large.

Dr. Nickerson's impressions of the political situation and the dreaded German invasion will be found below. His impressions of rural England will appear in a separate article tomorrow.

"This is not the land of peace that it seems! Everywhere there is fear of armed conflict and nervous preparation for war! Behind the landscape which everywhere greets your senses with a sort of satisfying caress, is another atmosphere. England is a vast camp! Her people feed every day on the possibility of war. Even the youths in the schools are encouraged and urged to form themselves into companies called 'boy scouts.' Already there are two hundred thousand of these boys, and are advised to familiarize themselves with army tactics. Compulsory service, like Germany's for every young man is more than hinted at, being strongly urged by English military leaders. It is not think that will come, however, as England becomes more democratic every day. But the colonies are called upon, almost feverishly to send liberal contingents of men to swell the ranks of the home army, while Dreadnaughts are being built as fast as Parliamentary appropriations or Colonial gifts will provide for them. And continuously, Germany sets a faster pace and builds a yet bigger ship. Every new material move across the North Sea sends shivers of apprehension down the British spine.

"As you talk with well informed and well placed people you find that they share the general dread of Germany. They will tell you that there is no doubt of Germany's desire ultimately to force a struggle for supremacy upon England. They tell you that England is mapped out on German plans; that every place of importance in England is already assigned to some man or men for study, observation and ultimate occupation. They do not think that Germany contemplates the conquest and ruling of England, or even any long holding of strategic positions there, but rather that Germany craves a victory that England may not cramp her in her plans for expansion. They speak of the great increase of population in Germany, of her need for more land for her people, and of her resolute determination to take it where she will. So viewed, England's resolve to protect herself from attack cannot for a moment be condemned. But what a pity it is that the strain and stress of life in England should be mostly martial now in the 'piping' times of peace, when all over the world there is so pronounced an effort to give effect Christianity's primal teaching by the promotion of amity among all nations.

"If her situation is indeed perilous then England is indeed unfortunate, for never in any country has there been any greater need of conserving the national resources for the relief of the necessitous. And as keen anticipation of any event is generally accepted as a psychological means of bringing the event to pass, the keyed up nervousness of the dominant classes is hardly like to lessen any friction that may chance between the British and their German cousins. To prepare for war is to court it; to view individual or nation suspiciously is to directly cultivate misunderstandings. Out of prejudices great crops of ill feeling grow!

"And the English people are also greatly stirred by social strife in their midst. To attend to it they would better heed the Kaiser's declaration this past summer, that the rivalry between the respective nations is wholly industrial, thus applying themselves to the activities wherein their supremacy is endangered if not already disputed. Indeed they might find a sedative for overtaxed nerves in a page of our recent history, wherein we refused to be driven into a clash with Japan by bullying newspapers and persons whose trade it is to thrive on international disasters."

TRINITY SUNDAY SCHOOL HAS RECORD ATTENDANCE

The rally day exercises held Sunday afternoon under the auspices of the Sunday-school of Trinity Reformed church, was notable for the fact that it marked the largest attendance in the history of the school, there being 475 members present. Superintendent F. E. Smith took occasion to compliment the school on the fine showing. The next highest attendance was 433 on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the school.

During the interval, Rev. Joha Y. Brock, the pastor, made an excellent address full of interest to the school. There was special music, E. D. Young assisting Miss Lillian A. Force, pianist, with the cornet, and Miss Eliza Dufford singing a solo. Prizes, which will be awarded being the immediate cause of the nervous feeling of the Britons. MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION ASKS FOR PROTECTION.

At the meeting of the Plainfield Merchants' Association Monday, attention was called to the common practice of boys in cutting awning ropes and drawing them up and letting them down, after business hours. The practice has become so frequent, the merchants say, that something must be done to stop it. A resolution was then adopted calling upon the city authorities for protection.

A satisfactory report was received from the committee on the auto 'bus line, and it was stated that arrangements are now being made to increase the service.

FIRST VISIT IN 45 YEARS

Captain Buxton Returns to His Old Home After Amassing a Fortune.

A LIFE SPENT ON THE SEAS.

Visiting Relatives Here, He Expresses Great Surprise Over the Growth of Plainfield.

Captain Henry Buxton, of Singapore, uncle of Councilman Herbert Buxton, of West Front street, and brother of Miss M. Buxton, of West Sixth street, has returned to Plainfield for the first time in forty-five years. He arrived here Monday and is dividing his time between visiting his sister and nephew and family mimir scenes of nearly a half century ago.

Captain Buxton, who has been the master of many merchant marine vessels, having sailed around the world a great many times during the forty years that he followed the sea, is an interesting character and has a fund of knowledge which he delights to entertain his friends. He is medium height, and possesses a strong and determined will, yet tempered with a kindly nature that makes friends. Owing to his long life on the sea and numerous climates visited, Captain Buxton is as brown as a berry. He describes his perfect health to the fact that he has always been so regular in his habits.

The captain was born at Perth Amboy. For a time he lived in Washington, but returned later to Plainfield. Forty-five years ago he left this city and five years later decided to follow the sea. He has been in charge of the largest merchant marine vessels afloat, and he possesses a record of which he is proud, that is he never lost a dollar's worth of goods for the owner, always landing his vessel and cargo safe and sound. He has had many thrilling experiences, of the hair-raising variety, but his heart never failed him, and his success was always rewarded. Captain Buxton amassed a comfortable fortune during his life as a sailor and is now enjoying the fruits of his labor.

The captain left Singapore on July 10 on the Steamship Pathon, and was seventy days en route to New York. In speaking of the great achievements in ocean travelling and the famous greyhounds that now go from New York to London in less than five days, Captain Buxton says that the slow-going vessels are good enough for him and for that reason he planned to spend more than seventy days on the water. While here he will also visit Perth Amboy, the place of his birth, where he hopes to meet some of his old friends. Captain Buxton has a wife, three sons and three daughters and their home in Singapore is one of the show places of that seaport. He is sixty-nine years of age, but does not look a day over fifty. When seen today the captain expressed his great surprise over the wonderful growth of this city.

MONROE A.C. LOSES TO BOROUGH'S A.C.

The Monroe A. C. was defeated by the North Plainfield A. C. Saturday afternoon, on the former's grounds by a score of 11 to 7, in an interesting contest. The features of the contest were McClinton's fielding and batting and the hard hitting of Hallard and Trotter. Apgar's errors were costly to the Monroe A. C., as several runs were scored on fumbles.

Bertram C. Firstbrook is detained at his home on Liberty street, the result of an accident to his knee. He tripped over a wire on West Second street a day or two ago, fell on the knee and severely bruising it. It was first feared that the injury might result in water on the knee, but Dr. A. F. VanHorn, who is in attendance, does not anticipate any serious consequences.

PLAINFIELD DEFEATED ST. BENEDICTS', 4 TO 3

One of the best baseball games of the season was played at Dunellen, Saturday afternoon, between the Plainfield Baseball club and the St. Benedict's of Newark. It required eleven innings to settle the contest and then Plainfield won by a score of 4 to 3. The visitors were rather scrappy throughout and were continually finding fault with Umpire Apgar's decisions. With the score a tie in the eleventh inning, the "Saints" became ruffled at the rulings of the arbitrator, and Kurfess, the shortstop, deliberately threw the ball out of the grounds, allowing the Plainfield team to score the winning run.

Brewer pitched a fine game for Plainfield, allowing but eight hits, and he received great support, while eleven hits were gathered off of the delivery of Hayes, the young phenomenal twirler of Newark. The visitors were "padded" with several players from the Ironsides and came prepared to win evidently.

The stick work for Plainfield was done by Jack and Brit. Martin, Seery and Brewer. Schott gave the home team supporters a chill during a critical stage of the contest by dropping a fly ball, something unusual for him. The "Saints" scored two runs in the first inning and one in the ninth, while Plainfield scored in the second, fourth, seventh and eleventh. The game was witnessed by a big crowd of fans, a marjority being from Plainfield. The score:

PERTH AMBOY ONE, SCOTCH PLAINS SIX

The Scotch Plains team defeated Perth Amboy in the game played yesterday afternoon at the Plains by a score of 6 to 1. The contest was marked by fast outfield work on both sides. Some excitement was caused in the seventh inning by a gang of Plainfielders who refused to keep quiet, when ordered to do so by the officers on the grounds. The trouble was soon ended, however, as the ring leader was led off the grounds, and the game proceded.

Mac Laughlin and Miller did the box work for the Plains and both were in fire form, seven scattering hits being secured by the visitors. Their lone tally being scored in the sixth inning on a wild throw. The lineup and score by innings:

KENWOOD CLUB SHOWED BIG YELLOW STREAK

The Crescent Oval hoedoo was working well again Saturday afternoon and made itself felt with a jolt in the first half of the sixth inning of the ball game between the Kenwoods of Newark, and the local Y. M. C. A. team. Dalton, the second batsmen up for Kenwood in that inning in attempting to bunt the ball on his second strike bent too far forward, the ball striking him in the abdomen. He at once made for the initial sack only to be called out by Umpire Payne. Thereat the whole thing was off so far as the Kenwood's manager was concerned. He would not listen to reason and refused to resume play when directed to do so by the umpire.

After giving the irate manager five minutes in which to put his team back on the field Mr. Payne called the game forfeited to the Y. M. C. A. by a score of two runs to nothing. The visitors were right and that Umpire Payne's decision was right and that the Kenwood's manager had shown a decidedly yellow streak. Kenwood was in the lead by 1 to 0 and they had everything to gain by continuing to play. Sloeum, on the plate, was handling up a bit and both teams tried hard to secure a point. Time was called with the same score, Plainfield 2, St. George's 1.

The Plainfield team was congratulated on its victory and special mention cannot be made of any one member of the team, as each put up a fine game, which the visitors had been so determined to win. The lineup:

Plainfield—McNiece, F. Craig and Gould, Buckland, Hendersen and J. Craig; Sutton and Dawson; Hosie, Brayben and Spalding.

St. George's—Welsh, Marsden and N. Reilly; B. Reilly, Moore and Fleming; Shelton and Bann; Pearson, Stead and Holden. Referee, J. Donaldson.

SCOTCH PLAINS DEFEATS HUNTERDON'S CHAMPS

The Scotch Plains ball team had no trouble in defeating Flemington, the Hunterdon county champions, at Flemington, Saturday, the score being 8 to 3. Morganroth, who was in the box for the home team, was pounded for fourteen hits and the support back of him made anything but encouraging to a pitcher.

SATURDAY'S SCORES AT PARK GOLF CLUB

There was an unusually large field out at the Park Golf club, Saturday, where the members enjoyed both golf and tennis. The course was crowded all day with players, the perfect weather being a strong attraction. Possibly the event of greatest interest was the first round play for the Fall cup, club championship. The result was as follows.

R. B. Titsworth beat J. H. Howell, by default; Charles B. Morse beat A. H. Vanderhoef, 7 up and 6 to play; C. B. Faber beat W. E. Logan, 2 up and 1 to play; W. V. Byard beat R. V. Carpenter, 2 up. The semi-finals will be played Saturday, when R. B. Titsworth will meet C. B. Morse and W. R. Faber will meet W. V. Byard. The winner of this tournament will play Dr. H. K. Carroll, who won the Spring cup, for the championship.

In addition to the championship competition there was also play for the President's, golf club and Oakmont cups. The leading scores follow:

Samuel Townsend, 98, 18-80; J. H. Howell, 103, 20-83; W. V. Byard, 98, 14-84; Charles B. Morse, 99, 12-87; Dr. H. Carroll, 95, 7-91.

Return from Trip Abroad.

Mrs. E. Johnson and daughter, Miss Margaret Johnson, and Miss E. Westcott, of Grove street, have returned home after a two months' trip abroad. They crossed on the Grand Liner Marseraia in five days, and the trip was made without one disagreeable feature. After visiting relatives in Torquay, Devonshire, the party visited the principal cities in England, Scotland and France. They returned home on the White Star Liner Adriatic, the weather conditions being ideal. Not a single person was ill during the return journey.

ST. GEORGE'S DEFEAT P. A. F. C. AGGREGATION

The plainfield Association Football club deefated the St. George's, of Elizabeth, on the Clinton avenue grounds, Saturday afternoon by the score of 3 to 1, in one of the best games ever witnessed here. There was a large crowd present to see the contest. The game started with the visitors rushing down field and making a try at the goal, but they failed and after a little play in centre field, Plainfield rushed the visitors' goal, and in a fine scrimmage, a goal was secured.

The visitors pressed hard, but the local team held them well in hand, until a scrimmage at Plainfield's goal resulted in a point for the visitors. The local boys at this time put considerable strength into their play and a nice cross shot was caught by Sutton and put right through. Half time was called with the home team up 2 to 1.

On resuming play, both teams got busy and some great play was witnessed. A little feeling crept into the game, and hampered the players some, as the best football could not be played with rough tactics in force. Later on the play straddled up a bit and both teams tried hard to secure a point. Time was called with the same score, Plainfield 2, St. George's 1.

The Plainfield team was congratulated on its victory and special mention cannot be made of any one member of the team, as each put up a fine game, which the visitors had been so determined to win. The lineup:

Plainfield—McNiece, F. Craig and Gould, Buckland, Hendersen and J. Craig; Sutton and Dawson; Hosie, Brayben and Spalding.

St. George's—Welsh, Marsden and N. Reilly; B. Reilly, Moore and Fleming; Shelton and Bann; Pearson, Stead and Holden. Referee, J. Donaldson.

NEW BRUNSWICK EASY FOR PLAINFIELD GOLFERS

The chief event of interest at the Plainfield Country club, Saturday was a team match between the home club and the New Brunswick Golf club players. The Plainfield team won the game easily by a score of 23 to 2. Not once during the play was there any doubt as to the result. Stuart H. Patterson was the only Plainfielder to lose his match, his opponent, J. W. Letson finishing 2 up.

Morris J. Dumont had an easy time of it with his opponent, J. C. Meyer, being 10 up at the end of the match. Some of the matches were very close, J. Whitney Baker, A. L. Wills and G. E. Cathcart being all even. The summary:

Plainfield—H. Whitney Baker, 0; W. Lester Glenney, 2; C. B. Morgan, 4; A. L. Wills, 0; G. E. Cathcart, 0; HHenry D. Hibbard, 1; 3 M. Patterson, 0; R. G. Morse, 6; Morris J. Dumont, 10; total, 23.

New Brunswick—J. C. Smith, 0; M. A. Wilson, 0; R. S. Smith, 0; A. Kirkpatrick, 0; C. A. McCormick, 0; C. T. Letson, 0; J. W. Letson, 2; E. Morris, 0; J. C. Meyer, 0; total, 2.

There was also the weekly competition for Fall Handicap cups. Classes A and B. The best scores were as follows:

Class A—Morris J. Dumont, 85, 10-75; C. B. Morgan, 84, 8-76; E. P. Goodwin, 95, 14-81.

MIXED DOUBLES AT P.G.C. PROVE EXCITING

The tennis tournament, mixed doubles, at the Park Golf club, Saturday, aroused considerable interest in the sport and the play was close and exciting throughout. The revival of interest in tennis at the club has resulted in increasing the membership to a large extent.

In the preliminary round, Saturday, Miss Hope Miller and Rev. George A. Warner defeated Miss Anna L. Runyon and Charles B. Morse, 6-2, 6-0; and Miss Louise Fuller and Starr Burdick defeated Walter C. McNaughton and Miss Florence Martin, 6-4, 7-5.

The result of the first round was as follows:

Miss Miller and Rev. G. A. Warner, defeated Miss Harriett Shreve and Rev. C. L. Goodrich, 6-0, 6-0; Miss Newman and Rev. C. L. Goodrich defeated Rev. L. R. Howard and Miss Grace Runyon, 6-2, 6-3; Miss Fuller and Starr Burdick defeated Miss Bessie TenEyck and R. B. Titsworth, 6-0, 6-4.

There is one more match in the preliminary round, when Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Vanderhoef will meet Miss May Shreve and Dr. H. K. Carroll, and the winners will play Miss Vogel and Samuel Townsend in the first round match, on Saturday.

"In Flower Land" at Hope Chapel.

Arrangements are being made for a spectacular and elocutionary entertainment to be given at Hope chapel on Friday and Saturday nights, October 15 and 16, by Miss Bertie K. Shipley, of New York, assisted by seventy-five Plainfield children. The entertainment is called "In Flower Land," and has been declared beautiful as presented in other places. Miss Shipley is a mountaineer, related to both Daniel Boone and Abraham Lincoln. She is a story teller and orator by blood and by training and is popular. Her repertoire of original stories is large and she has received flattering endorsements.

METEORIC CAREER OF GENERAL WOOD.

On the second day of June Major-General Leonard Wood became the ranking officer of the army of the United States. Eleven years ago he was a practising army surgeon, being then 38 years of age. No other army in the world, it has been said, ever made a doctor into the highest of its generals. General Wood is a record-breaker. Not only that, but his rapid rise stands for a new army policy—the policy of promoting by selection instead of promotion by routine. He believes in the new policy for others as well as for himself. Here is the way he has put the argument: "Take a class of 100 young men who are graduated in law or medicine. Ten of them, perhaps, will be extraordinarily successful, ten will make a great success, ten others will be fairly successful, and so on down the line until you come to the fellows who are just getting on. Why should young men in the army be different? Men are alike, and the young man in the army resembles the rest in their quality and the degrees of their attainments. Why should the best and most capable be held down to the level of those who just get on, who merely do enough to hold their commissions by a system of promotion by seniority? It robs the army of incentive. Competition spurs on men, in or out of the army." That argument is not convincing all the politicians in Washington nor all the generals over whose heads Leonard Wood has been jumped; but it seems to have convinced President McKinley and President Roosevelt and President Taft that General Wood, therefore, behold no only a conquering hero but a conquering policy.—Current Literature.

HOW SOME ACTORS EXERCISE.

To his life out-of-doors, his care in "deep breathing," and his frequent fishing trips, the late Joseph Jefferson attributed his ability to keep pace with the strain that acting imposed upon him in his later years before the public, says Outing. One of his favorite remarks to his theatrical friends was: "If an actor wants to have his innings on the stage he must look after his outings."

Almost all of the leading performers of today have schedules of daily outdoor exercise mapped out to which they adhere closely, even during the height of the winter theatrical season. William Gillette, to overcome his chronic nervousness, walks five miles every afternoon. On matinee days he indulges in his walk after a late breakfast. Miss Frances Starr and Miss Blanche Bates take daily horseback rides. John Drew plays "squash;" James K. Hackett, who possessed considerable lacrosse prowess while at college, pulls weights in a gymnasium; Robert Edeson, known in the profession as the "muscle mad" actor, drives an automobile at least twenty miles a day, and E. H. Sothern spends an hour with the foils.

Frank McIntyre spends an hour and a half daily in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium; H. H. Warner boxes at the New York Athletic Club and follows it up with a swim in the tank; Robert Mantell does "setting-up" exercises out of doors for half an hour, and William Faversham has recently forsaken his bicycle for driving.

Miss Maude Adams rides a horse to keep herself in physical trim. Mme. Alla Nazimova and Miss Julia Marlowe allow themselves two hours a day for play in the open air. Henry Miller personally looks after his farm, "Lasley Meadows," near Stamford, Conn., when he commutes to the theatre four out of the six theatre days when he is playing in New York. While on the road he takes short jogs in the country. Miss Mabel Taliaferro, while playing in the East, spends much of her daytime on her husband's yacht, and Miss Gertrude Coblan alternates between long motor rides and golfing.

George M. Cohan, it is interesting to note, has composed a number of his lyrics while taking automobile rides to Manhattan Beach. Miss Louise Gunning rides cross-country in New Rochelle. Miss Billie Burke spends every available minute in her touring automobile. Edna Goodrich, one of the leading players, in fact, does something daily during the playing season to better his or her physical condition.

MILKING COWS BY MACHINERY.

It has been found that if Bossy is young and doesn't know any better she will submit very gracefully to being milked by machinery, but if she is an old-timer—well, the old-time method of extracting her milk is the safest and surest. Moreover, if there are two or three cows in a herd that have been milked by hand and all the rest are subjected to the machine, it isn't long until the manners of the entire outfit are upset and the average of the herd irretrievably lowered.

In 1903 an experiment with ten two-year-old heifers was begun which will extend over a number of years. These animals have never been milked by hand, so the performance will be entirely controlled by the milkers. So far two lactation records by heifers have been obtained by machine milking which compare favorably with other two-year-old records. These heifers seem to give down their milk quite freely and are less inclined to hold it up than are cows which have been accustomed to hand milking several years before machine milking is begun.—Van Norden Magazine.

MURPHY TO DIRECT RACES AT TRENTON.

Indications Now Point to Best Half Mile Track Meet of the Fair Circuit.

All horsemen and all followers of light harness racing in the east know Horace P. Murphy of Syracuse, N. Y.; therefore it almost tells the story of the Trenton fair races this year when it is stated that Mr. Murphy has been named as the man at the helm. Mr. Murphy has been connected with the harness racing sport for nearly fifteen years, during which time he has built up for himself a reputation that inspires confidence in whatever he may undertake along the line of horse racing.

When the Trenton Fair association named Mr. Murphy as its racing secretary the results came with the quickness of lightning flashes. Horsemen who knew Mr. Murphy at once began sending in their entries, because they had every confidence in him and felt certain that everything in connection with the Trenton fair races would be handled more capably than ever before.

When Mr. Murphy told the horsemen that the track had been made over and would be one of the finest half mile rings in the country they believed him. Because of this belief the very best horses the half mile circuit has ever known will be sent to Trenton. It has been a long time since Trenton was a real Mecca for light harness racing, but this year, under the management of Horace Murphy, it bids fair to rank at the front of all eastern fairs. And this is as it should be.

Secretary Murphy has arranged a most attractive program—one that will not only please the horse owners, but the horse racing public. Here is the list of classes and the days to which each race is assigned:

Tuesday, Sept. 28—2:27 class, trotting, $500; 2:22 class, pacing, $500; 2:19 class, trotting, $500.

Wednesday, Sept. 29—2:27 class, pacing, $500; 2:22 class, trotting, $500; 2:25 class, pacing, $500; two and three-year-old trotters, $400.

Thursday, Sept. 30—2:14 class, trotting, $500; 2:16 class, pacing, $500; 2:17 class, trotting, $500; 2:15 class, pacing, $500.

Friday, Oct. 1—2:24 class, trotting, $500; 2:12 class, pacing, $500; 2:19 class, pacing, $500.

All of the good horses that have been performing at Kutztown, Wilkesbarre, Goshen, Wilmington, Bethlehem and other Pennsylvania fairs have been entered, together with the cream of the good ones from the New York state circuit.

C. Earle Pitman has entered his entire stable, which includes the sensational Lady Kate, Friendless and others. It is also certain that Good Goods, the great Newtown (Pa.) pacer that has been winning races and smashing records, will be in line. Easily, the fast Bordentown pacer, is another to be seen at the Trenton fair. It is impossible to go over the list, but it should be sufficient to say that the speed entries may reach the grand total of 200 this year, and that means the most remarkable half mile track meet in recent years.

GREATEST ATHLETIC CARNIVAL OF 1909.

America's Finest Field and Track Performers at the Trenton Fair.

Realizing that the trend of sentiment of the present day is toward out of door life and sports, the Trenton fair will this year depart from its custom of former years and make Monday, the opening day of the exposition, memorable by one of the greatest athletic meets ever held in the eastern states.

F. C. Benner, physical director of the Trenton Y. M. C. A., has been secured to conduct this carnival of athletics, and his fame as a promoter of such events makes it certain that all who visit the fair Monday will witness a series of stirring battles on field and track they will never forget. Mr. Benner conducted the "booster carnivals" in the Trenton armory the past two winters, and before that, while a resident of Troy, N. Y., he was the director of several great meets in that city which brought him in the athletic limelight all over the United States. He will bring all of his ability and experience into the Trenton fair meet, and that spells SUCCESS in big, bold letters.

The events for the Trenton fair athletic carnival will be: One hundred yard dash, 300 yard dash, 880 yard run, one mile run, twelve pound shot put, three mile run, relay race and Marathon run.

It is practically assured that two of the most celebrated athletes in the entire world will be the stars of the Trenton fair meet. The first of these is Lunghi, the marvelous Italian runner who broke a long standing world's record for the 700 yards Labor day. He has defeated the peerless Mel Sheppard and today is the most talked of athlete in this or any other country. The second is Wilson, the New England mile runner who ran second to Sheppard in the last Olympic meet in England.

There is every reason to believe that a half hundred other New York, Boston and Philadelphia headliners will be included in the entry list, which is to be kept open for some time yet.

The Marathon run will likely create more athletic interest in this section than any event ever held here. That it will attract the largest field of distance men that ever faced the starter's gun except in an Olympic Marathon is the one best bet. First to send in an entry is Sammy Mellor, the game and speedy Yonkers runner, who has been in more of these races than any runner living. He has also won more long distance contests than any other athlete. The Trenton Marathon is the one big topic of conversation in athletic centers in New York, Philadelphia and all nearby cities, and the entry list now looks like a record breaker; $300 will be given in prizes, which will consist of gold medals with diamond studs.

The relay race is to be restricted to clubs in the Philadelphia A. A. U. district, and the first entry made is that of the champion Trenton Y. M. C. A. team that won the Philadelphia Telegraph relay a few weeks ago. This team is one of the fastest among eastern clubs, but it will meet keen competition in this carnival.

Entries are coming in for the open events from all parts of this section, and Mr. Benner has given it as his opinion that not fewer than 500 athletes will be camped on the fair grounds Monday morning, Sept. 27, and ready for battle.

This carnival of sport should be sufficient to make Monday one of the big days of the fair, which is the ambition of Secretary Margerum.

TRENTON FAIR FOR 1909 WILL BE RECORD BREAKER.

All Space For Exhibitors Sold—New and Novel Attractions For the Midway.

As the opening day of the 1909 Trenton fair approaches there seems to be more than the ordinary interest in the great exposition shown in former years, which is due to the fact that it is generally known that Secretary Margerum and his able assistant, Lewis Randall, have made greater efforts this year than ever before. Three weeks before the opening of the gates to the public every foot of exhibition space in connection with the fair had been sold.

A truly wonderful record!

There will be a small army of space men in attendance this year, and the novelties offered to fair patrons will be practically unlimited. It will be worth a visit to the fair just to look over the hundreds of new notions the fakers will offer for sale.

The Midway will be a wonder. In the first place, there will be the Old Mill. What fair ever had two of the Old Mill before? What fair except the Trenton fair would ever succeed in securing such a fine attraction for its patrons?

Only at Coney Island has the Old Goods been seen at its best for the past few years, and it is one of the "mills" from the island that is being brought to Trenton. Think what a feast of pleasure this means for the children, for what child lives who has not a longing to ride in the Old Mill? This is only one of the score of new attractions. All of the old merry-go-rounds, Ferris wheels and other devices dear to both children and grownups will be back, with so many new ones as to absolutely bewilder fair visitors.

To sum up the midway of the Trenton fair in a few words, it can honestly be said that it will be the great and only Coney Island on a smaller scale and with all the objectionable features left out, for be it known that there will be nothing at the Trenton fair this year that cannot be enjoyed by the children. Secretary Margerum has seen to it that every avenue by which objectionable things might get into the grounds has been safely guarded.

Of course every one expects all of the old fair games—"hit the nigger on the head," the Japanese ball game, ring the canes, "guess your weight," "How much can you strike?" and the legion of other pastimes well known to all Trenton fair patrons.

Perfect Protection Assured.

The Trenton fair has always taken pride in the order maintained by the special police. Few breaches of the law have occurred at the fair in all the years it has existed. Its patrons are always well protected from pickpockets, and women, even unattended, are as safe as on the city streets.

VETERANS AT REUNION

Plainfield Members Attend Meeting of Co. I. 5th New York Calvary.

HELD AT RAHWAY WEDNESDAY

Officers Elected and Banquet Enjoyed—Next Year They Meet at Somerville.

Company I of the Fifth New York Cavalry held its fifteenth annual reunion Wednesday at the residence of the president of the Veterans' association, John Mundrane, in Rahway. The comrades arrived just before noon and sat down to a sumptuous repast at 1 o'clock. There were nine of the veteran cavalrymen present with their families.

After the banquet a business meeting was held at which the election of officers for the ensuing year took place. John Mundrane was re-elected president and W. M. Randolph, of Washington, secretary. These two officers have endeavored to push through their resignations at each meeting for the past four years, but their comrades have consistently refused to allow them to quit their onerous duties.

After the business of the reunion was finished President Mundrane made a speech in which he expressed the joy at meeting the members again and welcomed them to his home. Several other speeches were made in which reminiscences of the struggles of the command during the Civil War were rehearsed. The Fifth Cavalry was mustered in in 1861, 1,200 strong, and the saddles were decimated twice during the three years of their service. They participated in forty battles and when mustered out in 1864 numbered but 360 men.

The next reunion will take place in 1910 at the home of Job Coddington, in Somerville. Those present were John Mundrane, the president; W. M. Randolph, secretary, of Washington, N. J.; Captain William B. Cary, Augustus Runyon and James Clarkson, of this city; Henry Herbert, of Westfield; Captain W. B. Chambers, of Brooklyn; Andrew Bridgeman, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., and George Mundrane, of Jersey City.

DUNELLEN G. O. P. TICKET

Republicans Choose W. H. Sanford as Their Mayoralty Candidate.

HIS OPPONENT, G. Y. WILSON.

Both Parties Have Filed Petitions With Borough Clerk Coriell —Two Councilmen to be Elected This Fall.

The Republican ticket for the coming election in Dunellen was decided upon Thursday at a meeting of the Republican voters in the borough hall. William S. Frederick was nominated for county committeeman; W. H. Sanford, for Mayor; Isaac J. Stites, for collector; Oscar Runyon, for assessor; A. F. Todd and John R. Campbell for councilmen and J. W. Grandloff for justice of the peace.

Mr. Sandford, the nominee agreed upon for mayor, made a short speech thanking the voters for the honor they had given him and advocating the purchasing by the borough of a horse, truck and street sprinkler, so that they would be able to sprinkle the streets themselves, and to do some work toward keeping the roads in condition. This may be made a part of their platform.

The Democrats filed their candidates' petitions with Borough Clerk Coriell last night. They are: G. Y. Wilson, county committeeman; Charles F. Starker, mayor; C. E. Richard and R. F. Bogartus, councilmen; John F. Peters, assessor; William Wyckoff, collector.

HUDSON CELEBRATION PLANS ARE COMPLETE

Arrangements have been completed at Trenton for the Hudson-Fulton celebration, and the placing of the Portsmouth in the various parades that will take place incident to the event. Commander Edward McC. Peters had a long consultation with the Adjutant General last week over the details as to placing his ship during the last week in September and the first week in October.

The ship will be located directly opposite the reviewing stand at 110th street, New York, September 25, the day of the naval parade. On board will be Governor Fort, his staff, members of the commission and about 100 invited guests.

Commander Peters will sail his ship to Newburg, September 29, where it will be the official boat during the parade of that day. Governor Fort and invited guests have been invited to go aboard and witness the passing of the ships at that point. The Portsmouth will be returned to her berth in Hoboken, October 2 or 3. Governor Fort will be taken to the Portsmouth on a tug the morning of September 25, which will be provided by Commander Peters. She will leave the Pennsylvania dock at 11:48 in the morning.

AEROPLANE ONLY A TOY.

While the authorities at Washington have been considering the expenditure of a large amount of money for further experimentation with flying machines the British defense committee has just reported against aeroplanes and in favor of dirigible balloons. The success of Count Zeppelin with his balloon, which far outclassed that of all those who have been testing aeroplanes, justifies the decision of the British committee. The aeroplane is like a kite and hardly more useful, while the balloon has been in use for years. It can be handled and managed satisfactorily, while any sudden change in the wind may upset or divert an aeroplane, to the peril of its navigators. Thus far, in spite of all the talk about the Wrights, Latham, Blériot and others, the aeroplane has proved itself nothing more than a toy. It is hoped that the Federal Government will not permit the public money to be wasted on experiments with aeroplanes, when it has been established that the dirigible balloon offers greater usefulness for all the purposes of the army and navy. We are glad to hear of the annulment of the contract for the Herring flying machine and the statement that something like $16,000 of the original allotment for the development of aeronautics will accordingly be returned to the general fund of our army board of ordinance. —Leslie's Weekly.

F. G. LOUNSBURY JR. WEDS

Miss Beatrice Miner, Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Miner, the Bride.

REV. DR. HERRING OFFICIATES.

Miss Margaret Lounsbury Flower Girl—Orlando H. Lounsbury Best Man.

Miss Beatrice Miner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willard M. Miner, of East Seventh street, and Fred C. Lounsbury, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Lounsbury, of Plainfield avenue, were quietly married Thursday at 5 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, officiating. The ceremony was witnessed by about forty guests, comprising chiefly the relatives of the couple.

The bride was gowned in white messaline, trimmed with lace. She wore a veil and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses. Her only attendant was Miss Margaret Lounsbury, as flower girl, who was gowned in a hand-embroidered dress of white batiste. The best man was Orlando H. Lounsbury, brother of the groom. The wedding march was played by Miss Jennie Lounsbury, of Brooklyn.

Following the ceremony, an informal reception was held and supper was served. The bride received a wealth of wedding gifts, as evidence of the high esteem in which she is held. Later in the evening the couple left on a honeymoon trip. Upon their return they will reside here.

Mrs. Lounsbury as well as her husband are active in religious work, both being members of the First Presbyterian church. Mr. Lounsbury is president of the Christian Endeavor society in the church and Mrs. Lounsbury is the vice-president. The latter is also talented as a musician. She is a member of the choir of the First Baptist church, where she has sung for the past few years.

Mr. Lounsbury is associated in business with his father in the Crescent Embossing Works. He has been prominently identified with Endeavor and church work for some time.

FREEHOLDERS' CLAMBAKE

Union County Officials Enjoy Their Annual Outing at Bender's Hotel.

WILLIAM HULSKAMPER CHEF.

No Speeches When Politicians of Both Parties Gather for Just a Little Fun.

The Union County Board of Freeholders enjoyed its annual clambake Thursday at Bender's Hotel, Lorraine, and as usual, it was strictly informal. These annual affairs are chiefly for the freeholders of the county, and a few friends, who are invited. The guests yesterday included county officials.

These "bakes" have become famous throughout the county, and the success of yesterday's affair was no exception to the rule. Freeholder S. P. T. Wilbur, of this city, was chairman of the committee, and he personally gave his attention to making it the best ever. The "bake" was prepared by William Hulskamper, custodian of the county court house; former Freeholder J. Logan Pay and Freeholder George Cladek.

The festivities began at 12 o'clock with the serving of clam chowder and all the trimmings. At 3:30 o'clock, the "bake" was opened and everyone present did justice to the good things provided. There was a generous supply of clams, fish, lobsters, sweet corn, sweet and white potatoes, chicken and watermelon to top off with. There were no set speeches and politics were forgotten for the time. Democrats being represented as well as Republicans.

Those present were County Engineers Jacob L. Bauer and Frank J. Hubbard, County Collector Nathan R. Leavitt, County Attorney William R. Coddington, former Freeholder Thomas J. Pierson, Sheriff Robert J. Kirkland, former Sheriff W. T. Kirk, General Dennis F. Collins, Chauncey Wardell, County Register Frank Smith, County Clerk James C. Calvert, Street Commissioner N. K. Thompson, Councilman Jeremiah J. Leary, Freeholders Crane, Martin, Haviland, Adams, Robison, Smith, Swain, Wilbur, Cady, Garrison, Perry, Doane, Stephan, Krouse, Medsel, Jones, Jensen, Freeholder Benjamin King and Clerk S. Rusling Ryno.

NOVEL TOBACCO POUCH.

A tobacco pouch that is easily made by the girl who embroiders only a little is of gray, tan or dull blue homespun linen, embroidered with a conventional design of crossed pipes on one side of the pouch and with the monogram of the owner on the other side.

Cut the linen in two pieces with a rounding bottom and bulging sides, narrowing to a neck and widening again above it. Sew the two sides together to the neck, where there is a casing, and leave the upper part or ruffle open at each side.

Line bag with oiled silk if you can find it in a color that looks well with the pouch; if not, with a heavy waterproof silk.

Embroider the pipes in Kensington stitch in a dark brown filo, using a lighter tone of brown in centre of bowl for high lights. The mouthpiece and rim of the pipes can be worked in gold thread., or, if you fear that tarnishing, in an old gold filo.

ORNAMENTAL BANDS.

A new movement seen in the latest foreign gown boxes unpacked is the addition to the short-waisted band effect, especially for evening wear of tabs of net covered with Spanish white bugle and coral work with intermixed silver and pearl. These hanging tabs carry out the corsage band color suggestions, and where they join the bodice a bellike finish is given to the waist. These tabs barely reach the knee line, but their straight-across ends are strung with long, fringe-like ropes of pearls, crystals or any other fancy bead chosen, which dangle and swing with every step in front. Only brunettes can stand this gay melange of colors, often relieved by shoulder drapery of black maline, while stole front pieces on gowns, single ones being more often seen lately. If with the same brilliant work upon the same colors and style of handwork, produce naturally original effect greatly admired.

St. Andrew's Convention.

Plainfield Episcopal churches were represented at the meeting of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew held in Trinity Parish House, Elizabeth, Wednesday night, under the auspices of the Central New Jersey Local Assembly. J. Wesley Hoggeman, of the Church of the Holy Cross, was elected secretary of the new organization. A large proportion of the clergy of the diocese attended the meeting. It is proposed to form a chapter in the Church of the Holy Cross soon.

Rival Candidates.

William Jeffery and Henry S. Fullerton, the present incumbent, have both filed Republican petitions for member of the county committee from New Providence township. Mr. Jeffery had seventy-one signers and Mr. Fullerton was an "also ran" with seventeen signers. The same result will be found on election day.

TO OPEN A CITY MARKET

Investment Co. to Transform Big Livery Stable Into Market Building.

READY EARLY IN DECEMBER.

The Structure Now Occupied by the Cab Company on North Avenue to House the Proposed Market.

An up-to-date city market with all the advantages of such an institution as told some months ago in this paper, will soon be opened in the building now occupied by the Plainfield Cab Company on North avenue extending through to East Second street. As soon as the cab company vacates to take possession of its new four-story brick building on East Second street, extensive alterations will be made with a view to providing a first-class city market.

The interior of the building will be thoroughly renovated by the owners, the Quoin Investment Company, who will remove the present wooden flooring and put down one of thick concrete. The building will be well lighted and ventilated by the removal of the roof above the present stable and carriage rooms, as the opening will extend to the roof which will be amply provided with modern skylights.

There will be a main aisle eight feet wide running through the building, making a new thoroughfare between North avenue and Second street. There will be ample space for over thirty stalls, about ten feet wide by fifteen feet deep. The Quoin Company will not erect the stalls but will rent floor space to the tenants, who will fit up their own stalls to suit themselves and their particular business, as is the usual custom with public markets.

Ira La Rue, the well-known real estate man, who is the president of the Quoin Company, says:

"Plainfield has long been in need of a first-class city market. So many persons have asked me, when looking for houses to rent in this city, where the market was located, and when informed that there was none, seemed greatly surprised that a city so up-to-date as Plainfield is not maintain a good market. It has been said that the cost of living in this city is higher than elsewhere, and this impression has been the cause of keeping many strangers from locating here.

"In my opinion the time is ripe for an enterprise of this kind, as a number of merchants have already expressed a desire to be represented by a stall in the new market. I would prefer that the place be filled with local merchants, but if they should fail to fully occupy the entire building the remaining space will be rented to non-residents. The terms of rental are so reasonable, considering the great number of cash customers who will daily frequent the market, that no enterprising local dealer can afford not to be represented there, as there will be the best facilities for selling and delivering goods.

"Then from the customers standpoint the great convenience of being able to do all shopping for the table under one roof will be another desirable feature. Everything will be as clean and sanitary as it is possible to make it, and goods will be attractively displayed.

"We hope the building will begin November first and we expect to have it ready for occupancy in December before the holidays. I believe that the market will be the means of drawing additional trade to this city from surrounding towns, which will prove to be a benefit to the entire community."

Sounds Rude.

A conductor and a brakeman on a Montana railroad differ as to the proper pronunciation of the word Eurelia. Passengers are often startled upon arrival at this station to hear the conductor yell:

"You're a liar! You're a liar!"

And then from the brakeman at the other end of the car:

"You really are! You really are!"

THE ENGLAND OF TODAY

Rev. A. C. Nickerson Gives His Impressions of the Mother Country.

PEOPLE MOST DEMOCRATIC.

A Vivid Picture of the Beautiful Island as Drawn by All Souls' Pastor, Who Recently Visited It.

The views expressed in his sermon of Sunday morning by Rev. A. C. Nickerson, pastor of All Souls' Unitarian church, which are printed elsewhere, is only a part of the great discourse which delighted his congregation. Below will be found his impressions of England as a community quite apart from the warlike tendencies proved yesterday.

"The relation of Americans of English blood to the mother country is very much like that of a couple of young people, who, having left the old home and made a new home for themselves are glad they have left the and would not go back again, but who in any time of great trouble or disaster, threatening the old roof tree, would think first of 'the old folks at home,' and take their part as against the world besides.

"I think this becomes more and more so as we are jostled here by hordes of strangers of alien face and tongue. And in England we all feel very much at home, and going there in a friendly way, with an anticipation of pleasant experiences you will find that they shall not fail you. Of no country can it more truly be said it is a pleasant land. It is green and fruitful. We talk at home of virgin soil, but is that old country, where you find so many traces of Roman occupation, where the land has been continuously tilled for many generations and centuries, the yield appears to far surpass that of our fields and gardens.

"There were unwilling to admit an unusually plentiful hay harvest, but two sojourners from this side agreed that if the hay had been brought in wagons and pitched into the fields they could hardly have been fuller. The same fact holds as to grain. Not far from the fine prosperous-looking, red tiled farm buildings the multitudinous sheaves of grain stood close together while strong Percheron horses drew the wains, and men, women and children with much enjoyment and cheer worked at the harvest home.

"In the gardens for either flower or vegetables, or both, the same fertility was in evidence. Not only were fruit bushes and vines larger and stronger than at home, but their yield was much greater and of a superior quality. They have no such variety as we have, but what they do have grows easily and abundantly with practically no additional enrichment of the soil. Floral cultivation is carried to all social conditions and where we have one blossom they have hundreds. We may have two dozen white carnations in bloom at once. There even the poor man's garden will have a border of them, rank with hundreds if simultaneously blooming flowers. These facts, with all thus implied make it a pleasant land.

"The nearness and accessibility of the country is another pleasing feature of life in England. For many generations Englishmen have seen to it that they and their children shall not be shut away from God's great out-of-doors. Innumerable are the exits from the town. Often they are in narrow and most unexpected places and all of them lead directly into green fields where the law prohibits closing the paths which cross them, or into lanes where the hedgerows are continuously sweet with the successive wild flowers, blossoming, and vocal even through June and July with the song of blackbird, thrush, robin and chaffinch; while from the hedges' ideal retreat even out of the hawthorne's pink and white blossoms and its protective spines, the little lark soars straight away into the blue and for full five minutes, sometimes literally, rains down upon you his liquid notes, the last so far aloft that the tiny bird is lost in the blue, though not for one instant has he intermitted his irrepressible song. You listen breathlessly an remember your Shakespeare, 'Hark, Hark the Lark.' Yes, it is a pleasant land.

"The little villages are mostly bowers of beauty, set amid such ancient elms, great wide spreading beeches of enormous proportions and smaller trees of holly, laburnum and hawthorne as we rarely see. While ivy and laurel, escallonia and sometimes even fuschia hedges grow so easily and profusely whenever they are, we require their shield and protection, as to seem almost exasperatingly perfect to the visitor who knows how slowly and precariously we rear such plants at home. And in the midst is the old stone, often pre-reformation, church, most substantial and beautiful, and generally well preserved, challenging your attention from its environing church yard. Here 'the rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep.' And as you, from over the seas, con the names cut in the stones, you are surprised to find that most of them are wholly familiar; for you have known people bearing such all your days. England is indeed our old home.

"The terrestrial outlook, especially if in the country (and England's best is always rural) breathes only peace. How many thousand sheep browse, contentedly in green pastures and beside still waters! You think pityingly of 'sheep commons' at home. How full the land is of kine! With udders filled they early lie down to rest in such lushness of pastures; and early 'the lowing herd winds slowly homeward o'er the lea.' In similar grassy places the little black swine tumble about, chase each other and eat their fill, and ever as you question the farmer or ask a direction you uncover much genuine kindness and lovable human nature.

"The land is drenched in verdure and full of historic buildings and associations. It is a positive pleasure to go into the shops, so selfrespecting are the salespeople, so unfailing their politeness. Traveling is eased of its burdens by the prompt and willing service of railway porters, and while your traveling companion, if an English man or woman, will never address you first, if you will take the initiative you will find the cordial smile just beneath the surface and an even eager desire to aid you and make your journey pleasant. The magnificent cathedrals, the great galleries and museums, the ancient castles and the ruins of other castles are vastly instructive and entertaining while the scenery is so varied as to suggest sometimes Italy, sometimes Switzerland, sometimes such combinations of sea and mountains as one rarely sees anywhere else. Just one rather fine advertises in colored posters their English scenery, putting some of the most celebrated views of other European countries side by side with those to be found close at hand, thus appealing simultaneously to economy and patriotism.

"The self respecting and self restraint of the people is so great however lowly their service, that an American is forced by contrast to regret the too common tendency to incivility and petty arrogance to which we are too often witness at home. A traveller there this summer had a glad surprise in the discovery that Americans are by no means the greatest financial contributors to the daily press. Almost daily the London papers in announcing the deaths of the past week published lists of public bequests, by the decedents, so that an habitual giving there by will to many good causes appeared to be a fact hitherto not generally noticed. While we may have more large and conspicuous givers, bequeathing large sums to the public England seems to have more people of ordinary means who thus practically recognize the needy and suffering fellowmen at the last.

"I should say that there is today in England a greatly increased sense of the solidarity of humanity, a lessened and constantly decreasing opinion of merely personal rights and a almost flaming resolve to hold the nation down to practical social service. They seem to act out the Emersonian aphorism, 'All are needed by each one.' It means that dukes and dukeries are to be put to work.

"We have our problems and we rightly consider them great, but I think an observer in England must consider theirs yet more acute and pressing. And the amount and quality of good sense generally lessens apprehension. Here we have the advantage. Life in the United States is more cheerful and more comfortable than life in England. One cannot imagine born here voluntarily expatriating himself to live in England a pleasant land, but no dweller in Plainfield would call the typical English town pleasant. It is the land that is so. Bare, cold, narrow, uninteresting, unornamented by grass, tree or flower, and the houses of streets lined with brick houses of the common people. These houses are almost never detached residences. Even in small villages they are in blocks. Often we find houses with no window or door in the wall upon the street or road. Within the wall modern comforts are mostly lacking. It would seem almost incredibly hard to American women to do house work there, even in very handsomely built and decorated houses. The basement kitchen, the feather bed, the tallow candle have not gone out in England yet. Even the solitary grate relied on for warmth in winter even in the handsome houses is not yet superseded. And their cold is very damp and penetrating. Rheumatism is excessively common. There is great lack of amusements for young people and they walk the streets interminably. A reason why the streets are entertainments but in other towns they are alarmingly lacking. The situation is the antithesis of ours at home.

"And England is merry! It may have heard of 'hustle,' it never even dreams of it for itself. Business rouses slowly in the morning. At 9 o'clock, not earlier, even in the small towns, the under clerks begin to take down the shutters. Nothing can be done expeditiously.

"The present government of England is unprecedentedly democratic. Those who are for it not only call it socialistic, as it is largely, but with Lord Roseberry revolutionary. While our people at home were getting more and more excited this season over the tariff, England grew equally warm, not to say hot, over the Budget. The government supporters saw everything rose-colored in the event of its passing the lords and commons. The opposition were bitter in their denunciation of its iniquities. The Budget proposes to put the financial burdens of the country upon the shoulders of those who are financially able to bear them. They think the Budget is, so far, a restatement of the eminently Christian doctrine, 'that they who are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak.' But all the great land owners resent the imposition of a higher tax upon their considerable estates, just exactly as our 'bloated bondholders' would resent any act of the public appropriating a proportionate share of their large incomes toward our national expenses. No nation is rightly taxed where the heaviest load is not put on the shoulders best able to bear it.

"The typical Englishman may still dearly love a lord (and I think the English people were never more proud of their sovereign) but the man on the street in England, the man who stands for the voters, is today done with the adoration of a mere title, if it be below the rank of the royal family; he is a democrat of the democrats in his thinking and voting; he subjects even the claims of the dukes, who are next to royalty, to the most rigid examinations, and more than once, in public conveyances this summer, men were heard telling their companions on what slight and musty merit certain ducal claims in England rest. One could see what short shrift would be given to the obstructors of the people's will could the commons have their way. The dukes own four million acres of land. The lords are in a strait 'twixt two.' If they throw out the Budget they are more likely to be themselves cast into the taxbearing baggage.' If they do not throw it out they incur the enmity of their class and are curtailed of many of their superfluities. The lords have weakened their own cause much by the publication of incredibly inane things which the Budget is passed they will have to withdraw their usual Christmas charities from the poor or even do with fewer motor cars, or, most dire necessity of all, sell land and with increased taxation will render it impossible to keep up!

"So the old England is full of unrest! It faces foes without and fears within! It seems to be brought to bar by its own people. The London papers are full of challenges and counter challenges in the matter with England. They wonder why she has done nothing in aviation while the United States, France and Germany are doing so much! They are questioning their system of education. They are finding that much is wrong among them. To an outsider, staying for a while in the country places there appears to be a physical and mental deterioration of the people, noticeable among the small farmer class and the agricultural laborers, in little children flocking out of the board schools. We see it too in the inability of the average provincial dwellers to welcome the introduction of improvements or even alleviations of their not infrequent discomforts of living. There seems to have been too much intermarrying in the numerous small villages with the usual regrettable results. These things it is painful for a visitor to see, especially so when you are in love with the land and the country of the people.

"Fancy going into a considerable shop to order a small article made and being met with the words: 'We have just received a mourning order, so we cannot do your work till next week.'

"The American feels himself restricted, hampered. He is not yet eighty and does not wish to move about as if he were. Wages are almost incredibly low. Fortunately the necessaries of life are cheaper than with us. Behind the high, ever present walls of houses and gardens and the stone house fronts is a hospitality, generous and sincere not to be surpassed anywhere. But there is no open streets and lawns like ours, no unscreened porches or piazzas are to be seen. The outer English suggestion of a home is medieval. It is a retreat, a defiance of enemies. Every man's home is still literally his castle. He does not wish you to look in and he never wishes to look out.

"In long cold winter evenings the contrast with out streets with windows everywhere alight, glimpses of cheerful sitting rooms within, occasionally the sound of cheerful music straying out to our common walk, faces at the pane anticipating some dear one's return, all this must seem very warming and pleasant to an English visitor here.

"And our general outlook upon life has also more horizon than theirs. Ours seems to be a larger hope for our country and ourselves. Not for a moment would I say that we are stronger, more courageous, purer than theirs or our manners so politely considerate as those of our kindred across the sea. There are no truer, kinder hearts than England calls her own the world over.

"And so if there are their restricted area, their limited opportunities, their much more sombre environment can yet yilled such admirable fruits of the spirit the implication of our enlarged chance here at home must be patent to the dullest of us. Let us reconsecrate ourselves to the truest highest patriotism, the freest most reverent religion and above all to that fraternal, forbearing and forgiving living day by day without which all the advantages of our advancing America will prove but our undoing.

MISSING MAN MAY LOSE A BIG LEGACY

If Charles A. Zabriskie, who is charged in divorce proceedings brought recently by George E. Earl with having eloped over two years ago with Mrs. Earl, does not return to Boonton within the next four years he will be out of pocket just $25,000, his share of the estate of his father, J. D. Zabriskie, who recently died. The elder Zabriskie makes provision in his will that if his son is still absent on the twenty-fifth birthday of his youngest child, he shall forfeit the right to the sum named.

The youngest Zabriskie is now 21 years old. The money is to go to him in the event of his brother's nonappearance to claim it.

A hearing in the Earl case was recently had, but Special Master King has withheld his decision. Earl says that he and Mrs. Earl were married on Oct. 6, 1893, but that Mrs. Earl deserted him on Christmas Day of that year. Later they were reconciled, but now he says that his wife and Zabriskie disappeared on June 13, 1907.

COLUMBUS DAY NOT HOLIDAY AFTER ALL

Vice-Chancellor Garrison, sitting in Jersey City Monday, held that the Columbus Day holiday act is defective. Columbus Day is on October 12. The Legislature made it a legal holiday.

During the course of an argument in chancery chamber Monday morning it was discovered that the case of Beck vs. Beck had been set down for October 12. The lawyers called the attention of the court to the fact and the law books were sought. It appeared that the holiday act of 1876 had been repealed in reference to several subsequent acts that establish legal holidays, but the act of 1909, establishing Columbus Day as a legal holiday was put on the books as a supplement to the act of 1876.

"We have here, then," said the court, "a supplement to an act that does not exist. I think this court will sit as usual on October 12. I give notice, however, that this court will not sit on Christmas Day, the first of January or the Fourth of July."

Find Man Hanging to Tree.

While hunting for chestnuts in the Woodridge woods near Passaic Monday, Victor Marsh came across a man suspended on a rope from a large oak. He hurried to town and notified the police. The man's features were indistinguishable, and the condition of the body made immediate burial necessary. The Hudson police have come to the conclusion that the man committed suicide. The body was that of a man about thirty-eight years old, of medium build. Nothing to lead to his identity was found.

At Proctor's.

The new show at Proctor's theatre presented Monday for the first, as a good one. Sincay's trained dogs and cats do marvelous things; Cohen as King, in a comedy sketch, "The Desert Island," are clever, while Ralph Whitehead, monologuist, and character change artist is capital in his latest songs. Willie and Josie Barrows, dancing artists, always please.

THIS MAN WANTS TO KNOW HIS OWN NAME

The following letter was received Monday by City Clerk T. Simpson Standeven, of Paterson, and turned over to Register of Vital Statistics Charles S. Gall:

"Dear Sir—I am seeking information concerning myself as to what my name is. I have my own mind, I think, my name, which is William Delaney, born in your city, aged 25 years, born April 9, 1863. Knowing that you have the records, I would be under obligation to you if you would search them for me, as I am married and have two children. I was born, as I believe, at 140 Bank street, and was christened by Father McNulty in the Catholic church. If you cannot find Delaney, would you be so kind as to try to find the name of Kent for the same address, as it means much to me. Respectfully yours."

Register of Vital Statistics Gall will communicate with Dean McNulty in an endeavor to gain the desired information from the records at St. John's Roman Catholic church.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

It is now announced that the new $80,000 public school building in Woodbury will be ready for occupancy on the first Monday in November.

Officials of the Camden Home for Friendless Children pronounce as an imposter a man who is soliciting subscriptions for a proposed outing for the inmates of the institution.

The greatest celebration ever witnessed in Clayton was held Saturday afternoon, when the new $40,000 High School was dedicated and thrown open for the inspection of the public.

The Mercer County authorities have been compelled to take drastic measures to put a stop to the practise of small boys climbing about on the face of the courthouse building, in South Broad street, Trenton.

Hannah L. Rambo, seventy-six years old, of Hilltop Home, Moorestown, a farmer of Thorofare, was found dead in bed by her husband early Sunday morning, and Coroner Hunter gave a certificate of death from heart disease.

The contest between two brothers for membership in the Gloucester County Republican executive committee at Westville is growing interesting. It will be a fight to the finish, Dr. James E. Hunter, the Avis candidate, and Hugh Hunter, the Loudenslager candidate, are the brothers.

The time for filing nomination petitions expiring Saturday night, it is shown that Mayor George Hampton, of Bridgeton, will be renominated by the Democrats and will be opposed by Roscoe C. Ward, the present county collector, at the other Republican candidates for the nomination having withdrawn.

A scandalous story led to a stabbing affair Sunday that may result fatally. Joseph Sofield, sixty four years old, of Camden, used a penknife to cut William Hann, thirty-four years old, of Pine Valley. Hann had demanded of him an explanation for the alleged circulation of the story objected to. Sofield says he used the knife in self-defense.

William Estgen, of 104 Humboldt street, Trenton, has finished a remarkable three years of accidents by burning both hands of a bucket of pitch. He plunged his hands in the bucket Saturday to stop a fall from a three-story building. During the past three years he has broken each leg, one at a time, and torn off an ear. He is in a hospital in a bad way.

From unknown causes Mrs. Edward Phiper, twenty-seven years old, of 128 Woodlynne avenue, Woodlynne, was taken to the Cooper Hospital, Camden, Sunday, a victim of lockjaw. Late last night the woman died. While Mrs. Phiper received no wounds of any description within weeks she was stricken with all the symptoms that presage an attack of the disease.

Coroner Hunter, of Gloucester County, has become suspicious that a "baby farm" is in operation, somewhere in the vicinity of Red Bank, for within a month the corpses of four little innocents have been found in that locality. The fourth was found on the wharf on the river front at Jackson street and the coroner had it removed to the morgue in Woodbury. The body bore evidence of strangulation, the doctor said, and he has started an investigation. There was nothing whatever about any of the bodies to aid in tracing the supposed slayers.

John Dotson, the colored man accused of the larceny of some rings, and who slashed Mrs. Mamie Smith three times across the face in a Sixteenth avenue house in Paterson last week, was arrested in the "Tin Box" on Godwin street, that city, on Saturday evening by Detectives Lord and Elvin. Dotson says he did not steal the rings—he simply took them for safe keeping. He had nothing to say concerning the use of the razor on Mrs. Smith's face. Dotson was held in heavy bail on Reserve Officer Cook's charge of atrocious assault with intent to kill, and on Mrs. Sisco's charge of larceny.

DEFER POLICE PENSIONS

Majority of Councilmen Consider it Unwise to Submit Proposition Just Now.

POLICEMEN'S BILL IS LOST.

By Vote of Six to Five City Fathers Decide to Take No Action at the Present Time.

By a vote of six to five, the Common Council in secret session, Monday, decided not to put it up to the people to vote at the November election whether or not they are in favor of granting pensions to the members of the police department, according to the State law of 1906.

Councilman Frank DeWitt Randolph, chairman of the police committee, brought the matter up at the regular September meeting, after a conference with other members of the committe and it was generally believed that favorable action would be taken.

It is understood that the six members who are opposed to submitting the question at this time, have been guided largely by the recent decided advance in the tax rate from $1.40 to $1.68, and do not believe that it would be wise to provide additional expense for taxpayers. Those who favor the proposition argued vigorously to secure their point but to no purpose. They said, let the people decide the question and thus relieve the Common Council of any further responsibility. But the opponents could see it that way and declined to sanction the matter just now.

Those who voted against the proposition were Councilmen F. Holt, George S. Clay, Francis L. Montgomery, Charles C. Randolph, E. Myratt and Duncan W. Taylor, and those in favor were Councilmen R. I. Tolles, Herbert Buxton, W. L. Gloak, W. W. Wilson and Frank DeWitt Randolph.

The law of 1906 provides that the city shall appropriate four per cent. of the police appropriation for the pension, while one per cent. of the policemen's salaries would be deducted for the same purpose. It further provides that certain moneys received from licenses shall go into this fund.

The local firemen have had a pension system for a long time. Those who favor granting the police pensions cite this as a good reason why the latter should be treated equally as well as the firemen.

CITY FATHERS DISPOSE OF ROUTINE BUSINESS

The adjourned meeting of the Common Council, Monday, so far as actual business was concerned, was one of the most unimportant in several months. The meeting was called ostensibly for the purpose of taking action relative to allowing the people to vote on the police pension act, but after an hour's recess, the question was not brought up, in public session the majority deciding that it would not be wise.

Mayor Charles A. Fisk, as foretold in The Daily Press, appointed three playground commissioners, H. W. Marshall for three years, Andrew J. Gavett for two years and George P. Mellick for one year. The appointments were confirmed.

E. Frank Vail, who owns the property at Jackson avenue and East Second street, complained about a double sewer assessment and the matter was referred. A. A. Brousse asked the council to provide sidewalks in Fanning, saying that the residents would be able to have mail delivered there. This was also referred.

Mrs. Clara A. Stelle, of Union street, in a communication said that she had received two assessments on property at 967 Union street and 202 Randolph road, which she claimed was a mistake. She requested that the assessments be corrected and the matter was referred to the proper committee.

Regarding the petition of William Palmer Smith for the improvement of Belvidere avenue, Mr. Gloak, chairman of the street and sewer committee, stated that the matter would be attended to. As to the request of residents of the West End for street improvements, Mr. Gloak said that it would be impossible to do anything this year. On his motion the request for a new fire hydrant in that section of the city, was referred to the fire committee.

In response to a request from Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett, a resolution was offered by Mr. Montgomery and adopted, changing an electric light from Plainfield avenue, to a nearby point on Randolph road, so that both thoroughfares will get the benefit of the light.

Councilman Clay called the attention of the Council to complaints received regarding the unsafe condition of Thornton avenue, which is an unaccepted thoroughfare, and on his motion the matter was referred to the street and sewer committee for the purpose of investigation.

Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., will hold a regular meeting tonight.

ALLEGE SHORTAGE OF A TRUSTED OFFICIAL

Judge Parker Grand Jury to Investigate Warren Township Committee Finances.

The fall term of the Somerset County Courts opened Monday at Somerville, with Judge C. W. Parker on the bench. There was an unusually large attendance of people from all parts of the county, including a number from Warren township, it being understood that the matter of alleged irregularities in that district were to be presented to the grand jury. The legal profession was also well represented.

In his charge to the grand jury, Judge Parker took occasion to call the attention of the body to the report of Supreme Court Commissioner Hugh K. Gaston in the matter of investigating the financial affairs of Warren township. Judge Parker said that the report showed gross irregularities on the part of Joel Codington, treasurer of Warren township, that he is between $2,500 and $3,000 short in his accounts.

Judge Parker also called attention to the fact that Mr. Codington, according to the report, had made a practice of loaning money to his friends without warrant; also to the practice and conduct of the township. Horace Codington, which if substantiated would be an indictable offense. The Judge informed the grand jury that he would let that body have the report, but that it could not use any part of it as evidence. It would be within its power to call the same witnesses as those examined by Commissioner Gaston and conduct such investigation as it desires to arrive at a conclusion.

"There are some things in the report that your attention should be called to," said Judge Parker. "One is that Joel Codington, treasurer of Warren township, refused to go before Supreme Court Commissioner Hugh K. Gaston, and a special order of this court was necessary to compel him to do so."

"The presumption is that if Mr. Codington was guiltless he would have willingly appeared before the commissioner. If the charges against Mr. Codington are substantiated, he would be guilty of malfeasance in office."

In Judge Parker's reference to the action of an officer of the township, one counsel and clerk, who is said to have received loans unlawfully, the Judge remarked that if this was substantiated, he, too, could be indicted.

After the charge, the grand jury retired to consider at length the Warren township and other affairs brought to its attention.

It was about two months ago that an application was made by residents of Warren township for the appointment of a commissioner to investigate the financial affairs of that township. The alleged practices cover an extended period. Mr. Codington, in addition to being treasurer of Warren township, is also a member of the Somerset county Board of Freeholders and chairman of the finance committee of that body.

WARREN A.C. DEFEAT WASHINGTON FIELD CLUB

The Warren A. C. added another victory to its long string on Saturday by defeating the strong Washington Field Club, of Somerville, by the score of 6 to 0. Both teams were pitched for Warren A. C., and deserved a shutout. Mosher caught him in fine style.

Sauer's heavy hitting was again in evidence, getting two timely two-baggers. He has been hitting a .600 clip since last June. Next Saturday Warren A. C. goes to Raritan to play the Raritan Juniors, amateur champions of Somerset county. Warren's battery will be Ira Vail and R. Mosher. Saturday's score by innings:

Warren A. C....1 0 0 0 0 2 0 3 0—6

Black Beeswax.

The black wax of the wax is made by a small wild bee of the genus melipona (M. laevieeps). This bee nests in hollow trees and forms a peculiar trumpet shaped entrance to its hive. It is very commonly found in the bamboo trees, in which large holes are made in tapping them for resin. The bees, says Nature, find these artificial hollows suitable for their nests. According to D. Hooper the wax is similar in composition to the resin of various trees, while that forming the vestibules of the hive is almost certainly the resin of the kaiyin tree.

Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., will hold a regular session tomorrow night.

MR. REED'S IMPRESSIONS

Returning from Trip Around the World, Senator Talks Interestingly.

THEY VISITED MANY LANDS.

Says Russians Lack Patriotism and that the Czar is Liberal—Glad to Get Home.

After an absence of six months during which they made a trip around the world, former Senator and Mrs. Charles Arthur Reed, of this city, returned home on Monday on the Atlantic Transport Line Steamer Minnehaha, and for the present are stopping at the Hotel Marie Antoinette, New York, where they will probably spend the winter.

Mr. Reed came to Plainfield yesterday and made a short visit to his law offices. During his stay in New York he will probably commute between here and New York and look after his Plainfield business in that way. Mr. Reed when seen by a reporter for The Daily Press was looking fine and declared that he never felt better. He said that both Mrs. Reed and himself had thoroughly enjoyed the trip around the world, that it had proved a source of great education. He said that the trip was taken chiefly for pleasure, although he did combine it with a little business of which he did not care to talk.

There were a few things that greatly impressed Mr. Reed in his long journey. One was the beautiful country he found in Siberia, with a climate like that in this country, a rolling country, the foliage and grass green and beautiful. He expected to find a bleak, cold country, but was agreeably surprised.

Another thing that impressed him was the absolute lack of patriotism on the part of the Russians. They appear to care nothing at all for their country, realizing that no matter how they are wronged, they have no redress, no voice and there is no possible way in which they can raise a protest. The Czar apparently wants to be fair and liberal, but the aristocracy is determined that he shall not yield to the peasantry.

Mr. and Mrs. Reed had the pleasure of seeing the Czar and Empress and their summer home; also the King and Queen of Denmark. About three weeks were spent in Japan and they were greatly impressed with the beautiful country. Mr. Reed in speaking of the Japanese said that he found them to be a proud people and when he learned that they boasted of a nation 12,000 years old and having taken part in 800 wars without once being whipped, he could understand the reason for their pride.

Moscow was another interesting point visited, in fact, Mr. Reed said he was not so sure but that it was the most interesting place on the trip. There, he said, was to be found a combination of the oriental and the occidental, a central place of meeting for all races.

In speaking of the general conditions as he found them abroad, Mr. Reed said that labor is very cheap abroad and it cost little or nothing for the cheap classes to live. He was impressed with the fact that Americans get more out of life than the foreigners in every instance where conditions compare equal.

Mr. and Mrs. Reed left here April 1st and going across the continent, sailed for Honlulu with former Vice-President and Mrs. Charles W. Fairbanks. They then went to Yokohoma, and spent about three weeks in Japan. They were in Shanghai about ten days, from which point they took a seven hundred mile sail to Hankow, then going by train nearly 1,000 miles to Pekin. They visited Shanhaiquan, where the famous Chinese wall extends into the sea. Its 1,800 miles around this wall and is considered one of the greatest engineering feats known.

Then they went by rail seven hundred miles to Mukden, the scene of

ARREST HOTEL MAN FOR ALLEGED ASSAULT

On the complaint of Edward Burke, of the West End, Constable Robert Pierce, of Dunellen, last night arrested Lawrence Kerwin and John Kerwin, and today is looking for "John Doe," who was also implicated in a fight in which Mr. Burke was severely and roughly handled and had a rib broken.

The alleged assault took place a few days ago. Mr. Burke appeared before Justice Charles Suydam, of New Brunswick, and had a warrant issued for the arrest of the three men, when the Kerwins were arraigned they were held in bail for a hearing tomorrow.

Lawrence Kerwin has conducted a hotel near the city line in the West End for many years, with the exception of a year or two, when the courts denied him a license. Details as to the alleged fight are meagre and will not be known until the hearing tomorrow. Mr. Burke was so severely injured that he was obliged to go to Muhlenberg Hospital for treatment. It is said that there has been an illfeeling on the part of the Kerwins and Burke for sometime.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF A PHILANTHROPIC WOMAN

The funeral service of Mrs. William Palmer Smith, whose death occurred at the Holland House, New York city, on Saturday, following a long illness, was held from the late home on Belvidere avenue, at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. There was a very large attendance of friends and relatives, including a number of people from New York and Brooklyn.

Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, of which Mrs. Smith was a communicant, officiated at the service. Mrs. Smith was very active in the religious work of Grace church parish and also in the many charities of the city. Her death is a distinct loss not only to the church but to charities as well.

During the service a quartet sang "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say," "Peace, Perfect Peace," and "Jerusalem the Golden." The burial was in Hillside cemetery. There was a beautiful display of costly floral tributes from relatives and friends, including a number of large pieces and many bunches of cut roses, which completely hid the casket from view.

NEW JERSEY ENDEAVORERS' CONVENTION BEGINS

DELEGATES FROM ALL PARTS OF THE STATE, REPRESENTING MANY PROTESTANT DENOMINATIONS, GATHER AT FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH FOR TWENTY-THIRD ANNUAL MEETING.

The twenty-third annual convention of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union opened this morning in the First Presbyterian church with about one hundred of the expected sev n hundred delegates present. The leaders of the morning session were enthusiastic over the splendid enthusiasm evinced by the attending delegates and it was freely said that no previous convention of the C. E. Union ever opened under more propitious circumstances. Delegates representing every society but two in the State were expected before the afternoon session opened. The music which is under the direction of Charles L. Lewis who has had all the young people of the city churches practising was hearty and bore a strong resemblance to the chorusses sung in the big auditorium at Ocean Grove.

State Secretary Speaks.

Miss Ida B. Stevens, State Secretary, was the speaker at the opening session and in her speech outlined the work which it is expected that the Union will accomplish during the coming winter. She made a strong plea for concerted action in the matter of getting all the young people interested in the work and assured the delegates that from now on a determined effort in this direction would meet with success. "There are too many attractions which have a tendency to draw the young people away from the best influences of the church," she said, "and we must work together to prevent a continued advance of secular interests at the cost of Christian impulses. Nobody knows better than the pastors of our churches what these influences are and they also know that their hearty co-operation is needed in the work of the societies in their churches. Without the young people the churches would soon be memberless and it is for us to build up and maintain what our parents have builded for us."

District Conferences.

The conference of District secretaries occupied all the time of this morning's session which was preparatory for the concerted work to be inaugurated tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. Clarence B. LaRue, general chairman of the convention introduced the speakers at this session. The committees appointed for the convention are: Finance, Frank Stewart, chairman; entertainment, Alexander Galloway, chairman; reception, Miss Eva Rogers, chairman; registration, Miss Bertha Jones, chairman; junior work, Mrs. Wheaton S. Lowry, chairman; ushers, Elmer Gayle, chairman; music, Frank Stewart, chairman, and musical director, Charles L. Lewis.

Afternoon Session.

The afternoon session which began at 2 o'clock, saw a large increase in the number of delegates over the number of the morning. There was a conference of the junior and intermediate workers conducted by Mrs. Ida L. Dukes, State superintendent of junior work. Karl Lehman, Interstate Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor, was present and gave an interesting talk on the work among the New York societies with whom he is now working. He presented many practical ideas for the consideration of the workers in the New Jersey union and told of his experiences in other fields. Mr. Lehman enjoyed the closest attention of the delegates who learned some of the latest and most progressive ideas for the advancement and growth of Christian Endeavor work.

Executive Committee.

The afternoon session will have closed at 5 o'clock, after which a recess of an hour will be taken. At 6 o'clock dinner will be served followed by a meeting of the State Executive Committee and the local committee. At 8 a meeting in which all the local societies will join will be addressed by Rev. Dr. J. Douglas Adam, of East Orange. Tomorrow morning will usher in bright and early the real business of the convention. At 6 o'clock there will be the "Morning Watch" led by State President John T. Sproull. This service will last three quarters of an hour. A 9 o'clock devotional service led by Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, will last for fifteen minutes. Then will follow the addresses of welcome by Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Rev. Dr. Charles F. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, and Clarence B. LaRue, chairman of the Plainfield committee. Following a quiet hour there will be speeches by Percy R. Noussly, of the introduction department; S. D. Riddle, fresh air department; A. B. Johnson, press department; and others of the various evangelistic and Bible study departments. A recess of an hour and a half will then be taken for dinner.

Some Addresses.

The afternoon session begins promptly at 1:45, fifteen minutes devotion followed by an address by Miss Josephine Wyckoff, of the missionary department. Two addresses, one by Rev. E. P. M. Gearheart on prison work in Pennsylvania, and another by Rev. E. F. Hallenbeck, of New York city, will be the features. In the evening reports of State officers and several addresses will be the features.

During the three days of the convention meals will be served in the Sunday school rooms of Trinity Reformed church, and tonight the banquet tender d to the visiting delegates will take place at 6 o'clock. Much of the success of the arrangements for the care of the visitors is due to the untiring efforts of Charles F. Windham, secretary, and Alexander Galloway, chairman of the entertainment committee of the local union. Much credit is also due to the other societies of the churches whose young people are now affiliated with the Christian Endeavor Union. Their broad and generous spirit has gone a long way toward making the local union's work easier.

Mr. La Rue's Speech.

In Mr. LaRue's speech of welcome he said that the main or central thought of the convention is twofold, to show that the motive of the endeavorers was to live up to their slogan of "Forward for Our Master," and to participate in the blessing and benefits to be derived by the young people of Plainfield from association with the workers in the cause as well as to stimulate the actual work among members in an effort to bring those out of the church into a close relationship with Christ and his people. He hoped that the convention would be an inspiration to better and more comprehensive work among all the societies connected with the union as well as those not members.

The societies represented from the local union are from the First Presbyterian, Congregational, Trinity Reformed, Seventh-Day Baptist, Park Avenue Baptist, Temple Baptist, Hope chapel, Warren chapel, South Plainfield Baptist, New Market Baptist, New Market Seventh-Day Baptist, Dunellen Presbyterian and Wilson Memorial churches.

Dr. Clark Due Friday.

Dr. Francis E. Clark, the founder of the society, which now numbers nearly four million members, will arrive at noon Friday and will address the juniors first. Afterwards Dr. Clark will deliver adresses at Trinity Reformed and the First Presbyterian churches. The hours at which Dr. Clark will speak have not yet been determined.

It will interest many to know that immediately after his visit to this convention Dr. Clark will make his fifth trip around the world in the interest of the Christian Endeavor movement. The home which is being built near Boston for the Doctor will in all probability be completed while he is on his world circling trip.

Speeches This Morning.

The district secretaries present this morning at the Christian Endeavor conference were entertained by speeches from Miss N. K. Foote, of Elizabeth, and Field Secretary Carl Lehman, who told of the problems confronting the society and the way to overcome the difficulties and other obstacles Mr. Lehman said that the district secretaries were the key to the situation in Christian Endeavor work and on them although they are mere humans, depends to a large extent the success of the work everywhere.

For 1,000,000 Members.

A letter was read from President Clark who said that 1,000,000 members were expected to join the movement before another year had passed over their heads.

Following is a list of the district secretaries to be present during the convention:

WHO PAYS BIG BILL FOR EXCISE EVIDENCE?

The verdicts of "guilty" obtained against Edward Coleman, driver for Seiger Cooper Company, and Alvah Dunham, driver for Acker, Merrill & Condict, in the Union county court a few days ago, for selling liquor illegally here, will cost $1,500, according to reliable sources, but the question is being asked, who's to pay the bill?

It is said that Mayor Charles J. Fisk engaged the detectives and others to obtain the necessary evidence against the New York department stores' employees, and the bill was thus incurred. As far as can be learned the bill has not been presented as yet to either the Union County Board of Freeholders or to the Plainfield Common Council.

The opinion is expressed by those in a position to know that the county will refuse to shoulder the expense if the bill is presented, and it is said here that it is a serious question whether the city could legally pay the bill. Mr. Fisk is still in the Adirondacks and as a result there will be no developments until he returns.

SAY MAYOR DID NOT GIVE THE $350 ORDER

Friends of Mayor Fisk today disagree with the statement made on the floor of the Common Council on Monday night that he had given a verbal order to a local restaurant man to serve any and all meals to policemen and their friends during the Charter Day celebration. The bill for $350, submitted by the restaurant man, has been held up until the mayor's return.

It is said that when presented to him he refused to approve of it and on Monday night the President of the Common Council, Ralph I. Toles, also declined to put his "o. k." on it. The feeling among the city fathers is that the bill should be paid, but they are first anxious to learn who gave a verbal and unlimited contract for such a purpose. The restaurant man acted in good faith, it is argued, and his claim should be met.

TO OFFICIATE AT GRANDSON'S WEDDING.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, leaves today for West Virginia, to officiate at the marriage of his grandson, George Henry Caperton, of Charleston, W. Va., to Miss Hale Austin, of Lewisburg, W. Va.

The wedding will occur tomorrow evening at the residence of the bride's parents, and will be an event of unusual social interest, as both families are widely connected in the Virginias. Dr. Chambliss will return Saturday and occupy his pulpit Sunday.

Lecture for School Boys.

Dr. Lyman Beecher Sperry lectured at noon today at the Somerset school on the "Significance of Sex." His audience was composed of boys of the high school and the grammar grades.

DINE JAMES F. BUCKLE

Get-Together Club Honors One of Its Old Guard at Hotel Waldorf.

WM. N. RUNYON TOASTMASTER.

On the Eve of His Departure for a Trip Around the World, Buckle Gets Great "Send Off."

To express their esteem of the man and citizen, the Get-Together Club last night gave a dinner in honor of former Mayor James F. Buckle, one of teh old guard of the organization, on the eve of his departure for a trip around the world. The affair took place in the large dining hall at the Hotel Waldorf and the place was filled by the men who work to pile up Republican majorities in Union county and in this city. It was the most successful function ever held by the club but it was just what might be expected when it came to paying honor to the club's "chief medicine man."

At the request of "Sachem" Andrew McCardell, Judge William N. Runyon acted as toastmaster and during the dinner led in singing popular songs. Following the feast, which was a credit to Proprietor Henry Windham, the judge made a happy speech and afterwards introduced a number of the diners, who in turn spoke. During the evening, the guest of honor was presented with a huge gilt key and a silk American flag. It was explained to him that it was the key of the city of Plainfield, which he should have while touring foreign lands. Mayor Buckle's response was one right from the heart, a speech characteristic of the whole-souled and lovable man.

Among the club's guests were County Clerk James Calvert, District Court Clerk Edward Bauer, Sheriff Robert Kirkland and Assistant Postmaster James White, all of Elizabeth. Most all the local officials were present and there were several Democrats in the crowd.

The menu follows:

Dry Martini (not Martine); Azoras oysters on the shell game; Mount of Olives, Pinchgut celery, Pickles, a la custom house, Great Salt Lake Almonds; Consomme, a la Human Nature; Chrysler Haddock, Japaned Chicken Croquettes, Egyptian Roast Chicken, Cauliflower Maderia, Potatoes Tangier, Sliced Jerusalem Tomatoes, Corn on the Cob on the Nile, Dead Sea Beats, Sphinx Peas, Five Acre Principal; Lobster Salad (with Geisha after-effects); Ice Cream; Windham Roquefort Cheese, Chinese Crackers, Assorted Nuts, Cigars made of pure Manila Rope, Java Demi Tasse.

Among other things the menu card contained the verse, beneath a cartoon of Mr. Buckle, written by Judge Runyon:

"God speed you, Jim, as forth you fare, to lands across the sea;
Our fondest love shall e'er be yours, no matter where you be.
And East or West, or North or South, wherever you may roam,
We beg that you will ne'er forget the little bunch at home."

The menu card also contained some "intercepted cablegram" supposed to have been sent by the mayor as he journeyed around the globe giving his impressions of the various countries.

AMENDMENTS LOST BY 23,721 OUT OF 82,898

The official canvass of the votes cast at the special election on September 14 was made in the Governor's office at Trenton Thursday afternoon by Governor Fort and the six Senators selected by him to comprise the State Board of Canvassers. The result showed that the five proposed amendments to the State Constitution were defeated by an average of 23,721 out of a total vote of 82,898. Of this number 3,354 ballots were rejected.

As a result of the efforts made in Hudson and Atlantic counties in behalf of the fourth amendments to raise the salaries of the members of the Legislature, that amendment received the highest vote, being defeated by 22,677. The largest votes were vote, 24,866, was polled against the fifth amendment, to extend the terms of the Governor, members of the Legislature and other officers and to creat Assembly districts.

The third amendment, by which it was proposed to reform the judicial system of the State, was defeated by a majority of 23,780, and the second amendment, to reorganize the Court of Pardons, was lost by a majority of 23,690. The majority against the first amendment was 23,587.

The first amendment was designed to abolish that provison of the Constitution, which permits the foreclosure of mortgages in the Circuit Court and Court of Common Pleas. This amendment was included, for the reason that provision was made in the third amendment for the abolition of the two courts named.

At the Presidential election in 1908 the total number of names on the poll list in the State was 472,102. The vote cast at the special election was 17.14 of that at the regular election last year.
